THere was a man in the lande of Hus, whose name was Job, & the same man was a perfect and iust man, and such a one as feared GOD, and eschewed euell. And he had seuen sonnes, & three doughters. His substaunce also was seuen M. sheepe, and iij. M. camels, & C. yoke of oxen, & fyue hundred she asses, and a very great houshold, so that he was one of the most principall men, among all the men of the East countrey. And his sonnes went and made bankettes, one daye in one house, an other daye in another, and sent for their three systers to eate and drinke with them. And it fortuned, that when they had passed ouer the tyme of their bankettinge, and about, Job sent for them, and sanctified them, and rose vp early, and offred according vnto them. For Job sayde, leste perauenture my sonnes haue synned, & haue blasphemed God in their hartes. Thus dyd Job euery daye. And vppon a daye when the children of God came and stode before the Lorde, it fortuned that Satan came also among them. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: from whence comest thou? Satan answered the Lorde and sayde: I haue gone about the lande, and walked therein it. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: Hast thou not considered my seruaunt Job, howe that there is none like vnto him in the lande a perfect and a iust man, one that feareth God, and eschueth euell? Satan answered, and sayde vnto the Lorde. Doth Job feare God for nought? Hast thou not preserued him and his house, and all that he hath on euery syde? Thou hast blessed the workes of his handes, and his possession is encreased in the lande. But laye thy hande nowe vppon him, touche all that he hath, and he will curse the to thy face. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: lo, all that he hath, is in thy power: onely vppon him put not thy hande. So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lorde. And vppon a certayne daye [illegible] sonnes and doughters were eatinge and drinkinge in their eldest brothers house, there came a messenger vnto Job, & sayde: the oxen were a plowinge, and the asses goinge in the pasture besyde them, the Sabeans came and toke them away, yea & haue slayne the seruauntes with the edge of the swearde, & I only am escaped to tell the. While he was yet speakinge, there came an other, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, and hath

And whyle he was yet speakyng, there came an other, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armyes, and fell vpon the camels, and haue caried them awaye: yea, and slayne the seruãtes with the sweard, and I onely am gotten awaye to tel the. And while he was yet speakyng, there came an other, & sayde: Thy sonnes, and thy doughters, were eatyng & drynkyng wyne in their eldest brothers house, & beholde, there came a mighty great wynde out of the south, and smote the. iiii. corners of the house, whiche fell vpon thy chyldren and they are dead: and I am gotten awaye alone to tell the. Then Job rose vp and rent his clothes, and shaued his head, fell downe vpon the ground, worshipped, & sayd: * Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, & naked shal I returne thyther agayn. The Lord gaue, and the Lord hath taken awaye, euen as it hath pleased the Lord, so it is come to passe: blessed be the name of the Lord. * In al these thynges dyd Job not offende, nor murmured foolyshly agaynst God.

AGayne the chyldren of God came and rose before the Lord, and Satan came also among them, and rose before the Lord. And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: Hast thou not considred my seruaũt Job? For there is none like him in al the lãd. For he is a perfect and a iust man: such a one as feareth God, and eschueth euel, and cõtinueth stylin his godlynesse. And thou mouest me agaynst hym, that I should punysshe hym for nought. And Satan answered the Lord, and sayd: Skynne for skynne, yea, a man wyll gene all that euer he hath for his lyfe. But lay thyne hande nowe vpon hym, and touche ones hys bone and flesshe, and he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: lo, there hast thou hym in thy power, but spare his lyfe. So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lorde, and smote Job, with marueylous sore byles, from the sole of his fote, vnto his croune, so that he sat vpõ the grond in the asshes, and scraped the filth of hys sores with a potsherde. Then sayd his wyfe vnto hym: * Doest thou continue yet in thy perfectnesse? curse God and dye. But Job sayd vnto her: thou speakest lyke a foolysh woman, shall we receyue prosperitie at the hand of God, and not receyue aduersitie? * In al these thynges dyd not Job synne with his lippes.

Now when Job & his frendes hearde of all the trouble that happened vnto hym, there came thre of them, euery one from his owne place, namely, Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar the Naamathite, and Then they cryed and wept, and euery one of them rent his clothes, and sprynkled dust vpon their heades in the ayre. They sat them downe by hym also vpon the ground seuen dayes, and seuen nyghtes. AFter this opened Job his mouth, and cursed his daye. And Job answered, and sayd: Let be that daye, wherein I was borne, and that nyght in the which it was sayd there is a manchylde conceyued. Let same daye be tourned to darkenesse, and not regarded of God from aboue: neyther let hym shyne vpon it with lyght, but let it be stayned with darkenesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the darke storme ouercome that nyght, and let it not be ioyned vnto the dayes of the yere, nor coupted in the monethes. Desolate be that nyght, and without gladnesse, let them that curse the daye, and that be redye to rayse vp mourning, gyue it also their curse. Let the starres of that nyght be dymme, thorowe darkenesse of it. Let it loke for lyghte, but let it see none: neyther the rysing vp of the sayre morowe, because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me. For then should the sorowes haue bene hyd from mine eyes. Alas* why dyed I not in the byrth? why dyd not I perysshe as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe? Why let they me vpon their knees? Why gaue they me sucke with their breastes? Then should I now haue lyen styll, I should haue slept, and bene at rest, lyke as the kynges and lordes of the yearth, which he haue buylded them selues speciall places: Or as the princes that haue had great substaunce of gold, and their houses full of syluer. Or why was I not hyd, as a thyng borne out of tyme, either as a young chyldren, which neuer saw the lyght? There must the wicked cease from their tiranny, and there, such as be ouerlabboured be at rest: there are those set out free, which haue bene in prison, so that they heare no more the voyce of the oppressoure. There are small and great, & the seruaunt is free from his maister. Wherfore is the lyght gyuen to hym that is in miserie, and life vnto them that haue heuy hartes? Which long for deeth, & though it come not, would dyg it out of hyd places, which are so would be exceadyng glad, & reioyce, if they could fynde their graue anye where. What should be gyue to that mã, whose way is hyd, and God kepeth it darke from hym? For my sighes come before I eate, & my roryng gets out like the waters. For the thyng that I am

For the foolyshe man, displeasure killeth hym, and anger sleeth the ignoraunt. * I haue sene my selfe, when the foolyshe was rooted and cōdemned. I curssed his habitacion. His children were without prosperitie, and they were slayne at the gate, and there was no man to deliuer them. * Hys harueste was eaten vp of the hungry, and the weaponed man spoyled it, and the thyrsty dranke vp their labour. O remembre that my lyfe is but a wynde, & that mine eye shall nomore se pleasures therof: yea, and that none other mens eye shall se me any more. For as thou castest thine eye vpon me, I come to nought. The cloude is consumed & vanished away, euen so he that goeth down to the graue, shal come no more vp, nor turne again vnto his house: neither shal his place know hym any more. Wher fore I wil not spare my mouth, but wil speake in the trouble of my spirite, & muse in the bitternes of my mynd. Am I a sea, or a whale fyshe, that thou kepest me so in prison? When I saye: my bed shall comforte me, & that haue some refreshyng by talkyng to my selfe, vpon my couche. * Thē troublest thou me with dreames, and makest me so afrayd thorow visiõs, that my soule wysheth rather to perysshe and lye, then my bones to remayne. IOb answered, and sayde: I know it is so of a truthe. For howe may a man (cõpared vnto God)* be iustifyed? If he wyl argue with hym, there is not one among a thousand that can answere hym. Concernyng suche as be wyse of harte, or myghtye in strength, who euer prospered, that toke part against hym? He translateth the mountaynes, or euer they be aware. It is he that ouerthroweth them in his wrath. He remoueth the earth out of her place, that the pyllers therof shake with all. He commaundeth the sunne, and it ryseth not: he closeth vp the starres, as it ware vnder a sygnet. He hym selfe alone spreadeth out the heauens, and goeth vpon the wawes in the sea. He maketh the wawes of heauen the Arcton:* the seuen starres, and the secrete places of the South. He doeth great thynges, suche as are vnsearchable: yea, and wonders without nombre. Lo, whe he goeth ouer by me, I shall not se him. And when he departeth by me, I shall not take vpon hym. I shall not persecue hym. If he be lustie to take any thyng away, who wyl make hym restore it againe? Or who wyll saye vnto hym: * what dost thou? * Yet is God, whose wrath no man may withstande, but the proudest of all, must stoupe vnder hym. Howe should I then answere hym? Or what wordes should I fynde out against hym? Yea, though I were righteous, yet myghte I not geue hym one worde againe, but mekely submyt my selfe to hym as my iudge. If I had called vpon hym, and he had answered me: yet would I not beleue, that he heard my voyce, he troubleth me so with the tempest, & wounded me out of measure without a cause. He wyll not let my spirite be in rest, but fylleth me with bytternesse. If men wyll speake of strength, lo, he is strong: If men wyll speake of ryghtousnesse, who dare be my recorde? If I wyll iustifie my selfe, myne own mouth shall condempne me, if I wyll put forth my selfe for a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wicked doer. For though I be an innocent, & my conscience cleare, yet am I wery of my lyfe. One thyng it is, and therefore I sayde: He destroyeth both the ryghteous and vngodly. And though he slaye sodeynly with the scourge, yet wyll he laughe at the punyshement of the innocent. As for the worlde, it is geuen ouer into the handes of the wycked, and he shall couer the faces of the iudges there of. Is it not so? where is there any, but he is suche one? * My dayes are more swyfte then a runner: they are gone, & haue sene no good thyng. They are passed away as the shippes that be good vnder sayle, & as the Egle that flyeth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynyng, to leaue of fro my wrath, and to comforte my selfe, then I am afrayd of all my sorowes, for I know that thou wilt not iudge me innocẽt. If I be then a wicked doer, why laboure I in vayne? If I washe my selfe with snowe water, and make my hãdes neuer so cleane at the wel, yet shalt thou dyppe me in the myre, and mine own clothes shall defyle me. For he that I must geue answere vnto, and with whome I go to lawe, is not a man as I am. Neither is there any daysmã to lay his hande betwene vs. Let hym take his rodde away fro me: yea, let hym make me no more afrayd of hym, and then shal I answere hym without any feare, for as log as it is thus, I can make no answere.

why doest thou so? * For it is he that knoweth the vanite of men, he seeth their wickednesse also, should he not then consider it? A vayn body exalteth hymselfe, & a man newe borne is like a wilde asses colte. Yf thou haddest now a right hart, & stretchedst vp thine handes toward hym: yf thou woldest put away the wickednes which thou hast in hād, so that no vngodlinesse dwell in thy house, then mightest thou lifte vp thy face without blame, and then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare. Then shouldest thou forget thy mysery, and thinke nomore vpon it, then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shoulde the residue of thy life be as cleare as the noone day, and sprynge forth as the morning. Then mightest thou haue confort, in hope that thou hast: and slepe quietly, when thou art buried. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and no man make the afraid: yea, many one shoulde set muche by the. As for the eyes of the vngodly: they shalbe consumed, & not escape: ther hope shalbe misery and sorowe of minde.

SO Job aunswered, and said: Then (no doubt) yeare the men alone, and wisedom shall perishe with you. But I haue vnderstandyng as wel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea, Who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, & who God heareth, is mocked of his neighbour: the godly, and innocent mā is laughed to scorne. Godlines is a light, despised in the hartes of the riche, and is set for them to stomble vpon. The houses of robbers, are in welth, & prosperite: & they that maliciously medle against God: dwell without care in those thynges that God hath geuen rychely with his hand. Aske thy catel, and they shall enstruct the, the soules of the ayre, and they that tel the. Or the encrease of the yearth, & it shal shewe the. Or the fishes of the Sea, & they shall certifie the. * What is he, but he knoweth that the hand of the Lord made all these? * In whose hand is the soule of euery liuyng thyng, and the breath of the flesshe of al men. * Haue not the eares pleasure in hearyng, & the mouth in tastyng the thyng that it eateth? Among olde personnes there is wisedom, and in age is vnderstandyng. Yea, with God is wisedō & strength, it is he that hath counsel and forēknowledge. Beholde, yf he breke downe a thyng, who can set it vp again? * Yf he shut a thyng, who wil open it? Beholde, * yf he with holde the waters, they drye vp. Yf he let them go, they destroy the yearth. With him is strength and wisedō: he knoweth both the deceyuer, & him that is deceyued. He caryeth away the wise men, as it were a spoile, and bryngeth the iudges out of their witte. He taketh away the cubiction of the people from their kynges: and the mighty vp side down. * He taketh the besaue from out of the mouth, and disapointeth the aged of their reason. He powreth the con-haue ben oppressed. * Loke what lyeth hyd in darcknesse, he declareth it openly: and the very shadowe of death bringeth he to light.

He both encreaseth the people, and destroieth them. He maketh them to multiplie, and dry-them that rule the people of the yearth, and disapointeth them: so that they go wandring

LO, all this haue I sene with myne eye, heard with mine eare, and vnderstand it.
Loke what ye knowe, that same do I knowe also, neither am I inferiour vnto you. Neuer-theles, I talke with the Almyghty, & my desyre is to commune with God. As for you, ye are vnremaisters of lyes, and vnprofi-table * Phisicions altogether. Wolde God, ye kept your toung, for then might ye be taken for wise men. Now heare my chidyng, & ponder the sentence of my lips. Wo ye speake iniquite against God, and talke against hym with disceyte? Wil ye not accept the person of hym? Or wil ye contend with God? Shal that helpe you, when he calleth you to reco-nynge? For as one man mocketh an other, so do ye mocke hym. He shal punish you, and re-proue you, ye ye do secretly accept any person. Shal he not make you afrayd, whē he weyth hym selfe? Shal not his terrible feare fal vpon you, your remembraunce is like vnto a sparke, and your bodies like the clay.
Holde your tonges for my sake, that I also may speake, and my sorow shalbe the lef-te. Wherfore do I beare my flesh in my teth, & put my soule in mine handes? Lo, though he slay me, yet wil I put my trust in him. But I will reproue mine own waies in his sight, he shal make me whole: and there may no hypocrite come before hym. Heare my wordes, & ponder my sayenges with your eares. Behold, now haue I prepared my iudgement, & know that I shal be found righteous. What is he, that wil go to law with me? Let hym come, that I may now holde my tong, & dye.
Neuerthelesse, graunt me two thynges, and then wil I not hide my self from the. Withdraw thine hande from me, and let not the fearfull dreade of the, make me afrayd: and thē call me, and I will answere: or els let me speake, and geue me thou an answere. How many are my mysdedes and sinnes? Let me know my transgressions & offences? Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemy? Wilt thou be so cruel and extreame vnto a flyeng leafe, and followe vpon dry stubble? for thou layest harpely to my charge, and punishest me * for the faines of my youth. * Thou puttest my fete also in the stockes: and lokest narowly vnto all my pa-thes, and markest the steppes of my fete, where as I (notwithstandyng) maste consume like as a foul cation, and as cloth, that is motthe eaten.

¶ The. xiij. Chapiter.

MAn that is borne of woman, hath but a short time to liue, and is full of misery.
He cometh vp, & is cut downe like a floure.
He flyeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer continueth in one state. Doest thou open thine eies vpon suche one, and bringest me in to thy iudgement? Who can make it cleane, that cometh of an vncleane thyng? No body.
* The dayes of mā surely are determined, the nombre of his monethes are knowen onely vnto the. Thou hast appointed hym his boudes, which he can not go beyonde. Go from him that he may rest a litle, vntil his day come: which he loketh for, like as an hyre-lynge doeth. For a tree be cut downe, there is some hope, yet that it wil sproute, and wote forth the braunches again. For though the rote of it be waxen olde, and the worke there of be dead in the ground, yet when it getteth the sent of water, it wil bud and bryng forth boughes, like as a tree that is planted. But as for man, when he is dead, perished & consumed away, what becommeth of hym. The floudes when they be dried vp, and the ry-uers when they be empty, are filled againe therowe the flowyng waters of the Sea: but when man slepeth, he riseth not again (of his owne strength) * vntyll the heauen perish, he shal not wake vp, nor rise out of his slepe. O that thou wouldest kepe, and hyde me in the hel, vntil thy wrath were stilled, & to appoint me a time, wherein thou mightest remembre me. May a dead man liue againe?
* All the dayes of my life will I waite stil, till my chaungyng shall come. Thou shalt cal me: and I shall answere the, * despise not thou the worke of thyne owne handes. For now thou no nbjest al my goynges, yet be not thou to extreame vpon my sinnes. Mine iniquite is sealed vp, as it were in a bagge: but he thou merciful vnto my wickednesse. The mountaines fal away at the last, the rockes are removed out of their place, the waters pearce therowe the very stones by litle and litle, the floudes washe away the grauell and yearth, and destroye thou the hope of man?
Thou preuaylest stil against hym, so that he passeth away: thou chaungest his estate, and puttest him from the. And whether his children come to worship or no, he can not tell.

Then anſwered Eliphas the Themanite, and ſaid: Shal a wiſe mans anſwere be the ſcience of the winde, and fill any mans belly, as it wer the winde of the Eaſt? Shal he reproue with a woorde that is nothyng woorth, and ſpeake the thynges: which can do no good? Yea, thou haſt ſet it aſide, els wouldeſt thou not make ſo many woordes before god, but thy wickednelle teacheth thy mouth, and ſo thou haſt choſen the a crafty tong. Thine owne mouth condempneth the, & not I: yea, thine owne lippes ſhalbe an anſwere againſt the. Art thou the firſt man, that euer was borne: Or wart thou made before the hilles? Haſt thou heard the ſecrete counſell of God, that all wiſedom is to litle for the? What knoweſt thou, that we know not? find what vnderſtandeſt thou, but we can the ſame? With vs are both olde and aged men: yea, ſuche as haue liued longer then thy father. Thinkeſt thou it a ſmall thyng of the conſolacions of God? With the is a lying woorde. Why doth thyne hart ſo bewitche the. And wherfore winkeſt thou with thine eyes, that thy mynd is ſo puft vp againſt God, and letteſt ſuche woordes go out of thy mouth? What is man, that he ſhoulde be cleane? What hath he (whiche is borne of a woman) wherby he might be righteous? Behold, he doth not truſt his ſayntes: yea, the very heauens are not cleane in his ſight. How much more then an abhominable & vile man, which drynketh wickednes like water? I will tell the, heare me: and I wil ſhew the, that I haue ſene: which wiſe men haue told, and hath not bene hid from their fathers vnto whom only the yearth was geuen, and no ſtraunger went among them. The vngodly ſorroweth al the dayes of his life, as it ware a woman with a child, and the nombre of a tyrannes yeares is vnknowen. A fearful ſounde is euer in his eares, & when it is peace, yet feareth he deſtruction. He beleueth neuer to be deliuered out of darkeneſſe, for the ſwearde is alway before his eies. When he goeth forth to get his liuyng, he feeth playnely that the day of darkeneſſe is at hand. Sorowe and carefulneſſe wil make him afraid, and compaſſe him round about, like as it ware a king with his hoſt ready to the battail. For he hath ſtretched out his hand againſt God, & armed him ſelf againſt the almighty. He runneth proudly vpon him, and with a ſtiffe necke, fleeth he againſt him: where as he coureth his face with fatneſſe, and maketh his body wel lyking. Therfore ſhall his dwellyng be in deſolate cities, & in houſes which no man enabiteth, but are become heapes of ſtones. He ſhal not be riche, neither ſhall his ſubſtaunce continue, nor encreaſe vpon yearth. He ſhall neuer come out of darkeneſſe, the flame ſhall drie vp his braunches: with the blaſt of the mouth of God, ſhal he be taken away. He beleueth not that he is vanite, and yet he is out of the way, & vanite ſhalbe his recompence. He ſhal periſhe afore his time be worne out, and his braunche ſhal not be greene. He ſhall be plucked of as an vntimely grape from the vine: and ſhal let his floure fal, as the olyue doth. For the congregacion of ypocrites ſhalbe deſolate and vnfruteful, and the fire ſhal conſume the houſes of ſuch as are gredy to receyue giftes. He conceyueth trauaile, and beareth vanite, and their body prepareth forth deceite.

MY breath tyreth, my dayes are shortened. I am hard at peathes doze. Fro ward men are with me, and mine eye muste continue in the bitternesse of them. O deliuer me, & loke out one to be my surety in thy sight. What is he, that knoweth who will promes for me? For thou hast witholde their hartes from vnderstandyng: therefore shalt thou not set them vp on hye. He promiseth his frendes part of his good, but his owne children spende it. He hath made me as it were a bywordes of the people: where as afore I was their ioye. Myne eyes is dimme for very heuinesse, and all my strength is become like a shadowe. Vertuous men therefore shal well consider this, and the innocent shal take part against the ypocrite. The righteous also wil kepe his way, & he that hath cleane handes, will euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence (I pray you) seyng I can not finde one wise man among you: My dayes are past, and my counsailes, and thoughtes of my harte are vanished away, chaungyng the night into day, and the light into darkenesse. This Chapter and that next before must be red at one lesson.

THen anuntwered Bildad the Suhite, and said: when will ye make an ende of your wordes? Marke wel, & then we wil speake. Wherefore are we counted as beastes, & reputed so vile in your sight? He destroyeth him selfe with his anger. Shall the yearth be forsaken, or any stone removed out of his place, because of the? Yea, the light of the vngodly shalbe put out, and the sparke of his fire shall not burne. The light shalbe darke in his dwellyng, and his candel shalbe put out with him. His presumptuous gounges are kept in, and his owne counsel shal cast hym downe. For his feet are taken, as it were in the net, and he is at his wittes ende. His fote shalbe holden in the snare, and it shal catche them that be thirsty of bloude. The snare is laid for hym in the ground, and a pitfall in the way. Fearfulnesse shal make him afraid on euery side, that he shal not know, where to get out, hunger shalbe his strength: misfortune shal hange vpon hym. He shall eate the strength of his owne skynne, euen the firste borne of death shall eate his strength. His hope shalbe voted out of his dwellyng, very fearefulnesse shal bryng hym to the king. Other men shal dwell in his house (but shalbe none of his) and brymstone shalbe scattered vpon his habitacion. His rootes shalbe dried vp vnder, and aboue shal his braunche be cut downe. His remembraunce shal perishe from the yearth, & he shal haue no name in the strete: they shal dryue him from the light into darkenesse, & cast hym cleane out of the worlde. He shal neither haue children, nor kynsefolkes among his people, also, nor any posterite in his dwellynges. They that come after hym, shalbe astonyed at his day, and they that go before, shalbe afraid. Suche are nowe the dwellynges of the wicked, and this is the place of hym that knoweth not God.

IOb answered, and said, how long wil ye vexe my soule, and trouble me with wordes? Lo, ten times haue ye reproued me: & are not ashamed for to laughe me to scorne. If I go wrong, I go wrong to my self. But yet ye wil enhance your selues against me, & accuse me to be a wicked person, because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God that hath handled me so violently, & hath compassed me about with his net. Yet I complaine of the violence done vnto me, I can not be heard. And ye I cry, there is no sentence geuen with me. He hath hedged vp my voice, that I can not passe, & he hath set darkenesse in my pathes. He hath spoyled me of mine honoure, and taken the crowne away fro my head. He hath destroyed me on euery side, and I am vndone: My hope hath he taken away fro me, as it were a tree plucked vp by the roote. His wrath is kyndled against me: he taketh me, as though I were his enemy. His men of warre came together, which made their way ouer me, & besieged my dwellyng round about. He hath putte my brethren farre away fro me, and such as were of mine acquayntaunce, are become straungers vnto me. Mine own kynsefolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembraunce. The seruauntes and mayden of myne owne house, take me for a straunger: and I am become as an alyeuant in their sight. I called my seruaunt, and he gaue me no answere: no though, I praied him with my mouth. Myne own wife might not abide my breath, I was faine for to speake fayre for the children of mine own body. Yea, the children despised me. And when I was gone from them, they spake euel vpon me. All such as were my moost familiars, abhorred me: & they whome I loued best, are turned against me. God hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God doth, and are not satisfied of my flesh? O that my wordes were now written: O that they were put in a booke: wolde God they were graven with an yron penne in lead, or in stone to continue. For I am sure, that my redemer liueth, and that I shall rise out of the yearth in the latter day: that I shalbe clothed again with this skynne, and se God in mine flesh. Yea, I my self shall behold him, not with other, but with these same eyen. Why reasons are these within me, did not ye say, why doeth he sulke persecution? I se there founde an occasion in me. But beware of the sweorde, for the sweorde will be auenged of wickednesse: and be sure, that there is a iudgement.

The. xx. Chapiter.

Then answered Sophar, the Naamathite, and sayed: For the same cause doo my thoughtes, compel me to answere. And why? my minde is ready within me. I haue sufficiently heard thy checking and reproue, therfore am I purposed to make answere after mine vnderstanding. Knowest thou not this, namely, that from the beginning (euer sence the creation of man vpon yearth) the gladnesse of the vngodly hath bene shorte, & that the ioye of hypocrites continued but the twynkling of an eye? Though he be magnified vp to the heauen, & that his heade reacheth vnto the cloudes, yet at a turne he perisheth for euer, in so muche that they which haue sene him, shall saye: Where is he? He shall vanishe as a dreame: so that he can no more be found, and shall passe away as a vision in the night. So that the eye, which sawe him before, shal haue no more sight of him, & his place shal know him no more. His children shall be faine to agree with the poore, and his handes shal restore their goodes.

From his youth his bones are ful of pleasures, but now shall he lye downe within him in the yearth. When wickednes was sweete in his mouth, he hid it vnder his tong. That he sauored, that wolde he not forsake, but kept it close in his throte. The meate that he did eat, is turned to the poison of the serpentes, within his body. The richelle that he deuoured, shal he cast vp again, for God shall ryue it out of his belly. He shal sucke the gal of serpentes, and the vipers tonge shal slay him. So that he nomore shall se the riuers, and brookes of hony, and butter. The thing that other men haue laboured for, shal he restore again, & shal not enioye it. After rychelle shal he make no merchelle, but he shal not enioye them. And why? He hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoiled, and not buylded them. His belly could neuer be filled, therfore shall he spede in his couetousnesse. There shall no man loke for his posterities. When he had pleasure inough at euery tyme, yet was he poore, though he were holpen on euery syde. For though the wicked haue neuer so much to fill his belly, yet God shal send his wrath vpon him, and cause his indignation to reigne ouer him: so that yet the tyme of weapons he shalbe met with the sele bowe. The arowe is taken forth, and gone out of the quiuer, and a glistering sweorde thorowe the gal of him, feare shal come vpon him. There shall no darkenesse be able to hyde hym. An vnkyndly fire shall deuoure him, & loke what remaineth in his house, it shalbe destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wickednesse, and the yearth shall take part against him. The substaunce that he hath in his house, shal be taken away, and perish, in the day of the Lordes wrath. * This is the portion that the wicked man shal haue of God, and the heritage that he may loke for of God: because of his wordes.

The. xxi. Chapiter.

Iob answered & said: O heare my wordes, and that shalbe my comforte of you. Suffre me a litle, that I may speake also, & then laughe my wordes to scorne. Yet like you? Is it for mannes sake that I make this disputacion? Whi then ye not ware for, shoulde not my spirite be then sore in trouble? Marke wel, and be abashed, and laye your hand vpo your mouth. For when I consider my selfe I am afraid, and my flesshe is smitten with feare. * Wherefore do wicked men liue in welth & prosperite, come to their olde age, and increase in riches? Their children liue in their sight, and their generation before their eyen. Their houses are safe from al feare, & the rode of God doeth not smite them. Their bullocke gendreth, and that not one or twise: their cowe calueth, & is not barrenful. They sende forth their children by flockes, and their sonnes lede the dannce. * They beare with them tabrettes, & harpes, and haue instrumentes of musicke at their pleasures. They spende their dayes in welthefulnesse: but sodenly they go downe to hell. They say also vnto God, go from vs: we desire not the knowledge of thy wayes. Who is the Almighty, that we should serue him? And what profite shoulde we haue to submitte our selues vnto him? No, there is vnrighteous goodnesse in them, therfore I wil not haue to do with the counsell of the vngodly. Doth not the candle of the wicked be put out? doth it not come vpon them destruccion vnto them? Or what rewarde shall God geue them for their part in his wrathe? Or they shal be euen as hay before the winde, and as chaffe, that the storme carieth away. And though God saue their children for the fathers, yet will he recompense them selues.

One dieth now whyle he is mighty & at his best, riche, and lyeth in prosperite, euen when his bowels are ful of fatte, and his bones ful of mary. Iob then made answere and said: May a man be profitable vnto God, as he that is wise may be profitable to himselfe? Is it any aduantage vnto the almyghty, that thou art righteous? Or shal it profite hym, that thou makest thy waye perfect? Is he afraid to reproue thee, and to come to iudgement with thee? Is not thy wickednesse great, and thyne vngracious deedes innumerable? For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for nought, and robbed the naked of their clothyng. To such as were wery, hast thou geuen no water to drynke, and hast withdrawen bread fro the hongry. Should such a one then as dyeth violente, wrong and oppression hanging all thynges of parcialite, and hauing respect of persons, dwel in the lande? Thou hast sent the rowes away empty, & oppressed the poore fatherlesse. Therfore art thou compassed about with snares on every syde, & suddenly vexed with feare: shouldest thou then see no darkenesse? Should not the water floode runne ouer thee? Is not God because that God is hyge aboue the heauens, & because thou seyest that the starres are so hye, wilt thou therefore say: Tush, how should God know? Doth he iudge through the cloudes? Is not the cloudes couer hym that he may not se, and he dwelleth aboue heauen? Marke not thou the old way, that vayne men haue gone, Which were cut downe out of time, & whose foundacion was as a running water, which sayd vnto God: go from vs, and what dis the almyghty with them? He filled their houses with good thynges. But the counsail of the vngodly is farre fro me. The righteous sawe it, and were glad, and the innocent laughed the to scorne. Is not our substaunce howe downe? & is not the remnaunt of them, the fire hath consumed it? Acquaynte thy selfe nowe with God, and be content to deal al thynges prosperously with the: receyue the lawe at his mouth, & lay vp his wordes in thine harte. For yf thou wilt turne to the almyghty, thou shalt be set vp, & put al vnrighteousnesse from thy dwellyng. Then shalt thou lay golde as plentifull as the dust, and the gold of Ophir as the stones of the riuers. Yea, Almyghty God shal be thine helpe, thy defence, and thou shalt haue plenty of syluer. Then shalt thou haue thy delite in the almyghty, and lifte vp thy face to God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare the, and thou shalt kepe thy promises. Then is he what pouns set in hande, he shall make it to prosper, and the light shall shine in thy wayes. For who * so humbleth himselfe, him shal he set vp: and who so loketh meekely shall be healed. Yea thou be innocent, thou shalt deliuer the countrey, because of the vnpurenesse of thy handes.

The. xxii. Chapiter.

Iob answered, and sayed: My sayeng is yet this, how is it bitternesse, and my hande heuy, because of my grouning. O that I might se him, and finde hym. O that I might come before his seate to please my cause before hym, and to fil my mouth with argumentes, that I might know, what answere he would geue me, and that I might vnderstand what he would say vnto me. Wil he pleade against me with his great power & strength? Nay, but he wil make me the stronger. For that is ryght, that euen I disputacion with hym, & my iudge shal release me for euer. Beholde, though I go before, I find hym not. If I come behynde, I cannot se knowlege of hym. If I go on the left syde, where he doth his worke, I can not attayne vnto hym. Again, if I go on the right side, he hydeth himselfe, that I can not se hym. But as for my way, he knoweth it, & and tryeth me as the golde in the fire. My foote hath kept his path, his way haue I holden, & wil not go out of it. I wil not forsake the commaundemet of his lippes, but loue whyle he chaseth me with his wordes. Shal I (but he is in one mynde) who can turne him? & what his soule desireth, that wil he do. For he performeth that he hath appointed me, & many such thynges are with him. Therfore am I troubled at his presence, & when I consider, I am afrayed of him. For God hath made my harte tender, & the almyghty hath troubled me, because I was not destroyed before the darkenesse, & because the cloude hath couered my face.

W. as hym liſteth, & bryngeth to paſſe what he will. He performeth the thyng that is appointed for me. And many ſuch thynges doth he. This is the cauſe that I tremble at his preſence, ſo that when I conſider hym, I am afraid of him. For in ſo much as he is God, he maketh my hart ſofte: and ſeyng that he is Almighty he putteth me in feare. Thus cā not I get out of darkenes, neyther hath he couered the cloude fro my face.

The. xxiii. Chapiter.

WHi dothe not then, that there is no time hid fro the Almighty, how happeneth it, that they which knowe him, to not regarde hys dayes? For ſome men there be, that remoue* other mens land markes: that rabbe them of their cattell and kepe the ſame for their own: that * dryue away the aſſe of the fatherleſſe: and take the wyldowes oxe for a pledge: that thruſt the poore out of the way and oppreſſe the ſimple of the worlde together. Beholde, euen as the wilde aſſes in the deſerte go they forth to their worke: & riſe by times to ſpoyle: yea, the very wilderneſſe miniſtreth foode for their children. They reape the corne felde for that is not their owne: and lette the vineyarde of the vngodly alone. They are the cauſe that ſo many men are naked, & bare, hauyng no clothes to couer them and to kepe them from colde. So that when the ſhowres in the mountaines haue rained vpon them, & they be al wet, they haue none other ſuccoure, but to kepe them among the rockes. They ſpoile the fatherleſſe child, and take the pledge from the poore. In ſo much that they let hym go naked without clothyng: and haue taken away the meate of the hungry. The poore are faine to labour in their ople mille: yea, and to treade in their wynepreſſes, & yet to ſuffre thyrſt. The men of the Citie crye to the Lord with ſighing, * and the ſoules of the ſlayne alſo make their complaint. But God deſtroyeth them not for al this, where as they (not withſtandyng) are conuerſaunt amōg them, that abhorre the light: they know not his way, nor continue in his pathes. * Timely in the mornyng do they aryſe, to murther the ſimple and poore: and in the night they go a ſtealyng. The eye of the adulterer waytth for the darkeneſſe, and ſaith thus in hymſelfe. Tuſh, there ſhal no eie ſe me: ſo he diſguiſeth his face. In the nyght ſeaſon they ſearch the houſes, & ſhut them ſelues in the day time, but wil not know the light. For al coone as the day breaketh, the ſhadowe of death cometh vpon them, and they go in horrible darkenes. The vngodly is ſwifter then the water: their portiō ſhal be curſed in the yearth, & he ſhal not behold the way of the vineyardes. O that they (for the wickednes which they haue done) were taken to the hel, euen then God meaſureth at the drouth and heate. O that al remembraūce vpon them were forgotten: that their baronies were wormes, that they wer cleane put out of remembraunce, and vngodlines vtterly hewen down like as a tree. He hath oppreſſed the barren, that he can not beare, & vnto the widowe hath he done no good. He draweth the mighty after hym with his power, and when he was gotten vp, no man was without feare, as longe as he liued. And though they might be ſafe, yet they wil not reſigne it, for their eyes loke vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a litle, but ſodenly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerte, & taken out of the way: yea, & vtterly plucked of, as the eares of corne. Is it not ſo? Who wil then reproue me as a lyar, and ſay that my wordes are nothyng worth.

THen anſwered Baldad, the Suhite, and ſaid: Is their power and feare with him aboue, that maketh peace ſitting in his highneſſe, whoſe men of warre are innumerable, and whoſe light ariſeth ouer all? Iob proceedeth and maketh his protestation, saying: As truely as God liueth (whose hath taken away my iudgement) and as truely as my soule liueth, which hath vexed my minde: My lippes shall talke of no vanitie, and my tonge shall speake no deceit, while my breath is in me, and as longe as the winde (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrilles. God forbid, that I shoulde geuame your cause to be right. Vntil my ende come, will I not forsake my innocencie. My righteousnesse will I hold fast, and not let it go: my heart shall not reproue me as long as I liue. Let myne enemy be as the vngodly, and he that ariseth vp against me, as the vnrighteous. For what hope hath the prophane, though he haue great good, & though God geue him riches alle after his hartes desire? Doeth God heare him the sooner, when he crieth vnto him in his necessitie?
Hath he eache pleasure and delite in the Almightie, that he vse at all times call vpon God?
I will teache you in the name of God, and the thing that I haue of the Almightie, will I not keepe it from you. Beholde, ye knowe it in your owne conceyte, as though ye knewe all thynges.
Wherefore then do ye go about with such vain wordes, saying? This is the portion that the wicked shall haue of God, and the heritage that tyrannes shal receyue of the Almightie. Yf he get many children, they shall perish with the sweorde, & his posterite shall haue scarcenesse of breade. Loke who so be left behynde him, they shal dye, and be buried: and no man shall haue pitie of his widowes. Though he haue as muche money as the dust of the yearth, and prepare as moche as the clay, he may well prepare it: but the godly shal put it vpon him, & the innocent shall deale out the money. His house shall endure as the mothe, & as a bouth that the watchman maketh. When the riche man dyeth, he taketh nothyng with him: he is gone in the twinklyng of an eye, & hath nothyng. Destruction taketh hold vpon him, as a waterflode, and the tempest stealeth him away in the night season. The vehemens Eastwynde catcheth him hence, and departeth: & he plucketh him out of his place. It ruffleth vpon him, and spareth him not, he may not escape from the power thereof. Men clap their handes at him for ioye, & hisse at him, when they looke vpon his place.

Therfore, I thought vere-D. ly, that I would haue died in my nest: and that my daies should haue been, as many as the sāds of the sea. For my roote was spred out by the water side: and the dewe laie vpon my crowne. My honor encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in myne hand. Vnto me, men gaue eare, me thei regarded: and with silēce thei taried for my counsaill. If I had spokē, thei would haue it none other waies, my wordes were so well taken emong theim. Thei watted for me, as for the raine: and gaped vpon me, as the ground wth, to receiue the latter shoure. When I laughed thei knewe well, it was not earnest. And the light of my countenaunce, would thei not put out. When I agreed vnto their waie, I was the chief, and sat as a kyng, with his armie about hym. And when thei wer in heuinesse, I was their comforter.

Emmong. ii. BVt now thei that are yonger then I, haue me in derision: yea, euen thei, whose fathers I would haue thought vnmeete, to haue set with the dogges of my cattell. The power and strength of their handes, might do me no good, for the time is but lost emong thē. For bery misery and hunger, thei fledde into the wildernes, (a darcke place, horrible & waist,) pluckyng vp nettelles emong the bushes, and the Iuniper roten for their meate. And whē thei wer driuen further, men cried after them, as it had been after a thief. Their dwellyng was beside foule brookes: yea, in the caues, and dennes of the yearth. Emong the bushes, went thei about cryyng: and vnder the thor-
D. nes, thei gathered themselues together. Thei were the children of fooles and villaynes, whiche are perced out of the worlde. Now Iob. xx. c. stocke: thei abhorre me, and flie farre from me, & stain my face with spetle. For the lorde hath loosed the strēgth of my body, & brought me lowe: The bridle haue thei cast out of my sight. Vpon my right hand, rise the yong men against me, thei haue hurte my feete, tredyng vpon me, as vpon the wayes, that thei would destroye. My pathes haue thei cleane marred. It was so easie for them, to do me harme that thei neded no man to helpe them. Thei fell vpon me, as it had been the breakyng in of many waters, and came in by heapes to destroy me. Fearfulnes is tourned against me. Myne honour vanished awaie, more swiftly C. then the wynde, and my prosperitie departed hence, like as it were a cloud. Therfore is my myad, poured full of heuinesse, and the daies of my trouble, haue taken hold vpon me. My bones are pearced throughout in the night season, and my sooores take no rest. For the vehemencie of sorowe, is my garmēt changed, and accordyng to the diuersitie of heuinesse am I girded with my coate. He hath cast me into the mire, and I am become like asshes and dust. When I crie vnto thee, thou doost not heare me, and though I stande before thee, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemie, and with thy violent hand, thou takest parte against me. In tymes past, thou didest set me vp on high, as it wer aboue the wind, but now hast thou geuen me, a very sore fall. Sure I am, that thou wilt deliuer me vn- D.
to death: euen to the lodgyng that is due vnto all men liuyng. Now bicause not men, to do violence vnto thē, that are destroyed already, but where hurt is wen, there bee thei to help. Did not I wepe with hym, that was in troubles? Had not my soule compassion, vpon the poore? Yet neuertheless, where as I loked for good, euill happened vnto me: and where as I waited for light, there came darkenes. My bowelles seath within me, and take no rest, for the daies of my trouble, are come vpon me. Mekely and lowly, came I in: yea, and without any displeasure, I stode vp in the congregacion, and commoned with theim. But now I am a companion of dragons, and a felowe of Ostruthes. My skynne vpon me, is tourned to black, and my bones are brent with heate: my harte is tourned to sorowe, and my pipe to weppyng.

Haue I caused the widowe, to stand waityng for me in vain? Haue I eaten my portion alone, that the fatherlesse, hath had no parte with me? For mercie grewe vp with me, fro my youthe, and compassion from my mothers wombe. Haue I seen any man perishe, thorough nakednes, or want of clothyng? Or any poore man, for lacke of raiment, whose sides thanked me not, because he was warmed, with the wolle of my shepe? Did I euer lifte vp myne hand, to hurt the fatherlesse? Yea, in the gate where I saw my self, to be in authoritie, then let myne arme, fall fro my shoulder, and myne arme holes, be broken from the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeaunce and pu-nishemeat of God, and knewe very well that I was not able, to beare his burthen. Haue I put my trust in gold? Or haue I saied to the finest gold of al: thou art my confidence? Haue I reioyced, because my power was great, and because my hand gat so muche? Did I euer greatly regarde, the risyng of the Sonne? Or had I the goyng awne of the Moone, in great reputacion? Hath my harte medled priuely with any deceipte? Or did I euer kisse myne awne hand? That wer a wickednes, worthie to be punished, for then should I haue denied the God, that is aboue. Haue I euer reioy-ced, at the hurte of myne enemie? Or was I euer glad, that any harme happened vnto him?
Oh, no: I neuer suffred my mouth, to do suche a synne, as to wisshe hym euill. Did not the men of myne awne houshold saie: who shal let vs, to haue our belly full of his flesh? I haue not suffred a straunger, to lye without, but I opened my doores vnto hym, that went by the waie. Haue I kept secrete my synne, and hid myne iniquitie, as Adam did? Haue I feared any great multitude of people: or if I had despised of the simple, O then should I haue been afraied. Shal haue I quietly spent my life, and not goen out of the doore? O that I had one, wil be would heare me. Lo, this is my caule. In the whiche, the almightie shall answere for me, though he that is my contrary partie, hath written a boke against me.
Yet will I take hym vpon my shulder, and as a garlande about my hed. I will tell hym the nomber of my goynges, and go vnto hym, as to a prince. But if case be, that my lande crie against me, or that the forowes therof, make any complaint: If I haue eaten the fruites therof vnpaied for, yea, if I haue greued any of the plough men then let thistles growe, in stede of my wheate, and cockle for my barly.

Here ende the wordes of Job.

The. xxxij. Chapitel.

SO these three men, wolde write no more with Job, because he helde hymself a righteous man. But Elihu the sonne of Ba-rachel, the Bullite, of the kinred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, because he called hymself iust before God. And with Jobs iij. frendes, he was angery also, because thei had found no reasonable answere, to ouercome Job. Now taried Elihu, till thei had ended their communicacion with Job, for why? Thei wer elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachell, the Bullite sawe, that these iij. men, wer not able to make Job answer: he was mis content. Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bullite, answered hymself, and saied: consi-dryng, that I am yong, and ye be men of age, I was afraied, and durst not shewe furthe my mynd. For I thought thus within my self. It becommeth old men to speake, and the aged to teache wisedome. Euery man (no doubt) hath a mynd, but it is the inspiracio of the almigh-tie, that geueth vnderstandyng. Greate men are not alwaie wise, neither doth euery aged man vnderstande, the thyng that is lawfull.
Therefore will I speake also (heare me) and I will shewe you also, myne vnderstandyng.
For when I had waited, till ye made an ende of your talkyng, & heard your wisedom, what argumentes ye made, in your communicacio: yea, when I had diligently pondred, what ye saied. I founde not one of you, that made any good argumēt against Job, that directly could make answere, vnto his wordes, lest ye should saie: we haue founde out wisedome. God shall cast him downe, and no man. He hath not spoken vnto me, and I will not answere hym as ye haue doone (for thei were so abashed, that thei could not make answere, nor speake one worde) but in so muche, as ye will not speake standyng still like dumme men, and makyng no answere: I haue a good hope, for my part, to shape hym an answere, and to shewe hym my meanyng. For I am full of wordes, and the

¶ The. xxxiij. Chapiter.

Therefore, heare my wordes (O Iob) and harken vnto me all that I will ſaie: Behold, I haue now opened my mouth, my tong hath ſpoken in my throte: my harte doth order my wordes a right, and my lippes talke of pure wiſedome. The ſpirite of God hath made me, * and the breath of the almightie, hath geuen me life: If thou canſt, then geue me anſwere, prepare thy ſelf to ſtand before me, face to face. Beholde, before God am I, euen as thou, for I am faſhioned and made, euen of the ſame molde. Therefore, thou needeſt not to be afraied of me, neither needeſt thou to feare that my authoritie ſhalbe to heuy for thee. Now haſte thou ſpoken in myne eares, and I haue hard the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleane without any ſaute, I am innocent, and there is no wickednelle in me. But lo, he hath picked a quarel againſt me, & taketh me for his enemie: he * hath put my foote in the ſtocke, and loketh narrowly vnto all my pathes. Behold, in this haſt thou not ben right I will make anſwere vnto thee, that God is more then mā. And why dooſt thou then ſtriue againſt hym: for he ſhall not geue the accōptes of all his wooꝛdes. For when God doth once commaunde a thyng, there ſhould no mā be curious to ſearche, whether it bee right. In * dreames and viſions of the night (when ſlombryng commeth vpon men, that they ſlepe in their beddes) he roundeth theim in the eares, he informeth them, and ſheweth the plainly, that it is he, whiche withdraweth man from euill, deliuereth hym from pride, kepeth hym from the graue, and his life from the ſwerd. He chaſteneth hym with ſickenelle, and bryngeth hym to his bed: he laieth ſore punishment vpon his bones, ſo that his life, maie awaie with no bread, and his ſoule abhorreth to eate any daintie meate: In ſo muche that his body is cleane conſumed awaie, and his bones appere no more. His life draweth vnto the graue, and his life to death. Now if there be a meſſeger (one emōg a. M) ſent for to ſpeake vnto man, and to ſhewe him the right waie: then the Lorde is merciefull vnto hym, and ſaieth: he ſhalbe deliuered, that he fall not downe to the graue, for I am ſufficiently reconciled. Then ſhall his fleſhe be as well liking, as it was more, and ſhalbe eaſie man in his youthe. For if he ſubmitte hymſelf vnto God, he ſhalbe gracious vnto fully, and rewardeth man for his righteouſneſſe. Suche a reaſon hath he vnto meane. Therefore, let a manne conſelle (and ſaie) I haue offended: I did vnrighteouſly, and it hath doen me no good. Yea, he hath deliuered my ſoule from deſtruction, and my life ſhall ſe the light. Lo, thus worketh God alwaie with manne, that he kepeth his ſoule from periſhyng, and letteth hym enioye, the light of the liuyng. Marke well (O Iob) and heare me: holde thee ſtill, and I will ſpeake. But if thou haſt any thyng to ſaie, then anſwere me, and ſpeake: for thy anſwere pleaſeth me. If thou haſt nothyng, then heare me, and holde thy toungue: ſo ſhal I teache thee wiſedom.

Thou proceadyng further in his anſwere, ſaied: heare my wordes (O ye wiſe men) harken vnto me, ye that haue vnderſtandyng. For the eare proueth & diſcerneth the wordes, & the mouth taſteth the meates, ſo for iudgement, let vs ſeke out emōg our ſelues, that we may knowe, what is good. And why? Iob hath ſaid: I am righteous, but God wyll me wrong. I muſt nedes be a liar, though my cauſe bee right, and violently I am plagued, where as I made no ſaute. Where is there ſuche a one as Iob, that drinketh vp ſcornefulneſſe, like water? Whiche goeth in the companie of wicked doers, and walketh with vngodly men? For he hath ſaid, though a man be good, yet is he naught before God. Therefore harken vnto me, ye that haue vnderſtandyng. Farre bee it from God, that he ſhould medle with wickednelle, and farre be it from the almightie, that he ſhould medle with vnrighteous dealyng: * For he ſhall rewarde the wordes of manne, and cauſe every man, to finde accordyng to his waies. For ſure it is, that * GOD condemneth no manne wrongfully, and the Iudgement of the almightie, is not vnrighteous: who ruleth the yearth in his ſtede? Or whom hath he ſette to gouerne the whole worlde? To whom hath he geuen his harte, for to drawe his ſpirite, and breath vnto hym? All fleſhe ſhall come together vnto naught, and all men ſhal turne againe vnto * duſte. If thou nowe haue vnderſtandyng, heare what I ſaye, and harken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maie he bee a ruler, that loueth no right? Or maie he that is a very innocent manne, bee vngodly? Is it reaſon, that thou ſhouldeſt ſaie to the kyng: Thou art wicked, or thou art vngodly, and that before the Princes? He * hath no reſpect vnto the perſones of the Lordly, and regardeth not the riche, more then the poore. For they are all the wooꝛke of his handes. taken awaie without handes. And why? His eyes loke vpon the waies of man, & he seeth all his goynges. There is no darkenes, nor shadowe of death, that can hide the wicked doers from hym. For no man shalbe suffered to go into iudgement with God. Many one yea, innumerable doth he punishe, and setteth other in their steden. Therefore, shall he declare their workes, he shal turne the night, & thei shalbe destroyed. Thei that were in the fede of sinne, dealt like vngodly men: and therfore he punished thē, because thei turned backe from hym, and would not consider all his waies. In so muche, that thei haue caused the voyce of the poore, to come vnto hym, and now he heareth the complaint, of suche as are in trouble. If he graunt pardon, who will condempne? And if he hide awaie his countenaunce, who shalbe able to se it? Whether it be to the people, or to any man, thus will he do, For the vngodlinesse of the people, dooth God make an hypocrite, to reigne ouer them. For so muche then, as I haue geuen to talke of God, I will not hinder thee. If I haue goen amisse, informe thou me: if I haue doen wrong, I will leaue of. Can he do nothyng without thee? For thou hast reproued his iudgemēt. Thou also hast thine awne mynde, and not I. But speake on, what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstandyng tell me, & let a wise man harken vnto me. As for Job, he hath neither spokē to the purpose: nor wisely. O father, let Job be wel tried, because he hath answered for wicked mē: yea, aboue his kynde, he doth wickedly, triumphe emong vs and multiplieth his wordes against God.

Elihu spake moreouer, and said. Thinkest thou it right, that thou saiest: I am righteous before God? For thou saiest. What aduauntage wil it be vnto thee, and what profite shalt thou haue of my kynde. Therfore wil I geue answere vnto thee, and to thy companions with thee, loke vnto the heauen, and behold it: consider the cloudes, whiche are hier then thou. If thou hast sinned, what hast thou doen against him? If thine offences be many, what hast thou doen vnto hym? If thou bee righteous, what geuest thou hym? Or what will he receiue of thyne handes? Vnto suche an vngodly persone as thou, and of the sonne of man, that is righteous, as thou pretendest to bee. There is a greate crie and complaint, made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea, euery man complaineth vpon the cruelties of tyrannes. For of suche a one neuer saieth where is God that made me? And that geueth vs occasiō to praise him in the night? Whiche geueth vs more vnderstandyng, then he doth the beastes of the earth, & teacheth vs more, then he doth the foules of heauen. If any suche complain, no man geueth answere, and that because of the wickednes, of proude tirauntes. But if a mā call vpon God, doth not he heare him? Doth not the almightie accept his cry? When thou speakest then, should not he pardon thee, if thou open thy self before hym, and put thy trust in him? Then sieth he no violēce in his wrath, neither hath he pleasure, in curious and depe inquisicions. Therfore wth Job open his mouth, but in vain, and foolishly doth he make so many wordes.

Elihu proceded further in his talkyng, and said: holde thee still a litle, and I shall shew thee, what I haue yet to speke on gods behalfe. I will open vnto thee yet more of myne vnderstandyng, & proue my matter righteous. And truly, my wordes shall not be vain, seyng he is with thee, that is perfect in knowlege. Behold: the great God, casteth awaie no man, for he hymself is mightie, in power and wisedom. As for the vngodly, he shall not preserue hym, but shall helpe the poore to their right. He wil not turne his eyes awaie, from the righteous, but as kynges & shall thei be, in their throne: he shall stablishe them for euer, and thei shalbe exalted. But if thei be laied in prison, and chaines, or bound with the bondes of trouble, then will he shewe them their worke, and the synnes, wherewith thei haue vsed cruell violence. He wil punishyng and nurtryng of thē, roundeth them in the eares warneth them to leaue of, from their wickednesse, and to amende. If thei now will take hede and serue hym, thei shall weare out their daies in prosperitie, and their yeres in pleasure, and ioy. But if thei will not hearken, thei shall go through the sweard, and perishe ouer thei be aware. As for suche as be fained hypocrites, thei shall heape vp wrath for thē selues: for thei cal not vpon hym, though thei be his prisoners. Thus shall their soule perishe in foolishnes, and their life shalbe condempned emong the vnclenlye. The poore shall he deliuer out of his affliccion, & found them in the eare, when thei be in trouble. Euen so shall he kepe thee (if thou wilt be content) from the botomelesse pit, that is beneth: and if thou wilt holde thee quiete, he shall fill thy table, with plentifulnesse. Neuertheles, thou hast condempned, the Iudgement of the vngodly, yea: euē suche a iudgement and sentence, shalt thou suffre. For then shal not thy cause bee stilled with cruelties, nor pacified with many giftes. Thinkest thou, that he wil regarde thy richesse? He shall not care for gold, nor for all them that excell in strength. Forslow not thou the tyme, till there come a night for thee, to sette other people in thy stede. But beware that thou turne not aside, to wickednesse and synne, whiche hetherto thou hast chosen, more then mekenesse. Behold, in the a guyde and law geuer as he? Who will reprooue hym of his waie? Who will saie vnto hym, thou hast wrought wickedly? D. remember how greate and excellent his woorkes be, whom all men loue and praise: yea, wonderest hym, yet can we not see but a parte of. Behold, ye greatenesse of God, that he doeth passe our knowlege, neither are we able to come to the experience of his yeres. He turneth the water to small droppes, he driueth his cloudes Deut. xi. b. A rouryng voyce foloweth him, for his glorious Maiestie, geueth further a thonder clappe, that though a man heare it, yet maie he not perceiue it afterward. It geueth an horrible sounde when God sendeth out his voyce: greate thynges doth he, whiche we cannot comprehende. When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpō the yerth: Psa. cxxxv. b alsoone as he geueth the rain a charge, immediatly the showers haue their strength, and fall downe. The beastes crepe into their denes, and take their rest: Out of the Southe commeth the tempest, and colde, out of the Northe. At the breath of God, the Frost commeth, and the waters are shed abrode. He maketh the cloudes to be their labor, in geuyng moysture, and again, with his light he driueth awaie the cloude. He distributeth also on euery side accordyng as it pleaseth hym to deale out his woorkes: that thei maie do, whatsoeuer he commaundeth theim, throughe the whole worlde, whether it be to punishe any land, or C. to doo good vnto them that feke hym. Herken vnto this (O Job:) stande still, and consider the wonderous woorkes of God. Art thou of counsail with God, when he doth these thynges? Whe he causeth the light to come forth of his cloude? Art thou of his counsaill, when he scatreth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowlege of his wonders? And how thy clothes are warme, when the lande is still, through the South wynd? Cum inuocarem. Psal. iiii.

HEare me when I call, o God of my righteousnes: thou hast set me at liberte when I was in trouble, haue mercy vpon me, & heare my praier. O ye sonnes of men how long will ye blaspheme mine honour: and loue vanitie & seke after leasinges. Know this also, that the lorde hath chosen to him selfe the man that is godly: when I call vpon the lorde, he will heare me. Stande in awe and synne not: comune with your owne hart, & in your chaber & be still. Offer the sacrifice of righteousnes: & put your trust in the lorde. There be many that say: who will shew us any good. Lorde lift vp the light of thy countenaunce vpon vs, thou hast put gladnes in my harte: sence the time that their corne & wine is encreased. I will laye me downe in peace & take my rest: for it is thou lorde only that makest me dwell in safetie. Verba mea. Psal. v.

PVnder my wordes, o lorde consider my meditacion. O harke thou vnto the voyce of my calling, my kyng & my God: for vnto thee will I make my prayer. Thy voyce shalt thou heare betimes, o lorde, early in the morning will I prepare my praier vnto thee, & will loke vp. For thou art the god that hast no pleasure in wickednes: neither shall any euil dwell with thee. Such as be foolish, shal not stand in thy sight: for thou hatest all them that worke iniquitie. Thou shalt destroy them that speke leasyng: the lorde will abhorre both the bloudthirstie & deceitfull man. But as for me I will come into thy house, euen vpon the multitude of thy mercy: and in thy feare will I worship toward thy holy temple. Conduct me, o lorde, in thy righteousnes, because of myne enemies: make thy waye plaine before my face. For there is no stedfastnes in his mouth: their inward parte is very wickednes. Their throate is an open sepulcre: they flatter with their tonge. Destroye thou them, O God: let them perishe through their owne imaginacions: cast them out in the multitude of their vngodlines, for they haue rebelled against thee. Let all all gone aside, they are altogether become abominable: there is none that doth good, no not one. Their throte is an open sepulchre: with their tongues they haue deceaued: the poyson of aspes is vnder their lippes. Whose mouth is full of cursinge and bitternes: their feet are swifte to shed bloud. Destruction and vnhappines is in their wayes, & the way of peace haue they not knowen: there is no feare of God before their eyes. Haue they no knowlege that they are all suche workers of wickednes, eatinge vp my people as it were bread, and call not vpon the Lord? there were they brought in greate feare, euen where no feare was: for God is in the generacion of the righteous. As for you, ye haue made a mocke at the counsail of the poore, because he putteth his truste in the Lorde. Who shall geue sauacion vnto Israel, out of Sion. When the Lorde turneth the captiuite of his people, then shall Jacob reioyce, and Israel shalbe glad.

LOrde who shall dwell in thy tabernacle? who shall rest vpon thy holy hyll? Euen he that leadeth an vncorrupt lyfe and doeth the thinge which is right, and speaketh the truth from his hert. He that vseth no deceyte in his tonge, nor doeth euill to his neighboure, & hath not slaundred his neighboure. He that setteth not by himselfe: but is lowly in his owne eyes and maketh much of them that feare the Lorde. He that sweareth vnto his neighboure and disapointeth him not, thought it were his owne hynderaunce. He that hath not geuen his money vpon vsuris, nor taken reward agaynst the innocent. Who so doeth these thinges, shall neuer fal.

Conserua me domine. Psal. xvi.

PReserue me, O God, for in the haue I put my truste. O my soule thou hast said vnto the Lorde: thou arte my GOD: my goodes are nothinge vnto the. All my delite is vpon the Saintes that are in the yearthe, and vpon suche as excell in vertue. But they that runne after anothers God, shall haue greate trouble. Their drinke offeringes of bloude will not I offre, neither make mencion of their names within my lippes. The Lorde hymselfe is the portion of mine enheritaunce and of my cuppe: thou shalt maintayne my lot. The lot is fallen vnto me in a faire ground, yea, I haue a goodly heritage. I will thanke the Lorde for geuinge me warninge: my reynes also chasten me in the nyght season. I haue set God allwayes before me, for he is on my right hande, therefore I shall not fal. Wherefore my hert was glad, and my glory reioyced, my flesh also shall reste in hope. For why? thou shalt not leaue my soule in hell, neither shalt thou suffre thine holy one to se corrupcion. Thou shalt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is the fulnes of ioye, and make glad there is plentifulnes for euermore.

Exaudi domine iustitiam. Psal. xvij.

HEare the right, O Lord, consider my complaint, and harken vnto my prayer that goeth not out of fained lippes. Let my sentence come forth from thy presence, & let thine eyes loke vpon the thinge that is euen. Thou hast proued & visited mine hart in the nyght season: thou hast tried me with fire & found no wickednes in me: for I am vtterly purposed that my mouth shal not offende. Concerninge the workes that are done vnder the worde of thy lippes: I haue kept me fro the wayes of the destroyer. O hold thou vp my goinges in thy path, so that my fete steppes slip not. I haue called vpon the, O God, for thou shalte heare me: enclyne thine eare to me, & harken vnto my wordes. Shewe thy maruelous louinge kyndnesse, thou that art the sauiour of them which put their truste in the. From such as resist thy right hande, kepe me as the apple of an eye, hyde me vnder the shadowe of thy wynges: from the vngodly that trouble me, fro mine enemies that cōpasse me rounde about, to take away my soule. Their hertes are enclosed in their owne fat: their mouth speketh proude thinges. They lie waytinge in our way on euery side, turninge their eyes downe to the grounde. Like as a lyō that is greedy of his pray, and as it were a lyō whelpe lurkynge in secrete places. Vp lord, disapoint him & cast him downe: deliuer my soule fro the vngodly, which is as a sword of thine. From the men of thy hande, O lorde fro the men, I say, & from the euil worlde, whiche haue their portion in this life, whose belies thou fillest with thy hyd treasure. They haue children at their desire: & leaue the reste of their substaunce for their babes. But as for me, I wil behold thy presence in righteousnes, & when I awake vp after thy likenes I shalbe satisfied with it.

Diligam te domine. Psal. xviij.

I Will loue the O Lorde, my strengthe.

THe Lorde is my stony rocke, and my defence, my sauioure, my God, and my myght, in whome I wyl trust, my buckler the horne also of my saluacion, and my refuge. I will call vpon the Lorde which is worthy to be prayed, so shall I be safe from myne enemies. The sorowes of death compassed me, and the ouerflowinges of vngodlines made me afrayed. The payenes of hel came about me, the snares of death ouertooke me. In my trouble I cal vpon the Lorde, and complayne vnto my God. So shall he heare my voyce out of his holy temple, & my complaint shall come before him, it shall enter euen into his eares. Then the earth trembled and quaked the

and were removed, because he was wroth. There went a smoke out in his presence: & a consuming fire out of his mouth: so that coles were kindled at it. He bowed the heavens also, & came down: & darkness was under his feet. He rode upon the cherubins, & did fly: he came flying upon the wynges of the wynde. He made darkness his secret place: his pavilion rounde about him with darke water and thicke cloudes to cover him. At the brightnes of his presence his cloudes removed, haile stones, & coles of fire. The lord also thondred out of heuē, & the hiest gaue his thunder, haile stones & coles of fire. He sent out his arowes & scattered them, he cast forth lightninges, & destroyed them. The springes of waters were seene, & the foundacions of the rounde worlde were discouered at thy chyding. O lord, at the blastynge of the breth of thy displeasure. He shall send downe from the height to fetch me, & shall take me out of many waters. He shal deliuer me fro my strongest enemie, & fro them which hate me: for they are to mighty for me. They preuented me in the day of my trouble: but the lord was my vpholder. He brought me forth also into a place of liberty: he brought me forth, euē because he had a fauour vnto me. The lord shall reward me after my righteous dealyng: according to the cleanes of my handes shall he recompence me. Because I haue kept the wayes of the lord, and haue not forsaken my god as the wicked doth. For I haue an eye vnto all his lawes: & will not cast out his commaundementes fro me. I was also vncorrupt before him: & eschued mine owne wickednes. Therfore shal the lord reward me after my righteous dealing: & according vnto the cleanes of my handes in his eye sight. With the holy thou shalt be holy, & with a perfect man thou shalte be perfect. With the cleane thou shalt be cleane: & with the frowarde thou shalt learne frowardnes, for thou shalte saue the people that stande in aduersite, & shalt bringe downe the hye lookes of the proude. Thou also shalt light my candel, the lorde my god shall make my darkenes to be light. For in the I shal discomfite an host of men, & with the helpe of god I shall leape ouer the wall. The way of god is an vndefiled waye: the worde of the lord also is tried in the fire, he is the defender of all them that put their trust in him. For who is god but the lorde, or who hath any strength except our god? It is god that girdeth me with strength of warre, & maketh my way perfect. He maketh my feete like hertes feete, & setteth me vp on hie. He teacheth my handes to fight, & mine armes shall breake euē a bowe of steele. Thou hast geuen me the defence of thy saluacion, thy right hand also shall hold me vp, & thy louing correccion shall make me great. Thou shalt make roume vnder me that my fotesteppes shal not slide. I will follow vpō mine enemies, & ouertake them, neither will I turne again till I haue destroyed them. I will smite them, that they shall not be able to stand, but fall vnder my feete. Thou hast girded me with strength vnto the battail, thou shalt throw downe mine enemies vnder me. Thou hast made mine enemies also to turne their backes vnto me, & I shall destroye them that hate me. They shal crye but there shalbe none to help them: yea, euē vnto the lorde shal they crye, but he shal not heare them. I will beate them as small as the dust before the wind, I will cast them out, as the claie in the stretes. Thou shalt deliuer me fro the stroueges of the people: & thou shalt make me the heade of the heathen. A people who I haue not knowē shal serue me, assone as they heare of me they shal obey me: but the straunge children shal dissemble with me. The straunge children shal fade, & be afraid out of their prisons. The lord liueth, & blessed be my strong helper. & praised be the God of my saluacion. Euen the god which seeth that I be auēged: & subdueth the people vnto me. It is he that deliuereth me from my cruell enemies, and setteth me vp aboue mine aduersaries: thou shalt rid me from the wycked man. For this cause I will geue thankes vnto the O lorde, emonge the Gentiles and sing prayses vnto thy name. Great prosperite geueth he vnto his kyng: & sheweth louyng kyndenes vnto Dauid his anoynted, and vnto his sede for euermore.

The heauens declare the glorie of God, & the firmamēt sheweth his handy worke. One day telleth another, & one night certifieth another. There is neither speche nor language, but their voices are heard emonge them. Their sounde is gone into all landes: & their wordes into the endes of the world. In the hath he set a tabernacle for the sunne, which cometh forth as a bridegrome out of his chābre, & reioyceth as a gyaunt to runne his course. It goeth forth from the vttermost part of the heauen, & runneth about vnto the ende of it again, and ther is nothyng hidde fro the heate thereof. The law of the Lorde is an vndefyled lawe conuertynge the saule. The testimony of the Lorde is sure, and geueth wyse vnto the symple. The statutes of the Lorde are right and reioyce the hart: the commaundement of the Lorde is pure, and geueth light vnto the eyes. The feare of the Lorde is clene, and endureth for euer: the iudgementes of the Lorde are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they then golde yea then much fine golde: sweter also then the hony combe & the hony.

D. Who can tell how oft he offendeth? Oh clense thou me from my secrete faultes. Kepe thy seruaunt also from presumptuous synnes, lest they get the dominion ouer me, so shal I be vndefiled, and innocent from the great offence. Let the wordes of my mouth, and the meditation of my hart be alwaye acceptable in thy syght O Lorde, my strength and my redemer.

Exaudiat te dominus. Psal. xx.

A. The lord heare the in the day of trouble, the name of the God of Jacob defende the. Sende the helpe from the sanctuary, and strengthen the out of Sion. Remembre all thyn offeringes, and accepte thy burntsacrifice. Sela. Graunt the thy hartes desire, and fulfill all thy mynde. We wyl reioyce in thy saluacion: and triumphe in the name of the Lorde our God, the Lorde perfourme al thy petitions. Nowe know I that the Lorde helpeth his anoynted, and wyl heare hym fro his holy heauen: euen with the wholsome strength of his right hand. Some put their trust in charrettes and some in horses: but we will remembre the name of the Lord our God. They are brought downe and fallen, but we are risen, and stande vpright. Saue Lord, and heare vs, O kyng of heauen, when we call vpon the.

A. The kyng shal reioyce in thy strength O Lorde: exceadyng glad shal he be of thy saluacion. Thou hast geuen him his hartes desire, and hast not denied hym the requeste of his lippes. Sela. For thou shalt preuent hym with the blessynges of goodnes, & shalt sette a crowne of pure golde vpon his hed. He asked life of the & thou gauest him a lõge life, euen for euer and euer. His honour is great in thy saluatiõ: glory and great worshyp shalt thou lay vpon hym. For thou shalt geue hym euerlastyng felicitie, and make him glad with the ioye of thy countenaunce. And why? because the kynge putteth his trust in the lord, and in the mercy of the moste highe he shall not miscary. All thyne enemies shall fele thy hand: thy right hande shal fynde out them that hate the. Thou shalt make them lyke a fierie ouen in tyme of thy wrath: the Lorde shall destroye them in his displeasure, and the fyre shal consume them. Their frute shalte thou rote out of the yearth, and their seede from emong the children of men. For they intended mischefe against the, and ymagined suche a deuice, as they are not able to perfourme. Therfore shalte thou putte them to flight, and the strynges of thy bowe shalte thou make redy against their faces of them. Be thou exalted Lorde, in thyne owne strength: so wyll we synge and prayse thy power.

My God my God loke vpon me, why hast thou forsaken me: and art so farre fro my helth, & from the wordes of my complaint? O my God, I crie in the daye tyme, but thou hearest not: and in the night season also I take no rest. And thou continuest holy, O thou worshipper of Israel. Our fathers hoped in the, they trusted in the, and thou didest deliuer them. They called vpon the, and were holpen: they put their trust in the, and were not confounded. But as for me I am a worme and no manne: a very scorne of men and the out cast of the people. * All they that se me laugh me to scorne: they shote out their lippes and shake the hed sayenge: * He trusted in God that he wolde deliuer hym: let hym deliuer hym if he wyl haue hym. * But thou art he that tokest me out of my mothers wombe: thou wast my hope when I hanged yet vpon my mothers breastes. I haue been lefte vnto the euer sence I was borne: thou art my God euen from my mothers wombe. O go not fro me, for trouble is harde at hand, and there is none to helpe. Many oxen are come about me, fat bulles of Basan close me in, on euery syde. They gape vpon me with their mouthes as it were a rampynge and roryng Lion. I am poured out lyke water, and all my bones are out of ioynte: my hart also in the middest of my bodie is euen lyke meltynge waxe. My strength is dried vp like a potsherd, and my tong cleueth to my gommes: and thou shalte bryngе me into the dust of death. For many dogges are come about me and the counsell of the wycked lay siege against me. They pearced my handes and my fete, I maye tell all my bones, they stande staryng and lokyng vpon me. * They part my garmentes emonge them, and caste lottes vpon my vesture. But be not thou farre fro me, O Lorde: thou art my succour, haste the to helpe me. Deliuer my soule from the swoorde, my deerlynge from the powre of the doggue. Saue me fro the Lyons mouth: thou hast heard me also from emonge the hornes of the vnicornes. I wyll declare thy name vnto my * brethren: in the middest of the congregatiõ wil I prayse the. O praise the Lorde ye that feare hym, magnifye hym all ye of the seed of Jacob, and feare hym all ye seed of Israel. * For he hath not despised nor abhorred the low estate of the poore, he hath not hid his face from hym, but when he called vnto him, he heard hym. My prayse is of the in the greate congregation, my vowes wyll I perfourme in the sight of them that feare hym. The poore shall eate, and be satisfied: they that seke after the Lord shal prayse hym, your harte shall lyue for euer. All the endes of the worlde shall remembre themselues, and be turned vnto the Lorde,

IN the, O Lorde, haue I put my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion: deliuer me in thy righteousnesse. Bowe thyne eare to me, make haste to deliuer me. And be thou my stronge rocke, and house of defence, that thou mayest saue me. For thou art my stronge rocke, and my castel: Be thou also my Luk. xxiii. c. guyde, & leade me for thy names sake. Draw Actes. vii. g. me out of the net that they haue layed priuely for me, for thou art my strength. B. * Into thy handes I commende my spirite: For thou hast redemed me, O Lorde thou God of truth. I haue hated them that holde of superstitious vanities, and my trust hath bene in the Lorde. I will be glad and reioyce in thy mercy: for thou hast considred my trouble, and hast knowen my soule in aduersities. Thou hast not shut me vp into the hande of the enemie, but hast set my fete in a large rowme. Haue mercy vpon me, O Lorde, for I am in trouble, and mine eye is consumed for very heynesse, yea my soule and my bo- C. dy. For my life is waxen olde with heuines, & mine yeres with mournynge. My strength fayleth me, because of mine iniquitie and my bones are consumed. I became a reproche amonge al myne enemies, but especially among my neyghbours and they of myne acquaintaunce were afrayed of me, and they that dyd se me without, conueyed them selues fro me. I am cleane forgotten, as a dead man out of mynde: I am become lyke a broken vessel. For I haue hearde the blasphemie of the multitude: and feare is on euery syde whyle they conspire togeather against me, and take their counsayl to take away my life. But my D. hope hath bene in the, O lorde I haue sayde thou art my God. My tyme is in thy hande, deliuer me from the hande of myne enemyes, and from them that persecute me. Shewe thy seruaunte the lyght of thy countenaunce, and saue me for thy mercyes sake. Let me not be confounded, O Lord, for I haue called vpon the: let the vngodlye be put to confusion & be put to silence in the graue. Let the lyenge lyppes be put to sylence, whiche cruelly, disdaynefully and spitefully speake againste the righteous. O howe plentyfull is thy goodnesse, whiche thou hast layed vp, for them that feare the: and that thou hast prepared for them, that put their trust in the euen before the sonnes of men? Thou shalte hyde them priuely by thyne owne presence from the prouokynge of all men, thou shalte kepe them secretlye in thy tabernacle from the stryfe of tonges. Blessed be the Lorde: for he hath shewed his marueylous great kind- nesse vnto me in a stronge [illegible] when I made hast- eyes. Neuertheles, thou heardest the voyce of my prayer when I cried vnto the. O loue the Lorde, all ye his saintes, for the Lorde preserueth them that are faithfull, and plenteously rewardeth he the proude doer. * Be Psal. xxvii. and. xxxi. c. stronge, and he shall stablishe your harte, all ye that put your trust in the Lorde.

C. Judica Domine nocentes. Psal. xxxv.

Pleade thou my cause, O Lord, with them that striue with me, & fight thou against them that fight against me. Laye hande vpon the shilde and buckler, and stande vp to helpe me. Drawe forth the speare, and stop the way against them that persecute me: say vnto my soule: I am thy saluacion. Let them be confounded, and put to shame that seke after my soule, let them be turned backe, and brought to confusion, that ymagine mischiefe for me. * Let them be as the dust before the wind, & the aungel of the Lord scatteryng them. Let their way be darke and be slippery, and let the Aungel of the Lord persecute them. For they haue priuely layed their net to destroy me without a cause: yea euen without a cause haue they made a pit for my soule. Let a fodein destruction come vpon hym vnawares: & his net that he hath layd priuely catch hym selfe: that he may fall into his own mischefe and my soule be ioyful in the Lord: it shal reioyce in his saluacion. All my bones shal saye Lord, who is like vnto thee which deliuerest the poore fro hym that is to strong for him: yea, the poore, and him that is in misery, fro him that spoileth him. False witnesse did ryse vp: they layed to my charge thynges that I knew not. They rewarded me euel for good, to the great discomfort of my soule. Neuertheles, when they wer sicke, I put on sacke cloth: and humbled my soule with fasting, and my praier shal tourne into mine own bosome. I behaued my selfe as though it had ben my freend or my brother. I went heauely, as one that mourneth for his mother. But in mine aduersite they reioyced & gathered them together: yea, the very abiectes came together against me vnawares, making mowes at me, and ceassed not. With the flatterers wer busy mockers, which gnashed vpon me with their teeth. Lorde, how long wilt thou loke vpon this? O deliuer my soule from the calamites, which they bring on me, & my dearlyng from the Lyons. So will I geue thankes in the great congregation. I will praise the among much people. ¶ Dixit iniustus. Psal. xxxvi.

A. Wom. ij. c. MY hart sheweth me the wickednesse of the vngodly, that * there is no feare of God before his eyes. For he flattereth hym selfe in his owne sight, till his abominable sinne be found out. The wordes of his mouth are vnrighteous and ful of discrete, he hath left of to behaue hym selfe wisely, and to doo good. He ymagineth mischief vpon his bedde, and hath set hymselfe in no good way: neyther doth he abhorre any thyng that is euil. Thy mercye, O Lorde, reacheth vnto the heauen, and thy faithfulnes vnto the cloudes. Thy righteousnesse standeth like the strong mountaines, thy iudgementes are like the great depe. Thou Lord shalt saue both man and beaste. B. How excellent is thy mercy, O God, and the children of men shall put their trust vnder the shadow of thy wynges. They shalbe satisfied with the plenteousnesse of thy house, and thou shalt geue them drynk of thy pleasures as out of the riuer. For with the is the well of life, and in thy light, shal we see light. O continue forth thy louyng kindnes vnto them that knowe the, and thy righteousnes vnto them that are true of hart. O let not the foote of pryde come against me, and let not the hand of the vngodly cast me down. There are they fallen (all) that worke wickednes, they are cast down, and shal not be able to stande.

Euensong. A. FRet not thy selfe because of the vngodly, neyther be thou enuious against the euil doers. For they shall soone bee cut downe like the grasse, and bee withered euen as the grene herbe. Put thou thy trust in the Lord, and be doyng good, dwell in the land and verely thou shalt be fedde. Delite thou in the Lorde, and he shall geue the thy harts desire. Commit thy way vnto the Lord, and put thy trust in hym, and he shall bryng it to passe. He shall make thy righteousnes as cleare, as the light, and thy iust dealyng as the noone daye. Holde thee still in the Lorde, and abide patiently vpon hym: but greue not thy selfe at hym whose waye doeth prosper against the manne that doeth after euill counsailes. Cease from wrath and let goo displeasure, fret not thy selfe, els shalt thou be moued to doo euill. Wicked doers shalbe roted out, and they that patiently abide the Lorde, those shall enherite the lande. Yet a litle while, and the vngodly shalbe cleane gone: thou shalt loke after his place, and he shalbe away. But the meke spirited shall possesse the yearth, and shalbe refreshed in the multitude of peace. The vngodly seeketh counsaill against the iust, and and gnasheth vpon hym with his teeth. The Lorde shall laughe hym to scorne, for he hath seen, that his day is comynge. The vngodly haue drawne out the swearde, and haue bent their bowe: to caste downe the poore and nedy, and to slay suche as bee of a right conuersation. Their sweardes shall go thorowe their owne hart, and their bowe shalbe broken. A small thyng that the righteous hath, is better then greate riches of the vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shalbe broken, and the Lorde vpholdeth the righteous. The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godly, and their enheritaunce shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in the perilous time, and in the dayes of derth, they shall haue enough. As for the vngodly, they shall perish, and the enemies of the Lorde shal consume as the fat of lambes: yea, euen as the smoke shall they consume away. The vngodly borroweth, and payeth not again, but the righteous is mercifull, and liberall. Suche as be blessed of God shall possesse the lande, and they that bee cursed of hym shalbe roted oute. The Lorde ordereth a good mannes goyng, and maketh his waye acceptable to hym selfe. * Though he fall, he shall not bee cast away, for the Lord vpholdeth hym with his hande. I haue ben young, and now I am old, and yet sawe I neuer the righteous forsaken, nor his seede beggyng their breade. * The righteous is euer mercifull, and lendeth, and his seede is blessed. Fly from euill, and do the thyng that is good, and dwell for euer. For the Lorde loueth the thyng, that is right, he forsaketh not his, that be godly, but they are preserued for euermore.

the righteous, and seketh occasion to slaye hym. The Lorde will not leaue hym in his handes, nor condemne hym, when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe his waye, and he shall promote the, that thou shalt possesse the lande, when the ungodly shall perish, thou shalt see it. I my self haue seen the ungodly in great power, and florishyng lyke a grene Bay tree. And he vanished away, and loo, he was gone, I sought hym, but (his place) could no where be found.

Ꝑ. Kepe innocentie, and take hede vnto the thyng that is right, for that shall bryng a man peace at the laste. As for the transgressours they shal perish together, and the end of the ungodly is, they shalbe voted out at the last. But the saluation of the righteous, commeth of the Lorde, whiche is also their strength in the time of trouble. And the Lorde shall stande by theim, and saue theim, he shall deliuer them from the ungodly, and shall saue theim, because they put their trust in hym.

The .vii. day Mattins. A. Psal. vi. a. Jer. x. d.

O Lorde me not * to rebuke (O Lorde) in thine angre, neyther chasten me, in thy heauy displeasure. For thine arowes sticke fast in me, and thy hande presseth me sore. There is no helth in my flesshe, because of thy displeasure, neyther is there any rest in my bones, by reason of my synne. For my wickednesses are gone ouer my head, and are lyke a sore burthē, to heauy for me to beare. My woundes stincke and are corrupt, thorough my foolishnes. I am brought into so great trouble, and misery, that I go mournyng all the daye long. For my loynes are filled with a sore disease, and there is no whole part in my body. I am feble, and sore smitten, I haue roared for the very disquietnes of my hart. Lord thou knowest al my desire, and my groyning is not hid from the. My hart panteth, my strength hath fayled me, and the light of mine eyes is gone from me. * My louers, and my neyghbours did stande lokyng vpon my trouble, and my kinsmen stode afarre off. They also that sought after my lyfe, laide snares for me: and they that went about to do me euill, talked of wickednes, and imagined deceyte all the daye long. As for me, I was like a deafe man, and hearde not, and as one that is dombe, which doeth not open his mouth. I became euen as a man that heareth not, and in whose mouth are no reproofes. For in the, O Lorde, haue I put my trust, thou shalt answere for me, O Lorde my God. I haue required that they (euen mine enemies) should not triumphe ouer me, for when my foote slipte, they reioyced greatly against me. And I truely am set in the plage, and my heauines is euer in my sight. For I will confesse my wickednes, and bee sorye for my synne. But mine enemies liue, and are mighty, and they that hate me wrongfully, are many in nombre. They also that rewarde euell for good, are agaynste me, because I folowe the thyng that good is. Forsake me not, (O Lorde my God,) be not thou farre from me. Haste the to helpe me, O Lorde (God) my saluacion.

I Sayed, I will take hede to my wayes, that I offende not in my toungue. I will kepe my mouth (as it were with a bryole,) while the ungodly is in my sight. I held my tounge, and spake nothyng, I kept silence, yea euen from good woordes, but it was paine, and griefe to me. My harte was hote within me, and while I was thus musyng: the fier kindled, (and at the laste) I spake with my toungue. * Lorde, lette me knowe mine ende, and the nombre of my dayes, that I may be certified howe longe I haue to liue. * Beholde, thou hast made my dayes as it were a spanne longe, and mine age is euen as nothyng in respecte of the, and verely euery man liuyng is altogether vanitee. For man walketh in a vayne shadowe, and disquieteth hym selfe in vaynethe heapeth vp riches, * and can not tell, who shall gather them. And now Lorde, what is my hope, truely my hope is euen in the. Deliuer me from al mine offences, and make me not a rebuke vnto the foolishe. I became dombe, and opened not my mouth, for it was thy doyng. Take thy plague away fro me, I am euen consumed by the meanes of thy heauye hande. When thou with rebukes doest chasten man for synne, thou makest his beautie to consume away, like as it were a mothe frettyng a garment: euery manne therefore is but vanitee. Heare my prayer, O Lord, and with thine eares consider my rayling, holde not thy peace at my teares. For * I am a straunger with the, and a sojourner, as all my fathers were. Oh spare me a litle, that I may recouer my strength, before I go hence, and be no more seen.

I Waited patiently for the Lord, and he enclined vnto me, and hearde my rayling. He brought me also out of the horrible pytte, out of the myre, and clay, and sette my feete vpon the rocke, and ordred my goynges. And he hath putte a newe songe in my mouth, euen a thankes geuyng vnto our God. Many shall see it, and feare: and shall putte their trust in the Lorde.

* Blessed is the man, that hath sette his hope in the LORD, and turned not vnto the proude, and to suche, as goe about with lyes. O Lorde my God, great are the

wonderous workes, whiche thou hast doen, like as dee also thy thoughtes which are to vs ward, and yet there is no man that ordreth them vnto the. If I wolde declare them and speake of them: they should be mo then I am able to expresse. Sacrifice and meat offrynge thou wouldest not haue: but mine eares hast thou opened. Burnt offeringes, and sacrifice for synne hast thou not required, then sayd I, lo, I come. In the volume of the boke it is written of me, that I should fulfil thy wil, O my God, I am content to do it: yea, thy law is within my hart. I haue declared thy righteousnes in the great congregacion, lo I wil not refraine my lippes, O Lord, as that thou knowest. I haue not hid thy righteousnes within my hart, my talkyng hath ben of thy truth, & of thy saluacion. I haue not kept backe thy louyng mercy and truth, from the great congregacion. Withdraw not thou thy mercy fro me, O Lorde, let thy louyng kindnes and thy truth alway preserue me. For innumerable troubles are come about me, my synnes haue taken such hold vpon me, that I am not able to loke vp: yea, they are mo in nombre then the heares of my head, and my hart hath failed me. O Lord, let it be thy pleasure to deliuer me, make hast (o Lord) to helpe me. Let them be ashamed and confounded together that seke after my soule to destroye it, let them be driuen backeward, and be put to rebuke that wishe me euill. Let them be desolate and rewarded with shame that saye vnto me, eye vpon the, eye vpon the. Let all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the, and let such as loue thy saluacion say alway, the Lord be praised. As for me, I am poore and nedy, but the Lord careth for me. Thou art my helper and redemer, make no long tarying (O my God.)

Blessed is he that considereth the poore and nedy: the Lord shall deliuer hym in the time of trouble. The Lord preserue hym and kepe hym alyue: that he may be blessed vpon yearth, and deliuer not thou hym into the wil of his enemies. The Lord conforte him, when he lyeth sicke vpon his bed: make thou al his bed in his sickenes. I said, Lorde be mercifull vnto me, heale my soule, for I haue synned against the. Myne enemies speake euil of me: when shal he die, and his name perish? And if he come to se me, he speaketh vanite, and his hart conceyueth falshood within himself: and when he goeth forth, he telleth it. All mine enemies whisper together against me: euen against me do they ymagine this euel. Let the sentence of guiltines passe against him, and now that he lyeth, let hym rise vp no more. Yea, euen myne owne familiar frend, whom I trusted (which did also eate of my bread) hath layed great snares for me. But be thou mercifull vnto me (O Lorde) raise thou me vp again, and I shal reward them. By this I know thou fauorest me, that mine enemy doth not triumphe against me. And why I am in my helth thou vpholdest me & shalt set me before thy face for euer. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, world without ende, Amen, and Amen.

℣ Quemadmodum. Psal. xlij.

Like as the hart desireth the water brookes, so longeth my soule after the (o God) My soule is a thyrst for God: yea, euen for the liuyng God, when shal I com to appeare before the presence of God? My teares haue ben my meat day and night, while they daily say vnto me: where is now thy God? Now when I thinke therupon, I powre out my hart by my selfe, for I went with the multitude, and brought them forth vnto the house of God, in the voyce of praise & thankesgeuyng among suche, as kepe holy day. Why art thou so full of heuines (O my soule) and why art thou so vnquiet within me? Put thy trust in God, for I wil yet geue him thankes, for the helpe of his countenaunce. My God, my soule is vexed within me: therefore wil I remembre the, concernyng the land of Jordane, and the litle hil of Hermonim. One depe calleth another: because of the noyse of thy water pipes, all thy waues and stormes are gone over me. The Lorde hath graunted his louyng kyndnes on the day time, & in the night season did I sing of him, and made my prayer vnto the God of my life. I will saye vnto the God of my strength: why hast thou forgotten me: why go I thus heauely: while the enemy oppresseth me? My bones are smitten in sunder as with a sword, while mine enemies that trouble me, cast me in the teth. Namely: while they say daily vnto me: where is now thy God? Why art thou so vexed (O my soule) & why art thou so disquieted within me? O put thy trust in God: for I wil yet thanke hym, which is the helpe of my countenance, and my God.

℣ Judicame Deus. Psal. xlij.

Geue sentence with me (O God) defende my cause against the vngodly people: O deliuer me from the deceytfull, and wicked man. For thou art the God of my strength, why hast thou put me from the? And why go I so heauely, while the enemy oppresseth me? O sende out thy light, and thy truth that they may lead me, and bryng me vnto thy holy hil, and to thy dwelling. And that I may go vnto the aulter of God, euen vnto the God of my ioy, and gladnes, and vpon the harpe will I geue thankes vnto thee (O God) my God. Why art thou so heuy, O my soule, and why art thou so disquieted within me? O put thy trust in GOD, for I will yet geue hym thankes, which is the helpe of my countenaunce, and my God.

The seconde day of Mattins. S. Dan. vi. b.

WE haue heard with our eares, o God, our fathers haue told vs, what thou hast doen in their time of old. How thou hast dryuen out the Heathen with thy hande, and planted them in: how thou hast destroyed the nacions, & cast them out.* For they gat not the lande in possession thorowe their owne sweard, neyther was it their owne arme that helped them. But thy right hand, & thy arme & the light of thy countenaūce, because thou haddest a fauour vnto them. * Thou art my kyng, O God, sende helpe vnto Jacob. Thorowe the, wil we ouerthrowe our enemies, & in thy name will we treade them vnder, that rise vp against vs. For I wil not trust in my bowe: it is not my sweard that shal helpe me. But it is thou, that sauest vs from our enemyes, & puttest them to confusion that hate vs. We make our boast of God al the day lōg and wil praise thy name for euer. Sela. But now thou art farre of, and puttest vs to confusion, & * goest not forth with our armies. Thou makest vs to turne our backes vpō our enemyes, so that they which hate vs, spoyle our goodes. Thou lettest vs be eaten vp like sheepe, & hast scatred vs among the Heathen. Thou sellest thy people for naught, & takest no money for them. Thou makest vs to be rebuked of our neighboures, to be laughed to scorne, & had in derisiō of them, that are rounde about vs. * Thou makest vs to be a byworde among the Heathen, & that the people shake their heades at vs. My cōfusion is daily before me, & the shame of my face hath couered me. For the voice of the slaunderer and blasphemer, for the enemy & auenger. And though al this be come vpō vs, yet do not we forget the, nor behaue our selues frowardly in thy couenaūt. Our hart is not turned backe, neyther our steppes gone out of thy way. No, not when thou hast smitten vs into the place of dragons, & couered vs with the shadowe of death. If we haue forgotten the name of our god, & holde vp our hādes to any straūge god: Shall not God searche it out? for he knoweth the very secretes of the hart.* For thy sake also are we killed al the day long, & are counted as sheepe, appointed to be slaine. Up Lord, why sleepest thou? Awake, & be not absent frō vs for euer. Wherfore hidest thou thy face, & forgettest our misery and trouble? * For our soule is brought lowe euē vnto the dust: our belly cleueth vnto the ground. Arise & helpe vs, & deliuer vs for thy mercies sake.

[illegible] God hath blessed the for euer: girde the with thy sweard vpon thy thigh (O thou most mighty) according to thy worship & renowne. Good lucke haue thou with thine honoure, ryde on because of the worde of truth, of meekenes, & righteousnes, and thy righte hande shal teache the terrible thinges. Thy arowes are very sharpe, & the people shalbe subdued vnto the, euen in the middest emong the kynges enemies. Thy seate (O God) endureth for euer, the sceptre of thy kyngdom is a right sceptre: Thou hast loued righteousnes and hated iniquite, wherfore God (euen thy God) hath anointed the with the oile of gladnesse aboue thy felowes. All thy garmentes smel of Myrre, Aloes, and Cassia, out of the Ivory places, whereby they haue made the glad. Kinges daughters were among thy honourable women: vpō thy right hand did stāde the Quene in a vesture of gold wrought about with diuerse colloures. Herken, (O daughter) and consyder: enclyne thine eare, forget also thine owne people, & thy fathers house. So shal the kyng haue pleasure in thy beawty, for he is thy Lord: God land worship thou him. And the daughter of Tire shalbe there with a gift like as the ryche also amōg the people shal make their supplicaciō before the. The kynges daughter is all glorious within, her clothyng is of wrought golde. She shalbe brought vnto the kyng in raymente of nedle worke: the virgins that be her felowes, shal beare her company, and shalbe brought vnto the. With ioye & gladnes shall they be brought, and shal entre into the kynges palaice. In steade of thy fathers, thou shalt haue children, whom thou maist make princes in all landes. I will remembre thy name frō one generacion vnto another: therfore shal the people geue thankes vnto the, worlde without ende.

GOD is our hope and strength: a very present helpe in trouble. Therefore wil not we feare, though the yearth be moued, & though the hilles be caried in the middest of the Sea.* Though the waters thereof rage & swel, & though the mountaines shake at the tempest of the same. Sela. The riuers of the floude therof shal make glad the cite of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the most hyest. God is in the middest of her, therfore shall she not be removed: God shal helpe her, & that right early. The Heathen make much a do, and the kyngdomes are moued, but God hath shewed his voice, & the yearth shal melt away. The Lorde of hoastes is with vs, the God of Jacob is our refuge. Sela. O come hither, & behold the workes of the lord, what destructiō he hath brought vpō the yearth. * He maketh warres to cease in al the worlde, he breaketh the bowe, & knappeth the speare CLappe your handes together all ye people: O synge vnto god with the voice of melody. For the Lord is hye, & to be feared, he is the great kyng vpon al the yearth. He shall subdue the people vnder vs, and the nacions vnder our fete. He shal chuse out an heritage for vs (euen the worship of Iacob, whom he loued. Sela. God is gone vp with a merry noyse, and the Lord with the sound of the trompe. O synge praises, synge praises vnto our God: O synge praises, synge praises vnto our kyng. For God is kyng of all the yearth, synge prayses with vnderstanding. God raigned ouer the heathē. God sitteth vpon his holy seate. The princes of the people are ioyned vnto the people of the God of Abraham, for God (whiche is very hye exalted) doth defende the yearth, as it were with a shilde.

GReat is the Lord, & highly to be praised in the cite of our God, euen vpō his holy hill. The hill of Syon is a fayre place, & the ioye of the whole yearth, vpon the northside lyeth the citie of the great kyng: God is wel knowen in her palaices, as a sure refuge. For lo, the kinges of the yearth have gathered & gone by together. They mervailed to se such thinges: they were astonied, & soudenly cast down. Feare came there vpō them, & sorowe, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. Thou shalt breake the shippes of the Sea, thorowe the Eastwynde. Like as we have hearde, so have we sene in the citie of the Lord of hoastes, in the citie of our God. God vpholdeth the same for euer. Sela. We wayte for thy louyng kyndnes (O God) in the middest of thy temple. O God according vnto thy name, so is thy prayse vnto the worldes ende: thy right hande is full of righteousnes. Let the mount Syon reioyse, and the daughters of Iuda be glad, because of thy iudgementes. Walke about Syon, and go round about her, and tell the towres thereof. Marke wel her bulwerkes, sette vp her houses, that ye may tell them that come after. For this God is our God for euer & euer, he shalbe our guide vnto death.

DEare this, al ye people: ponder it with your eares, al ye that dwel in the worlde, bothe lowe & hye, riche & poore, one with an other. My mouth shal speake of wisedome, and my hart shal muse al vnderstanding. I wil applye mine eare to the parable, and shewe my darke speache vpon the harpe. Wherefore should I feare in the dayes of wickednes, & when the wickednes of my heles cōpasseth me rounde about? * Their be some that put their trust in their goodes, and boste them selues in the multitude of their riches. But no man may deliuer his brother, nor make an agrement vnto God for hym. * For it costeth more to redeme their soules, so that he must let that alone for euer. Yea, though he lyue long, & se not the graue. * For he seeth, that wise mēne also dye, & perish together: as wel as the ignorant and folish, & leave their riches for other. And yet they thinke, that their houses shal continue for euer, and that their dwellyng places shal endure from one generacion to an other, and call the landes after their own names. Neuertheles, mānes wil not abide in honoure. Seyng he may be compared vnto the beastes that perishe: this is the way of them. This is their folishnes, and their posterite praise their sayenges. Sela. They lye in hell like shepe, death gnaweth vpon them, and the righteous shal haue dominacio of them in the morayng: their beawtie shal cōsume in the sepulchre out of their dwellyng. But God shal deliuer my soule frō the place of hel, for he shal receyue me. Sela. Be not thou afraied though one be made riche: or if the glory of his house be encreased. * For he shall cary nothyng away with hym when he dieth, neither shal his pompe folow him. For while he lived, he counted hymself an happy mannes so long as thou doest wel vnto thy self, menne wil speake good of the. He shall folow the generacions of his fathers, & shal neuer se light. Manne beyng in honoure hath no vnderstandyng, but is compared vnto the beastes, that perishe.

Our God shal not kepe silence: there shal go before him a consumyng fier, and a mighty tempest shalbe stered vp roundabout him. He shal call the heauen from above, and the yearth that he may iudge his people. Gather my saīctes together vnto me, those that have made a covenaūt with me with sacrifice. And the heauēs shal declare his righteousnes: for God is iudge hymself. Sela. Heare, O my people, and I will speake, I my selfe will testifie against the, O Israel. For I am God, euē thy God. thousand hilles. I know all the fowles vpon mountaynes, and the wilde beastes of the felde are in my sight. If I be hungry I will not tell the: for * the whole worlde is mine, and all that therin is. Thynkest thou, that I will eate bulles flesh, and drynke the bloodde of goates? Offre vnto God thanxgeuyng, and paie thy vowes vnto the moost hyghe. And * call vpon me in the time of trouble, so will I heare the, and thou shalt praise me. But vnto the vngodly sayeth God Why doest thou preache my lawes, and takest my couenaunt in thy mouth? Wherein thou hatest to be reformed, and hast cast my woordes behynde the? When thou sawest a theefe, thou consentedest vnto hym, and hast ben partaker with the adulterers. Thou hast let thy mouth speake wickednes, and with thy tong thou hast tolde forth deceyte. Thou sattest and spakest against thy brother: yea, and hast slaundred thyne owne mothers sonne. These thynges hast thou doen, and I held me styll. and thou thoughtest I wickedly I that I am euen suche a one as thy selfe: but I will reproue the, and set before the, the thynges that thou hast doen. O consider this ye that forget God: lest I plucke you away, & there be none to deliuer you. Who so offereth me thanxes and praise: he honoureth me, and to him that ordreth his conuersacion right, will I shewe the saluacion of God.

Haue mercy vpon me (O God) after thy great goodnes, accordyng vnto the multitude of thy mercies, do away myne offences. Wash me thoroughly fro my wickednes and clense me from my sinne. For * I knowledge my faultes, and my sinne is euer before me. Against the onely haue I sinned, and doen this euel in thy sight * that thou mightest be iustified in thy saying, & cleare when thou art iudged. Beholde, I was shapen in wickednes, and in sinne hath my mother conceyued me. But lo, thou requirest truth in the inward partes, and shalt make me to vnderstand wisedom secretly. Thou shalt pourge me with * hyssope, and I shalbe clene: thou shalt wash me, and I shalbe whiter then snow: Thou shalt make me heare ioye and gladnes, that the bones, which thou hast broken, may reioyce. Turne thy face from my synnes, and put out all my misdedes. * Make me a clene hart (O God) renue a right spirite within me. Cast me not away from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirite from me. O geue me the comfort of thy helpe again, and stablishe me with thy free spirite. Then shall I teach thy wayes vnto the wicked, and sinners shalbe conuerted vnto the. Deliuer me from bloode giltines (O God) thou that art the God of my health, and my tong shall syng of thy righteousnes. Thou shalt open my lippes (O Lorde) my mouth shall shewe thy praise. For thou desirest no sacrifice: els would I geue it the: but thou delitest not in burnt offrynge. The sacrifice to God is a troubled spirite: a broken and contrite hart (O God) shalt thou not despise. O be fauourable and gracious vnto Syon, buylde thou the walles of Ierusalem. Then shalt thou be pleased with the * sacrifice of righteousnes, with the burnt offrynges and oblacions, then shall they offer yonge bullockes vpon thyne aulter.

Euensong. A. SAue me, O God: for the waters are come in, euen vnto my soule. I sticke fast in the depe myre, where no ground is: I am come into depe waters, so that the floudes runne ouer me. I am wery of crying, my throte is drie: my sight faileth me, for waiting so long vpon my God. They that* hate me without a cause, are mo then the heeres of my head, they that are mine enemies, & would destroye me giltles are mighty: I payed them the thynges that I neuer tooke. God thou knowest my simpleues, and my faultes are not hid from the. Let not them that trust in the O lord God of hostes, be ashamed for my cause let not those that seke the bee confounded thorow me, O God of Israell. And why? for thy sake haue I suffered reproffe: shame hath couered my face. I am become a straunger vnto my brethren: euen an aleaunt vnto my mothers children. For* the zeale of thyne house hath euen eaten me, and* the rebukes of them that rebuked the are fallen vpon me. I wept and chastened my selfe with fasting, & that was turned to my reproffe. I put on sak cloth also, and they iested vpon me. They that sit in the gate, spake against me, and the dronkardes* make songes vpon me. But Lord, I make my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme. Heare me (O God) in the multitude of thi mercy, euen in the truth of thy saluation.

Let not the water floude drowne me: neither let the depe swalowe me vp, and let not the pit shut her mouth vpon me. Heare me, O Lord, for thy louyng kyndnesse is comfortable: turne the vnto me, accordyng vnto the multitude of thy mercies. And hide not thy face from thy seruaunt, for I am in trouble: O haste the, and heare me. Drawe nie vnto my soule and saue it: Oh deliuer me, because of myne enemies. Thou hast knowen my reproffe, my shame and my dishonour, myne aduersaries are ful in thy sight. D. Lord how long shall the vngodly: how long shal the vngodly tryumphe? How long shall all wicked doers speake so disdaynfully, and make suche proude boastyng? And yet they saye: tushe, * the Lorde shal not se, neyther shal the God of Jacob regarde it. Take hede, ye vnwyse among the people. O ye fooles when will ye vnderstande: He that planted the eare, shal he not heare? or he that made the eye shal he not se? Or he that nourtereth the Heathen, it is he that teacheth man knowledge, shall not he punysshe? The Lorde knoweth the thoughtes of man, that they are but vayne. Blessed is the man, whom thou chastenest (O Lorde) and teachest in thy lawe. That thou mayest geue hym pacience in tyme of aduersitie vntyll the pyt be dygged vp for the vngodlye. There shall go a fyre before hym, and burne his enemies on every syde. His lyghtenynges gaue lyght vnto the worlde, the yearth sawe it and was afrayd. The hylles melted lyke waxe at the presence of the Lorde, at the presence of the Lord of the whole earth.
The heauens haue declared his ryghteousnes, and all the people haue sene his glory.
Confounded be all they that worshyp carued ymages, and that delite in vayne goddes: worshyp hym all ye goddes. Syon heard of it, and reioyced: and the daughters of Juda were glad, because of thy iudgemētes O Lord. For thou Lorde art hyer then all that are in the yearth, thou art exalted far aboue al goddes.
O ye that loue the Lorde, se that ye hate the thing which is euell, the lord preserueth the soules of his saincts, he shall deliuer thē frō the hand of the vngodly. ¶ Cantate domino. Psalm. xcviii.

Syng vnto the Lorde a new song, for he hath done meruelous thynges. With his own ryght hand and with his holy arme hath he gotten hymself the victory. The lord declared his saluacion, his righteousnesse hath he openly shewed in the sight of the heathen. He hath remembred his mercy and truth toward the house of Israel: and al the endes of the worlde haue sene the saluacion of our God. Shew your selues ioyful vnto the lord al ye landes, syng, reioyce, and geue thā prayse. Prayse the Lorde vpon the harpe, syng to the harpe with a Psalme of thankesgeuyng. With trompettes also and hawmes: O shewe youre selues ioyfull before the Lorde the kyng. Let the Sea make a noyse and al that is therein, the round worlde, and they that dwell therein. Let the flouds clappe their handes, and let the hylles be ioyful together, before the lord, for he is comen to iudge the yearth. He suffred no man to do them wrong: but reproued euen kynges for theyr sakes. Touche not myne anoynted: and do my prophetes no harme. Moreouer, he called for a dearth vpon the lande: and destroyed all the prouision of bread. * But he had sent a man before them: euen Ioseph, whyche was solde to be a bond seruaunt. Whose fete they hurt in the stockes: * the yron entred into his soule. Vntyll the tyme came that his cause was knowen: the worde of the Lorde tryed hym. * The kyng sent and deliuered hym: the prynce of the people let hym go free. He made hym Lorde also of his house and ruler of all hys substaunce. That he myght enstruct his princes after his wyll: and teache his Senatours wysdome. * Israell also came into Egypte: Iacob was a straunger in the land of Ham. * And he encreased his people exceadyngly: and made them stroger then their enemies. Whose hart turned, so that they hated his people: and dealt vntruely with his seruauntes. * Then sent he Moses his seruaunt and Aaro, whō he had chosen. And these shewed his tokens among them: and wonders in the lande of Ham. * He sent darkenes, and it was darke: and they were not obedient vnto his woorde. * He turned their waters into bloud: & slew their fyh. * Their land brought forth frogges: yea, euen in their kynges chābers. * He spake the worde, and there came al maner of flyes: and lyce in al their quarters. * He gaue them hayle stones for rayne: and flambes of fyre in their land. He smote their vines also & figge trees: & destroied the trees that were in their coastes. * He spake the worde: & the grashoppers came & caterpyllers innumerable. And did eate vp al the gras in the lande: and deuoured the frute of their ground. * He smote al the first borne in their land: euen the chief of all their strength. He brought them forth also with syluer & gold: there was not one feble person among their tribes. Egipt was glad at their departyng: for * they were afrayd of them. * He spred out a cloud to be a couerynge: & fire to geue light in the nyght season. * At their desire, he brought quailes: & he fylled the with the bread of heauen. * He opened the rocke of stone, & the waters flowed out: so that riuers ran in the drie places. For why? he remembred his holy promyse: & Abraha his seruaunt. And he brought forth his people with ioye: and his chosen with gladnes. And gaue them the landes of the Heathē: and they toke the labours of the people in possession. That they myght kepe his statutes: and obserue his lawes. Prayse

O Geue* thanke vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer. Who can expresse the noble actes of the Lorde, or shew forth all his prayse? Blessed are they that alway kepe iudgement, and do righteousnes. Remembre me O Lorde, accordyng to the fauour that thou bearest vnto thy people: O viset me with thy saluacion. That I may se the felicite of thy chosen, and reioyce in the gladnes of thy people, and geue thanke with thine enheritaunce.

B. We haue sinned with our fathers, we haue done amisse, and dealt wickedly. Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypt, neyther kepte they thy greate goodnesse in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the Sea, euen at the redde Sea. Neuertheles, he helped them for his names sake, that he might

Then stode vp Phinehes, and praied, and so the plage ceassed. And that was counted vnto hym for righteousnes, among al posteri-

Neyther destroyed they the Heathen, * as the Lorde commaunded them. But were mingled among the Heathen, and learned their workes. In so much that they worshipped their ydols, whiche turned to their own decay. * Yea, they offred their sonnes, & their daughters vnto deuils. * And shed innocent blood, euen the blood of their sonnes, & of their daughters, whom they offred vnto the ydols of Canaam, and the lande was defiled with blood. Thus were they stained with their owne workes, & went a whoryng with their own inuentions. * Geue thanke vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious: and his mercy endureth for euer. Let them geue thankes whom the Lorde hath redemed: and deliuered from the hand of the enemy. And gathered them out of the landes, from the East, and from the West, from the North, and from the South. They went a stray in the wildernesse out of the way, and found no city to dwel in. Hungry and thirsty: their soule fainted in them. So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble, and he deliuered them from their distresse. He ledde them forth by the right way, that they might goo to the rite, where they dwelte. and corrected me, but he hath not geuen me ouer vnto death. Open me the gates of righteousnesse, that I may go into them, and geue thankes vnto the Lorde. This is the gate of the Lorde, the righteous shall entre into it. I will thanke the, for thou hast heard me: and art become my saluacion. The same stone which the builders refused, is become the head stone in the corner. This was the Lordes doyng: and it is marueilous in our eyes. This is the day which the Lorde hath made: we will reioyce and be glad in it.
Helpe [me] nowe O Lorde, O Lorde, sende vs now prosperitie. Blessed be he that cōmeth in the name of the Lorde, we haue wished you good lucke, ye that bee of the house of the Lorde. God is the Lord, which hath shewed vs light: bynde the sacrifice with cordes: yea, euen vnto the hornes of the aulter. Thou art my God, and I will thanke the:
thou art my God, and I will praise the. O geue thankes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious: and his mercie endureth for euer.

Beati immaculati. Psal. cxix.

Blessed are those that be vndefiled in the way, and walke in the lawe of the Lord.
Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, & seke him with their whole hart. For they which do no wickednesse, walke in his wa-yes. Thou hast charged that we shall diligently kepe thy commaundementes. O that my wayes were made so direct, that I might kepe thy statutes. So shall I not be confounded, while I haue respecte vnto all thy commaundementes. I will thanke the, with an vnfained harte, when I shall haue learned the iudgemētes of thy righteousnesse. I will kepe thy ceremonies: o forsake me not vtterly

Beth. WHere withal shall a young man cleanse his waye? Euen by rulyng him selfe after thy worde. With my whole hart haue I sought the: O let me not go wrong out of thy commaundementes. Thy wordes haue I hid within myne hart, that I should not synne against the. Blessed art thou O Lord, O teache me thy statutes. With my lippes haue I been telling of all the iudgementes of thy mouth. I haue had as great delite in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of richesse. I will talke of thy cōmaundementes and haue respect vnto thy wayes. My delite shalbe in thy statutes: and I will not forget thy worde.

Gimel. DO wel vnto thy seruaunt, that I may liue and kepe thy worde. Open thou myne eyes, that I may se the wonderous thin-ges of thy lawe. I am a straunger vpō earth, O hyde not thy commaundementes fro me. My soule breaketh out for the very feruente de-syre that it hath alway vnto thy iudgementes. Thou hast rebuked the proude and cursed are they that do erre from thy commaundementes. O turne fro me shame and rebuke: for I haue kept thy testimonies. Princes also did sit & speake against me, but thy seruaūt is occupied in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are my delyte and my counsailers.

Daleth. MY soule cleaueth to the dust: O quicken thou me accordyng to thy worde. I haue acknowleged my waies & thou heardest me: O teache me thy statutes. Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundemen-tes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous woorkes. My soule melteth awaye for very heauinesse, comfort thou me accordyng vnto thy worde. Take fro me the waie of lying, & graūte thou me to make mucho of thy lawe. I haue chosen the waie of truth: and thy iudgementes haue I laid before me. I haue cle-ken vnto thy testimonies, O Lord confounde me not. I will runne the way of thy cōmaun-dementes, when thou hast set my harte at libertie.

He. TEache me, O Lorde, the waye of thy statutes: and I shal kepe it vnto the ende.
Geue me vnderstandyng, and I shal kepe thy lawe: yea, I shal kepe it with my whole hart.
Make me to go in the path of thy commaundementes: for therein is my desyre. Encline my hart vnto thy testimonies, and not to couetousnesse. O turne away myne eyes, lest thei behelde vanitie: and quicken thou me in thy waie. O stablishe thy worde in thy seruaunt, that I may feare the. Take away the rebuke that I am afrayd of, for thy iudgementes are good. Behelde, my delyte is in thy commaundementes: o quicke me in thy righteousnesse.

Vau. LEt thy louyng mercy come also vnto me, O Lorde: euen thy saluacion accordyng vnto thy worde. So shall I make answere vnto my blasphemers: for my trust is in thy worde. O take not the worde of truth vtterly out of my mouth: for my hope is in thy iudgementes. So shall I alway kepe thy lawe: yea, for euer and euer. And I wil walke at libertie, for I seke thy commaundementes. I will speake of thy testimonies also, euen before kynges: and will not be ashamed. And my delite shalbe in thy cōmaundementes which I haue loued. My handes also will I lift vp vnto thy commaundementes which I haue loued: and my study shalbe in thy statutes.

Zain. REmembre vpon thy seruaunt, as concernyng thy worde, wherin thou hast caused me to put my trust. The same is my comfort in my trouble, for thy worde hath quickened me. The proude haue had me exceedyngly in derision: yet haue I not shronke from thy lawe. For I remembred thyne euerlastynge iudgementes, O Lorde: and receiued comforte.

I am horribly afraied for the vngodly, that forsake thy lawe. Thy statutes haue been my songes, in the house of my pylgrimage. I haue thought vpon thy name, O Lorde in the night season: and haue kept thy lawe. This I had, because I kept thy commaundementes.

Thou * art my portion, O Lorde, I haue promised to kepe thy lawe. I made myne humble peticion in thy presence with my whole hart: O be mercifull vnto me according vnto thy worde. I call myne owne wayes to remembraunce, and turne my fete vnto thy testimonies. I made hast, and prolonged not to kepe thy commaundementes. The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I haue not forgotten thy lawe. At midnight wil I rise, to geue thankes vnto the: because of thy righteous iudgementes. I am a companion of al them that feare the: and kepe thy commaundementes. * The yearth, O Lorde, is ful of thy mercy: o teache me thy statutes.

O Lorde, thou hast dealt graciously with thy seruaunt accordyng vnto thy worde. O learne me true vnderstandyng, and knowlege, for I haue beleued thy commaundementes. Before I was troubled I went wrang: but now haue I kept thy worde. * Thou art good and gracious: O teache me thy statutes. The proude haue ymagined a lie against me, but I will kepe thy commaundementes with my whole harte. Their harte is as fat as brawne, but my delyte hath been in thy lawe. It is good for me that I haue been in trouble, that I may learne thy statutes. The law of thy mouth is dearer vnto me: then thousandes of golde and siluer.

Thy* handes haue made me and fashioned me: O geue me vnderstandyng that I may learne thy commaundementes. They that feare the, wil be glad when they se me, because I haue put my trust in thy worde. I knowe, O Lorde, that thy iudgementes are right, and that thou of very faithfulnes hast caused me to be troubled. O let thy mercifull kyndnesse be my comforte, according to thy worde vnto thy seruaunt. O let thy louing mercies come vnto me, that I may lyue, for thy lawe is my delyte. Let the proude bee confounded, for they go wickedly about to destroy me: but I wil bee occupied in thy commaundementes. Let such as feare the, and haue known thy testimonies be turned vnto me. O let my hart be sounde in thy statutes, that I become not ashamed.

My soule longeth for thy saluacion: and I haue a good hope, because of thy worde. Myne eyes longe sore for thy word sayyng: O when wilt thou comfort me? For I am become lyke a botle in the smoke: yet do I not forget thy statutes. How many are the dayes of thy seruaunt? when wilt thou be auenged of them that persecute me? The proude haue digged pittes for me, which are not after thy lawe. All thy commaundementes are true, they persecute me falsly: O be thou my helpe. They had almost made an ende of me vpo earth: but I forsoke not thy commaundementes. O quicken me after thy louyng kyndnesse, so shall I kepe the testimonies of thy mouth.

O Lorde, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen. * Thy truth also remaineth from one generacion to an other: thou hast laied the foundacion of the yearth: and it abideth. They continue this day: according to thyne ordinances: for al thinges serue the. If my delite had not been in thy lawe, I should haue perished in my trouble. I wil not forget thy commaundementes, for with them thou hast quickened me. I am thyne, O saue me: for I haue sought thy commaundementes. The vngodly laied wait for me to destroy me: but I wil consider thy testimonies. I see that all thynges come to an ende: but thy commaundement is exceedyng brode.

O what loue haue I vnto thy lawe! all the day long is my study in it. Thou, through thy commaundementes hast made me wyser then myne enemies, for they are euer with me. I haue more vnderstandyng then my teachers: for thy testimonies are my study. I am wiser then the aged: because I kept thy commaundementes. I haue refrained my fete from euery euill way, that I may kepe thy worde. I haue not swerued from thy iudgementes: for thou teachest me. O how sweete are thy wordes vnto my throte: yea, sweeter then hony vnto my mouth. Through thy commaundementes I get vnderstandyng, therefore I hate all wicked wayes.

Thy* worde is a lanterne vnto my fete, and a light vnto my pathes. I haue sworne and am stedfastly purposed to kepe thy righteous iudgementes. I am troubled aboue measure: quicken me O Lorde accordyng vnto thy worde. Let the free wil offrynges of my mouth please the, O Lorde, and teache me thy iudgementes. My soule is alway in my hand: yet do not I forget thy lawe. The vngodly haue laied a snare for me, but yet swerued not I from thy commaundementes. Thy testimonies haue I claimed as myne heritage for euer: and why? they are the very ioye of myne harte. I haue applied mine hart to fulfil thy statutes alway, euen vnto the ende.

I hate them that ymagine euil thynges, but thy lawe do I loue. Thou art my defence and shild, and my trust is in thy worde. Away from me ye wicked, I wil kepe the commaundementes of my God. O stablish me accordyng vnto thy worde, that I may lyue, and [illegible] me by, and I shalbe safe: yea, my delite shall euer be in thy statutes. Thou hast trodden downe all them that depart from thy statutes, for thei imagine but disceipte. Thou puttest away all the vngodly of the yearth lyke drosse: therefore I loue thy testimonies. My flesh trembleth for feare of the: and I am afrayed of thy iudgementes.

Sin.

I Deale with the thyng that is lawful and right: O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours. Make thou thy seruaunt to delyte in that which is good: that the proude do me no wrong. Myne eyes are wasted away with lokyng for thy health and for the woorde of thy righteousnesse. O deale with thy seruaunt accordyng vnto thy louyng mercies: & teache me thy statutes. I am thy seruaunt, O graunt me vnderstandyng, that I may knowe thy testimonies. It is tyme for the Lorde to lay to thine hande, for thei haue destroyed thy law. For I loue thy cõmaundementes aboue gold and precious stoone. Therefore holde I streight al thy commaundementes, and al falce wayes I vtterly abhorre.

THy testimonies are wonderfull: therefore doth my soule kepe thẽ. When thy woord goeth forth, it geueth light & vnderstandyng euen vnto the symple. I opened my mouth, & drue in my breath, for my delite was in thy commaundementes. O loke thou vpon me, & be mercyful vnto me as thou vsest to do vnto those that loue thy name. Order my steppes in thy woorde: and so shal no wickednesse haue dominion ouer me. O deliuer me from the wrongful dealinges of men, & so shal I kepe thy commaundementes. Shewe the light of thy countenaunce vpon thy seruaunt, & teach me thy statutes. Myne eyes gushe out with waters: because men kepe not thy lawe.

Vade.

RIghteous art thou, O Lorde: and true is thy iudgemente. The testimonies that thou hast commaunded, are exceadyng righteous and true. My zeale hath euen consumed me, because myne enemies haue forgotten thy woordes. Thy woorde is tryed to the bitter moost: and thy seruaunt loueth it. I am smal, and of no reputacion: yet do not I forget thy commaundementes. Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastyng righteousnesse: and thy law is the truth. Trouble and heauynesse haue taken holde vpon me: yet is my delite in thy commaundementes. The righteousnesse of thy testimonies is euerlastyng: O graunt me vnderstandyng, and I shal liue.

I Cal with myne whole hart, heare me. O Lorde, I wil kepe thy statutes. Yea, euen vpon the do I cal, helpe me: and I shal kepe thy testimonies. Early in the morning do I crie vnto the: for in thy woorde is my trust. Myne eyes preuent the night watches, that I might be occupied in thy woordes. Heare my voice, O Lorde, accordyng vnto thy louyng kyndnesse: quicken me accordyng as thou art wont. Thei draw nyghe that of malice persecute me: & are farre from thy lawe. Be thou nye at hande, O Lorde: for al thy commaundementes are true. As concernyng thy testimonies, I haue knowen long tyme, that thou hast grounded them for euer.

Res. R.

DConsydre myne aduersitie, and delyuer me: for I do not forget thy law. Auẽge thou my cause, and deliuer me: quicke me accordyng vnto thy woorde. Healthy is farre frõ the vngodly, for thei regarde not thy statutes. Greate is thy mercy, O Lorde: quicken me as thou art wont. Many there are that trouble me, & persecute me: yet do I not swarue from thy testimonies. It greeueth me, whẽ I see the transgressours: because thei kepe not thy lawe. Consyder, O Lorde, how I loue thy commaundementes: O quicken me accordyng to thy louyng kyndnesse. Thy woord is true from euerlastyng: al the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse endure for euermore.

Sin. P. Ps. cxix. a.

PRINCES haue persecuted me without cause: but my hart standeth in awe of thy woordes. I am as glad of thy woorde, as one that fyndeth great spoiles. As for lyes, I hate and abhorre them: but thy lawe do I loue. Seuẽ tymes a day, do I praise the, because of thy righteous iudgemẽtes. Great is the peace that thei haue which loue thy lawe, and thei are not offended at it. Lord I haue loked for thy sauyng health & doen after thy commaundementes. My soule hath kept thy testimonies, and loued them exceadyngly. I haue kepte thy commaundementes and testimonies, for al my wayes are before the.

LEt my complaint come before the, o Lord: geue me vnderstandyng, accordyng vnto thy woorde. Oh let my supplicacion come before the, deliuer me accordyng to thy woorde. My lippes shall speake of thy praise, when thou hast taught me thy statutes. Yea, my tongue shall synge of thy woorde: for all thy commaundementes are righteous. Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes. I haue longed for thy sauyng health, O Lorde, and in thy law is my delite. Oh let my soule lyue, and it shall praise the, and thy iudgementes shall helpe me. I haue gone astray lyke a shepe that is lost. Oh seke thy seruaunt, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

CAd Dominum cum tribularer. Ps. cxx.

WHen I was in trouble, I* called vpon the Lorde: and he heard me. Deliuer my soule, O Lord, frõ lying lippes, and frõ a deceitful tongue. What reward shalbe geuen or doen vnto the thou falce tõgue? Euen mighty & sharpe arowes, with hoote burning coles. Wo is me, that I am constrained to dwel with Mesech, & to haue myne habitacion emõg the cedres of Cedar. My soule hath longe dwelt among thē that be enemies vnto peace. I labour for peace, but when I speake vnto them therof, they bende them to battaile.

Ad te leuaui oculos. Psal. cxxi.

I. Will lifte vp myne yes vnto the hilles, from whence my helpe commeth. * My helpe commeth euen from the Lorde, which hath made heauen and yearth. He wil not suffre thy foote to be moued, and he that kepeth thee wil not slepe. Behold, he that kepeth Israel shal neither slōbre nor slepe. The Lord himselfe is thy keper, the Lorde is thy defence vpon thy right hād. So that the sunne shal not burne thee by day, neyther the Moone by night. The Lorde shal preserue thee from all euill: yea, it is euen he that shall kepe thy soule. The Lorde shall preserue thy goyng out, and thy cōmyng in: from this tyme forth for euermore.

Lætatus sum. Psal. cxxii.

II. I Was glad, when they said vnto me: * We wil go into the house of the Lorde. Our fete shall stande in thy gates, O Jerusalem. Jerusalem is builded as a citee that is at vnitie in it selfe. For thyther the tribes go vp, euen the tribes of the Lorde: to testify vnto Israel, to geue thankes vnto the name of the Lorde. For there is the seate of iudgemēt, euen the seate of the house of Dauid. Pray for the peace of Jerusalem, they shal prosper that loue thee. Peace be within thy walles, & plenteousnesse within thy palaces. For my brethren and companions sakes, I will wishe thee prosperitie. Yea, because of the house of the Lorde our God: I wil seke to do thee good.

Ad te leuaui. Psal. cxxiii.

III. VNTO thee lifte I vp myne yes, * thou that dwellest in the heauens. Beholde, euen as the yes of seruauntes looke vnto the hande of their maisters, and as the yes of a maiden vnto the hand of her maistres: euen so our yes waite vpon the Lord our God, vntil he haue mercy vpō vs. Haue mercy vpō vs, O Lord haue mercie vpon vs: for we are vtterly despised. Our soule is filled with the scornefull reproche of the wealthy, & with the despitefulnesse of the proude.

Nisi quia Dominus. Psal. cxxiii.

IV. Yf the Lorde himselfe had not been on our syde (now maie Israel say:) Yf the Lord himselfe had not been on our side, when men rose vp against vs: * Then had they swolowed vs vp quycke, when their woo was so wrathfully displeased at vs. Yea, the waters had drowned vs: and the stremes had gone ouer our soule. The depe waters of the proude had gone, euen ouer our soule. But praysedde be the Lorde, which hath not geuen vs ouer for a praye vnto their teeth. Our soule is escaped, euen as a birde out of the snare of the fouler: the snare is broken, and we are deliuered. * Our helpe standeth in the name of the Lord, which hath made heauen and yearth. Psalm. xxiv.

Qui confidunt. Psal. cxxv.

I. THey that * put their trust in the Lorde, shalbe euen as the mount Syon, which may not be removed, but standeth fast for euer. The hilles stande about Jerusalem: euen so standeth the Lorde rounde about his people: from this tyme forth for euermore. For the rod of the vngodly commeth not into the lot of the righteous, lest the righteous put their hand vnto wickednesse. Do wel, O Lorde, vnto those that bee good and true of hart. As for suche as turne backe vnto their owne wickednesse: the Lorde shal leade thē forth with the euil doers: but * peace shal be vpon Israell. Psa. cxxv. b. Gala. vi. d.

In conuertendo. Psal. cxxvi.

II. WHen the Lorde turned againe the captiuitie of Syon, then were we like vnto them that dreame. Thē was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with ioy. Then said they among the Heathen: the Lorde hath doen greate thynges for them. Yea, the Lord hath doen great thynges for vs already, whereof we reioyce. Turne our captiuitie, O Lorde, as the ryuers in the South. They that sowe in teares, shal reape in ioy. He that nowe goeth in his waie weping and beareth forth good seede, shal doutles come againe with ioye, and bringe his sheaues with him. A. Euensong.

Nisi Dominus. Psal. cxxvii.

I. EXcepte the Lorde buylde the house, they laboure is but lost that buylde it: Excepte the Lorde kepe the Citie, the watcheman waketh but in vaine. * It is but lost labour that ye haste to ryse vp earely, and so late to take reste, and eat the breade of carefulnesse: for so he geueth his beloued slepe. Loo, children and the fruite of the wombe, are an heritage and gifte, that commeth of the Lorde. Like as the arowes in the hande of the Gyaunt, euen so are the young children. Happy is the man that hath his quyuer full of them, they shal not be ashamed, when they speake with their enemies in the gate. Psalm. cxxvii.

Beati omnes. Psal. cxxviii.

II. BLessed are all they that * feare the Lord, and walke in his wayes. For thou shalt eate the laboures of thyne handes. O wel is thee, and happy shalt thou be. Thy wife shalbe as the fruteful vyne vpon the walles of thyne house. Thy children lyke the Olyue braunches rounde about thy table. Loo, thus shall the manne bee blessed that feareth the Lord. The Lorde from out of Syon shall so blesse thee, that thou shalt se Jerusalem in prosperitie al thy life long. Yea, that thou shalt see * thy children's children, and peace vpon Israell. ¶ Depe exyngauerunt. Psal. cxxix.

B. MAny a time haue thei fought against me from my youthe vp: (maie Israell now say.) Yea, many a time haue thei vexed me fro my youthe vp: but thei haue not preuailed against me. The plowers plowed vpō my back and made long forowes. But the righteous lorde hath hewen the snares of the vngodly in peces. Let theim be confounded and turned backward: as many as haue euill willat Sion. Let them be euen as the grasse growyng vpon the house toppes: whiche withereth afore that it be plukt vp. Wherof the mower filleth not his hand: neither he that bindeth vp the sheaues, his bosome. So that thei whiche go by, saie not so muche: as the lorde prospere you: wee wishe you good lucke in the name of the lorde.

B. OVt of the depe haue I called vnto thee, O Lorde: Lorde heare my voyce. Oh let thyne eares consider well the voyce of my complaint. Job.ix.a. Psal.cxlij.e. If* thou lorde wilt be extreme to marke what is doen amisse: oh lorde who may abide it? For there is mercie with thee: therfore shalt thou be feared. I loke for the lord, my soule doth waite for hym: in his worde is my trust. My soule fleeth vnto the lorde, before the morning watche: (I saie) before the morning watche. O Israel, trust in the lorde for with the Lorde there is mercie: and with hym is plenteous redemption. And he shall redeme Israell from all his synnes.

B. LOrde, I am not high mynded: I haue no proude lokes.* I doo not exercise my self in greate matters: whiche are to high for me. But I refrain my soule and kepe it lowe, like as a child that is weaned from his mother: yea, my soule is as a weaned childe. O Israell trust in the Lorde from this tyme furthe for euermore. ¶ Memento domine Dauid. Psa. cxxxii. Hatins. B.

LOrde, remembre Dauid: and all his trouble. How* he swore vnto the lord: and vowed a vowe vnto the almightie God of Jacob. I will not come within the Tabernacle of my house: nor climbe vp into my bedde. I will not suffre myne eyes to slepe, nor myne eye lidde to slomber: neither the temples of my hed to take any rest. Vntill I finde out a place for the temple of the Lorde: an habitacion for the mightie God of Jacob. Lo, wee hard of the same at Euphrata: and found it in the wood. We will go into his Tabernacle: and fall lowe on our knees before his foote stoole. Arise, O lorde, into thy resting place: thou & the arke of thy strength. Let thy priestes bee clothed with righteousnesse: and let thy saintes syng with ioyfulnes. For thy seruaunt Dauids sake: turne not awaie the pre- Act.vij.b. Num.x.a. Psa.xxxiij.d Psa. xcv.b. made a faithfull othe vnto Dauid: and he shal not shrinke from it. Of* the fruite of thy body: shal I set vpon thy seate. If thy children will kepe my couenaunt and my testimonies that I will learne theim: their children also shal sit vpon thy seate for euermore. For the lorde hath chosen Sion: to be an habitacion for hymself, he hath longed for her. This shalbe my rest for euer: here will I dwell for I haue a delight therein. I will blesse her victualles with increase and will satisfy her poore with bread. I will decke her priestes with healthe: and her saintes shall reioyce, and syng. There shall I make* the horne of Dauid to florishe: I haue ordeined a lanterne for myne annoynted. As for his enemies, I shall clothe them with shame, but vpon hymself shall his crowne florishe. ¶ Ecce quam bonum. Psal. cxxxiij.

BEholde, how good and ioyfull a thyng it is: brethren to dwell together in vnitie. It is like the precious ointment vpō the hed that ran doune vnto the beard: euen vnto Aarons beard, and went doune to the skirtes of his clothyng. Like the dew of Hermon, whiche fell vpon the hill of Sion. For there the Lorde promised his blessyng: and life for euermore. B. Philip.ij.d.

BEholde, now praise* the lorde, al ye seruauntes of the Lorde. Ye that by night stande in the house of the lorde: euen in the courtes of the house of our God. Thei haue eares, & yet thei heare not: neither is there any breath in their mouthes. Thei that make them, are like vnto them: and so are all thei that put their trust in them. Prayse the lorde ye house of Israell: prayse the lorde ye house of Aaron. Prayse the lorde ye house of Leui: ye that feare the lord, prayse the lorde. Praysed be the lorde out of Sion: which dwelleth at Ierusalem. Alleluya.

Geue* thankes vnto the lorde, for he is gracious: and his mercie endureth for euer. O geue thankes vnto the God of all Goddes: For his mercie endureth for euer. O thanke the lord of all lordes: for his mercie endureth for euer. * Whiche onely dooth greate wonders: for his mercie endureth for euer. Whiche by his excellent wisedō made the heauens: for his mercy endureth for euer. Whiche laied out the yearth aboue the waters: for his mercie endureth for euer. Whiche* hath made great lightes: for his mercie endureth for euer. The sonne to rule the daie: for his mercie endureth for euer. The moone and the sterres to gouerne the night: for his mercie endureth for euer. Whiche* smote Egipt with her first borne: for his mercy endureth for euer. And brought out Israell from emong them: for his mercy endureth for euer. With a mightie hand and a stretched out arme: for his mercy endureth for euer. Whiche deuided the red sea in two partes: for his mercie endureth for euer. And* made Israel to go through the middest of it: for his mercy endureth for euer. But as for Pharao & his host, he ouerthrewe them in the redde sea: for his mercy endureth for euer. Which* led his people through the wildernesse: for his mercie endureth for euer. Whiche* smote great kinges: for his mercie endureth for euer. Yea, and slewe mightie kynges: for his mercy endureth for euer. Sehon* kyng of the Amorites: For his mercie endureth for euer. And Og the kyng of Basan, for his mercie endureth for euer. And gaue awaie their land for an heritage, for his mercie endureth for euer. Euē for an heritage vnto Israel his seruaūt: for his mercy endureth for euer. Whiche remembred vs, when we were in trouble: for his mercie endureth for euer. And hath deliuered vs from our enemies: for his mercy endureth for euer. Whiche geueth foode to all flesshe, for his mercy endureth for euer. O geue thankes vnto the God of heauen: for his mercie endureth for euer. O geue thankes vnto the lorde of lordes, for his mercy endureth for euer.

By the waters of* Babilon we sat downe. And wept, when we remembred thee O Sion. As for our Harpes we hanged them vp: vpon the trees that are therein. For they that led vs away captiue, required of vs there a song of melodie in our heuinesse: Syng vs one of the songes of Sion. How shal we syng the lordes song in a straunge land? If I forget thee, O Ierusalem, let my right hand forget her cunnyng. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleue to the roofe of my mouth, yea, if I prefeere not Ierusalem in my mirth. Remember the children of* Edom, O Lorde, in the daie of Ierusalem, how they said, downe with it, downe with it, euen to the ground. O daughter of Babilon, wasted with miserie, yea, happie shall he bee, that rewardeth thee as thou hast serued vs. Blessed* shall he be, that taketh thy children, and throweth them against the stones.

I Will* geue thankes vnto thee, O lorde, with my whole hart: euen before the gods wil I syng prayse vnto thee. I* wil worship toward thy holy Temple, and prayse thy name, because of thy louyng kyndnes & truth: for thou hast magnified thy name, & thy word aboue all thynges. When I called vpō thee, thou hardest me, and enduedest my soule with muche strength. All the kynges of the yearth shall prayse thee O lorde, for they haue heard the wordes of thy mouth. Yea, they shal syng in the waies of the Lorde, that greate is the glory of the Lorde. * For though the Lorde be high, yet hath he respect vnto the lowly, as for the proude, he beholdeth hym a farre of. Though I walke in the middest of trouble, yet shalte thou refreshe me, thou shalte stretche furthe thyne hand vpon the furiousnes of myne enemies, and thy right hand shal saue me. The Lorde shall make good his louyng kyndnesse towarde me: yea, thy mercie, O lorde, endureth for euer, despise not then the workes of thyne owne handes.

O Lorde, thou hast searched me out, and knowen me: thou knowest my downe sitting and myne vp rising, thou vnderstandest my thoughtes long before. Thou art about my path, and about my bedde: and spiest out all my waies. For lo, there is not a worde in my tongue but thou, O Lorde, knowest it all together. Thou hast fashioned me behind and before: and laied thyne hand vpon me. Such knowlege is too wonderfull and excellent for me: I cannot attain vnto it. * Whether shall I go then fro thy spirite: or whether shall I go then from thy presence. If I climbe so helle, thou arte there also. If I take the wynges of the morynge: and remayne in the outmoste partes of the Sea. Euen there also shall thy hand lead me: and thy right hande shal hold me. If I say, paraduenture the darkenesse shall couer me, then shall my night be turned to daie. Yea, the darkenes is no darkenesse with thee, but the night is as cleare as the daie, the darkenesse and light (to thee) are bothe a like. For my reines are thyne, thou hast couered me in my mothers wombe. I will geue thankes vnto thee, for I am fearfully and wonderously made: marueilous are thy workes, and that my soule knoweth right well. My bones are not hid frō thee: though I bee made secretly, and fashioned beneth in the yearth. Thyne eyes did se my substaunce: yet beyng vnperfect, and in thy booke were all my membres written. Whiche daie by daie were fashioned, when as yet there was none of theim. How deare are thy counsailes vnto me, O God, how greate is the some of them. If I tell theim, thei are mo in nomber then the sande: when I wake vp, I am present with thee. Wilte thou not slea the wicked, O God: depart from me ye bloudthirstie men. For thei speake vnrighteously against thee, and thine enemies take thy name in vain. Hate not I them, O lorde, that hate thee, and am not I greued with those that rise vp against thee? Yea, I hate them right sore, euen as though thei were myne enemies. Trie * me, O God, and seke the ground of myne harte: proue me and examin my thoughtes. Loke well if there be any waie of wickednesse in me, and lead me in the waie euerlastyng.

Deliuer me, O Lorde, from the euill man: and preserue me from the wicked manne. Whiche imagin mischief in their hartes, and stirre vp strief all the daie long. Thei haue sharpened their tongues like a serpent: Adders poysone is vnder their lippes. Sela. Kepe me, O lorde, from the handes of the vngodly: preserue me from the wicked menne, whiche are purposed to ouerthrowe my goynges. O lord God, thou strength of my health, thou hast couered my hed in the daie of battaile. Let not the vngodly haue his desire, O lorde, let not his mischeuous imagination prosper, lest thei be to proude. LOrde, I call vpon thee, haste thee vnto me, and consider my voyce, when I crye vnto thee. Let my praier bee set furthe in thy sight, as the incense, and let the lifting vp of my handes bee an euenyng Sacrifice. Set a watche, O lorde, before my mouth, and kepe the doore of my lippes. O let not mine harte be enclined to any euill thyng, let me not bee occupied in vngodly woorkes, with the men that worke wickednesse, lest I eate of suche thynges as pleaseth theim. Let the righteous rather smite me frendly: and reproue me. But lette not their precious Balmes, breake myne hed, yea, I will praie yet against their wickednesse. Let their Iudges be ouerthrowen in stony places, that thei maie heare my woordes, for thei are swete. Our bones lye scattered before the pitte, like as when one breaketh and heweth wodde vpon the yearth. But myne eyes loke vnto thee, O lorde God: in thee is my trust. Oh cast not out my soule. Kepe me from the snare, whiche thei haue laied for me, & from the trappes of the wicked doers. Let the vngodly fall into their owne nettes together, and let me euer escape thē.

Blessed be the Lorde my strength, whiche teacheth * my handes to warre, and my fingers to fight. My hope and my fortresse, my castell, and deliuerer, my defender in whō I trust: whiche subdueth my people that is vnder me. Lord, what is man that thou hast suche respect vnto hym: or the sonne of man, that thou so regardest hym.* Man is like a thyng of naught: his tyme passeth away like a shadowe. Bowe thy heauens, O Lorde, and come downe: touche the mountaines, and they shall smoke. Cast furthe the lightenyng, and feare them: shote out thyne arrowes, and consume theim. Sende downe thyne hande from aboue: deliuer me, & take me out of the greate waters, from the hande of straunge children. Whose mouthe talketh of vanitie: and their right hande, is a right hande of wickednes. I will syng a newe song vnto thee, O God: and syng prayses vnto thee vpon a ten stringed lute. Thou that geuest victorye vnto kynges: and hast deliuered Dauid thy seruaunt, from the perill of the swearde. Saue me, and deliuer me from the hande of straunge children, whose mouth talketh of vanitie: & their right hande, is a right hande of iniquitie. That our sonnes maie growe vp as young plantes: and that our daughters maie bee as the polished corners of the Temple.* That our graners maie be full and plenteous with all maner of store: that our shepe maye bryng furthe thousandes and tenne thousandes in our streetes. That our Oxen maie bee strong to labour, that there be no decaye: no leadyng into captiuitie, and no complaynyng in our streetes. Happie are the people that bee in suche a case: yea, blessed are the people, whiche haue the Lorde for their God.

I Will magnifie thee, O God, my kyng: and I will praise thy name for euer and euer. Euery daie will I geue thankes vnto thee: and praise thy name for euer and euer. Greate is the lorde, and mercuelous worthie to be praised: there is no ende of his greatenesse. One generacion shall praise thy woorkes vnto another: and declare thy power. As for me I will be talkyng of thy worshipfull glory, thy praise, and wonderous woorkes. So that men shall speake of the might of thy mercuelous actes: and I will also tell of thy greatnesse. The memoriall of thyne abounDaunt kyndnesse shalbe shewed: and men shall sing of thy righteousnes. The* lorde is gracious and mercyful: long suffryng, & of great goodnesse. The Lorde is louyng vnto euery man: and his mercie is ouer all his woorkes. All thy woorkes praise thee, O lorde: and thy saintes geue thankes vnto thee. They shewe the glory of thy kyngdome: and talke of thy power. That the power, the glory, and mightinesse of thy kyngdome: might bee knowen vnto menne. Thy* kyngdome is an euerlastyng kyngdome: and thy dominion endureth throughout all ages. The Lorde vpholdeth all suche as fall: and lifteth vp all those that be mune. The* eyes of all waite vpon thee O Lorde: and thou geuest theim their meate in due season. Thou openest thyne hande: and fillest all thynges liuyng with plenteousnesse. The lorde is righteous in all his waies: and holy in all his woorkes. The Lorde is nigh vnto all theim * that call vpon hym: yea, all suche as call vpon hym faithfully. He will fulfill the desire of them that feare hym: he also will heare their crie, and will helpe theim. The Lorde preserueth all theim that loue hym: but scattereth abrode all the vngodly. PRaise the lorde, for it is a good thyng to syng praise vnto our God: yea, a ioyfull and pleasaunt thyng is it to be thankful. The lorde doth builde vp Ierusalem, and gather together the outcastes of Israell. He healeth those that are broken in harte: & geueth medecine to heale their sickenes. He telleth the nombre of the starres, and calleth thē all by their names. Greate is our lorde, and greate is his power: yea, his wisedom is infinite. The lorde setteth vp the meke, & bringeth the vngodly wnne to the ground. Syng vnto the lord with thākesgeuyng: syng praise vpon the harpe vnto our God. Which couereth the heauen with cloudes, and prepareth rain for the yearth, and maketh the grasse to growe vpon the mountaines, & herbe for the vse of men. Which geueth foder vnto the cattell, and feedeth the yong rauens that call vpon him. He hath no pleasure in the strength of an horse, neither delighteth he in any mānes legges. But the lordes delyte is in thē that feare him, and put their trust in his mercie. Praise the lord, O Ierusalē: praise thy God, O Sion. For he hath made fast the barres of thy gates: and hath blessed thy children within thee. He maketh peace in thy borders, & filleth thee with the floure of wheate He sendeth furthe his commaundement vpon yearth, and his worde runneth very swiftly. He geueth snowe like wull, and scatereth the hoorestone like ashes. He casteth furth his ise like morsels, who is able to abide his frost? The.b. date. A. Watting.

THe Prouerbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng of Israel: to learne wisedō, and to perceiue the instruccion, and to perceiue the woordes of vnderstandyng: and thereby to receiue prudence righteousnesse, iudgement, and equitie. That the very simple might haue wit, and that the young meane might haue knowlege and true vnderstandyng. By hearyng, the wise man shall come by more wisedome, and he that is indued with vnderstandyng, shall obtain wit to perceiue a parable, and the interpretacion therof, the woordes of the wise, and their darke speches of the same. The* feare of the Lorde is the beginnyng of wisedō. But fooles despise wisedom and instruccion. if thei entise thee, and saie: come with vs, we will laie waite for bloude, and lurke priuely for the innocent, without a cause: wee * shall swalowe them vp like the helle, and deuoure thē quicke and whole, as those that go doune into the pitte. Soo shall we finde all maner of costly riches, and fill our houses with spoyle. Cast in thy lot among vs: and let vs all haue one purse. My sonne, walke not thou with them: refrain thy foote from their waie. For * their fete runn to euill: and are hastie to shed bloud. But in vain is the net laied furth, before the birdes eyes, yea, thei themselues laie waite one for anothers bloud, and one of them woulde slea another. These are the wayes of all suche as bee couetous, the one would reuenge anothers life. Wisedom * crieth without, and putteth furthe her voyce in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacion in the open gates, and sheweth her woordes, through the citee, saiyng: o ye children, how long will ye loue childishnes? How long will the scorners delight in scornyng, and the vnwise be enemies vnto knowlege? O turn you vnto my correccion: loo, I will expresse my mynd vnto you, and make you vnderstande my woordes. * I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande: and no man regarded it, but all my counsailes haue ye despised, and set my correccion at naught. Therfore shall I also laugh in your destruccion, and mocke you, when that thyng that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen when the thyng that ye bee afrayed of, falleth in sodainly like a storme, and your misery like a tempest, yea, when trouble and heuines commeth vpō you. Then shall thei call vpon me, but I will not heare: thei shall seke me earely, but thei shall not finde me. And that because thei hated knowlege, and refused not the feare of the lorde: but abhorred my counsail, and despised al my correccion. Therfore shall thei eate the fruites of their awne waie and be filled with their awne inuencion, for the turnyng awaie of the vnwise shall slea them, and the prosperitie of fooles shalbe their awne destruccion. But * whoso harkeneth vnto me, shall dwell safely, and be sure from any feare of euill.

My sonne, if thou wilt receiue my woordes, and kepe my commaundementes by thee, that thou wilte encline thyne eare vnto wisedom, apply thine harte then to vnderstādyng. For if thou criest after wisedome, and callest for knowlege: if thou seekest after her, as after money, and diggest for her, as for threasure, then shalte thou vnderstande the feare of the lorde, and finde the knowlege of God. For it is the lorde that geueth wisedome, out of his mouthe commeth knowlege and vnderstandyng. He bideth vp health for the righteous, and defendeth them that walke sincerely: he kepeth them in the right pathe, and preserueth the waie of suche as serue hym with godlines. Then shalt thou vnderstande righteousnesse, iudgement, and equitie, yea, and euery good path. When wisedom entreth into thyne harte, and thy soule delyteth in knowlege: then shall counsail preserue thee, and vnderstandyng shal kepe thee. That thou maiest be deliuered from the euill waie, and from the manne that speaketh frowarde thynges, from suche as leaue the high waie and walke in the wayes of darkenesse: whiche reioyce in doyng euill, and delight in wicked thynges: whose waies are croked, and thei froward in their pathes. That thou maiest be deliuered also * from the straunge woman, and from her that is not thyne awne: whiche geueth ewete woordes, forsaketh the husband of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaunt of her GOD. For her house is enclined vnto death, and her pathes vnto hell: all thei that go in vnto her, come not again, neither take thei hold of the waie of life. Therfore, walke thou in the waie of suche as be righteous, and kepe the pathes of the righteous. For the iust shall dwell in the lande, and thei that be perfecte, shall remain in it: but the vngodly shalbe rooted out of the lande, and the wicked doers shalbe rooted out of it.

Say not vnto thy neighbour: go thy waie, and come again, to morow wil I geue thee, where as thou haste now to geue hym. Entende no hurt vnto thy neighbor, seyng he dwelleth in rest by thee. Striue not lightely with any man without a cause, where as he hath doen Pro.i.a. thee no harme. Folowe not a wicked man, and chose none of his waies: for the lord abhorreth the frowarde, but his counsaill is emong the righteous. The curse of the lorde is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellynges of the righteous. As for the scornful doth not he laugh them to scorne: but he geueth grace vnto the lowly. The wise shall haue honor in possessiō: but shame is the promocion that fooles shall haue.

Quenting.ij. HEare, o ye children, the fatherly exhortacion, and take good hede, that ye maie learne wisedome. For I haue geuen you a good doctrine, forsake not ye my lawe. For when I my selfe was my fathers dere sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother: he taught me also, and said vnto me, Let thine hart receiue my wordes, kepe my commaundementes, & thou shalt liue. Get thee wisedom: and get the vnderstādyng, forget not the wordes of my mouth, and shunne not from them. Forsake her not, and she shall preserue thee: loue her, and she shall Deut.vi.b. & x.c.xxvj.f. kepe thee. The chief poynt of wisedome is, that thou be willyng to obtain wisedom: & for al thy goodes, to get thee vnderstāding. Make muche of her, and she shall promote thee: yea, if thou embrace her, she shall bryng thee vnto honor. She shall make thee a gracious hedde, and geue thee with a crowne of glorie. Heare my sonne, & receiue my wor- Prou.xxbi.d. des, and the yeares of thy life shalbe many. I haue learned thee, the waie of wisedome, and ledde thee into the right pathes. When thou goest therein, there shall no straightnes hinder thee, and when thou runnest, thou shalt not fal. Take fast hold of doctrine, and let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy life. Come not C. * Psal.j.a. in the pathe of the vngodly, and walke not and.xxbij.a. in the waie of the wicked. Abhorre it, and go not therein: depart aside, and passe ouer by it. For thei cannot slepe, except thei haue doen wen some mischief: neither take thei any rest except thei haue first doen some harme. For thei eate the bread of wickednesse, & drynke the wine of robbery. The pathe of the righteous is euen as the light, that euer as it goeth and brighter, vnto the perfecte daie. But the waie of the vngodly is as the darknesse, thei know not where thei fal. My sonne, marke Dent.vi.b.xi. my wordes, and encline thyne eare vnto my sayinges. Let thē not depart from thyne eyes but kepe thē euen in the middest of thyne hart. For thei are life vnto all those that find thē, and health vnto all their bodies. Kepe thine harte with all diligence, for therevpon hangeth life. Putte awaie from thee a frowarde mouthe, and let the lippes of crlaunder be far from thee. Let thyne eyes beholde the thyng that is right, and let thyne eye lidder looke straight before thee. Ponder the path of thy fete, and let all thy waies be ordered a right. Turne not aside, neither to the right hande, Deut.v.a. nor to the lefte: but withhold thy foote from and.xxbj.b. euil. For the lorde knoweth the waies, that are on the right hand. As for the waies that be on the left hande, thei be frowarde. For he shall direct thy goynges, & thy waies he shal guyde in peace.

MY sonne, geue hede vnto my wisedome, Pro.bj.baie. and bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence A. Mattinat. that thou maiest regarde good counsaill, and that thy lippes maie speake knowlege. Apply not thou thy self, to the deceiptfulnesse of a woman. For * the lippes of an harlot, are Pro.v..bj.a. a droppyng honye combe, and her throte is more glitterynge then oyle. But at the last she is as bitter as wormewood, and her tongue as sharpe as a twoo edged sweard. Her fete go downe vnto death, and her steppes pearce B. through vnto hell. Therefore, thou dwellyng with her, wilt ponder the pathe of life: so vnstedfast are her waies, that thou canst not knowe them. Heare me now therefore (O my sonne) and depart not from the wordes of my mouthe. Kepe thy waie farre from her, and come not nigh the doores of her house. That thou geue not thy strength vnto other, C. and thy yeares to the cruell. That other men be not filled with thy goodes, and that thy labours come not in a straunge house. Yea, that thou mourne not at the laste (when thou haste spent thy body, and lustie grene youth) and then entertaine, why haste I (mourne) why did my hart despise correction? wherefore was not I obedient vnto the voyce of my teachers, and gaue eare not vnto the that instructed me?

I am come almoste vnto all misfortune in the middes of the multitude and congregation.
Drinke of the water of thine awne well, yee euen that runneth out of thine awne springes.
Let thy welles flowe out abroade, that they may be quiet & of watter that [illegible] strites, but let thy be onely thine awne, and not straungers with thee. Let thy well be blest, and be glad with the wife of thy youth. Loue and pleasaunt as the roe, and of another woman? for [illegible] manner wayes are open in the sight of the lorde, and he pondereth all their goynges. The wickednesse of the vngodly shall catche hymselfe, and with the cordes of his awne synnes shall he be trapped. He shall die without amendment, & for his greate foolishnesse he shall go astray.

¶ The vi Chapiter.

MY sonne, * if thou bee suertie for thy neighbour, & hast fastened thine hand vnto another man, thou art bound with thine awne wordes, and taken with thyne awne speache.
Therefore my sonne do this, & thou shalt be de-liuered: when thou art come into thy neighbours daunger. Go thy waies then sone, humble thy selfe, and with thy treades entreat thy creditoure: let not thyne eyen slepe, nor thyne eyelidder slomber. Saue thy selfe as a Roe from the hande of the hunter, and as a birde from the hande of the fowler. Go to the Em-met (thou slouggarde) consider her waies, and learne to bee wise. She hath no guyde, nor ouerseer, nor ruler: yet in the commer she prouideth her meate, and gathereth her foode together in the haruest. How * long wilt thou slepe thou sluggishe manne? When wilt thou arise out of thy slepe, yea, slepe a lyttle, slomber a lyttle, folde thyne handes together yet a lyttle, that thou maiest slepe: so shall pouertie come vnto thee, as one that trauaileth by the waie, and necessitie like a weaponed man. But if thou bee not slouthfull, thy harueste shall come as a springyng well, and po-uerty shall flie farre from thee. An vngod-ly person, a wicked manne goeth with a fro-ward mouthe, he winketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with his fete, he poynteth with his fingers, hath euer imaginyng mischiefe, and frowardnes in his harte, and casteth discord.
Therefore shall his destruccion come hastily vpon hym, sodainly shall he be all to brokken, and not be yeelded [illegible] Sixe thynges doth the lorde hate, yea seuen be vtterly abhorred: a proude looke, a lyeng tongue, han-des that shede innocent bloude, an heart that deuiseth wicked imaginacions, fete that be swift in running to do mischief, a false witnesse that bringeth vp lies, and suche one as soweth discord emong brethren. My sonne kepe thy fathers commaundment, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother. Put them vp together in thyne hart, and bynd them about thy neckes. When thei maie leade thee where thou goest, preserue thee when thou arte in slepe and that when thou awakest, thou maiest talke of them. For * the commaundement is a lanterne and the lawe a lyghtyer, chastenyng & nourture is the waie of life, that thei maie kepe thee from the euill woman, and from the flatteryng tongue of the harlot, that thou lust not after her beautie in thyne harte, and let thou be taken with her faire lokes. An harlot will make a man to begge his bread, and a woman will hunte for the pretious life. Maie a man take fyre in his bosom, and his clothes not be burnt? Or can one go vpon hotte coales, and his fete not bee hurte? Euen so, whoso euer goeth into his neighbours wife, and toucheth her, cannot be vnguiltie. * Men do not dispise a theif that stealeth, to satisfie his soule when he is hungrie: but if he maie be gotten, he restoreth again seuen tymes as muche, or els he maketh recompence with all the good of his house. But whoso commit-teth adultrie with a woman, he is a foole, and bringeth his life to destruccion. He getteth hymselfe also shame and dishonoure, & he shall neuer bee put out. For the ielousy and wrathe of the man, will not be entreated: no, though thou wouldest offer hym great giftes to make amendes, he will not receiue them.

¶ The vij Chapiter.

MY sonne, * kepe my woordes, and laye vp my commaundmentes by thee. Kepe my commaundementes and my lawe, euen as the apple of thyne eye, and thou shalte liue.
Bynde them about thy fingers, and write them in the table of thyne harte. Saie vnto wisedome, thou art my sister: and call vnderstandyng thy kynswoman: * that they maye kepe thee from the straunge woman, and from the harlotte, whiche geueth swete woordes.
For out of the wyndowe of my house, I looked through the lattesse, and beheld the simple people: and emong other simple folkes, I spied one young foole, goyng ouer the stre-te, by the corner, in the waie towarde the harlottes house, in the twilyghte of the euen-yng, when it beganne nowe to bee nighte,

Come let vs take our pleasure tyl it be day light, we will ioy ning the pleasures of loue. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath take the bag of money with him, and will returne home at the appointed solempne feast. Thus with many sweete wordes, she ouercame him, and with her flattering wordes she entysed him constrayned him to folow her rashe wyll an open rede to the slaughter, and like as it were a foole that longeth whether gald to the stocke, to be punished, so long tyl the hed wounde pearce hym with her darte: lyke as a fe hyrde hasted to the snare, not knowing that the peril of his lyfe lyeth therupon. Nowe me nowe therfore o my children, and marke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thyne hart wandre in her wayes, and be not thou deceyued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded and cast downe: yea many a strong man hath she slayne by the meanes of her. Her houses are the wayes vnto hell, dryng men down into the chambers of death.

The viij. Chapiter.

Doth not wisdome crye? doth not vnderstanding put furth her voyce? Standeth she not in the hie places of the streates and wayes? doeth she not crye before the whole Cittie, and in the gates where men go out & in? Vnto you o ye men (saith she) whom I cal, vnto (the children of men) do I lyfte vp my voice. Take hede vnto knowlege O ye ignorannt: be wise in harte O yee fooles. Geue eare, for I wil speake of greate matters: and open my lyppes to tel thinges that be right. For my throte shalbe talking of the truthe, and my lyppes abhorre vngodlynesse. All the wordes of my mouth are righteous: there is no frowardnes nor falshed therein. They are al plaine to hym that vnderstandeth, & right to them that fynde knowledge. Receyue my doctrine, and not syluer: and my knowledge rather then fine gold. For wisdome is more worth then precious stones: yea, all thinges that thou canst desyre may not be compared vnto it. I wisedome haue my dwellyng with knowlege, and prudent counsil is myne owne. The feare of the Lord abhorreth wickednes, pryde, disdayne, and the euel way: and a mouth that speaketh wicked thynges I vtterlye abhorre. I can geue counsil, and conclude thinges: I haue vnderstanding, I haue strength. Through me, kynges reygne, through me, Counsellours make iuste Lawes. Through me, rulers haue rule, and all Iudges dyng vnto right. They that loue me, and they that seeke me early shall fynde me. Richesse, and honour are with me. Yea, excellente goodes and Righteousnesse. My fruite is better then gold and precious stones, and myne encrease more worthe then fyne syluer. I wil guide them in the way of righteousnesse and in the streete of iudgement. That I may cause prosperyte to them that loue me, and to encrease their treasure. The Lorde hym selfe had me in possession, in the beginning of his wayes, or euer he beganne hys woorkes afore time. I haue bene ordeyned from euerlasting, and from the beginning or euer the earthe was made. When I was borne there were neyther depethes nor springes of waters. When he layed the foundacions of the earthe I was with hym, ordeyning al thinges, delyting daylye, and reioycyng alwayes before hym. As for the rounde compasse of thys worlde, I make it ioyefull: for my delighte is to be among the children of men. Therfore harken vnto me, O ye children, blessed are they that kepe my wayes. O geue eare vnto nourture, be wise, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me, watchyng daylie at my Gates, and geuing attendance at the postes of my doores. For whoso findeth me, findeth lyfe: and shal obteine fauoure of the Lorde. But who so offendeth against me, hurteth hys owne soule. All they that hate me, are the louers of death.

She hath sent forth her maydens to cry vpon the highest place of the cytye. Whoso is ignorannte let him come hether. And to the vnwise she sayeth: O come on your bare, eate my breade, and drincke my wyne which I haue powred out for you. Forsake ignorannce, and yee shal lyue: and seke after the way of vnderstanding. Whoso reproueth a scornefull person, getteth hym selfe dyshonoure, and he that rebuketh the vngodlye, catcheth hym selfe a blemyshe. A falce balaunce is an abhominacion vnto the lorde: but a true weight pleaseth him. Where pryde is, there is shame also, and confusion: but where as is lowlynes, there is wysdome. The innocente dealing of the iuste shal leade them, but the wickednesse of suche as dissemble, shalbe their owne destruccion. Ryches helpe not in the day of vengeaunce, but righteousnesse delyuereth from deathe. The righteousnesse of the innocent ordreth hys way: but the vngodly shal falle in hys owne wickednesse. The righteousnesse of the iust shal delyuer them: but the wycked shalbe taken in theyr owne vngodlynes. When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the residewe of riches shal perish. The righteous shalbe delyuered out of trouble, and the vngodly shal come in hys stede. Whoso with the mouth of the dissembler is hys neighboure destroyed but thorowe knowlege shal the iust be delyuered. vnaduysed person will discrete plenty thinges but he that is of a faythfull hart, will keepe counsayle. Where no good counsail is, there the people decayeth: but where as many are that cannne geue counsayle, there is wealthe. He that is suretye for a straunger, hurteth himselfe: and he that medleth not with suretyship is sure. A gracyous woman maynteineth honestye, as for the wicked they maintein riches. He that is mercyfull doth himselfe a benefite, but whoso hurteth his neighboure is a Tyraunte. The laboure of the vngodlye profiteth not, but he that soweth righteousnes shal receyue a sure reward. Like as righteousnes bringeth lyfe vnto a cleane bodye: euell bringeth death. The lord abhorreth them that be of a fayned harte, but hee hathe pleasure in them that are of an vndefiled conuersation. The Wycked amendeth not for plague vpon plague, but the seede of the righteous shalbe preserued. A fayre woman wyth out discrete maners, is lyke a ryng of Golde in a Swines snoute. The desyre of the righteous is acceptable: but the hope of the vngodlye is indygnatyon. Some man geueth out his goodes as if he were riche, but he is not worth a myte. Some man semeth to be poore, but he hath great substaunce. The soule of the righteous shall haue plenty, and hee that watereth shalbe watered also himselfe. Whoso withholdeth vp his Corne, shalbe cursed among the people: but blessyng shal alyght vpon his hed that geueth coorne. He that laboreth for honestye, studyeth his profyte: but whoso seeketh after mischief, it shall happen vnto him. He that trusteth in his riches, shal haue a fal: but the righteous shal florysh, as the grene leafe. Whoso maketh disquietnesse in his owne house, hee shall haue wynde for his heritage, and the foole shalbe seruaunte to the wyse. The fruict of the righteous is a tree of lyfe, and he that endeuoureth himselfe to wyn menne soules is wyse. If the righteous be recompensed vpon earth, how much more then the vngodly and the sinner.

Who so loueth instruccion loueth to be counseled: but hee that hateth to be reproued is a fole. A good man is acceptable vnto the lorde, but the wicked imaginer shal be condempned. A man cannot endure in vngodlynesse: but the roote of the righteous shal not be moued. A honest vertuous woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth herselfe vnhonestly, is a corruption in his bones. The thoughtes of the righteous are righte: but the ymaginatyons of the vngodlye are deceytful. The talkyng of the vngodlye is how they may lay waite for blood but the mouth of the righteous shal deliuer them. God ouerthrowe the house of the ryghteous shal God kepe it. A man shalbe commended for his wysdome, but a foole shal be despysed. A symple man whych laboureth & worketh, is better then one that is gorgious and lacketh breed. A righteous man regardeth the life of his cattel, but the vngodly haue cruel harted. He that tilleth his land shal haue plenteousnesse of breed: but he that foloweth idelnes, is a verye foole. Whoo so hath pleasure to continue at the wyne, leueth dishonesty in his owne dwelling. The desire of the vngodlye hunteth after mischiefe: but the roote of the ryghteous bringeth fruthe vnto. The Wycked falleth into the snare, throughe the malice of his owne mouthe but the iust shal escape out of all perylle. A ryche man shal enioy good, according to the fruicte of his mouth, and after the workes of his handes shall hee be rewarded. Looke what a fole taketh in hand, he thinketh it wel done but he that is wise, wil be counsailed. A fole vttereth his wrathe in al the haste: but a discrete man couereth wrong. A iust man wil tel the truth and shew the thyng that is ryght: but a falce witnesse disceyueth. A slaunderous person pryeketh lyke a swearde, but a wyse mannes tongue is wholsome. A true mouthe is euer constaunt: but a dissemblyng tongue is soone chaunged. They that ymagine euell in their mynde, wyl disceyue: but the counsaylours of peace shall haue ioye. Solowynge therin, There shall no mysloytune happen vnto the iust, but the vngodly shalbe fylled with mischeyf. The lorde abhorreth lyeng lyppes: but they that labour for the truthe please him. He that hath vnderstandyng doth hyde wysdome: but an vnthryfte harte telleth out his foolyshnes. A dylygent hand shal beare rule: but the yle shalbe vnderthrodden. Heauines dyscouragyth the harte of manne: but a good woorde maketh it gladde agayne. The righteous excelleth his neyghbour: but the way of the vngodlye wyl deceyue them selues. The disceitfull man shal not rost, that he tooke in huntyng, but the ryches of the iust man is of great value. In the way of righteousnesse there is lyfe: and in the same way there is no death.

An vngodly messenger falleth into mischefe: but a faithful ambassadour is wholsome. He that thirsteth scorne to be reformed commeth to pouerte and shame: but whoso regardeth correccion, shal come to honor. When a desire is brought to passe, it delighteth the soule: but fooles accompte it abhomination to departe from euell. Meethat goeth in the company of wise men, shalbe wise: but whoso is a companion of fooles shalbe hurte. Misfortune followeth vpon sinners, but the righteous shal haue a good reward. A man is vertuous, leaueth an inheritaunce vnto his childres childre: and * the riches of the sinner is layed vp for the iust. There is plenteousnes of foode in the fieldes of the poore but the field not well ordred, is without fruite. He that spareth the rodde hateth hys sonne: but whoso louyth hym chasteneth hym betymes. * The righteous eateth, & is satisfied: but the belly of the vngodly hath neuer enough.

The. xiiij. Chapitre.

Wyse women vpholde their house: but a folysshe wyfe plucketh it doune. He that walketh in the right path of the lorde feareth him: but he that turneth himself from his wayes, despiseth him. In the mouth of the foolysh is the rod of pride, but the lippes of the wyse wil preserue them. Where no Oxen are, there the cribbe is empty: but where the Oxen labour, there is muche fruict. A faithful witnes wil not dissemble, but a false record wil make a lye. A scornful body seeketh wisedome and findeth it not: but knowlege is easy to come by vnto him that will vnderstande. Go thou medle not with a foole in whom thou perceyuest no knowlege. The wisedome of him that hath vnderstanding, is to take heed vnto his waie: but the folishnes of the vnwise vexeyuche. Fooles make but a sporte of sinne, but there is fauourable loue among the righteous. The hart feleth hys own lyues bitternes, neither shal the straunger be partaker of hys ioye. The house of the vngodly shalbe ouerthrowen: but the tabernacle of the righteous shal florishe. There is a way whiche seme men thinke to be right: but the ende thereof leadeth vnto deathe. The harte is sorowe euen in laughter, and the end of mirth is heauines. A harde lodyng harte, shalbe fylled with hys owne wayes, but a good man shall lyue of his trauell. An ignorant body beleueth all thynges: but whoso hath vnderstanding loketh wel to hys goinges. A discreet soone shal haue no good: but a discrete seruaunt shal do wel: and his way shal prosper. A wise man feareth and departeth from euel, but a furious foole goeth on presumptuously. An impacient manne dealeth foolyshely, but he that is well aduised, is hated of the fole. The ignorante haue foolyshnes in possession but the wise are crowned with knowlege. The euel bowe themselues before the good: & the vngodly fall people at the dores of the righteous. The poore is hated euen of hys owne neighbours, but the rych hathe many freendes. Whoso despiseth his neyghbor with amisse, but * blessed is he that hathe pity of the poore. He that putteth his trust in the lorde, loueth to be mercyfull. Wythout wot they err that imagine wickednesse, but they that muse vpon good thinges, vnto such shall happen mercy & faithfulnes. In euery labo there is some profit. But onely bare wordes bring forth penury. Riches are as a crowne vnto the wise, but the ignorance of fooles is nery folyshnes. A faythfull witnes deliuereth soules, but a discreetful witnes bringeth forth lyes. The feare of the lord is a strong holde and hys Children are vnder a sure defence. The feare of the lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the snares of death. The encrease and prosperitie of the cōmons is the kinges honour, but the decay of the people, is the confusion of the prince. He that is patient, hath muche vnderstanding, but he that is sone displeased pronoketh foolishnes. A merye hart is the life of the body: but rancour cōsumeth the bones. He that with a poore man blaspheneth his maker: but whoso to hathe pitie of the poore, doth honor vnto God. The vngodly is cast away for his iniquite but the righteous hath a good hope euen in death. Wisdom resteth in the hart of hym that hath vnderstandyng, and it shalbe knowen among them that are vnlearned. Righteousnesse exalteth the people, but the calomnies of the

The. xi. day of Iune. A. A* Soft answere putteth downe displeasure: but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto angre. The tonge of suche as be wyse, vseth knowlege aright: as for a foliche mouthe it bableth out nothynge but folishnesse. The eyes of the Lord loke on euery place, beholdyng both the good & bad. A wholsome tong is a tree of life: but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mind. A foole despiseth his fathers correctió, but he that taketh hede when he is reproued, shal haue the more vnderstandyng. Where rightuousnesse is plentiful, there is very greate power: but the ymaginacions of the vngodly shalbe roted out. The house of the rightuous is full of richesse, but the encrease of the vngodly are nye destruction. A wyse mouth powreth oute knowlege, but the hart of the foliche doth not so. * The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of the rightuous is acceptable vnto him. The way of the vngodly is an abhomination vnto the Lord: but whoso followeth rightuousnesse, hym he loueth. He that forsaketh the right waye, shalbe sore punished: and whoso hateth correcion shal dye.

Prou. xv. b. Hel with her payne is knowen vnto the lord: howe moche more then the hartes of men. * A scorneful body loueth not one that rebuketh hym: neyther wyl he come vnto the wyse. ‡ A merry hart maketh a cheareful countenaunce: but an heuy hart compelleth a man to sighe. The hart of hym that hath vnderstandynge doth seke after knowlege: but the mouth of fooles is fed with folishnes. All the dayes of the poore are miserable: but a quiet hart is a continual feast. * Better is a litle with the feare of the Lord, then great treasure with sorowe. Better is a messe of pottage with loue, then a fat ore with euel will.

Prou. xv. a. An* angrie man stirreth vp strife, but he that is pacient stylleth discorde. The waye of a slouthful mā is as it were hedged with thornes: but the strete of the rightuous is well cleansed. * A wise sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscreat body shameth his mother. A foole reioyceth in foolish thynges, but a wyse man loketh wel to his owne goinges. Vnaduised thoughtes shal come to naughte: but where as men are that can gyue good counsayll, there is stedfastnesse a ioyful thynge it is to a man, when his counsail is folowed: & very pleasaunt is a worde spoken in due season. The waye of life leadeth vnto heauen, that a man shulde beware of hell beneth. The Lorde wyll breake downe the house of the proude, but he shal make faste the borders of the wydowe. The lorde abhorreth the ymaginacions of the wicked, but pure wordes of vsurous man rooteth vp his owne house, but whoso hateth rewardes shal lyue. Thorow mercie and faith, are sinnes pourged, & thorow the feare of the Lord, doth euery one eschue euyll. The hart of the righteous studieth his answere afore: but the wycked mannes mouth spueth out mischief. The lord is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth the praier of the righteous. Like as the clearenesse of the eyes reioyseth the hart, so with a good name feede the bones. The eare that hearkeneth to the reformation of life shall dwell emong the wise. He that refuseth to be reformed, despiseth his awn soule: but he that submitteth hymself to correccion, is wise. The feare of the lorde is the right science of wisedome: and lowlinesse goeth before honour.

A Man maye well purpose a thynge in his harte, but the answere of the tong commeth of the Lorde. * A man thynketh all his wayes to be cleane, but it is the Lorde that iudgeth the myndes. ‡ Commit thy workes vnto the Lorde, and loke what thou deuisest, it shal prospere. The Lorde doth al thinges for his owne sake: yea, and when he repeth the vngodly for the day of wrath. The Lord abhorreth all suche as be of a proude harte, his hande is against their hande, and they shal not escape as innocentes. The beggynyng of a good life is to do rightuousnesse, for that is more accepted vnto God than to offre vp sacrifices. With louyng mercy and faithfulnesse, sinnes be forgeuen, and whoso feareth the lord eschueth euil. When a mans wayes please the Lorde, he maketh his very enemyes to be his frendes. Better it is to haue a litle thynge with rightuousnesse, then great rentes wrongfully gotten. * A man deuiseth waye in his harte, but it is the lorde that ordreth his goynges. When the prophecie is in the lippes of the kyng, his mouthe shal not go wronge in iudgement. * A true measure & a true balaunce are the lordes iudgemēt, he maketh al weyghtes. It is a great abhominacion, when kynges are wycked, for a kynges seat shuld be holden vp with rightuousnesse. Rightuous lippes are pleasaunt vnto kynges: & he that speaketh the trueth, shalbe beloued. The kynges displeasure is a messenger of death, but a wise man will pacifie him. The chereful countenaunce of the kyng is life: and his louyng fauor, is as the euenyng dewe. To* haue wisedom is possession, is better then to haue golde: and to get vnderstandyng is rather to be chosen then to haue siluer. The path of the righteous is to eschewe euil, and whoso loketh well to his waies, kepeth his awne soule. Presumptuousnes goeth before destruccion, and after a proude stomake, there foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of an humble mynd with the low-then to deuide the spoiles with the proud. He that hãdleth a matter wisely, obteineth good and* blessed is he that putteth his trust in the lorde. Whoso hath a wise vnderstandyng, shal be called to counsaill: and he that can speake faire shal haue the more learnyng. Vnderstandyng is a well of life vnto hym that hath it: but as for the chastenyng of fooles, it is but foolishnesse. A wise hart ordreth his mouth wisely, and amendeth the wayne in his lippes. Faire wordes are an hony cõbe, a refreshyng of the mynd, and helth of the bones. There is awaie that men thynke to be right, but the ende thereof leadeth vnto death. A troublous soule disquieteth her self, for her own mouth hath brought her therto. An vngodly persone stirreth vp euill, and in his lippes he is as an hotte burnyng fire. A froward body causeth strife: & he that is a blabbe of his tong maketh deuision emõg princes. A wicked mã beguileth his neighbor, & leadeth hym into the waie that is not good. The vngodly that loketh craftily with his eyes, ymagineth mischief: & when he moueth his lippes, he will ouercome harme. Age is a croune of worship, if it be found in the waie of righteousnes. A patient man is better then one strong: & he that can rule hymself, is more worth, then he that winneth a citee. The lottes are cast into the lappe, but the ordryng therof standeth all in the Lorde.

BEtter is a drie morsell with quietnesse, then a house ful of fat offryng with strife. A discrete seruaunt shal haue more rule then the sonnes that haue no wisedome, and shall haue like heritage with the brethren. Like as siluer is tried in the fire, and gold in the fornace, euen so wyth the lorde proue the hartes. A wicked body geueth audience to false lippes, and a froward persone geueth eare to a discrepitful tong. Whoso laugheth the poore to scorne, blasphemeth his maker: and he that is glad of another mannes hurt, shall not be vnpunished. Children's children are a worship vnto the aldren: and the fathers are the honor of the children. Speach of auoyditie becommeth not a foole, much lesse a lying mouth then besemeth a prince. A reward is a precious stone, vnto him that hath it: but vnto whõ soeuer it turneth, it maketh him vnwise. Who so couereth another mannes offence, seketh loue: but he that discloseth the faute, setteth the prince against himself. One reproffe only doth more good to hym that hath vnderstandyng, then a C. stripes vnto a foole. A* seditious persone seketh mischief, and therefore is a cruell messager sent against him. It were better to come against a de Beare robbed of her whelpes, then against a foole stuffyng in his folishnes. Whoso rewardeth euill for good, the plague shall not departe from his house. The beginnyng of strife is, as when a man maketh an issue for water: therefore or the meetyng be, leue of contencion. The lorde hateth as wel him that iustifieth the vngodly, as hym that condempneth the innocente. What helpeth it to geue a foole threasure in his hande, where as he hath no mynd to buy wisedom? Whoso* buildeth his house to hie, seketh destruccion: and he that exalteth to lorne, shall come into mischief. He is a fether that all ware loueth: and in aduersitie a manne shal knowe who is his brother. Whoso* pro miseth by the hand, & is surtie for his neighbor, he is a foole. He that delighteth in sinne loueth strife: and whoso setteth his doore to hie, seketh after a fall. Whoso hath a froward harte obteineth no good: and he that hath an euel thwarte tongue, shall fall into mischief. He that begetteth a foole, begetteth his sorowe, & the father of a foole can haue no ioy. A merye* hart maketh a lusty age, but a sorowfull mynd drieth vp the bones. The vngodly taketh giftes out of the bosome, to wrest the waies of iudgement. Wisedom* shineth in the face of hym that hath vnderstandyng, but the eyes of fooles wandre throughout all landes. An* vndiscrete sonne, is a griefe vnto his father, and an heuinesse vnto his mother. To punish the innocent, and to smite the princes that geue true iudgement, are bothe euill. A wise manne vseth a fewe wordes, and he is a man of vnderstandyng, that maketh muche of his spirit. Yea, a* bery fole (when he holdeth his tongue) is compted wise, and to haue vnderstandyng, when he shutteth his lippes.

HE accompanieth hymself with a stedfast and wholesome doctrine, that hath a feruent desire to it, and is sequestrate from company. A fole hath no delite in vnderstandyng, but only in those thynges wherin his harte reioyseth. When the vngodly commeth, then commeth also dispaire, and with the dishonest persone commeth shame and dishonour. The wordes of a wisemannes mouth are like depe waters, and the wel of wisedom is like a full streame. It* is not good to regarde the person of the vngodly, or to put backe the righteous in iudgement. A foles lippes are euer braylyng, and his mouth prouoketh vnto battaill. A fooles mouth is his owne destruccion, and his lippes are the snare for his owne soule. The wordes of the slanderer, are very wounds, and go through vnto the innermost partes of the body. The eare calleth downe hym that is slouthfull: and the coules of curse as line in voluptuousnesse shall hunger. Who so is slouthfull and slacke in his labour, is the brother of hym that is a waster. The name of the lorde is a strong castel, the righteous fleeth vnto it, and is in sauegard. But yen, he taketh them for an his wall round about him. Strife pryde commeth destruction, and honor after lowlines.* He that geueth sentence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole & worthy to be confounded. A good stomacke driueth away a manes disease: but whe the spirit is vexed, who may bide it? A wise hart laboreth for knowlege, and a prudēt eare seketh vnderstanding. Liberalitie bringeth a mā to honor and worship, and setteth him among greate menne. The righteous declareth his owne cause first him self, if his neighboure come, he shal finde him. The lot pacifieth the variaunce, and parteth the mighty in sunder. A brother though he be greued with offence, yet is he more worth then a very strong castel: and they that hold together are like the barre of a palace. A manes belly shalbe satisfied with the fruict of his own mouth & with the increase of his lippes shall he be filled. Death & life are in the instrument of the tōg and they that loue it, shal enioy the fruit therof. Whoso* findeth a [good] wife, findeth a good thing, and receiueth a wholsome benefite of the Lorde. [He that putteth away a good woman, putteth away a good thing: but he that kepeth an harlot, is a fole & vnwise.] The poore maketh supplication and praieth mekely, but the riche geueth a rough answer. A man that loueth his frendes wilbe companable with them: and some frend sticketh faster to a man then his brother.

The. xix. Chapitre.

Better* is the poore that liueth godlie: then the blasphemer that is but a foole. Where no discretiō is, there the soule is enclined to the thing that is not good, and is swift of foote, and offendeth. Folishnesse maketh a man to go out of his waie, and then is his harte vnpacient against the lord. Riches maketh many frendes: but the poore is forsaken of his neighbour.* A false witnesse shall not remaine vnpunished: and he that speaketh lies shal not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon greate men: and euery man fauoureth him that geueth rewardes. All the dayes for the poore he is hated amonges al his brethren, yea his owne frendes withdraw from him and if he ake them the cause, they disdaine to answer. He that is wise, loueth his owne soule, & keepeth vnderstanding, that hee maye prosper. A false witnes shal not remaine vnpunished, and he that speaketh lies, shall perishe. Pleasure becommeth not a fole, much more vnsemely is it, a bond man to haue the rule of Princes. A wise man can put of displeasure, & it is his honor to let some faultes passe.* The kinges displeasure is like the roring of a lion, but his frendeship is like the dew vpō the grasse. An vndiscrete sonne is like the perishe of his father,* and a brawling wife is like the dropping. House & riches are the inheritage of fathers: but a* discret woman is the gift of the lorde. Slouthfulnes bringeth sleepe, and a soule accustomed with craftie shall suffre hunger. Whoso kepeth the commaundement, kepeth his owne soule: but he that regardeth not his waie, shall die. He that hath pitie vpon the poore, lendeth vnto the lorde: and loke what he laieth out, it shalbe paied hym again. Chasten thy sonne while there is hope, but let not thy soule bee moued to slea hym. A man of greate wrath beareth a pain, & though thou once deliuer hym, thou must again do asmuche for hym. O geue eare vnto good counsaill, and be content to be reformed, that thou maiest be wise in thy latter daies. There are many deuices in a mannes harte, neuertheles, the counsaill of the lord shall stande for euer. It is a manes worship to do good, and better it is to be a poore man, then a dissembler. The feare of the lorde bringeth a manne to life, and he shall rest the whole night in plenteousnes, without visitacion of any plague. A slouthful man, hutteth his hādes into his bosome, as into a pot, and will not take pain, to put it to his mouth. If thou smitest a scornfull person, the ignorant shall take better hede, & if thou reprouest one that hath vnderstandyng, he wil be the wiser. He that hurteth his father, or hutteth out his mother, is a shamfull and vnworthy sōne. My sonne, heare no more the doctrine, that leadeth thee vnto errors, from the wordes of vnderstandyng. A false witnes laugheth iudgement to scorne, and the mouth of the vngodly eateth wickednesse. Punishmentes are ordeined for the scornfull, and stripes for fooles backes.

The. xx. Chapiter.

Wine maketh a man to be scornfull, and strong drinke, causeth a man to bee vnquiete, whoso delighteth therein, shall neuer be wise. The* kyng ought to be feared, as the roryng of a lion, who so prouoketh hym vnto anger, offendeth against his owne soule. It is a mannes honor, to kepe hymself from strief, but they that haue pleasure in brauling are foles euery one. A slouthfull body wil not go to plowe for cold of the winter, therefore shall he go a beggyng in somer, and haue nothyng. Wise counsaill in the harte of man, is like a water in the depe of the yearth, and a manne that hath vnderstandyng, bringeth it furthe. Many there be that would bee called good doctors: but where shall one finde a true faithfull manne.* Whoso leadeth a godly and an innocent life: & righteous, and happie shall his children bee, whom he leaueth behynde hym. A kyng that sitteth in the Throne of Iudgement, and looketh well about hym, driueth away all euill. Who* can tyme? We dele with two maner of weyghtes, or two maner of measures, both there are abominable vnto the lord. A child is knowen by his conuersation, whether his workes be pure and right. The eare to heare, the eye to se: the lord hath made them both, delite thou not in sleape, lest thou come into pouerty, but open thin eyes, that thou mayst haue breade ynough. It is naught it is naught (sayeth he that byeth any thyng) but when he commeth to his owne house, then he boasteth of his peny worth. A man that hath a mouth of vnderstandyng, hath many precious stones and costly Jewels. C. Take his garment that is suretye for a straunger: and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mans sake. Euery man lyketh the bread that is gotten with deceyt: but at the laste his mouthe shalbe fylled with grauel. Thorowe counsel, the thynges that men deuise go forwarde: and with discretion ought warres to be taken in hande. The crafty disceyteful bewrayeth secrete counsel: and to him that custometh flatteryng lyppes ioyne not thy selfe. Whoso curseth his father and mother: his light shalbe put out in the middest of darckenes. The heritage that commeth to hastely at the firste, shall not be praysed at the ende. Say not thou: I will recompence euel: but put thy trust in the lord, and he shall defende the. The lord abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, and a false balaunce is an euel thyng. The lord ordereth euery mans goynges: howe may a man then vnderstand his owne waye? It is a snare for a man to deuoure that whiche is holy: & after the bowe to turne to thyn owne vse. the thing thou hast vowed. A wyse kynge destroyeth the vngodlye, and bringeth the whele ouer thē. The lanterne of the lorde is the breth of man, and goeth thorow all the inward partes of the body. Mercie & faithfulnesse preserue the kyng and with louyng kindnes his seate is holden vp. The strength of yong menne is their worshipp, and a gray hed is an honor vnto the aged. Wounded vyne anuie euill, and so do stripes the inward partes of the body.

The. xxi. Chapitre.

The kynges hertes is in the handes of the Lorde, like as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whithersoeuer he will. Euery man thynketh his owne way to be right: but the Lorde iudgeth the hartes. To do righteousnes and iudgement is more acceptable to the Lord then sacrifice. A presumptuous loke, a proude stomacke: and the plowyng of the vngodly, is sinne. The deuices of one that is diligent, bryng plenteousnes: but he that is vnaduised commeth vnto pouertie. Whoso boasteth vp riches with disceptfulnes of his tonge, he is vayne and a foole, and like vnto them that seke their owne death. The rauenousnes of the vngodly shall be their owne destruction: for they will not do the thing that is right. The wayes of the frowarde are straunge: but the workes of him that is cleane are right. It is better to dwel in a corner vnder the house toppe, then with a brawlyng woman in a wyde house. The soule of the vngodly wyssheth euel: and hath no pitie vpon his neyghbour. When the scorneful is punished, the ignorant take the better heade: and when he seeth the wyse men prospere, he will receyue the more vnderstanding. The righteous man wysely cōsidereth the house of the wycked: & for their wyckednes God ouerthroweth the vngodly. Whoso stoppeth his eares at the cryenge of the poore: he shall crye himself and not be hard: A preuy reward pacifieth displeasure and a gyft in the bosome, stilleth furiousnes. The iuste delyteth in ioynge the thyng that is right: but ouer the workers of wickednes hangeth destruction. The man that wandereth out of the way of wysdome, shal remaine in the congregacion of the dead. The that hath pleasure in banketes, shalbe a poore man. Whoso delyteth in wyne and delicates, shal not be riche. The vngodly shalbe geuen for the righteous & the wycked for the iuste. It is better to dwel in the wyldernes then with a chydynge and an angry woman. In a wyse mannes house, there is great treasure and oyle: but a foolishe body spendeth vp al. Whoso foloweth righteousnes and mercy, fyndeth both lyfe, righteousnes, and honour. A wyse man wynneth the citie of the mighty: and ouer the strength that they trust in, he bringeth it down. Whoso kepeth his mouth and his tongue, the same kepeth his soule from troubles. He that is proud & presumptuous, is called a scorneful man, whiche in wrath daze worke maliciously. The voluptuousnes of the slouthful is his owne death: for his handes wyll not labour. He coueteth & desireth all the day long, but the righteous is alwaye geuyng, and kepeth nothyng backe. The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhomination, how moche more when they offre the thynge that is gotten with wyckednes. A false witnes shal perish: but he that is a true man holdeth speaketh that he hath heard. An vngodlye man goth forth rashly: but the iuste reformeth his owne way. There is no wysdome, there is no vnderstandyng, there is no counsaill against the lorde. The horse is prepared against the daie of battaill: but the lorde geueth victorie.

The. xxi. Chapitre.

A good name is more worthe then greate riches, and louyng fauor is better then syluer and gold. The riche and poore are together, the lorde is the maker of them all. A wyse manne seeth the plague, and hideth hym

BE not thou gelous ouer wicked men, and imagineth to do hurt, and their lippes talke of woorde spoken in due season, is like apples of golde, in a grauen woork of Siluer. The correccīō of the wise, is to an obedient eare a golden chain, & a iewell of gold. Like as the winter colde is in the haruest, so is the faith full messenger, to them that sende hym: for he refresheth his maisters mynd. Whoso ma-keth greate boaste: and geueth nothyng, is like cloudes and wynde without raine. With Pro. xv. a. pacience is a Prince pacified, and * with a Gene. xxxij.

soft tongue is the boonesomnesse broken. If thou i. Reg. xx. findest hony, eate so muche as is sufficient for thee: lest thou bee ouer full, and perchaūce it out again. Withdraw thy foote from thy neighbours house: lest he bee wery of thee, & so abhorre thee. Whoso beareth false witnesse against his neighboure, he is a very club, a sweard, and a sharpe arrow. The hope that is put in a false manne, in tyme of neede is like a rotten toth, & a slippery foote. Who so taketh away a mannes garment in the cold wether, is like vineger vpon chalke, or like hym that syngeth songes to an heuy harte. Like as the motth hurteth a garment: and a worme a tree, so doeth the heuines of a man hurt the hart. If thyne enemie honger, fede him, if he thirst, geue hym drinke, for so shalt thou heape coales of fire vpon his hed, and the lorde shal reward thee. The northe wind driueth awaie the rain, euen so doth an earnest sober countenaunce, a backbiters tongue. It is better to sit in a corner vnder the roufe, then with a brawlyng woma, in a wide house. A good report out of a farre countree is like cold water to a thirstie soule. A righteous man, fallyng doune before the vngodly is like a troubled well, and a spryng that is destroyed. Like as it is not good to eate to muche hony, euen so to be that will serche out high thynges, it shalbe to heuie for hym. He that cannot rule hymselfe, is like a cites, whiche is broken doune, and hath no walles.

Like as snowe is not mete in sommer, nor rain in harueste, euen so is worship vnsemely for a foole. Like as the birde and the swalowe take their flight, and flie here and there, so the curse that is geuen in vain, shal not light vpon a man. Vnto the horse, belongeth a whip, to the asse a bridle, and a rod to the fooles backe. Geue not the foole an answer, after his foolishnesse, lest thou become like vnto hym, but make the foole an answer to his folishnes, lest ye be wise in his awne conceit. He is lame of his fete, yea, dronken is he in vanitie, that committeth any message to a foole. Like as in a lame man, his legges are not equall, euen so is a parable in a fooles mouthe. He that setteth a foole in high dignitie, that is euen as if a man put a stone in a slyng. A parable in a fooles mouthe, is like a thorne that pricketh a dronken man in the hand. Greate is he that hath formed al thing, he rewardeth the foole, and recompenseth the transgressors. A man of experience discerneth all thynges well, but he that puteth the foole to scilence, endeth the strife. Like* as the dogge turneth again to his vomite, euen so a foole beginneth his foolishnesse again a fresshe. If thou seest a man that is wise in his awne conceipt, there is more hope in a foole, then in hym. The* slouthfull sayeth: there is a Lion in the waie, and a Lion in the middest of the stretes. Like as the doore turneth aboute vpon the henges, euen so doeth the slouthfull walter hymselfe in his bed. The* slouthfull hydeth his hand into his bosome, and it greueth hym to put it again to his mouthe. The sluggarde thynketh hymselfe wiser, then seuen men that sitte and tearche. Whoso goeth by, and meddleth with other menner strife, he is like one that taketh a dogge by the eares. He is as a madde manne that casteth fire brandes, and shooteth deadly arrowes and dartes, euen so doth a dissembler with his neighbour. And then saith he: when he is taken, I did it but in sporte. Where no woodde is, there the fire goeth out: euen so, where the tale bearer is taken awaie, there the strife ceaseth. * Coales kyndle heate, and wodde the fire: euen so doth a brawlyng felowe three vp variaunce. A tale bearers wordes, are like men that strike with hammers, but thei pearce the inwarde parties of the body. Venemous lippes and a wicked hart, are like a potshard couered with siluer drosse. An enemie shalbee knowen by his talkyng, and in the meane season he imagineth mischief, but when he speaketh faire beleue him not: for there are. vij. abhominacions in his harte. Whoso kepeth euill wil secretly to do hurt, his malice shalbe shewed before the whole congregacio. Who so diggeth vp a pit, shall fall therin: and he that walteth a stone, shall tomble vpon it himselfe. A dissemblyng tongue, hateth one that rebuketh hym, and a flattryng mouth, worketh mischief.

Make not thy boste of to morowe * for thou knowest not, what maie happen to daie. Let another manne praise thee, and not thyne awne mouthe: yea, other folkes lippes, and not thyne. The stone is heuie, & the sand weyghtie: but a fooles wrathe, is heuier then them bothe. Wrathe is a cruel thyng, and furiousnesse is a very tempest: but who is able to abide enuie? An ope rebuke is better then a secrete loue. Faithfull are the wordes of a louer, but the kisses of an enemie are cruell. He that is full, abhorreth an hony combe but vnto hym that is hungrie, euery sower thyng is swete. He that ofte tymes sitteth, is like a bird that forsaketh her nest. Balme and swete encense, make their harte merie: so is the counsaill swete of a mannes freende, that agreeth to his purpose. Thine awn frend and thy fathers frend, forsake not: but go not into thy brothers house, in time of thy trouble. For better is a frend at hand, then a brother farre off. My sonne, be wise: and thou shalt make me a glad hart, so that I shall make an answere vnto my rebukers. A wise man seyng the plagne, will hide hymselfe, as for fooles they go on still, and suffer harme.* Take his garment that is suertie for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mannes sake. He that is to hasty to praise his neighbor aboue measure, shalbe taken as one that geueth him an euill reporte. A brawlyng woman, and the vaute of the house droppyng in a rainie daie, maie well be compared together. He that refraineth her, refraineth the wynd, and holdeth the ople fast in his hande. Like as one yron whetteth another, so doeth one man comforte another. Whoso kepeth his Figge tree, shall enioye the fruites thereof: euen so, he that waiteth vpon his master, shal come to honor. Like as in one water, ther appeere diuerse faces, euen so diuerse men, haue diuerse hartes. Like as hell and destruccion are neuer full, euen* so the eyes of meane, can neuer bee satisfied. Siluer is tried in the mould, and golde in the fornace, and so is a man when he is openly praised to his face. The harte of a wicked man, seketh after mischief, but a true hart seketh for knowlege. Though thou shouldest braie a foole with a pestell in a morter, like frumetie corne, yet will not his foolishnes go from him. Se that thou knowe the nombre of thy catel thy self, and loke wel to thy flockes. For richesse abideth not alwaie, and the crowne endureth not for euer. The haye groweth, the grasse commeth vp, and herbes are gathered in the mountaines. The Lambes shall clothe thee, and for the Goates, thou shalte haue money to thy housholde. Thou shalt haue goates milke enough to fede thee, to vphold thy household, and to sustain thy maidens.

The. xxviij. Chapiter.

The vngodly flieth, when no man chaseth him: but the righteous standeth fast as a Lion. Because of synne, the lande doth ofte chaunge her prince: but through men of vnderstandyng and wisedome, a realme endureth long. One poore man oppressyng another by violence, is like a continuall rain, that destroyeth the fruite. They that forsake the lawe, praise the vngodly: but suche as kepe the law abhorre them. Wicked men discerne not the thyng that is righte, but they that seke after the lorde, discerne all thynges. A poore man leadyng a godly life, is better then the riche, that goeth in froward waies. Whoso kepeth the lawe, is a child of vnderstandyng: but he that is a companion of riotous men, shame eth his father. He that by vsury and vniust gaynes, gathereth richesse, he shall laie them in store, for a man that will pitie the poore. He that turneth awaie his eare, fro hearyng the lawe, his prayer shalbe abhominable. Whoso leadeth the righteous into an euill waie, shall fall into his awne pit, but the iust shall haue the good in possession. The riche man thynketh hymselfe to bee wise, but the poore that hath vnderstandyng, can perceiue hym well enough. When righteous men are in prosperitie, then doeth honour florishe, but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth. He that hideth his sinnes, shal not prospere: but whoso knowlegeth them, and forsaketh them, shall haue mercie. Well is hym that standeth alwaye in awe, as for hym that hardneth his hart, he shall fall into mischief. Like as a roaryng lion, and an hungrie beare euen so is an vngodly prince, ouer the poore people. Where the prince is without vnderstandyng, there is greate oppression and wrong: but if he be suche a one, as hateth coueteousnesse, he shall long reigne. He* that tilleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of breade: but he that followeth idlenesse, shall haue pouertie enough. A man that dealeth faithfully, shalbe filled with blessynges, and* he that maketh to muche hast, for to be riche, shal not be vnguiltie. To haue respect of persones in Iudgement, is not good. And why? A manne will do wrong: yea, euen for a piece of breade. Yet he that will bee riche all to sone, hath an euill eye: and considereth not, that pouertie shall come vpon hym. He that followyng my preceptes, rebuketh a man, shal finde more fauor at the last, then he that flattereth hym.* Whoso robbeth his father and mother, and saieth it is no synne: the same is like vnto a destroyer. He that is of a proude stomake, and without feare: stirreth vp strife, but he that putteth his trust in the lorde, shal be wel fed. He that trusteth in his awne hart is a foole: but he that dealeth wisely, shalbee safe. He* that geueth vnto the poore, shal not lacke, but he that turneth awaie his eyes fro suche as bee in necessitie, shall suffer greate pouertie hymself. When the vngodly are come vp, men are fain to hide themselues: but when thei periche, the righteous encreace.

The. xxix. Chapiter.

He that is stiffe necked, and will not bee reformed: shal sodainly be destroyed without any help. When* the righteous haue the ouer hande, the people are in prosperitie, but whe the vngodly beareth rule, there the people mourne. Whoso loueth wisedome, maketh his father a glad man: but* he that kepeth company with harlottes, spendeth awaie that he hath. With true Iudgement, the kyng setteth vp the lande, but if he be a man, that oppresseth the people with gathrynges, he turneth it vpside doune. Whoso flattereth his neighboure, laieth a net for his feete. The synne of the wicked, is his awne snare, but the righteous doeth synge and reioyce. The righteous considereth the cause of the poore: but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandyng. Wicked people bryng a citie in decaye, but wise menne set it vp again. If a wise manne go to lawe with a foole (whether he deale with him

The. xxx. Chapiter.

The wordes of Agur the sonne of Jakei, and the Prophecie that the same manne spake vnto Ithiel, euen vnto Ithiell, and Uchall: I am more foolishe then any man, and haue no mannes vnderstanding. I neuer learned wisedom, nor had knowlege of holy thynges. Who hath clymed vp into heauen? Who hath come doune from thence? Who hath holden the wynde fast in his hande? Who hath comprehended the waters in a garment? Who hath set all the endes of the worlde? What is his name, or his sonnes name? Can thou tell? All the wordes of god are pure and cleane, for he is a shield vnto al them, that put their trust in hym. Put thou nothyng vnto his wordes, lest he proue thee, and thou bee founde a liar. Two thynges haue I required of thee, that thou wilt not deny me, before I dye. Remoue frō me vanitie and lies: geue me neither pouertie, nor richesse, onely graunt me necessarie liuyng. Lest I be ful, I deny thee, and saie: Who is the lorde. And lest I beyng constrained through pouertie, fall vnto stealyng, and take the name of my God in vain. Accuse not a seruaunt vnto his master, lest he speake euill of thee, and thou bee hurte. There is a generacion that curseth their father, and blesseth not their mother. There is a generacion, that thynke themselues cleane, and yet is it not clensed from their filthinesse. There is a generacion that hath a proude loke, and loueth to lift vp their ye lides. There is a generacion, whose teethe are swerdes, and with their chawe bones, thei consume, and deuoure the symple of the earth, and the poore from emong menne. The horse leache hath two daughters crying: bring hether, bring hether. There be three thynges that are neuer satisfied: yea, foure thynges saieth neuer ho. The graue, a womans wōbe closed: and the yearth that hath neuer water enough. As for the fyrste it saieth neuer ho. * Who so laugheth his father to scorne, and setteth his mothers cōmaundement at naught, the rauens picke out his yes in the valley, and deuoured bee he of the yonge Egles. There bee three thynges to high for me: yea foure, that passe my knowlege. The waie of an Egle in the aire, the waie of a Serpent, ouer a stone, the waie of a Shippe in the sea, and the waie of a man with a young woman. Suche is the waye of a wife that breaketh wedlocke, which wipeth her mouthe, like as when she hath eaten, and saieth: as for me, I haue doone no harme. Through three thynges, the yearth is disquieted, and the fourthe maie it not beare: Through a seruaunt that beareth rule. Through a foole, that hath to muche bread, through a wife worthy hatred, when she is maried, and through an handmaiden, that is heire to her maistres. There bee foure thynges in the yearthe, the whiche are very litle: but in wisedō, thei excede the wise. The Emmettes are but weake people * yet gather thei their meate together in the Haruest. The Conies are but a feble folke, yet make thei their couches emong the rockes. The Grashoppers haue not a gide, yet goo thei furthe together by heapes. The Spider laboureth with her handes, and is in Kynges palaces. There be thre thynges that go fayre, yea foure are comely in goyng. A Lion which is strongest emong beastes, and geueth place to no man: a greye hounde, strong in the hinder partes. A rambe also and a kyng, against whom no manne riseth vp. If thou hast doone foolishly, when thou wart in high estate, or if thou hast taken euill counsaill: then lay thine hand vpon thy mouth. Whoso churneth milke maketh butter, and he that rubbeth his nose, maketh it bleede: euil so, he that rayseth wrath bringeth furth strife.

The wordes of King Lamuell, and the lesson that his mother taught him.

The .xx. daie. Matthi. ii.

MY sonne, why do ye forgeton sonne of my body: O my deare beloued sonne, geue not ouer thy strength and maies vnto women, whiche are the destruccion euen of kynges. O Lamuell, it is not for kynges, it is not (I saie) for kynges to drinke wine, nor Princes strong drinke: for there is no secrete where dronkennesse reigneth, lest thei beyng dronken, forget the law, & peraduenture the iudgement of all poore menne children. Geue strong drinke vnto suche, as are condemned to deth and wine vnto those that mourne: What thei maie drinke it, and forget their misery and aduersitie. Be thou an aduocate, for the dombe, and stande in Iudgement thy self, to speake for all suche as be succourelesse, in this transitory worlde. Open thy mouthe, defende the thyng that is lawfull and right, and the cause of the poore and helpelesse. Whose findeth an honest and faithfull wome, their is muche more worth then pearles. The harte of her housbande, maie safely trust in her, so that he shall fall in no vnthrifte. She will doo hym good, and not euill, all the daies of her life. She occupieth woll and flaxe, and laboureth gladly with her handes. She is like a Merchantes shippe, that bryngeth her victuailes from a farre. She is vp in the nighte season: to prouide meate for her houshold, and foode for her maidens. She considereth lande, and buyeth it, and with the fruite of her handes, she planteth a Vineyarde. She girdeth her loynes with strength, and corrageth her armes. And of the perceiue that her housewifrie dooeth good, her candell goeth not out by nighte. She laieth her fingers to the spindle and her hand taketh hold of the distaffe. She openeth her hande to the poore, yea, she stretcheth furthe her handes, to suche as haue nede. She feareth not, that the colde of winter shall hurte her house, for all her houshold folkes are clothed with skarlet. She maketh her self faire ornamentes, her clothyng is white Silke and purple. Her housebande is muche set by in the gates, when he sitteth emōg the rulers of the land. She maketh cloth of silke: and selleth it, and deliuereth girdels vnto the merchaunt. Strength and honor is her clothyng, and in the latter daie she shall reioyce. She openeth her mouth with wisedom, & in her tongue is the law of grace. She loketh wel to the waies of her houshold: & eateth not her bread with idlenes. Her children shall arise, & cal her blessed: and her husband shall make muche of her. Many daughters there be, that gather riches together: but thou geuest aboue them all. For fauour is deceiptfull, and beautie is a vaine thyng: but a woman that feareth the Lorde, she shalbe praised. Geue her of the fruite of her handes, & let her owne workes praise her in the gates of the citie.

The first Chapiter.

THese are the wordes of the Preacher, the sonne of Dauid, King of Ieruzalē. All is but meere vanitie (saith the preacher) all is meere vanitie. For what eie hath a man, of all the labor that he taketh vnder the sonne? One generacio passeth awaie, another commeth: but the yeeth abideth stil. The sōne ariseth, the sonne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he may there rise vp again. The wynd goeth toward the South, and turneth vnto the North, it cōpasseth his compasse, wheeleth about, & goeth furth, and his rightes returneth again to his owne. All floudes run into the sea, and yet is the sea it self not filled: for vnto what place the waters run, thence thei come to flowe again. All thynges are so hard to be knowen, that no man can expresse them. The eie is not satisfied with sight: therein is not filled with hearyng eare with hearyng. That thyng that hath been, cōmeth to passe again: and the thyng that hath been doen, shalbe doen again: ther is no new thing vnder the sonne. Is there any thyng wherof it maie be saied: Lo this is newe? For it was long ago, in the tymes that haue been before vs. The thyng that is past, is out of remembraunce: euen so the thynges that are for to come, shall no more be thought vpon emōg them that come after. I my self the preacher was kyng of Israel at Ieruzalem, and did apply my mynd to seke out, and serche for knowlege of al thynges, that are doen vnder heauen. Suche trauail and labor, hath God geuen vnto the children of men, to exercise themselues therein. Thus haue I considered all the thynges, that come to passe vnder the sonne: and lo, thei are all but vanitie, and vexacion of mind. The croked cānot be made streight, nor the thing that is vnperfect, cannot be accōpted with thynges that are perfect. I commoned with myne awne harte, saiyng: lo, I am come to a greate estate, and haue gotten more wisedō, then al thei that haue been before me in Ieruzalem. Yea, my hart had greate experience of wisedom and knowlege. For therunto I applied my mynd, that I might know what wer wisedome and vnderstandyng, what were errour and foolishnesse: and I perceiued, that this was also, but a vexacion of mynde: for where muche wisedom is, there is also greate trauail and disquietnes: and the more knowlege a man hath, the more is his care.

The .xxi. daie of Marche. A. THen saied I thus in my harte: now go to I will take myne ease, & haue good daies. But lo, that is vanitie also: in so muche that I saied vnto the man geuen to laughter: thou art mad, and to mirthe, what deceiuest thou? B. So I thought in my hart, to geue my flesh vnto wine and again, to applie my mynde vnto wisedome, and to comprehende folishnes, vntill the time that among all the thynges, which are vnder the Sonne I might se what were best for men to do, so long as thei liue vnder heauen. C. I made gorgeous faire workes, I buylded me houses, and plated vineyardes. I made me orchardes, and gardens of pleasure, and planted trees in them, of all maner tewines. D. I made pooles of water, to water the grene frutefull trees with all. E. I bought seruauntes and maidens: and had a great houshold. F. For so had I cattell and shepe, I had more substaunce of them, then all they that were before me in Jerusalem. I gathered siluer and golde together, euen a treasure of kynges & countries. I prouided me syngers and women, which could play on instrumentes, to make men mirth and pastyme. I got me psalteries and songes of musicke. And I was greater, and in more worship, then all my predecessors in Jerusalem. For wisedom remained with me: and lo, whatsoeuer myne eyes desired, I let them haue: and withheld not from them any ioye wherein myne hart delighted, or had any pleasure I withheld it not from it. For thus my hart reioyced in all that I did: and this was my portion of all my trauaill. G. But when I considered all the workes that my handes had wrought, and all the labour that I had taken therein: lo, all was but vanitie, and vexation of mind, and nothyng of any value vnder the Sonne. Then turned I me to consider wisedome, errors and folishnesse. (For what is a man, that might be compared to me, the kyng of suche workes?) and I saw that wisedome excelleth folishnes, as far as light doth darknes. For a wise man hath his eyes in his hed, but the foole goeth in the darknes. I perceiued also, that thei both had one ende. Then thought I in my mynd. If it happe I but as the foole, as it doth to me, what auaileth me then to labor any more for wisedom? So I communed with my hart, that this also was but vanitie. For the wise are euer as litle in remembraunce, as the foolishe, for the time that come, when all shalbe forgotten: yea, the wise man dieth as well as the foole. Thus began I to be weary of my life, in so muche, that I could awaie with nothyng that is doone vnder the Sonne, for all was but vanitie, and vexation of mynd: yea, I was weary of al my labor, which I had taken vnder the Sonne, because I should lee fain to leaue them vnto another man, that commeth after me: and who knoweth whether he shalbe a wise man or a foole? And yet shall he be lord of all my labour, which I with suche wisedome haue taken vnder the Sonne. This is also a vaine thyng. H. So I turned me, to restrain my mynde, from all suche trauaill, as I toke vnder the Sonne: for so muche as a man should worke truely with wisedom, with vnderstandyng, and oportunitie, and yet lee fain to leaue his labours vnto another, that neuer swette for them. This is also a vaine thyng, and a greate misery. For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauaill of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sonne, but heuinesse, sorowe, and disquietnesse all the daies of his life? In so muche, that his harte cannot rest in the night: this is also a vaine thyng. I. Is it not better then, for a man to eate and drinke, and his soule to be merry in his labor? Yea, I saw that this also was a gifte of God. For who will eate or go more iustely to his worke then I? And why? God geueth to the man, that is good before hym, wisedom vnderstandyng and gladnesse: but vnto the sinner he geueth werinesse and superfluous care, that he maie gather, and heape together the thyng that afterward shalbe geuen vnto hym, whom it pleaseth God. This is now a vaine thyng: yea, a very disquietnesse and vexacion of mynd.

Eccle. b. d.

1. Euerlong. EVery thyng hath a tyme: yea, all that is vnder the heauen hath his conuenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye. There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke vp the thing that is planted. A time to slea, and a tyme to make whole. A tyme to breake downe, & a tyme to buyld vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh. A tyme to mourne and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to caste awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrain fro embracyng. A tyme to winne, and a tyme to lose. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende. A tyme to cutte in peeces, and a tyme to sowe together. A tyme to kepe silence, and a tyme to speake. A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate. A tyme to warre, and a tyme of peace. B. What hath a manne clas (that doeth any thyng) but werienesse and labours? For as touchyng the trauaill and carefulnesse, which God hath geuen vnto menne, I see that he hath geuen it them, to bee exercised in it. All this hath he ordeined marueilously goodly, to euery thyng his due tyme. C. He hath planted ignorance also in the hartes of menne, that they should not comprehende the grounde of his workes, which he doeth from the beginnyng, to the ende. So I perceiued, that in these thynges there is nothyng better for a manne then to be merry and to do well, so long as he liueth. For all that a man eateth and drinketh, yea, whatsoeuer a man enioyeth of all his labor, that same is the gift of God (excepte also, that whatsoeuer God doth, it continueth for euer. And that nothyng can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doeth it to the intent, that men should feare hym. The thyng that hath been, is now: and the thyng that is for to come, hath been alore tyme, for god requireth again the thyng that was paste. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the Sonne wickednesse, in the stede of iudgement, and iniquitie in stede of righteousnes. Then thought I in my mynde: God shall separate the righteous, and the vngodly, and then shalbe the tyme and iudgement, of all counsailes and woorkes. I commoned with myne awne hart also, concernyng the children of men: how god hath chosen them, & yet letteth the appere as though thei were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men, as it doeth vnto beastes: and as the one dieth, so dieth the other: yea, thei haue bothe one maner of breth, so that in this a manne hath no preeminence aboue a beast, but all are subiect vnto vanitie. Thei go all vnto one place for as thei be all of dust, so shall thei all turne vnto dust again. Who knoweth the spirite of man, that goeth vpward, and the breath of the beast, that goeth downe to the yearth? Wherfore I perceiue that there is nothyng better for a man, then to be ioyfull in his labor: for that is his portion. But who will bryng him to se the thyng, that shal come after him?

SO I turned me, and considered all the violent wrong, that is dooen vnder the Sonne: and beholde, the teares of suche as wer oppressed: and there was no man to comfort them, or that would deliuer and defende them, from the violence of their oppressors. Wherefore I iudged those that are ded, to be more happy, then those that be aliue: yea, him that is yet vnborne, to be better at ease, then thei bothe, because he seeth not the miserable woorkes, that are dooen vnder the Sonne. Againe, I sawe that all trauail and diligence of labor, that euery man taketh in hand, was dooen of enuie against his neighbor. This is also a vain thing, and a vexacio of mind. The foole foldeth his handes togeither, & eateth vp his awne flesh. One handfull (saieth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labor, and trauaill of mynde. Moreouer, I turned me, and beheld yet another vanitie vnder the Sonne. There is one man, no mo but hymselfe alone, hauyng neither child nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauaill: his eyes cannot bee satisfied with riches, & yet doeth he not remember hymselfe, and saie: for whom doo I take suche trauaill? For whose pleasure doo I thus consume awaie my life? This is also a vaine and miserable thyng. Wherefore two are better then one: for they maie well enioye the profite of their labour. For if one of them fall, his companion helpeth hym vp again: but woe is hym that is alone, for if he fall, he hath not another to helpe hym vp again. Then two lye togeither, thei are warme: but how can a body bee warme alone? One maie bee ouercome, but two maie make vefi faunce. A threefold cable is not lightly broken. A poore child beyng wise, is better then an old kyng that doteth, and cannot beware in tyme to come. Some one commeth out of prisone, and is made a Kyng: and another whiche is borne in the kyngdom, commeth into pouertie. And I perceiued, that all meane liuyng banes the Sonne, go with the seconde childe, that shall stande vp in the stede of the other. As for the people that haue been before hym, and that come after hym, shal not reioyce of him. This is also a vain thyng, and vexacion of mynde. When thou commest into the house of God, kepe thy foote, & draw nigh, that God which is at hand maie heare: that thou geue not the offeryngs of fooles: for thei knowe nought but to do euill.

BE not hastie with thy mouthe, and let not thyne harte speake any thyng rashly, before God. For God is in heauen, and thou vpon yearth, therefore let thy woordes bee fewe. For where muche carefulnes is, there are many dreames: and where many woordes are, there menne maie heare fooles. When thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for foolishe vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. It is better it is that thou make no vowe, then that thou shouldest promise, and not paie. Suffre not thy mouthe to make the flesshe for to synne, neither saie thou before the Angell: that it is thy ignorance. For then God will bee angrie at thy voice, and destroy all the woorkes of thyne handes. And why? Where as are many dreames, and many woordes, there are also diuerse vanities: but loke that thou feare God. If thou seest the poore to be oppressed, and wrongfully dealte withall, so that equitie and right of the lawe is wrested in the lande, maruaill not thou at suche a thyng, for one guestie man hath to doe with another, and the moste mone are in authoritie ouer the poore. Moreouer of the yearth vpholdeth all things: yea, the kyng hymselfe is maintained by husbandrie. He that loueth money, will neuer be satisfied with money: and whoso delighteth in riches, shall haue no profite thereof. This is also a vain thyng. Where as muche riches is, there are many also that spende them awaie. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth them, sauyng that he maie loke vpon the with his eyes? A labouryng man eateth sweetely, whether it be little or much that he eateth, but the aboundance of the riche, will not suffer plaine sore sickenes and foule plage, which I have seen vnder the sonne, (namely) that they kept vnto the hurt of him that hath the in possession. For often times there goeth with his great misery & trouble: and ye he haue a childe in getteth nothing. Like as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thether agayne, and taketh nothing away with hym of al his labour. This is a miserable plage that he shal go away euen as he came. What is he lpeth it him that he hathe laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also he eateth in the darke, with great carefulnes, sickenes, and sorow. Therefore mee thincketh that a better and a fairer thinge is mans to eate and to be merie of that he hath labored in the sonne, that he taketh vnder the sonne all the dayes of his life whiche god geueth him, for this is his portion. For vnto whosoeuer god geueth riches, goodes and power, he geueth it him to enioye, to take it for his portion, and to be merie of his labour: this is the gyft of god. For he thinketh not much howe long he shall liue, so a man be as godfilleth his hart with gladnes.

THere is yet a plage vnder the sonne, and that is a general thyng amonge men. When God geueth a man riches, goodes, all honour, so that he wanteth nothyng of all that his hart can desire, and yet god geueth him not leaue to enioye the same, but an other man spendeth them. This is a dayne thing and a miserable plage. Yf a man begett an hundred children, and liue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in number, and yet cannot enioy his good, neyther be buried, as for him I say that vntimely byrth is better then he. For he commeth to naught and spendeth his time in darkenes, and his name is forgotten. Moreouer, he seeth not the sonne, and knoweth not of it: & yet hath he more rest then the other. Yea, though he lyued two thousande yeares, yet hath he no good life. Come not all to one place? All the labour that a manne taketh is for himselfe, and yet his desire is neuer filled after his minde. For what hath the wise more then the fole? What helpeth it the poore that he knoweth, to walke with fooles before the liuing? The sight of the eyes is better then that the soule should walke after desires of the lust. Moreouer, this is also a vaine thing, and a disquietnesse of mind. What thing that hath ben is named already, & knowen that it shal man himselfe, neither may he go to law with him that is mightier then he. Many thynges there be that encrease vanitie, and what hath a man the more? For who knoweth what is good for man liuing, in the dayes of his vayne life, whiche is but a shadow? Or who telleth a man what shal happen after him vnder the sonne.

The vii. Chapter.

A good name is more worth then precious ointement, and the day of death is better then the day of birth. It is better to goe into an house of mourning then into a banqueting house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is liuing taketh it to harte. Sorowfulnes is better then to laugh: for when the countenaunce is heauy, the hart is better men. The heaute of the wise is in the mourning house, but the hart of the foolyshe is in the house of mirth. It is better to geue eare to the chastening of a wiseman, then to heare the song of fooles. For the laughing of fooles is like the crackyng of thornes vnder a potte. And this is but a vayne thing. The wyse man hateth wrong dealing: and abhoreth the harte that ruseth rewarde. Better it is to stidde the end of a thing the the beginning. The patient of spirit is better then the hie minded. Be not hastelye angry in thy minde, for wrathe resteth in the bosome of fooles. Say not thou, What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde tyme were better then they be now? For that were no wyse question. Wysedome with enheritaunce is good: yet better is it to the them that without care may behold the sonne. For wysedome defendeth as well as money, and the excellent knowlege and wysdome geueth life to him that hath it in possession. Consider the workes of god, how that no man can make the thing straight that he hath made crooked. In the time of prosperitie, and take the time of misfortune: for God maketh the one by the other to that a man can finde nothing els. All thynges haue I considered in the time of my vanitie: that the iuste man perisheth for his righteousnes sake, & the vngodly liueth in his wickednes. Be thou not ouer to righteous, nor ouer wise: that thou perish not. Be not ouer wicked, neyther be thou foolish, lest thou dye before thy time. It is good for thee to take holde of this, & not let the go out of thy hande. For he that feareth god commeth forth with them all. Wysedome geueth more courage vnto the wise then ten mighty men of the citie. For there is not one iust person vpon earth that doeth good, & sinneth not. Take no hede vnto euery word that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunt curse the: for thine owne hart knoweth that thou thy selfe also hast other times cursed other. All this haue I proued by wisedome. I thought to be wyse: but the matter further from me then it was before, and to deepe that I might not finde the bottom. I applied my minde also vnto it, to search and to seke out wisedome, and the reason of things, to know the wickednesse of the vngodly, and the errours of the foolishe. And I found, that a woman is more bitter then death. For she hath rule ouer her harte of a wet that man (for his hands) hides are changed: whosoe pleaseth god shall escape from her: but the sinner shall be taken with her.

Beholde (sayeth the preacher) this have I diligently searched out and proved. One thing will bee considered with an other, that a man may come by knowledge, which as yet I seke and finde not. Among a thousand men I have found one, but not one woman among all. Lo, this only have I founde, that god made man iust and right, but they sought many inuencio-ons.

The. viii. Chapiter.

WHo is wyse, and parte knowledge to make an answere? A mannes wysedome maketh his face too shyne: but bashamefast-nesse putteth it out of fauour. I counsell the kepe the kinges commaundement, & the othe which I have made vnto god. Be not hasty to goout of his sight, & se thou continue in no euel thing for whatsoeuer it pleaseth him that doeth he lyke as when a kinge geueth a charge, his commaundement is mighty: & who is to say vnto him, what wilte thou? Whoso keepeth the commaundement, shall fele no har-me, but a wise mans hart discerneth the tyme and iudgement. For euery thing will have his ordre, time and iudgement, and this is the thing that maketh men full of carefulnes and sorowe. And whye? A manne knoweth not what is for to come: for who will tell him?
Neyther is there any man that hath power over the spirite, too kepe the spirite, nor to have any power in the time of death, is it not he also that can make an ende of the battaile neyther may vngodlynesse deliver them that vse it. All these thinges have I considered, & applyed my minde vnto euery mans worke, that is vnder the sunne: howe one man hathe lordship vpon an other to his awne harme.
For I have ben often thingedes brought in their graues: & yet they have returned again and came from the place of holye menne, which in the citie were growen out of memory, as vnto them: also that is vayne thing is also a vayne thing: because now that euell workes are not hastily punished, the harte of man giueth him selfe ouer vnto wickednes. Yea though an euel mayster offende an hundreth times, and god deferre geuing him longe leyer: yet am I sure, that it shal go wel with them that feare god: because they have ben before their eies. Againe, as for the vngodly, it shal not be well with him, neyther shal he prolong his dayes, but cut as a shadow: for that he dreeth not god before his eies. There is a vanite vpon yearth: I here be iust men, vnto whome it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly. Againe there bee vngodlye, vnto whome it goeth as though they had the workes of the righteous. Thys have I called also a vayne thing. Therfore I commende gladnes, bycause a man hath no better thing vnder the sunne, but to eate & drinke & to be merye. And so I applied my minde to knowe wysedome, and to knowe the trauaile that is in the worlde: and that of such a fashion, that I suffer not myne eies to sleape neyther day nor night. I understode of all the workes of God, but it is not possible for a man to attaine vnto the workes that are done vnder the sunne: and though he bestow pyn labour to seke them out, yet can he not reache vnto them, yea though a wise man wold vnder-take to knowe them, yet shall he not reache them.

The. ix. Chapiter.

FOR all these thinges purposed I in my mynde to seke oute. The righteous and wyse men, and their ouerwarkes also, are in the hande of GOD: and there is no man that knoweth either loue or hate, but all thynges are before them. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goeth with the righteous as with the vngodly: with the good and cleane, as with the vncleane: with him that offereth as with him that offereth not, like as it goeth with the vertuous, so goeth it also with the sinner: & it happeneth vnto the swerer to happeneth it also to him that is afrayed to be forsworne. Among all thinges that come to passe vnder the sunne: this is a misery that it happeneth vnto all lyke. Yeuen the cause also that the hartes of men are full of wickednesse, and mad folyshnesse is in their hartes as longe as they lyue, but yll they dye. And whye? as long as a man liueth, he hath an hope: for a quicke rogge (say they) is better then a dead lyon. For the that be liuing, know that they shall die, but the that be dead know nothyng: neyther receyue they any more for their memorial is forgotte, so that they be neyther louede, hated, nor enuied: neyther have they any more part in ther worlde in all that is done vnder the sunne. Go thou thy way then, eate thy bread with ioye, and drinke thy wyne with a glade harte, for thy worke pleaseth GOD. Let thy garmentes be alwayes white. And lette thy heade lacke no ointement. Lyue thy lyfe ioyfully with the wife whome thou louest, all the dayes of the lyfe, which he hath geuen thee GOD geueth the vnder the sunne. All the dayes of thy vanitie, for that is thy portion in this lyfe, & of all thy labours and tra-uayle that thou hast taken vnder the sunne.
Lyke as that thou takeste in hande to doe, that doe with all thy power, for in the grae-ue that thou goeste vnto, there is neyther worcke, counsell, wysedome nor lyfe dome. And I turned me vnto the other thing that was vnder the sunne, and I sawe that in runnyng, it helpeth not to bee swifte: in bat-tayle it helpeth not to be stronge, to fighte, it helpeth not to bee wyse: to wyche, it helpeth not to be subtyle: to be hadde in wyll, whereupon not the leest cumpany: But all all ye them in tyme and Fortune. * For a man knowethe not hys tyme, but lyke as the fyshe are taken wyth the Angle, and as the Byrdes are caught wythe the Snare. Euen soo are men taken in the perelloue tyme, when it commeth sodenly vpon them. Thys wyfedome have I also vnder the Sunne, and me thought it a greate thynge. There was a little Cyte, and a fewe menne within it: to the whiche there came a great kyng & besieged it, & made great bulwarkes against it, and in the Cytie there was found a poore manne (but he was wyse) wyche wyche hys Wyfedome delyuered the Cytie: Yet was there no bodye that had any respecte to suche a symple man. Then sayd I Wyfedome is better then Strengthe. Neuertheles, a symple manne: Wyfedome is dec-spited, and his wordes are not heard. A wyse manne counsayle that is followed in Secylence, is lyke vnto the crynge of a Capytayne among fooles. * For wisedome is better then harnesse: but one vnthryfte alone de-stroyeth much good.

A Deade flye doth corrupt swete oyntement abhorred because of a lytle foolysnesse. A wyse mannes harte is vpon the rycht hande, seene vnder the Sunne: namely, the ignorau-ce, that is, com vnolye among Potentates: in mannes mouth are gracious: but the lippes of a foole wyl destroy hymselfe. The begyn-nyng of hys talking is folishnes, and the last wordes of hys mouth is starke madnesse. A foole is full of wordes, and a manne cannot tel what shal come to passe, who will warne hym, of it that shal folowe after hym? The labour of the fole hurteth yemens vnderstandyng, whyche they knowe not how to go into the cytie. Wo their Banquettes. But wel is thee (O thou land) whose kyng is comen of Nobles, and whose princes eate in due season, for necessitie and not for lust. Through slouthfulnesse doores in the streetes shalbe shut, when the voice of the miller shalbe layed downe: when men shal ryse vp at the voice of the byrd, and when all the daughters of Musique shalbe brought low: when men shall feare in the places, and bee afraied on the wayes, when the almond tree shal florish, and he laden with the grashopper, and when al lustes shall passe: because man goeth to his longe home, and the mourners go about the streates: Or ever the siluer lampe be taken away, and or ever the golden vial be broken. Or the pot be broken at the well, or the wheele vpon the cesterne, and that the dust be turned againe into yearth, as it was: and the spirite shal returne vnto god which gaue it. All is but vanitie (saith the preacher) all is but vanitie. The preacher was yet more wise, & taught the people knowledge: he gaue good heede, sought out the ground, & set forth many parables: his diligence was to set out acceptable wordes: eight scripture, & the words of the truth: for the wordes of the wise are like prickes & nailes, that go thorow, wherewith the shepe gathered is holden vp: for they are geuen of one shepeherde onely. Therefore beware (my sonne) of that warne that is beside this: for to make many bookes is an endlesse worke and to loude crying wereth the body. Let vs heare the conclusion of all thinges: Feare god, and keepe his commandementes: For that toucheth al men. For god shal iudge al workes, and secret things, whether they be good or euel.

The Ballade of Ballades of Salomon: called in Latin, Canticum Canticorum.

The. i. Chapitre.

Let him kysse me with the kysses of his mouthe: for thy loue is more pleasaunt then wine: and that because of the good and pleasaunte sauoure of thy most precious balmes. Thy name is as sweete smelling oyntement when it is powred forth, therefore do the maydens loue thee. Draw thou me vnto thee: we will runne after thee. The king hath brought me into his secret chambers. We will be glad & reioyce in thee, & make more of thy loue then of wine. Right iustly do they loue thee. I am black (o ye daughters of Ierusalem) like as the tentes of the Cedarenes, and as the hangynges of Salomon, but yet am I fayre, and beautifull withal. Marueil not at me, that I am so black, for why the sonne hath shined vpon me. My mother children were displeased with me, they made me keper of the vineyardes, but mine owne vineyarde haue I not kept. Tell me o thou whom my soule loueth, where thou feedest, where thou makest them rest at the noone day: for why shal I be like him that goeth astray about the flockes of thy companions? If thou know not thy selfe o thou fayrest among women) then go thy way further after the foote steppes of the sheepe, & feed thy goates beside the shepeheardes tentes, vnto the hall of Pharao's charioteer haue I compared thee, o my loue. Thy cheekes & thy neck is beautifull as the turtles, & hanged with chaynes & goodly iewels, a necklace of gold will we make thee with siluer buttons. Whyle the king sitteth at the table he shal smel my spikenard, a bondle of myrre is my loue vnto me: he will lye betwixte my breestes. Is cluster of Camphire is the vine yardes of Engaddi is my loue vnto me. O howe fayre art thou my loue, o how fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyes, o how faire art thou my beloued, how well fauoured art thou? our bed is decked with floures, the cielinges of our house are of Cedre tree, and our crosse ioynges of Cipresse. The. ii. Chapitre.

I am the lily of the fielde, and Rose of the valleys, as the rose among the thornes, so is my loue among the daughters. Like as the apple tree among the trees of the wood, so is my beloued among the sonnes. My delite is to sit vnder his shadow, for his fruit is sweete vnto my throte, he bringeth me into his wine celler, his banner spred ouer me is my loue, set about me cups of wine, cherish me with apples, for I am sick of loue. His left hande is vnder my hed, and his right hande shall embrace me. I charge you o ye daughters of Ierusalem by the Roes & hyndes of the feelde, that ye awake not vp my loue, nor touch her til she be content herselfe. Hearken, where the voice of my beloued is there cometh he hopping vpon the mountaines, & leaping ouer the litle hilles. My beloued is like a roe or a yong hart. Beholde he standeth behinde our wal, he looketh in at the windowes, and espeth through the grate. My beloued answered, and said vnto me. Stand vp my loue, my beautiful, & go to thine owne, for lo the winter is now paste, the rayne is away and gone. The floures appeare in the feelde, the time of birdes singing is come, & the voice of the turtle doue is heard in our land. The figtree bringeth forth her figges, & the vines beare blossomes, and geue a good smel. Vp vp (my loue) come my loue my beautiful, & come. For lo my doue (houte of the caues of the rocke, out of the hole of the wal, & let me se thy countenance, & heare thy voice, for sweete is thy voice, & faire is thy countenance. Take vs the foxes, yea the litle foxes, that marre the vines, for our vines beare blossomes. My loue is mine, & I am his which feedeth among the lilies, vntil the

By nyght in my bedde I sought hym, whō my soule loueth: yea diligently sought I him, but I could him not. I wil get vp (thought I) and go about the cytie, in the wayes, in all the stretes, wil I seke him whome my soule loueth: but whē I sought him I could him not. The watchemen also that goe about the cytie found me. Saw ye not him whom my soule loueth? So when I was a litle passe, then I founde hym whome my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon him, and wil not let him go vntil I bring hym into my mothers house, and into her chābre that bare me. * I charge you O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the Roes & Hindes of the fyldes, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her til sh. be content herselfe. Who is this that cōmeth vp out of the wildernesse like vapours of smoke, as it were a smell of myrre, frankencence, & all maner of spyces of the apotecary? Behold about Salomons bedstede there stand threscore valiaunt men of the most mighty in Israel. They hold swerdes euery one, & are expert in warre. Euery man also hath his sweard vpō his thigh because of feare in the nyght. King Salomon had made himselfe a palace of the woodde of Lybanus, the pilliers are of Siluer, the couering of golde, the seate of purple, the ground is pleasauntly paued with loue, for the daughters of Jerusalem. Go forthe, (O ye daughters of Syon) and beholde: King Salomon in the Croune, wherewith his mother crouned him in the day of his mariage, and in the day of the gladnes of his hart.

Behold faire art thou my loue, behold faire arte thou: thou hast doues eyen, besydes that whiche lyeth hidde within. Thy heris lockes are like the wool of a flocke of goten that be shorne vpon mount Gilead. Thi teeth are like shepe of the same bignes, which went vp from the washing place: where euery one beareth twoo twinnes, and not one vnfruitful among them. Thy lippes are like a rose coloured rybande: thy wordes are louely, thy cheekes are lyke a peece of a pomegranate within thyne heares. Thy necke is lyke the tower of Dauid builded with costlye stones, where out on the sides, whereupon there hang a.m. shieldes: yea al the weapons of the Gyauntes. * Thy .ij. breastes are like .ij. twinnes of yong Roes, which fede among Roses. O that I might go to the mountein of mirre, & to the hil of frankencence: til the day breke, & til the shadowes be past away. Thou art al faire (o my loue) and no spotte is in thee. Come to mee from Lybanus, (O my Spouse) come to me from Lybanus, looke from the toppe of Amana, from the toppe of Sanir, and Hermon, from the Lions dennes, and from the Mountaynes of the Leopardes. Thou hast with loue bewitched my heart, O my sister, my spouse: thou hast bewitched my hart with one of thine eies, and with one cheyne of thy necke. O howe fayre are thy breastes, my sister, my spouse. Thy breastes are more pleasaunt then wyne, and the smell of thyne ointementes passeth al spices. Thy lippes, O my spouse, droppe as the hony combe: yea milke and honye is vnder thy tongue, and the smel of thy garmentes is lyke the smel of Libanus. A gardeine well locked is my Sister, my spouse: a garden well locked, and a sealed wel. The frutes that are planted in the, are lyke a very paradise of pomegranates, with swete frutes: as Camphire, Nardus, & Safron, Calamus, Sinamō, with al swete smelling trees: Myrre, Aloes, and all the best spices. A wel of Gardeines, a wel of liuing waters, which ye runne doune from Libanus. Vp thou northwinde, come thou southwinde, and blow vpon my gardein, that the swell therof may be caried on euery side, yea, that my beloued may come into his gardeine, and eate of the swete frutes that grow therin.

I am come into my gardein. O my Sister, my spouse: I haue gathered my Mirre, with my spice. I haue eaten hony with my hony combe. I haue dronke my wine with my milke. Eate o ye frendes, drinke and be merye o ye beloued. As I am a slepe, and my hart is waking: I here the voice of my beloued, who he knocketh. Open, to me o my sister, my loue my doue, my dearling, for my hed is ful of dew and the lockes of my heare are full of the night droppes. I haue put of my cote how can I do it on then again? I haue washed my fete, how shal I file them againe? My loue put in his hande at the hole, and my hart was moued within me. I rose vp to open vnto my beloued, and my handes dropped with Mirre, & the Mirre ranne downe my fingres vpon the locke. I opened vnto my beloued, but hee was departed and gone his way. Alowe when hee spake my harte was gone, I sought him, but I coulde not finde him: I cried vpon him, neuertheles, hee gaue me no answere. So the watchemen that wente about the cytie, founde me: smote me, and wounded me: Yea they that kept the walles, toke away my kercheef fro me. I charge you therefore, O yee daughters of Jerusalem, yf ye spade my beloued, that ye tell him how that I am sicke for loue. What manner of man is thy loue aboue other louers? O thou fayreste among women? What manner thy loue doo more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straightlye? My loue, my loue, hee is Whyte, and Ruddye coloured, a goodly man among ten thousande, hys heade is as the moste fyne golde his lockes of his heare are bushie, & blacke as a crowe, his eies are as the eies of doues by the water brookes, as thoughe they were washed with milke, and are set like peeces in golde. His cheekes are like a garden of bedde wherein the Apothecaries plante all maner of swete thynges. / His lippes are lyke vnto lilies that droppe swete smelling Myrre. His handes are lyke golde ringes, hauing enclosed the precious Stone of Tharsis. / His body is as the pure yuorye, decte ouer with Saphires. His legges are as the pillers of Marble, set vpon Sockettes of Golde. His face is as Libanus, and as the beauty of the Cedre trees. The wordes of his mouth are swete, yea he is altogether louely. Such one is my loue. O ye daughters of Ierusalē surely a one is my loue.

WHether is thy loue gone then (O thou fairest among wemen) whether is thy loue departed? Wee will seeke hym with the.
My loue is gone downe into his garden, vnto the swete smelling bedde, that he may re-creede hymselfe in the gardeine, and gather lo-tes. My loue is mine and I am his, whyche feedeth among the roses. Thou art beautifull O my loue, as is the place of Thirza, thou art fayre as Ierusalem, feareful as an army of men with their banners. Turne away thine eyes from me for they haue fette me on fire.
Thy heary lockes are lyke a flocke of Goates, growne vpon the mount Gilead. Thy teth are lyke a flocke of shorne shepe, whyche go oute of the washing place: where euery one beareth twinnes, & not one barreiteful among them. Thy cheekes are lyke a pece of a pome granate. Within thy Volupers. There are thre score Quenes, foure score Wyues, and damselles without numbre. One is my doue, one is my dearlyng. She is the only beloued of her Mother, and deare vnto her that bare her. When the daughters saw her, they fayre she was blessed. Yea the Quienes, and wynes praysed her. What is thee this that looketh furthe as the Morninge? fayre as the Moone, cleare as the Sonne, and fearefull as an Armie of menne with their Banners.
I went downe into the nutte Gardeine to see what grew by the brookes, and to loke if the vineyarde flourished, or if the pome granates were yet furth. I knew not that my soul had made me the chariot of the people that be vnder Tribute. Turne agayne turne againe. O thou perfect one, turne againe, turne againe and we will loke vpon the. What will ye see in the Sulamite? Shee is lyke menne of warre singing in a company.

¶ The. vij. Chapiter.

HOw pleasaunt are thy treadinges with thy shoes thou prince doughter? Thy thyghes are like a fayre Iewell, whyche is wrought by a cunning workes mayster. Thy nauel is lyke a rounde Goblet, whyche is neuer without drynke. Thy wombe is lyke a heape of wheate, that is set about with roses.

Thy two breastes are lyke the two twinnes of young Roes. Thy necke is as it were a towre of yuorie, thyne eyes also are lyke the water pooles that are in Hesebon, beside the porte of Bathrabim, thy nose is lyke the tower of Libanus, whiche loketh towarde Damascus. That heade that standeth vpon the, is lyke Carmell, and the heare of thy heade, is lyke purple, and lyke a kyng goyng furthe with his Garde about hym. O howe fayre and louely art thou my derling in pleasures?
Thy stature is lyke a Palme tree, and thy breastes lyke the grapes. I sayd I wil clymbe vp into the palme tree, and take holde of hys hye braunches. Thy breastes also shalbe as the wyne clustres, the smell of thy nose thynes lyke as the smell of Appples, and thy lawes lyke the best wyne. Whyche goeth strei-ght vnto my beloued, and bryngeth the furthe by the lippes of the auncyent eldres. Then will I turne mee vnto my loue, and hee shall turne hym vnto mee. O come on my loue, wee will go furth into the felde, and take our lodgyng in the villages. In the morning will wee go see the vineyard, wee will seye the vine bee sprong furthe, if the grapes bee growen, and if the Pome granates be flotte oute. There will I geue the my breastes. The Mandragoras geue their swete smell, and beside our dores, are all maner of pleasaunt fruytes, both newe and olde whiche I haue kept for the, O my beloued.

¶ The. viij. Chapiter.

O That I myghte fynde the without, and kysse thee, whome I loue as my brother whyche sowkt my mothers breastes: and that thou shalt not bee despised, I will leade thee and bryngе thee into my mothers house that thou mightest teache me, and that I might geue thee drincke of spyced wyne, and of the swete iuyce of my pome granates. His lefte hande shalbe vnder my hedde, and hys ryghte hande shal embrace me. I charge you, O ye daughters of Ierusalem that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her til he be content her selfe. What is he thys, that commeth vp fro the wilderneis: and leaneth vpon her loue? I awaked the vppe among the Apple Trees: where thy mother conceyued thee, where thy mother (I saye) brought the into the worlde.
O set me as a seale vpon thine hart, and as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is as mygty as the death, and ielousy as the Hell. Her coales are of fyre, and a verye flambe of the Lorde: so that many waters are not able too quenche loue, neythee may the streames drowne it. yea if a man wold geue all the good of hys house for loue, he wold cleane nothing. Our syster is but yonge, and hath no brestes, what shall we do for our Syster, when she shalbe spoken for? If she be a wal, we shal buylde a syluer bulwarck therupon: If she be an open dore, we shal fasten her with bordes of Cedre tre. I am a wal, & my brestes like towres, thē was I as one that hath founde fauour in hys eyes. Salomon hathe a vineyarde at Baali Hamon, and this vineyarde deliuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the fruicte therof, should geue him a .M. peces of syluer. My vineyarde is in my syght: thou O Salomon must haue a thousande, and the kepers .ii. hundreth with the fruicte. Thou that dwellest in the gardeines, O let mee heare thy voyce, that my companions may harken to the same. O get the away, my lone, and be as a Roo, or a yong harte vpon the sweete smelling mountaynes.

The vision of Esaye the sonne of Amos, whiche he saw vpon Juda and Jerusalem: in the dayes of Uzia, and Joathan. Ahaz, and Jehezekiah kynges of Juda. Heare O heauen, and harken O earth. For the lord hath spoken, I haue norysshed & broughte vp children, but thei haue wone wickednes against me. The Oxe hathe knowen hys owner, and the Asse his masters cribbe: but Israel hath receaued no knowelege, my people hathe no vnderstanding. Alas for thys sinfull nacion, a people of greate iniquite: a frowarde generacion vnnaturall children. They haue forsaken the lorde thei haue prouoked the holye one of Israell vnto anger, and are gone backewarde. Whereby shold ye be plaged any more? For ye are euer falling away. The whole hedde is sicke and the harte is heauy. From the sole of the fote vnto the heade, there is no whole parte in all your body, but al are wounds, botches, sores & stripes which cā neuer be helped, bound vp mollified, nor eased with any ointment. Your landis lyeth waste, your cities are brent vp, your enemies deuoure your land, & ye must be faine to stand & loke vpon it, & it is desolate, as it were with enemies in a battaile. Moreouer, the daughter of Sion is left alone like a cotage in a vineyard, like a lodge in a gardeine of cucumbres, like a besieged citie, & except the lord of hostes, had left vnto vs a litle, we shold haue bene as Sodoma, & like vnto Gomorre. Heare the worde of the lorde ye lordes of Sodoma: and harken vnto the law of oure God, thou people of Gomorre. Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am full of the offringes of wethers, & of the fatnes of fed beastes. I haue no pleasure in the blonde of bullockes, lambes, & goates. Whē ye appeare before me, who requireth you to treade with in my porches? Offre me no mo oblacions, for it is but lost labour. Encense is an abhominable thing vnto me. I may not away with your new monethes, your Sabothes & solempne dayes. Your fastinges are also in vayne. I hate your new holy dayes and fastinges, euen fro my very hart. Thei make me weery, I cānot abide them. When you hold out your handes, I wil turne mine eies from you. And though ye make many prayers, yet wil I heare nothing at al, seing your handes are ful of blond, wash you, make you cleane, putte awaye youre euell thoughtes out of my sight, cease from wyng of euell. Learne to do right, aply your selues to equitie, deliuer the oppressed, help the fatherlesse to his right, let the wimmes complaint come before you. Now go to saith the lord, let vs talke together. Though your sinnes be as red as scarlet, they shalbe as white as snow. And though they were like purple, they shalbe as white as wol. Yf ye be louing & obedient ye shal enioye the beste thing that groweth in the land. But if ye be obstinate & rebellious, ye shalbe deuoured with the swerd for thus the Lorde hathe promised with his own mouth. How happeneth it thē, that the righteous citie (whiche was ful of equitie) is become vnfaithful as an whore? righteousnes dwelte in it but now mutherers. Thy siluer is turned to drosse, & thy wine myxt with watre. Thy Princes are wicked & companions of theues. They loue giftes altogether, and gape for rewardes. As for the fatherles thei help him not to his right, neyther will they let the widowes causes come before them. Therfore sayth the Lord God of hostes, the mighty one of Israel: Ah, I must ease me of mine enemies, and auenge me of myne aduersaries. I shal lay my hande vpon the, & burne out thy drosse from the sinne & purelie, & put out al thy tinne, and set thy iudges again as they were sometime and thy Senatours as they were from the beginning. Then shalte thou be called the righteous citie, the faithful citie. Sion shalbe redemed with equitie, and they that turne again vnto her in righteousnes. For the transgressours & vngodly & such as are becom vnfaithful vnto the lord must altogether bee vtterly destroyed, & except ye be ashamed of the okes trees wherin ye haue so delited, and of the gardeines that ye haue chosen, ye shalbe as an Oke whose leaues are fallen away: and as a garde that hath no moisture. As for the glorie of these thinges it shalbe turned into dry strawe and hee that made them into a sparke. And they shall bothe burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quenche them.

Vnnatong

THis is the worde that was opened vnto Esay the sonne of Amoz, vpon Juda & Jerusalem. Je withe also in the last day, that the hill, where the house of the Lorde is buylded shalbe chief among hilles, and exalted aboue all litle hilles. And al nations shal preache vnto him, and the multitude of peoples shal go speaking thus one to another: vp let vs go to the hill of the lorde and to the house of the god of Jacob: that hee may shewe vs his waie, and that wee may walke in his pathes. For the law shal come out of Sion, and the worde of the Lorde from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence among the heathen, and shall reproue me the multitude of people: their shal breake their swerdes also into mattockes, and their speares to make sithes. And one people shal not lift a weapon against another, neyther shal they learne to fight from thence furth. Come yet (O house of Jacob) let vs walke in the light of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob because they go farre beyonde their fathers in sorceries (whom they haue as the philistines had) and in straunge children, their thinke themselues to haue enoughe. Their lande is ful of siluer and golde, neyther is there any ende of theire threasure. Their lande is also full of horses, and no ende is there of their charretes. Their lande also is full of vaine goddes, and before the worke of their owne handes haue they bowed them selues, yea, euen before the thinge that their owne fingers haue made. There kneleth the man, there falleth the man doune before them so that thou canste not bring him awaye from thence. And therfore get the into some rock, & hide the in the ground, for feare of the lord & for the glory of his maiesty. Whiche casteth downe the high lokes of the presumpteous personnes, and bringeth lowe the pride of man, and the Lorde onely shalbe exalted in that day. For the day of the lorde of hostes shal go ouer all prine & presumption vpon all the that exalt theselues, & shal bring them al munne: vpō al the high & stout cedre trees of Libanus, & vpon all the okes of Basa, vpō al high hilles, and vpon al stout mountaines, vpon al costly toures, & vpon al strong walles, vpon al shipes of the sea, & vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasaunte to looke vpon. And it shall brynge doune the pride of manne and lay mannes presumpteousnes full lowe and the Lord shal only haue the byctorie in that day. But the Idolles shall vtterly bee rooted oute. Menne shall criepe into holes of stone, and into caues of the yearth, for feare of the Lorde, and for the glorye of his Maiestye, what time as hee shall awake him vp to condempne the yearth. Then shall man caste awaye his Goddes of syluer, and his Goddes of golde (the which they haue made, to honour them) vnto moules & batts. And they shal criepe into the caues and rockes, and into the clifftes of harde stones, for feare of god, and for the glory of his maiesty when he ariseth to condempne the earth. Feare not yet then any man, whose breathe is in his nosthrilles. For what is he of reputacion?

FOr lo the lorde god of hostes doth take away from Jerusalem and Juda al possessions and power, all meate and drynche, the capitayne, and the souldier, the iudge, and the prophete, the wise & the aged man, the prince of fifty yeare olde, & the honorable: the Senatours and men of diuers landing: the maysters of crafftes and orators. And I shal geue them children to be their princes, and babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shal be pilled, and polled, and one shal euer be doing violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume against the elder, and the vile persone against the honourable. Yea, one shall take a kreede of his owne kiared by the bosome, and say: thou hast clothing thou shalt be our heed, for thou maiest kepe vs from this fal and perill. Then shal hee sweare and saye: I cannot helpe you, Moreouer there is neyther meate nor clothyng in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem, and Juda must decay, because that both their wordes and counsailes are against the Lord, to prouoke the presence of his maiesty vnto anger. The chaunging of their countenance bewraieth them, yea they declare their owne synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Wo be vnto their soules, for they haue rewarded euel vnto themselues, bid the righteous do wel, for they shal enioye the fruictes of their labores. But wo be to the vngodly and vnrighteous, for they shall bee rewarded after their workes. Children are extorcioners of my people, and women haue rule of them. O my people, the leaders deceiue the, and deprawe the wape of thy fote steppes. The lord is here to common of the matter, and standeth to geue iudgement of the people: The lord shal come furth to reach with the Senatours and princes of hys people. Ye is ye that haue burnte vp my vyneyarde, thoppressio of the poore is in your houses. Wherfore doye oppresse my people, & mar the faces of the poore (saith the lord, god of Hostes) Moreouer, thus saieth the Lorde (cause the Daughters of Syon are become to proude, and come in with kreatched oute neckes and with vayne wantonne eyes: synge they come in tripping to allcure with theyr feete. Therefore shall the Lorde make the headdes of the Daughters of Syon, and shal discouer their shame. In that day shal the lorde take away the gorgeousnesse of their apparel and chaynes, partelets, and collers, bracelettes, and bones, the goodly bounced, wyde and browded raiment, brooches, and headbandes, tinges and garlandes, holy day clothes and veiles, kercheles and pynnes, glasses and cypresses, lonets and taches. And in stead of good smel, there shalbe stinke among them. and for their girdles there shal be loose bandes. And for well set heare there shalbe baldnes. In stede of a stomacher, a sackecloth, and for their bewty witherednes and sonne burnyng. Your houshandes and mighty men shall perish with the swearde in battaile. At that tyme shal their gates mourne and complaine, and thei shall sit as desolate folke vpon the yearth.

Esaye.ij. FOr then shal seuen wyues take holde of one man: and say, we will laye al our meat and clothyng together in commen: onely that we may be called thy wyues, and that thy shame ful reproche maie be taken from vs. After that tyme shal the braunche of the Lorde be bewtiful and mighty, and the frute of the yearth shalbe faire and pleasaunt for those Israelites that shal escape therof. Then shall the remnaunte in Syon, and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: Namely all suche as are written among the lyuyng at Jerusalem:

D. What tyme the Lorde shall wesshe awaye the filthynesse of the daughters of Syon, & purge the bloude out frō Jerusalem with the wynde of his iudgement, & with fyre. Moreouer, vpon all the dwellynges of the hille of Syon and vpon their whole congregation, shal the Lorde prouide a cloude and smoke by day, and the shynyng of a flambyng fyre by nyghte for all their glory shalbe preserued. And Jerusalem shalbee a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of heate in the day tyme: a place and refuge where a man may kepe hym from wether and raine.

The.xxx.day Mattyns. ij. NOwe will I synge my beloued frendes a songe of my frendes, because of his vineyarde. My beloued frend hath a vineyarde in a very fruteful plenteous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde about, and planted it with goodly grapes. In the middest of it builte he a towre, and made a wynepresse therin: And afterward, when he loked that it should bryng hym grapes: it brought forth thornes. Now therfore O ye citezens of Jerusalem and whole Juda: Judge I pray you betwixt me, and my vineyarde. What more couldst haue been doen, for it that I haue not doen? Wherefore then hath it geuen thornes: where I loked to haue had grapes of vite. Wel now I wil tell you howe I will doo with my vineyarde. I will take the hedge from it, that it may perishe, and breake downe the wall, that it may be troden vnder fote. I will lay it waste, that it shal neither be digged nor cut, but beare thornes & briares. I will also forbidde the cloudes that they shall not raine vpon it. For the vineyarde of the Lorde of hostes: it is the house of Israel, and whole Juda is faire plantyng. Of these he loked for equitie, but see there is wrong: for righteousnes. Loo, it is but mysery. Woo vnto them that ioyne one C. house to another, and bryng one lande so nyghe vnto another, that the poore can get no more grounde, and that ye may dwell vpon the yearth alone. These thynges are in the eares of the Lorde of hostes. Shal not many greater, and more gorgeous houses bee so wast, that no man shal dwell in them? And ten aketes of vynes shall geue but a quarte, and thy thy bushels of seade shal geue but an Epha. Woo be vnto them, that ryse vpearely to folowe dronckennes and to them that continue so vntil nighte, and til thei be set on fyre with wyne. In those companies are harpes and lutes, tabrettes and pypes, and wyne.

But thei regarde not the worke of the lord D. and considre not the operation of his handes. Therefore commeth my folke also into captiuitie, because thei haue no vnderstandyng. Their glorie is famished with hunger, and their pride is marred for thirste. Therfore gapeth hel, and openeth her mouth marueilous wyde: that their pryde, boostyng and welth, with such as reioyse therin, may descende into it. Thus hath man a fall, and is broughte lowe, and the highe looke of the proude shalbe laied downe. But the Lorde of hoastes shalbe exalted in iudgement, & God that is holie, is praised in righteousnesse: Then shal the shepe eat in ordre, and the riche mens fieldes that wer laied waste, shal straungers deuoure. Woo be vnto them, that drawe wickednesse vnto them with cordes of vanitie and synne, as it ware with a cart rope.

Whiche vse to speake on this maner: let E. hym make hast nowe, and go forth with his worke, that we maie se it. Let the counsell of the holy one of Israel come, and drawe nye, that we maie knowe it. Woo be vnto them that cal euel good, and good euel, which make darkenesse light, and light darkenesse, that make sowre swete, and swete sowre. Woo be vnto them that are wyse in their owne sight, and thynke them selues to haue vnderstandyng. Woo be vnto them that are strōg to suppe out wyne, and expert men to set vp dronckennes. These geue sentences with the vngodly for rewardes, but condempne the inste cause of the righteous. Therefore lyke as fyre lyeketh vp the straw & as the flambe consumeth the stubble: Euen to their roote shalbee as corruption: and their blossome shal vanish awaie lyke dust. For thei haue cast awaie the lawe of the Lorde of hoostes, and blaspheme the worde of the holy maner of Israell.

F. Therfore is the wrath of the Lord kyndled also against his people, & he hath his hande at them: yea, he hath smitten so that the hilles did tremble. And their karcases did lye in the open stretes, lyke mire. And in all this the wrath of God hath not ceassed, but his hand is stretched out still. And he shal geue a token vnto a straung people: and cal vnto them in a farre countre: and behold, they shal come hastely with spede. There shal not be one faynte nor feeble among theim, no not a slomgshe nor slepy persoone. There shall not one of theim put of the gyrdle from his loynes, nor lowse the latchet of his shoe. his arowes are sharpe, and al his bowes bent. His hoofe hoowes are lyke flynt. & his carte wheles lyke a stormy wynde. His crye is as it were of a Lyon, and he roareth lyke Lyons whelpes. They shall roare, and snatche vp the praie, and noman shal recouer it, or gette it from them. In that day they shalbe so fearce vpon them, as the Sea. And if we looke vnto the land, behold, it shalbe al darkeneſſe and sorowe. Yea we take towarde heauen, beholde, it shalbe darcke.

Quenfang. a. In the same yeare that kyng Vziah died I sawe the Lorde sitting vpon an hyghe, and glorious seate, and his traine filled the temple. And about hym stode Seraphins, whereof euery one had sixe wynges. With twaine eche couered his face, with twaine his fete, and with twaine did he flye. They cried also eche one to an other on this maner: holy, holy, holy is the Lorde of hostes. The whole worlde is ful of his glorie. Yea, the inyelles, and doores chekes moued at his crying, & the house was ful of smoke. Then I said, O wo is me, For I am lost: in as muche as I am a man of vncleane lippes B. and dwell among people that haue vncleane lippes also: for mine eyes haue sene the king and Lord of hostes. Then flewe one of the Seraphins vnto me hauyng a coole in his hande, which he hath taken from the aulter with the tongues and touched my mouth: and said, lo: this hath touched thy lippes, & thyne vnrighteouſneſſe is taken away, and thy synne forgeuen. Also I heard the voice of the Lorde, saying on this maner: Whome shal I sende, and who wil be our messengere? Then I said: here am I: sende me. And he C. said, go, and tel this people: Ye shall heare in deede, but ye shal not vnderstande: ye shall plainly se and not perceiue. Harden the hart of this people, stoppe their eares, and shut their eyes, that they se not with their eyes, heare not with their eares, & vnderstande not with their harte, & conuerte: and be healed. Then spake I: Lord, how long? He answeredde vntil the cities bee vtterly wasted without inhabitours, and the houses without men, til the land be also desolate, and lie vnbuilded. For the Lord shal take the men farre away, so that the lande shal lye waste a longe season: yet in it shal succeue ten kynges, & the lande shal retourne and bee laied waste. And as the Terebint tree and oke, in winter caste their leaues, & yet haue their stappe in them: so shal the holy seede continue in their substaunce.

It happened in the time of Ahaz the sonne of Iotham, whiche was the sonne of Vzias kyng of Iuda: that Razin the kyng of Syria, and Pechah the sonne of Romelias kyng of Israel, went vp toward Ierusalem to besege it, but Razin was not able to wynne it. Nowe when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) hearde woorde thereof, that Syria and Ephraim were confederate together his harte quaked (yea and the hartes also of his people) lyke as when a tree in the felde is moued with the wynde. Then said God vnto Esay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Iasub) at the heade of the ouerpole, in the foote path by the fullers grounde, and say vnto hym, take hede to thy selfe and be still, but feare not, neither be faint harted, for these .ij. tailes: that is for these .ij. smokyng firebrandes the wrath and furiousnes of Razin the Syrian, and Romelies sonne because that the kyng of Syria Ephraim, & Romelyes sonne haue wickedly conspired against the, saiyng: Wee will goo vp against Iuda, vexe them, and brynge them vnder vs, & set a kyng there, euen the sonne of Tabeel.

For thus saieth the Lorde God thereto: It B. shal not go forth, neither to come to passe, for the heade Citie of the Syrians is Damascus, but the heade of Damascus is Razyn. And after fiue & three score yeare, shal Ephraim be nomore a people. and the chief citie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. Ye ye beleue not, it commeth of this: that ye are vnfaithfull to god. Moreouer, god spake once again vnto Ahaz, saiyng, requyre a token of the Lord thy God, whether it be towarde the depth beneth or towarde the heigth above. Then saied Ahaz: I wil require none, neither will I tempte the Lord. The Lord answered: then heareke C. to, ye of the house of Dauid: is it not enough for you that ye bee greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therefore the Lorde shal geue you a token: Beholde, a virgin shal conceiue and beare a sonne, & (thou his mother) shalte call his name Emanuel. Butter, and hony shall he eate, that he may knowe to refuse the euel, & chose the good. For ere euer the child come to knowlege to refuse the euel, and chose the good, the lande (that thou so abhorrest) shalbee desolate of both her kynges. The Lorde also shall set a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed from Iuda) thorowe the kyng of the Assyrians. For at the same tyme shal the Lord whistle for the flies that are aboute the water of Egypte, and for the Birs in the Assyrians lande. These shal come and shal light al in the desolate valleis in the holes of stones: vpon all thorny and

D. bushy places. And the same tyme: shall the Lord shaue the heare of the head, and the fete and the beard cleane of, with the rasure that he shall hire beyonde the water: namely, with the kyng of the Assyrians. At the same tyme shal a man kepe with a coowe and two sheepe. Then because of the aboundaunce of milke, he shal make butter & eate it. So that euery one whiche remaineth in the land, shal eate butter and hony. At the same tyme al vineyardes (though there be a thousand vines in one and ware solde for a thousande syluer kynges) shalbee turned to briars and thornes. Lyke as thei shall come into the lande with arowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become briars and thornes. And as for all hilles that are hewen downe, there shall not come vpō them any feare of briars and thornes. But the cattel shalbe driuen thether, and the sheepe shal fede there.

Painting. M. Moreouer, the Lorde said vnto me: Take the a great lefe, and write in it, as men do with a penne, make hast spede to robbe, and haste to the spoile. And I called vnto me faithfull witnesse to record. Uriah the Priest, and Zacharias the sonne of Barechiah. After that went I vnto the Prophetisse, that had conceiued and borne a sonne. Then said the Lorde to me: Cause him this name: a spedie robber: an hasty spoiler. For why, or euer the childe shall haue knowledge to crye father, and mother: shall the riches of Damascus, and the substaunce of Samaria be taken away by the spoiler, before the
M. kyng of the Assyrians. ¶ The Lorde spake also vnto me, saying: for so much as this people refuseth the stil renning water of Syloe, & putteth their delyte in Razyn & Romelies sonne: Beholde, the Lorde shal bring mighty and greate floudes of water vpon them: namely, the kyng of the Assyrians with all his power: Whiche shall clymbe vp vpon all his floudes, and renne ouer all their bankes. And shall breake in vpon Iuda, flowyng and encreasyng in power, till he gette hym by the necke. He shall fill also the wydenes of thy lande with his broade wynges. O Emanuell. Breake downe (O ye people of Assur) and ye shalbe broken downe, herken to al ye of farre countries. Muster you, and ye shalbe broken downe, prepare you to battel, and you shal be ouer in peces: take your counsel together, yet must your counsell come to naught, go in hand withal, yet shal it not prosper: for God is with vs. For the Lorde spake thus to me in the powre of his hande and warned me, saying vnto me: that I shoulde not walke in the way of this people. He said moreouer, D. rounde with none of them whosoeuer saie, yōder people are bound together: feare them not, neither be afraied of them, but sanctifie the Lorde of hostes, let hym bee your feare & dread. For he shalbe the holy place to flye to and stone to stomble at, the rocke to fal vpon a snare and net to both the houses of Israel, and the enhabitours of Ierusalem. And many shal stomble, fal, and be broken vpon hym: yea, thei shalbe snared and taken. Now laye the witnesse together, & seale the lawe with my disciples. ¶ Thus will I waite vpon the Lord that hath turned his face frō the house of Iacob, and I will loke for him. But lo, as for me: and the children which the Lorde hath geuen me: wee are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lord of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hil of Sion. And ye thei say vnto you: aske counsell at the Soothsayers, Witches, charmers, & coniurers, then make them this answere. Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsel at his God?
Luk. xvij. a. * Shoulde men runne vnto the deade for the liuyng? Yf any man want light, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testimonie, whether thei speake not after this meanyng. If he do not this, he stumbleth and suffreth hunger. And if he suffre hunger he is out of patience, and blaspheme th his kyng and his God. Then loketh he vpwarde and downeward to the yearth, and beholde: there is trouble and darkenes, vexacion is rounde aboute hym, and the cloute of errour. And out of such aduersitie shall he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme paste: it hath been well seene, that the lande of Zebulon, and the lande of Nephtali (where thorowe the Sea waye goeth ouer Iordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the firste in litle trouble: but afterwarde sore vexed.

The people that walke in darkenes, The.v. daie that dwel in the land of the shadowe of death, vpon them hath the light shyned. Thou hast multiplied the people, and not enriched their ioye. * Thei reioyce before the, Psal. xxix. e. euen as menne make merye in harueste, and as menne that haue gotten the victorie, when thei deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of the people burthen: the staffe of his shoulder, and the rodde of his oppressioure, as in the daye of Madian. Isaie.

For truely euery battaile that the warriour accomplisheth, is done with confused noyse, and defyle their garmentes with bloude.

B. But this batail shalbe with burnyng and consumyng of fyre. For vnto vs a childe is borne, & vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Vpon his shoulder doeth the kyngdome lye, and he is called with his owne name woonderful. The geuer of counsel, the mighty God, the euerlastyng father, the Prynce of peace, he shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shall sit vpon the seate of Dauid, and in his kyngdome, to sette vp the same, and to stablishe it with equitie and righteousnes, frō hence forth euermore. This shall the zelousy of the Lorde of Hoastes bryng to passe. The Lorde sent a word into Iacob, the same is come into Israell. And all the people of Ephraim shall know, and they that C. dwel in Samaria, that can saye with prydē & pryde the stomakes, on this maner. The tyle woorke is fallen downe, but wee wil builde it with squared stoones. The mozebery tymber is broke, but we shal sette it vp againe with cedre. Neuertheles, the Lorde shall prepare Rezyn the enemy against them, and so ozdre their aduersaries, that the Syrians shal lay holde vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israell with open mouth. After all this is not the wrath of the Lorde ceased, but yet is his hande stretched out still. For the people turneth not vnto hym that chastiseth them, neither do they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therefore hath the Lorde rooted out of Israel both head & taile, braunche and twygge in one day. By the heade is vnderstande the Senatoure, and honourable man, and by the taile the Prophet that preacheth lyes: For all they which enfourme the people: that they be in a right case, suche be disceiuers. Suche as men thynke also to be perfect among these, are but caste awayes.

D. Therefore shalthe Lorde haue no pleasure in their young men, neither fauour their fatherlesse and widowes. For they are all together ypocrites and wicked, and all their mouthes speak folly. After al this, is not the Lordes wrath ceassed: but yet his hande is stretched out still. For vngodlynes burneth, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it wer out of a fyre in a woode roza riede bush, so ascendeth the smooke of their pryde. For by cause of the wrath of the Lorde of Hoastes, is the lande full of darkenesse, and the people be consumed, as it ware with fyre, no man doeth spare his brother, but he robbeth on the right hande: and doeth famishe, he eateth on the left hande, and he shal not haue enough. Euery man shal eate the fleshe of his owne arme. Manasses shall eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they both shall eate Iuda. After all this is not the Lordes wrath ceassed, but yet is his hande stretched out still.

As who saieth: I wer able to wynne the kyngdome of the adolaters, and their goddes: but not Ierusalem and Samaria. My hande hath founde out the strength of the people, as it ware a nest. And lyke as egges that ware layed here & there, are gathered togither: so do I gather al countries. And there is noman that dare be so bolde, as to touche a fether, that dare open his mouthe or once whisper. Shal the axe bosste it self D. against him that heweth therwith? or doeth the sawe make any braggyng against hym that ruleth it? That wer euen lyke, as if the rod did exalte it selfe against hym that beareth it? or as though the staffe shoulde magnifie it self, as who saieth: it wer no wood. Therefore shall the Lorde of Hoastes sende him among his fat lyuynges, leanesse, and burne vp his glory, as it were with a fyre. But the light of Israel shalbe that fyre, and his sanctuary shalbe the flambe, and it shall kyndle & burne vp his thornes and breers in one daye yea, all the glory of his woodes and feldes shalbe consumed with body and soule: And thei shalbe as an hoste of men, whose standerd bearer faileth. The trees also of his felde, which remaine, shalbe of such a nombre, that a child may tel them. After that day shall the remnaunt of Israel and suche as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke nomore comfort at hym that smote them, but with faithfulnesse and trueth shall thei truste vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. The remnaunt euen the posteritie of Jacob shall conuerte vnto God the mighty one. For though thy people (O Israel) be as the sande of the sea, yet shal the remnaunt of them conuert in him. Perfect is the iudgement of him that floweth in righteousnesse, and therfore the Lorde of hostes shal perfectly fulfil the thyng that he hath determined in the middest of the whole worlde. Therfore, thus sayth the Lord God of hostes: Thou my people, that dwellest in Syon, be not afraied for the kyng of the Assyrians: He shal smite the with a rod, & shall wagge his staffe at the, as the Egiptians did some time: But soone after shall my wrath and myne indignation be fulfilled in the destruction of them. Moreouer, the Lorde of hostes shal prepare a scourge for him, lyke as was the slaughter of Madian vpon the rocke of Oreb. And he shal lift vp his rod ouer the Sea, as he did sometime ouer the Egyptians. Then shall his burthen be taken from thy shoulders, and his yoke from thy necke: yea, the same yoke shalbe corrupt for very fatnesse. He shall come to Aiah, and goo thorow towarde Migron: at Michmas shal he lay vp his harnesse, & go ouer the foorde. Gibea shalbe their resting place: Ramath shalbe afraied: Gibea Saule shal flye away. The voice of the noyse of thy hostes (O daughter Gallim) shalbe heard vnto Lays, and to Anathoth, whiche also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shal tremble for feare, but the Citezyns of Gabim are manly, yet shal he remaine at Nob that daye. After that shall he lift vp his hande against the mounte of the daughter Syon, the hil of Jerusalem. But lo the Lorde God of hostes shall take away the proude from thence with feare. He shal pewe downe the proude, & fel the hye mynded. The bushes also of the wood shall he roote out with yron, & Libanus shal haue a mighty fal.

AND there shall come a rod forth of the stocke of Jesse, and a blossom shal growe out of his rote. The spirite of the Lord shal light vpon him: the spirite of wisdom and vnderstanding, the spirite of counsell and strength, the spirite of knowlege, and of the feare of the Lorde: and shal make hym perfite in the feare of god. For he shal not geue sentence, after the thyng that shalbe brought before his eyes, neither reproue a matter at the firste hearyng, but with righteousnesse shal he iudge the poore, and with holynesse shall he reproue me the simple of the worlde. He shall smyte the worlde with the rodde of his mouth, and with the breath of his mouth shall he slae the vngodly. Righteousnesse shalbee the girdle of his loynes: truth and faithfulnesse, the gyrdyng vp of his reines. The woulfe shall dwel with the lambe: & the Leoparde shal lye downe by the goate. Bullockes, Lions, and Catel shal kepe company together, so that a litle child shall rule them. The cowe and the beare shal fede together, and their young ones shal lye together. The Lyon shal eat straw like the oxe or the cowe. The childe whyle the sucketh, shall haue a delyte to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande into the cocatrice denne. No man shall do euel vnto an other, no man shal destroy another, in all the hyll of my holynesse. For the yearth shalbe full of the knowlege of the Lorde, euen as the Sea floweth ouer with water. And in that day shall the Gentiles enquire after the roote of Jesse, which shalbe set vp for a token vnto the people, and his dwellyng shalbe glorious. At the same tyme shal the Lorde take in hande again, to conquere the remnaut of his people (which shalbe left alyue) from the Assyrians, Egiptians, Arabians, Mozians, Elamites, Caldees, Antiochians: and from the Ilandes of the Sea. And he shal set vp a token among the Gentiles, and gather together the dispersed of Israel: yea, and the outcastes of Juda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also and enemies of Juda shalbe cleane rooted out. Ephraim shal beare none euil wil to Juda, and Juda shall not hate Ephraim: but thei both together shall flye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines toward the West, and spoile the together that dwel towarde the East. The Idumites and the Moabites shall let their handes fall, and the Ammonites shalbe obedient vnto them. The Lorde also shall cleane the tongues of the Egyptians Sea, and with a mightie winde shal he lift vp his hande ouer Eufrates, & shal smite his seuen streames, and make men go ouer drie shodde. And thus shall there be a waye for his people that remaineth from the Assyrians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites what tyme thei departed out of the lande of Egypte.

Therefore with ioye shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the sauiour, and then shall ye saye: Geue thankes vnto the Lorde, call vpon his name, declare his counsailes among the people, kepe them in remembraunce, for his name is excellent. Syng praises vnto the Lord, for he hath doen greate thynges, as it is knowen in al the worlde. The.xiij.day Mattyn. A. THis is the heauy burthen of Babylon, which Esay the sonne of Amos did see. Lifte vp the baner vpon the hye hil, cal vnto them, holde vp your hande, that the princes may goo in at the doore. I haue sent for my deputies and my graunters (saith the Lorde) which shal execute wrath: I wil cal for such as triumphe in my glory. There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaines, lyke as of a greate people, rushynge as though the kyngdomes of the nacions came together. (And the Lorde of hostes musthereth his armie to battaile.) They come out of a farre country, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lorde himselfe with the ministers of his wrath, to destroy the whole land. Mourne ye for the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and B. shal come as a destroyer from the almighty. Therefore shal al handes be letten down and al mens hartes shal melt away, they shal stand in feare, carefulnesse and sorow shal come vpon them, and they shall haue paine, as a woman that trauaileth with child. One shalbe abashed of another, and their faces shal burne lyke the flambe of fyre. Behold, the day of the Lorde shal come terribly, and ful of indignacion, furoure, and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to root out the synners therof. For the starres and planetes of heauen shall not geue their lighte, the Sunne shalbee darkened in the rysyng, and the Moone shall not shyne with his light. And I will punishe the wickednesse of the worlde, and the synnes of C. the vngodly, saith the Lorde. The hye stomackes of the proude will I take away, and wil laie downe the boastyng of tyraunes. I wil make a man dearer then fyne golde, and a man to bee more worth then a golden wedge of Ophir. Therfore I wil shake the heauen, and the yearth shal remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lorde of hostes, and in the day of his fearful indignacion. And Babilon shalbe as an hunted or chased doe, and as a sheepe that noman taketh vp. Euery man shall turne to his owne people, and flye eche one into his owne lande. Whoso is founde alone, shalbe shot thorow. And whoso gather together shalbe destroyed with the swearde. Their children shalbe slaine before their eyes, their houses spoiled, & their wyues rauished. For loo, I wal stirre vp the Medes against them, which shal not regarde siluer, nor be desyrous of golde. With bowes shall they destroy the young children, and haue no pitye vpon women with childe, and their eyes shal not spare the children. And Babilon (the glory of kyngdomes and beautie of the Caldees honoure) shalbe destroyed euen as God destroyed * Sodom and Gomor. It shal not endure for euer, neither shal there be any more dwellyng there, from generacion to generacion. The Arabians shal pitche no tentes there, neither shall the shepeherdes make their folde there any more: but fearful wilde beastes shal lye there, & the houses shalbe full of greate owles. Ostriches shall dwel there, and apes shal daunce there, wilde cattes shal crye in the palaces, and dragons shalbe in the pleasaunte houses. And as for Babilons tyme it is at hande, and her dayes shal not be prolonged.

BVT the Lorde wilbe merciful vnto Iacob, and wil yet chose Israel againe, and set them in their owne land. Straungers shall cleaue vnto them, and get them to the house of Iacob. The people shall take them and carie them home to their owne lande. And make them to enherite the house of Israell in the lande of the Lord, that they may be seruauntes and handemaidens of the Lord. They shal take those prysoners, whose captiues they had been afore, and rule those that hadde oppressed them. When the Lord now shal bring the to rest from thy trauaile, feare, and harde bondage, that thou wart laden withall: then shalt thou vse this mockage vpon the kyng of Babilon, and say: Howe happeneth it that the oppressour leaueth of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? The Lorde hath broken the sceptre of the vngodly, and the rod of the lordly. Whiche when he is wroth smiteth the people with continuall stroke, and tyrannously reigneth ouer the Heathen, whom he persecuted without compassion. And therefore the whole worlde is nowe at rest, and quietnesse: and men synge for ioye.

Ar of Moab was destroyed, and ouerthrowen in the night season. Kyr also in Moab was destroied, & perished in the night. Thei went vppe to the ydols house euen to Dibon, to the hye places to wepe for Nebo and Moab did mourne for Medba: All their heades ware balde, and all their berdes shauen. In their stretes are thei girded about B. with sackcloth. In all the toppes of their houses and stretes shalbe nothyng but mournyng and weppyng. Hesebon and Eleale shall cry, that their voice shalbee heard vnto Jahaz. The worthies also of Moab shal bleate out, and crye for very sorow of their minde: Wo shal my harte be for Moabs sake. Thei shal flye vnto the Citie of Zoar which is lyke a faire young bullock of three yere old, for thei shall all go vnto Luith weppyng. Euen so by the waye towarde Horonaym thei shall C. make lamentacion together bitter destruction For the waters of Nymrym shalbe dryed vp, by reason whereof the grasse is withered, the herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the residue that he hath doen thei are sory. As for their substaunce, the enemies haue caried them to the brooke of the willowes. For the crye went euer the whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim and vnto Ber Elim, was there nothyng but mournyng, because the waters of Dymon wer full of bloude, for I the Lorde shall sende more bloude vpon Dimon, and Lyons vpon the remnaunte of the lande, and on them that are escaped from Moab.

SEnde the Lorde of the worlde a lambe from the rocke that lyeth towarde the desert, vnto the hill of the daughter Syon. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shalbe as a trembling byrde that is put out of harueste, for thei shal cary the vnto Arnon: gather your counsail, come together in iudgement, couer vs with your shadowe in the midday, as the night doeth hyde the chased, and bewray not them that are fled, lette my persecuted people dwell among you, Moab, be thou their refuge against the destroyer: for the aduersary is brought to nought, the robber is vndone, the tyraunt is wasted out of B. the land. And in mercy shall the seat be prepared, & he shal sit vpon it in the truth in the tabernacle of Dauid, iudgyng & seekyng iudgement, & makyng hast vnto righteousnesse.

We haue heard of the pride of Moab, he is very proude, presumpteous, arrogant, & full of indignacion, & vaine are his lyes. Therefore shal Moab make lamentacion because of the Moabites (that shalbe slaine) yea, they
C. shal waile altogether. Because of the foundacions of the Citie that is made of bricke, shal ye cõplaine: euen ye lame people that are left onely behynde. For the vynes of Hesbon are cut downe: & for the vyne of Sibna, the Lordes of the Heathen haue broken downe her principall braunches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, they went on wandring vnto the wildernes. Her goodly braunches were throwen down as they went ouer the Sea. Therfore wil I mourne for Jazer and for the vyne of Sibna. I will powre my teares vpon the, O Hesbon and Eleale, for the crye of thyne enemies is fallen vpon thy summer frutes, and vpon thy harueste. The mirth & chere is taken away out of the plentiful felde, and in the vineyardes, there shalbe
D. no ioye nor gladnesse. The treader shall treade out no wyne in the presses, the fauge of their mery chere haue I laied downe.
Wherefore, my bowels shall romble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, & myne inwarde partes, for the cities sake that is made of brick. And it shal come to passe, that when it is seene that Moab shalbe made wery of his hil chapels, he shal come to his temple to praie, but he shal not be able. so then, this is the saiyng that the lord hath spoke concernyng Moab syns that tyme. But now the Lord hath spoken, saiyng: In thre yeres, which shalbe as the yeres of an hyred seruaunt, shal the glory of Moab be turned into confusion, thorow out al his multitude, which is very greate. And that which remaineth, shalbe very smal and feble.

In that day shall their stronge cities be as the forsaken bushes & braunches, whiche they left, because of the children of Israel: and the lande shalbe desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluacion, and hast not been myndefull of thy stronge rock: therfore shalt thou set pleasaunt plantes, and shalt graffe the braunche of another mannes vyne. In that day shalte thou make thy plant to growe & early in the morenyng shalte thou make thy seade to florisshe. And the Egipciās wil I geue ouer into the hande of a marueilous cruell lozde, and a mightie kyng shal haue dominion ouer them, sayeth the Lozde God of hoastes: the waters of the sea shal fayle and the ryuer shall decrease, and be dryed vp. The waters shalbe drawen out: the ryuers of Egypte shalbe emptied and dried vp, the riedes B. and flagges shalbe cut downe. The gresse in the ryuer and by the ryuers bancke & all that groweth by the ryuer shall wyther away, and be brought to nought. In that daye shall the aultar of the lozd be in the middes of the land of Egypt, and this tytle beside it, vnto the Lozde. And it shalbe a token and a wytnesse vnto the Lozde of hoastes in the lande of Egipte. For they shall crye vnto the lozde, because of suche as trouble them, and he shall sende them a sauiour and a greate man to deliuer them. And the lord shalbe knowen in E- D. gypt, and the Egipcians shal knowe the lord in that daie and do sacrifice & oblacion: yea, they shall bowe a bowe vnto the Lozde, and performe it. The lozde also shall smyte Egypt sore, and heale them agayne, & they shall be conuerted vnto the Lozd, and he shalbe entreated of them, and shall heale them. In that daye shal there be a comen waie out of Egipt into Assiria, and Assiria shall come into Egypt, and Egypt into Assiria, so that the Egipcians and the Assirians shall serue the Lozde together. In that dase shall the nacion of Israel be the thyrd with Egypt and Assiria, and they shalbe blessed in the myddes of the lande whyche the Lozde of hoastes hath blessed, saiyng: blessed is my people of Egipt: Assur also is the wozke of myne handes, and Israell is myne enheritaunce.

Whyle they garnyshed the table, the watcheman loked, and whyle he was eatyng and drynkyng (it was sayde) vp ye Capitaines take you to youre shylde. For thus hath the Lorde sayd vnto me, go, and set a watcheman, to tell what he seeth. And he sawe a charet whyche two horsemen sat vpon, with the cariage of an asse, and the cariage of a Camel: So he loked & toke very diligent hede. And the Lyon cried, Lorde, I stande waytyng all the hole day, and am appoynted to kepe my watche euery nyght. And behold, here cometh a charet of men, with two horsemen. And he C. answered and sayde: Babylon is fallen, it is fallen, and the ymages of her goddes hath he smytten downe vnto the grounde. Thou arte he whome I must threshe, and thou belongest to my corne floze. This that I harde of the Lorde of hoastes the God of Israell have I shewed vnto you. The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seyr. Watcheman what haste thou espied by nyght? The watcheman sayde: the mornyng cometh, and so doth the nyght. If ye wyl aske any question, then aske it, returne and come agayne. The burthen cōcernyng Arabia: In that pleasaunt grounte of Arabia shal ye tary al nyght, euen in the strates of Dedanim. The inhabitours of the lād of Thema brought vnto the water to him that was thyrsty, they preuented hym with theyr bread that was fled awaye. For because of sweardes are they become fugitiue, euen for the drawen sweard, and for the bent bowe and because of the grevousnes of warre. For thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me. There is yet a yeare accordyng to the yeares of an hyred seruaunt and all the glory of Cedar shall faile. And the nombre of them that shal escape from the bowes, shalbe punyshed by the mighty chyldren of Cedar, for so the Lorde God of Israell hath spoken.

When tydynges cometh to the Egipcians, they shalbe sory for the rumoure that goeth of Tire. Get you to Thartis, mourne ye that dwell in the Ile. Is not this that glorious Citie of yours, whiche hath bene of olde antiquitie? Her own feete shall carry her forth to be a sojourner in to a farre countrey. And he saith. Make nomore thy bost (O virgin thou daughter Zidon) thou shalt be brought downe. Vp, get the ouer vnto Citim: where neuertheles thou shalt haue no rest. Behold this people come not of the Caldees, but Assur made the strong with great shippes. They set vp the strong holdes thereof, and destroyed his places, and he brought it in decaye. Mourne ye shippes of Thartis, for youre strength is brought downe. And in that daie shall Tyre be forgotte seuenty yeares (accordyng to the yeares of one kyng) and after the ende of the seuenty yeares shall Tyre synge, as doth an harlot. BEholde, the Lorde maketh the yearthe wast and empty: he turneth it vpside down and scatereth abroade the inhabitours therof. And the Preest shalbe as the people, and the Maister as the Seruaunte, the maistresse lyke the mayde, the Seller lyke the Byer. He that lendeth vpon vsury, lyke hym that borroweth vpon vsury, the creditoure as the detter. The worlde shalbe cleane wasted and vtterly spoyled, for so the Lorde hath spoken. The yearth is sorye, and consumeth away, the worlde is feble and perysheth, the proude people of the yearthe are come to naughte. The yearth also is become vnprofitable vnder the enhabitours therof, whiche haue transgressed the lawes, changed the ordynaunce, broken the euerlastyng couenaunte.

And in that daye shall the lorde vysett the hoaste aboue that is on hye, and the kynges of the worlde that are vpon the yearthe. And they shalbe gathered together, as they that be in prysone: and they shalbe shut vp inwarde, and after many dayes shall they be vysyted. * The Moone shalbe abashed, and the Sunne ashamed when the Lorde of hoastes shall raygne in mounte Syon and in Jerusalē with worshyppe, and in the syght of such as shalbe of his counsaill.

among this people, euen miruelous thynges (I say) and a wonder. * For the wisdome of their wyse men shall perysshe, & the vnderstandyng of their wytty men shall hyde it selfe. Wo vnto them that hope to secrete their thoughtes, to hyde their councell from the lorde and do their workes in darkenesse, sayyng: * who seeth vs? who knoweth vs? O rudes, your destruction is (in my handes) in reputacion as the potters clay. And doth the worke say of him that made it, he made not me? And doth an earthen vessell say of him that fashioned it, he had no vnderstandyng? Is it not harde at hande, that Libanus shalbe turned into a lowe feelde, and that the lowe feelde shalbe taken as the wood? And in that daye shall deafe menne heare the wordes of the booke, and the eyes of the blynde shall se euen out of the cloude & out of darckenes. The meke spirite also shalbe mery in the Lorde, and the poore among the that be lowly, shall reioyce in the holy one of Israel. For he that did violence, is brought to naught, and the scorneful man is consumed, and they are rooted out that were hasty to saue to vnryghteousnes, makyng a man to synne in the worde, and that take him in a snare, which reproued them in the open place, and thei that haue turned the cause of the ryghteous to naught. Therfore thus saieth the lorde vnto the house of Jacob, euē thus saith he that redemed Abraham. * Jacob shal not now be confounded, nor his face pale. But whē he seeth his children the worke of my hādes in the middes of him, thei shal sanctifie my name, & praise the holy lord of Jacob, & feare the God of Israel. They also that haue bene of an erroneous spirite shall come to vnderstandyng, & they that haue bene scorneful, shall learne doctrine.

WAe, for those disobedient children (saith the Lorde) * that they will take counsayll without me. Alas, that they wil take a secret aduice, and not out of my spirite, and therfore adde they synne vnto synne. Euen they that walke to go downe into Egypt, and haue asked no question at my mouth, but take strength in the might of Pharao, and trust in the shadowe of Egipte. Therfore shall the strength of Pharao be your confusion, and the trust in the shadowe of Egypte your shame. For his capitaines were at Zoan, and his Ambassadours came vnto Hanes. * They were all ashamed of the people that could doe them no good, and that myght not helpe them, nor be vse them any profite, but were their confusion and rebuke. The heuy burthen of the beastes of the South in a lande of trouble and anguyshe, from whence shall come the young and olde Lyon, the byper and fyry serpent that flyeth against them that vpon colts beare their ryches, and vpon Camels their treasures to a people that can do them no good. For vayne and nothyng worth shall the helpe of the Egipcians be. Therefore haue I cried vnto Jerusalem. They shal haue strength enough, if thei wil ceasle their vnrodes in quietnes. * Nowe therefore, go thy waye, and write this before them in a table, and note it in a booke that it may finally remayne and be kepte styl for euer. For this is an obstinate people, * and disobeying children that refuse to heare the lawe of the lord. For they say vnto the seers: Se not, & to them that be cleare of iudgement, loke not out ryghtthynges for vs, but speake fayre wordes vnto vs, loke out errours, get you out of this waye, departe out of thys path, and turne the holye one of Israell from vs. Wherfore thus sayeth the holy one of Israel. Because youre harte ryse agaynst this worde, and because ye trusse in wrong dealyng and peruerse iudgement, and put youre confydence therein. Therfore shall ye haue thys mischiefe for youre destruction and fall, lyke as an hye wall that falleth, because of some rifte or blaste, whose breakyng cometh sodenly. * And the hurte thereof is lyke an earthen vessell, whiche breaketh without helpe: so that in the burstyng of it, there is not founde one sheerd to fetche fyre in, or to take water withall out of the pyt. For thus sayeth the Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israell. In repentaunce and in rest shall ye be saue, in quietnes and sure confidence shalbe youre strength. But ye haue had no lust thereto, for ye haue sayde: No, but we wyll escape thorowe horses. Therfore shall ye flye and we wyll gette vs vp vpon swyfte beastes. And therfore shall youre persecutours be swyfter. * A thousande shall flye at the rebuke of one, and at the rebuke of fyue shall ye all flye, tyll ye be left as a flyppe maste vpon the top of a mountaine, and as a beaken vpō an hille. Therfore doth the lord cause you to waite that he maye haue mercy vpon you, to the entent, that he may haue the preeminence, when he is gracious vnto you. For the Lorde is the God of iudgement. Blessed are all they that hope in hym. If the people remayne in Syon, and at Jerusalem, thou shalt not be in heuines, but at the voyce of thy complaynt shall he haue mercy vpon the. And when he heareth it he shall geue the an answere. And though the lord geue you the bread of trouble and the water of aduersitie, thy rayne shalbe nomore to crāt, but thine eyes shal se thy rayne. yea, & thine eare shall heare the talking of him that doth speake behynde the. * This is the waye, walke ye in it. Turne not aside neither to the ryght hand nor to the left. Ye shall destroye also the couerynge of youre grauen ymages, and the decking of your golde vessell. Euen as filthynes shall ye put them away, and thou shalt saye vnto it, Gette the peace.

And allone as the Lorde stretcheth oute hys should haue bene helped, and they shall altogether be destroyed. For thus hath the lorde spoken vnto me. * Lyke as the lyon or lions whelpe roreth vpon the praie that he hath gotten, and is not afrayed though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon him neither abashed for all the heape of them. So shall the Lorde of hoastes come down to fyght for mounte Syon, and defende his hyll. Lyke as byrdes flotre about their nestes, * so shall the Lorde of hoastes kepe, saue, defende, and de-liuer Jerusalem. Therefore, O ye children of Israel, turne agayne, from that infidelitie, wherein you drowned your selues. * For in that daye euery man shall cast out his Idols of syluer and his Idols of golde, whiche ye haue made with your owne handes vnto your synne. * Assur also shalbe slayne with the sweard, not with a mans sweard, neither shal the sweard of any man deuoure hym. And he shall flee from the slaughter, and his seruauntes shalbe tributed in their partes. Nethal go for feare to his stronge holdes, and hys princes shal flee from his badge. Thus hath the Lorde spoken, whose fyght burneth in Syon, and his fier in Jerusalem.

¶ The. xxxi. Chapiter.

BEholde, a kyng shall gouerne after the rule of rygh teousnes, & the princes shall rule, accordyng to the balaunce of equitie.
And that man shalbe vnto menne as a defence for the wynde, and as a refuge for the tempest, lyke as a ryuer of water in a thyrsty place, and the shadowe of a great rocke in a drie lande. The eyes of the seyng shall not be dym, and the eares of them that heare, shall take diligent hede. The harte of the vnwise shall attayne to knowledge, and the vnperfite

The palaces also shal be broken, and the greatly occupied cities desolate. The towres and bulwarkes shall become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of mules shalbe turned to pasture for shepe, vnto the time that the spirite be powred vpon vs from aboue. Then shall the wildernesse be a fruteful fielde, and the plenteous fielde shalbe reckened for a wood. Then shall equitie dwell in the desert, & ryghtuousnes in a fruteful lande. And the rewarde of ryghtuousnesse shalbe peace, and her frute rest in quietnes for euer. And my people shall dwell in the vnnes of peace, and in sure dwellynges in saufe places of comforte. WO to the that destroyest, when thou wartest not destroyed, thou breakest the league, where as none hath broke it with the for when thou shalt leaue destroyng, thou thy selfe shalt be destroyed. And whē thou ceasest from breakyng the league, then shal they breake it to the. O Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs, we haue put our hope truste in the. Be an arme to such early, and our health in time of trouble. At that confuse noyse, the people fled and at thyne exaltyng, the Heathen were scattered. And the spoiles shalbe gathered (whiche shalbe yours) as are the gatherynge of Bruchus. And the multitude goyng to it shall be as locustes runnyng to and fro. The Lorde is exalted, for it is he that dwelleth on hye: he hath filled Syon with iudgement and ryghteousnes. And a sure stablyshyng of thy times shalbe strength, health, wisdome, and knowledge, and the very feare of the Lorde, shalbe the treasure of it. Behold, the messengers shal crie without, and the ambassadours of peace shal wepe bitterly. The stretes are wast there walketh no man therein. God hathe broken the appointment, the cities are cast away, and men are nothyng regarded, the desolate earth is in heuines. Lybanus is ashamed, and hewē downe, Saron is lyke a wyldernesse: Basan and Charmel are spoyled of their frutes, and therefore saieth the Lorde. I wyll vp nowe: nowe will I be auaunced, nowe will I be exalted as a meghty God. Ye shall conceyue stubble, and beare straw, and youre spirite shalbe the fyre, that it may deuoure you and the people shalbe burnt like lyme, and as thornes burne that are hewen of, and cast in the fyre. Nowe herken to ye that are farre of, howe I haue done, and consider my power, ye that be at hande. The synners at Syon are afrayed, a feare fearfulnes is come vpon the ypocrites, what is he among vs, saye they, that shal dwel by that consumyng fyre? which of vs may abyde that euerlastyng heate? He that leadeth a Godly lyfe saye I, and speaketh the truthe. He that abhorreth gaynes wonne by violence and deceite, he that kepeth his hande that he touche no rewarde, whiche stoppeth his eares that he heare no counsell against the innocent blonde, whiche holdeth downe his eyes that he se none euill. Hee is that shall dwell on hye: whose sauegarde shal be in a bulwarke of rockes, to hym shalbe geuen meate, & his waters shal not fayle. Thine eyes shall se the kyng in his glory, euen the kynge of the farre countries shall they see, thine harte studyed for feare, thinkyng thus. What shall then become of the scrybe? of the receiuer of our money? what of hym that cayed our fairest houses? Thou shalt not se a people of a straunge tongue to haue so diffuse a language, that it may not be vnderstande, neither so straunge a speche, but it shalbe perceyued. There shall Syon defende the head citie of our solempne feastes. There shall thyne eyes see Jerusalem that glorious habitacion, the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue, whose nayles shall neuer be taken out nor the wilde without ende, whose rodes euerychone shall neuer consume: for the glorious maiestie of the Lord shal there be present among vs as a place, wher fayre brode Riuers and streames are throwe the whiche shall neyther galey rowe, nor great ship sayle. For the Lorde is our iudge, the lorde is our lawe geuer. The Lorde is our kyng, and he hymselfe shalbe our sauiour. There are the coardes so layde abrode, that they can not be better, and therfore thei haue not fixed their masse, nor spread abroode their sayle. Then there is dealte great spoyle: yea, lame menne ronne after the praye. There lieth no man that sayeth: I am syeke, but all euill is taken away from the people that dwel there.

COme ye Heathen and heare, take hede ye people. Herken thou yearth and all that is therein, thou roumde compasse and all that groweth there vpon, for the Lorde is angry with all people, and his displeasure is kyndled against all the multitude of them, he hath destroyed them, and deliuered them to the slaughter. So that their slayne shalbe caste oute and their bodies stincke, that euen the very hilles shalbe wet with the bloud of them. IN the. xiiii. yere of king Hezekias came Sennacherib king of the Assirians down to lay seage vnto all the strong cities of Iuda, to conquete them And the kyng of the Assirians sent Rabsaketh from Lachis, toward Ierusalem against kyng Hezekias, with an exceadyng hoaste whiche set him by the conduyte of the ouerpole in the waye that goeth thorowe the fullers lande. derstãde that he was departed from Lachis.
For there came a rumoure that Tharakes kyng of Ethiopia, was come furth to warre against hym. And when the kyng of Assiria heard that, he sent other messengers to kyng Hezekias with this commaundement. Saye thus to Hezekias kyng of Juda. Let not thy God deceyue the, in whom thou hopest, and sayest: Jerusalem shall not be geuen into the handes of the kyng of Assiria. For lo, thou knowest well howe the Kynges of Assiria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentiles (whome my progeni-tours conquered) deliuered at any tyme tho-rowe their goddes? * As namely, Gozan, Ha- ii. Re. xvii. a. ran, Rezeph, and the children of Eden, whiche were at Thassalar. Where is the kyng of Hemah, & the kyng of Arphad, & the kyng of the cytie Sepharauim, Ena & Ana? ¶ Nowe when Hezekia had receiued the letter of the messengers and redde it, he went vp into the house of the Lorde, and opened the letter before the Lord, and Hezekia prayed before the Lord on this maner. O Lord of hoostes thou God of Israell, whiche dwellest vpon * Che Exo. xxv. c. rubin. Thou art the God, that only is god of al kingdomes of the world, for thou only hast * created heauen and yearth. * Encline thyne Gene. i. a. eare lord, & consider, open thine eyes, O lord Baruc. ii. c. and se, & pondre al the wordes vpon Sennacherib which hath sent his embassage to bla spheme the liuyng God. It is true O lorde, D. that the kinges of Assiria haue conquered al kyngdomes and landes, and cast their goddes in the fyre. Notwithstandyng those were no goddes, but the workes of mennes handes of wood, or stone, therefore haue they destroyed them. Deliuer vs then, O lord our God, from the handes of Sennacherib, that al kyngdomes of the earth may know, that thou only art the lord. Then Esaie the sonne of Amoz sent vnto Hezekia, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israell. Where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Senacherib the king of Assiria this is the answere that the Lorde hath geuen concernynge hym. Despised and scorned thee (O daughter Syon) he hath shaken his head at the, O daughter Jerusalem. Whom hast thou defyed and blasphemed? Against whom haste thou lyfte vp thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lokes? euē against the holy one of Israell. Thou with thy seruauntes haste blaspheme the Lorde, and thus holdest thou of thy selfe: I wyll couer the high mountaynes and tydes of Lybanus with my horsemē. And there wyll I cutte downe the hye Cedre trees & the fayrest fyrre trees, I wil vp vnto the height of it, and into the chefest of his timber woddes. If there be no water, I will graue and drynke. And as for waters of defence, I shal drye them vp with the sole of myne foote. Yea, hast thou not hearde what I haue taken in hande, and brought to passe of olde tyme? That same will I to nowe also, and waste, destroye and bring stōg cyties vnto heapes of stones. For their inhabytours shalbe lyke lame menne, brought in feare and confounded. They shalbe lyke the grasse and grene herbes in the field lyke the haye vpon the house toppes, that we thereth afore it be growen vp. I knowe thy wayes, thy goynge furthe, and thy commyng home: yea, and thy madnesse against me. Ther fore thy furiousnes against me, and thy paine is come before me. I wyll put my tynge in thy nose, and my bridle bet in the chawes of the, and turne the about, euen the same waye thou camest. I wyll geue the also this token (O Ezekia) this yeare shalt thou eate suche as groweth of it selfe: and the seconde yeare, that whiche springeth agayne of the same, & in the third yeare, ye shall sowe and reape: yea, ye shall plante vineyardes, and enioye the frutes therof. And suche of the house of Juda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnaunt shall take roote beneth, & bring furth from aboue. For the escaped shall go out of Jerusalem, and the remnaunt from the mount Syon. And this shall the zelousy of the Lorde of hoastes bring to passe. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde, concernyng the kyng of the Assirians. He shal not come into this citie: and shall shote no arrowe into it, there shall no shylde hurt it, neither shal they cast dytches about it. The same way that he came, he shall returne, and not come at this citie saieth the Lorde. And I wyll kepe and saue the cytie (sayeth he) for myne owne, and for my seruaunt Dauids sake. Thus the Angel of the Lorde went furth and slue of the Assirians hoast, an. C. lxxx. and v. M. And when men arose early in the morning, beheld they were slayne, and all lage full of dead bodyes. So Sennacherib the kyng of the Assirians brake vp and dwelt at Ninive. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Nesrah his God, that Adramalech and Sarazer his owne sonnes slewe hym with the swearde, and fledde into the lande of Armenia. And Asarhadon his sonne reygned in his steade.

¶ The. xxxviii. Chapiter.

IN those long afore this was Ezekia sicke vnto the death, * and the prophet Esaye, the sonne of Amoz, came vnto hym, and saide: Thus commaundeth the Lorde: Set thyne house in ordre, for thou must die, and shalt not escape. Then Ezekias turned his face towarde the wall, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Remember (O Lorde) that I haue walked before the in truthe, and a perfecte harte, and haue done the thyng that is pleasaunt to the. And Ezekia wept sore. Then sayde God vnto Esaie: Go and speake vnto Ezekia. The Lorde God of Dauid thy father, sendeth the this worde: I haue hearde thy prayer, and considered thy teares, * beholde, I will put eyghtene yeares mo vnto thy lyfe, and deliuer the and the citie also, from the hande of the kyng of Assiria, for I wyll defende the citie. * And take the this token of the Lorde, that he wyll do it, as he hath spoken: Beholde I wyll returne the shadowe of Ahaz dyall, that nowe is sayde out with the sunne and bryng it ten degrees backewarde. * So the sunne turned ten degrees bakward the whiche he was descended afore.

I thought I should haue gone to the gates of hell, when myne age was shortened and haue wanted the residue of mine yeres, I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer beholde the Lorde (the Lorde I saye) in this lyfe. I shall neuer se man among the dwellers of the worlde. Myne age is folden vp together, and taken away from me lyke a shepeherdes cottage. I haue hewen of my lyfe by my synnes, lyke as a weauer cutteth of his webbe. He wyll with pynyng sickenesse make an ende of me: yea, he wyll make an ende of me in one daye. * I thoughte, I would haue lyued vntyll the morowe, but he brused my bones lyke a Lyon, and in one daye thou wylt make an ende of me. Then chatered I lyke a swalowe, and lyke a Crane, and moned lyke as a Doue. I lyft vp myne eyes into the height: O Lorde (sayde I) my sickenesse kepeth me downe, ease thou me. What shall I saye? The Lorde hathe made a promesse to me. Yea, and he hym selfe hathe performed it. I shall therefore go longe as I lyue remember thys bitternesse of my lyfe. AT the fame time, Merodach Baladam, Baladanus fonne, kyng of Babylon, fent letters and preſentes to Hezekia. For he vnderſtode how that he had bene ſicke, and was recouered again. * And Hezekia was glad therof, and fhewed them the cõmoditie of his treafure, of fyluer, of golde, of fpices, and rootes of precious oyles, all that was in his cupbourdes & treafure houſes. There was not one thing in Hezekias houſe, & to throwout all his kyngdome but he let them ſeit. Then came Eſaie the prophet to kyng Hezekia, & fayde vnto hym. What haue the menne fayde and from whence came they vnto the: Hezekia anſwered, they came out of a farre countrey vnto me out of Babylon. Eſay faid what haue they loked vpon in thyne houſe? Hezekia anſwered: All that is in myne houſe haue they ſene, and there is nothyng in my treafure but I fhewed it them. Then fayd Eſaye vnto Hezekia: Vnderſtande the worde of the Lozde of hoſtes. * Beholde, the tyme wyll come that euery thynge whiche is in thyne houſe, and all that thy progenitours haue layed vp in ſtoze vntyll this daye fhalbe caried to Babylon, and nothyng lefte behynde. Then fayde Hezekia to Eſaye. Both God proſper his owne counſail which thou haſt tolde. He layde moreouer. So that there be peace and faythfulnes in my tyme.

COmfort my people (O ye prophetes) comfort my people, ſayeth your God, comfort Ieruſalem at the hart, and tell her that her trauayle is at an ende, that her offence is pardoned that ſhe hath receiued of the Lordes hande fufficient recompenſe for all her ſynnes.

A voice cried in wilderneſſe, prepare the way for the lorde in the wyldernes, make streyght the path for our god in the deſerte. Let all valeis be exalted, and euery mountayne and hill be layd lowe: the thynge that is crooked, let it be made streyght and let the cragy be made playne fielde. * For the glory of the lorde ſhall appeare, and all fleſhe ſhall at ones ſe it, for why? the mouth of the Lorde hath ſpoken it. And the Prophete anſwered: what ſhall I eaye? * that al fleſhe is graſſe, and that al the goodlineſſe thereof is as the floure of the fielde: The graſſe is wythered, the floure fallet away. Euen ſo is the people as graſſe, when the brethe of the Lozde bloweth vpon them. Of a ſurety the graſſe wyther, & the floure fade away: * But the worde of our God endureth for euer. not? knowe ye nothyng, O wretches? Heard ye neuer of it. Hath it not bene preached vnto you frome the beginnyng? Haue ye not bene enformed of this by the foundacion of the yearth, that he sitteth vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the enhabitours of the worlde are in cõparyson of hym, but as grashoppers? * That he spreadeth out the heauens as a couering, that he stretcheth them out, as a tente to dwelle in? But vnto them that haue the Lorde before their eyes, shall strength be encreased. Neede wynges shal growe vpon them, when they runne they shall not fall, & when they go they shal not be wery. ¶ The .xli. Chap.

BE still ye yles before me, and herken vnto me. Be strong ye people. Come hether & heare me your cause, we will go to the lawe together. Who rayseth vp the iust man from the ery sprng of the sunne, and called him to go furth who cast down the people, & subdued the kynges before him, that he maye throwe them all to the ground with his swearde, & scatereth them like stubble with his bowe? he followeth vpon them, and goeth safely hymself. And that in a waye where before his foote had not troden. Who hath made & created all these thynges? euen he that called the generacions from the beginnyng. * Euen I the lord, which am the first, & with the last. The yles sawe it, & dyd feare, & the endes of the earth, were abashed & came neare, & came both they & they. Euery man helped his neyghbour, and brother, & bad him be strong. The carpenter cõforted the goldsmith & the goldsmith the hamerman saying: glue wyll do very well in it. He alsho good that we fasten this cast wyth a, & then they fastened it with nayles, that it should not be moued. But thou Israel art my seruaunt, thou Jacob art elect thou art the sede of Abraham my beloued thou art he whom I led from the endes of the earth by the hande. For I called the & sayde vnto the: Thou art my seruaunt. I haue chosen the, & not cast the away * be not afrayd for I am with the. Wepe not away as waxe for I am thy God, to strength the, help the, & to kepe the with this ryght hande of myne. Beholde all they that repyne the, shall come to cõfusion and shame, and thine aduersaries shalbe destroyed & brought to naught. So that who so seketh after them shal not fynde them. Thy destroyers shall perishe and so shal they that vndertake to make batayl againste the, be as that is not, and as a thyng of naught. For I the lord & God wil strengthen thy right hand euen I that saye vnto the. Feare not, I will helpe the. Be not afrayed thou lytle worme Jacob, and thou despised Israell for I wyll help the, saieth the lorde, and the holy one of Israel thyne aduenger. Beholde, I wil make the a treadyng cart & a newe sayle that thou maiest threshe and grinde the mountaynes, & bring the hilles to poulder. Thou shalt fanne them, and the wynde shal carry them away, and the whirle winde shal scatter them. But thou shalt reioyce in the lord, & shalt delite in prayeng the holy one of Israel. * Whe the thirsty and poore seke water & fynde none, & when their tongue is drie of thirste, I geue it them saieth the lorde: I the God of Israel forsake them not. * I bryng forth floudes in the hylles, and welles in the playne fieldes: I turne the wildernes to ryuers, and the drie lande to condwites of water. I plante in the waste grounde trees of cedre, boxe, mirre, & oliues. And in the drie, I set fyrre trees, elmes and hawthornes together. All this do I, that they all together may se and marke, perceiue with their hartes & consider that the hande of the Lorde maketh these thynges, & that the holy one of Israel bryngeth them to passe. Stande at your cause (saieth the lorde) & bryng forth your strongest grounde, saieth the kyng of Jacob. Let them bryng forth their goddes, & let their goddes tel vs what shal chaunce hereafter: yea, let them shewe vs the thynges that are past, what they be, let them declare them vnto vs, that we maie take them to harte, and knowe them hereafter. Either shewe vs thynges for to come, and tel vs what shalbe done hereafter, so shal we knowe that you are goddes, do some thyng either good or bad, so wil we both knowledge the same, and tell it out. Beholde ye are goddes of naught, and your makyng is of nought: yea, abhomynable is the man that hath chosen you. * Nuerthelesse I haue waked vp one frõ the north, and he shall come. D. Remembre not thynges of olde, and regarde nothyng that is past: Behold, I shall make a newe thynge, and shortely shall it apere, and shall you not knowe it? I will make stretes in the desert, and ryuers of water in the wildernesse. The wilde beastes shall worship me, the dragons and the young ostriches. * For I shal geue waters in the wildernesse, and streames in the desert that may geue dryncke to my people, whom I chose. This people haue I made for my selfe, and thei shal shewe forth my prayse. For thou (Iacob) wouldest not call upon me, but thou haddest an enuie towarde me O Israell. Thou gauest me not thy beastes for burnte offeringes, neither diddest honoure me with thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no beaste typpe with thy money, neither pouredest the fat of thy sacrifice upon me. * Nowe wel, I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offeringes, neither greuous in requestes. But thou hast lade me with thy sinnes and wearied me with thyne vngodlines. * Wherfore I yet, euē I am he only that for mine own selues sake do away thyne offences & forget thy synnes, so that I will neuer thynke vpon them. Put me nowe in remembraunce (for we will reason together) & shewe what thou hast for the, to make the righteous. * Thy first father offended sore, and thy rulers haue synned against me. Therfore I either suspended, or gaue the cheefest princes. I did curse Iacob, and gaue Israell into reproche.

SO heare nowe, O Iacob my seruaunt, & Israel whom I haue chosen, for thus saieth the lord, that made the, fashioned the, & helped the, euen from thy mothers wombe. Be not afraied, O Iacob my seruant thou righteous whō I haue chosen * For I shal poure water vpon the drie grounde, and ryuers vpō the thirsty. * I shall poure my spirite vpō thy seede, and mine encrease vpō thy stocke. They shal growe together lyke as the grasse, & as the wyllowes by the waters syde. One shall saye I am the Lordes: Another shall call himselfe after the name of Iacob. The third shall subscribe with his hande vnto the Lorde, and geue himselfe vnder the name of Israel. Thus hath the Lorde spoken, euen the kyng of Israell and his redemer, the Lorde of hoastes * I am the first and the laste, and without me is there no God. If any be lyke me, let him stand forth with the thyng past, and openly shewe it, and lay it playne before me, what hath chaunced sence I appointed the people of the worlde, and what shalbe worthy, or what shal come to passe, in tyme longe to come, let them shewe these thynges. Be not abashed nor afrayed? For haue not I euer told you before to and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde your selues. Is there any God except me? or any maker that I should not knowe hym? All caruers of Images are but vaine, & the carued Images that they loue, can do no good. They must beare recorde themselues, that seyng they can neither se, nor vnderstand: they shalbe cōfounded. * Who dare the make a god or fashion an ymage, that is profitable for nothyng? * Behold all the felowshyp of the must be brought to cōfusiō. And truly all the workemasters of them are men, thei shalbe gathered together, they shall stande, tremble, & be confounded one with another. The smith maketh an axe, and tempereth it with hote coales, and fashioneth it with hāmers, and worketh it with all the strengthe of his armes: yea, sometyme he is fayne for very hunger, and so thirsty that he hath no more power. The carpenter (or ymage reuuer) taketh measure of the timber, & ouerdraweth it with his line, he marketh it with some colour, he planeth it, he rulleth it and squareth it, & maketh it after the ymage of a man, & according to the beautie of a man that it may stande in the temple. Moreouer, he goeth out to hewe down Cedre trees. He bryngeth home Elmes and Oke, and takyng a bold courage, he reketh out the yell tymber of the wooode. He hymselfe hath planted a Pyne tree, which the rayne hath cherished, which wood serueth for me to burne. Of this he taketh & warmeth hymselfe with, & the maketh a fyre of it to bake breade. And afterward maketh a god therof, to honoure it, and an ydoll to knele before it. One peece he burneth in the fyre, with an other he rosteth flesh, that he may eat rost his belly full: with the thirde he warmeth hymself, & saith, Aha, I am well warmed, I haue been at the fyre. And of the residue he maketh hym a God and an ydol for hymselfe. He kneleth before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and saith: deliuer me, for thou art my God. * Yet men neither consyder nor vnderstand, because their eyes be stopped, that they cannot see: and their hartes, that they cannot perceiue. They ponder not in their mindes, for they haue neither knowlege nor vnderstandyng to thynke thus: I haue burnt one peece in the fyre. I haue baked breade with the coales thereof, I haue rosted flesshe withall: and eaten it, shal I now of the residue make an abominable ydol, and fal downe before a rotte peece of wood? Thus he doth but lose his labour: and his harte which is disceyued doth turne hym asyde, so that none of thē can haue a true conscience to thynke, may not I erre? Consyder this o Jacob & Israel, for thou art my seruaūt. I haue made the, that thou mightest serue me. O Israell forget me not. * As for thyne offences, I haue driuen them away, like the cloudes, and thy synnes as the myst: Turne the again vnto me. For I haue redemed the. Be glad ye heauens: whom the Lord hath made, for the lord hath dealt graciously with his people: let al that is here beneth vpon the yearth be ioyfull. Reioyce ye mountaines and woodes, with al the trees there of, for the Lorde hath redemed Jacob, & wil shewe his glorie vpon Israel. Thus saieth the Lorde thy redemer: euen he that fashioned the from thy mothers wombe. * I the Lorde do al thynges my self alone. I onely spreade out the heauens, and I onely haue laied the foundacion of the yearth by myne owne selfe. I destroy the tokens of witches, and make fayth layers fooles. As for the wyse, I turne them backwarde, & make their conning foolishenes. He doeth set vp the purpose of his seruaunt & fulfilleth the counsel of his messengers. Concerning Jerusalem he sayeth: It shalbe inhabited. And of the cities of Juda: they shalbe builded again, & I wil repaire their decayed places: he saieth to the ground be dry, And I wil drie vp thy water floodes. He sayeth of Cyrus: He is my hearde man, so that he shal fulfil al thynges after my wil. He sayeth also of Jerusalem: It shalbe builded, and of the temple, it shalbe set grounded.

The .xlv. Chapiter.

Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto Cyrus his anoynted, whō I haue taken by the right hande, to subdue nacions before hym. * I wil loose the gyrdle of kynges, and I wil open the gates before his face, and not suffer them to be shut. I wil go before the, & make the crooked streight, I shal breake the brasen doores, & burst the yron barres, I shall geue the the hid treasure, and the thynge which is secretly kept, that thou maiest know that I am the Lorde God of Israel which haue called the by thy name, and * that for Jacob my seruautes sake, and for Israell my chosen. For I called the by thy name, & ordeined the or euer thou knewest me. * Euen I the Lorde before whom there is no other: for without me there is no God: * I haue prepared the or euer thou knewest me, that I might be knowen frō the rysyng of the Sunne to the goyng downe of the same that al is nothing without me. For I am the Lorde, and there is els none. It is I that † created the light and darkenes. * I make peace and trouble: yea, euen I the Lord do al these thynges. Ye heauens from aboue droppe downe, & let the cloudes raine righteousnes. The yearthe openeth it selfe, and bryngeth forth health, that thereby righteousnes may florishe. Euen I the Lord bryng it to passe. * Wo bee vnto hym that stryueth with his maker, the potsherd with the potter. Saieth the clay to the potter? What makest thou? or thy worke serueth for nothyng. Wo be vnto hym that sayeth to his father, Why begettest thou? And to his mother, Why bearest thou? Thus sayth the Lord, euen the holy one and maker of Israel. Aske me of thynges for to come concernyng my sonnes: and putte me in remembraunce as touchyng the workes of my handes. I haue made the yearth and created man vpon it: With myne handes haue I spread forth heauen, and geue a commaundement for al the hoast thereof. I shall make hym vp with righteousnes, and ordre al his wayes. * He shal builde my citie, & let out my prysonners, and that neither for gifte nor rewardes, saieth the Lorde of hoastes: Thus sayeth the Lorde: The occupiers of Egypt. The marchauntes of the Moryans & Sabees, shal com vnto the with tribute, they shalbe thyne: thei shal folowe the, and go with chaines vpon their feete. They shal fal downe before the, and make supplicacion vnto the, for God is with out whom there is none other God, shalbe with the. * Verely thou art a God that hidest thy selfe, thou God and Sauioure of Israel. Confounded are they al, and put to shame: they are gone heare together with shame, euen the makers of images. But Israel shalbe saued in the Lorde: which is the euerlastyng saluacion. Ye shall not come to shame nor confusion world without ende.

thus sayeth the Lorde: * Euen he that created heauē, the God that made the yearth, that fashioned it, & set it forth. He did not make it for naught, but to bee enhabited. Euen I the Lord without whom there is none other. * I haue not spoken secretly, neither in darcke places of the yearthe. It is not for naught, that I said vnto the seade of Jacob seke me, I am the Lorde, whiche when I speake, declare the thynge that is righteous and true. Gather you and come together, draw nye hether, you that are escaped of the people. Haue * thei any vnderstāding, that set vp the tochen of their Idols, & pray vnto a god, that cannot helpe the? draw nyghe come hether, & let them alke councel one at another, & shewe forth: What he is that tolde this before. Or who spake of it euer seace the begynnyng. Haue not I the Lord doen it? without whō there is none other God: the true God & sauyour, & there is els none but I. * And therefore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of the yearth) that ye may be saued for I am God, & there is els none, I sweare by my self, out of my mouth commeth the worde of righteousnes, & that no man may turne: * but al knees shal bowe vnto me, & al tongues shal sweare by my name, saying: Verely in the Lord is my righteousnes and strength. To him shal men come, but all thei that thinke scorne of hym, shalbe confounded. And the whole seade of Israel shalbe iustified, and make their boast in the Lorde.

BEL is fallen. Nabo is broken downe whose images were a burthen for the beastes and cattell, to ouerlade them, and to make the wery. Thei are sonke down, & fallē to gether for thei may not ease them of their burthē, therfore must thei go into captiuitie. Hearke vnto me, O house of Jacob, and al ye that remaine yet of the houshold of Israell whom I haue borne from your mothers wōbe: and brought you vp from your byrth, till ye were growen. I, I, which shal beare you vnto your laste age. I haue made you: I will also norishe you, beare you, & saue you. Whō will ye make me lyke, or to whō will ye make me equal, or compare me, that I should be lyke hym in fashion, or ymage, that I may bee lyke hym? * Ye fooles (no doubt) wil take out syluer and gold out of your pourses, & weye it, and hyre a goldsmith to make a God of it, that men may knele down & worship it. * Yet must he bee taken on mennes shoulders, and borne and set in his place that he may stande and not moue out of his place. Alas that men shoulde crye vnto him, which geueth no answeare: and deliuereth not the man that calleth vpon hym from his trouble. Consyder this wel, & be ashamed. Go into your owne selues (O ye transgressors) Remembre the thynges whiche are past, sence the beggynnyng of the worlde, that I am God, and that there is els no God: yea, and there is nothyng lyke vnto me, in the beggynnyng of a thyng I shewe the ende therof, and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. My deuice shall stande stedfastly stablished, & I fulfil all my pleasure. * I cal a birde out of the East, & the mā by whom my councel shalbe fulfilled out of far countries as sone as I thynche to deuise a thynge. I do it. Heare me, O ye that are of an hye stomacke, but far from righteousnes, I shal bring forth my righteousnes. It is not far, & my health shall not tary long away. I wil lay health in Syō, & in Israel my glorye.

BVT as for the (O daughter) thou virgin Babilon) sit thou downe in the dust, sit vpon the grounde, and not in a throne. (O thou maiden of Caldea.) Thou shalt nomore be called tender and pleasaunt. Bring forth the querne & grynde mele, put forth thy browded heare, put of thy shoes, make bare thy knees, & wade thorow the waterriuers. Thy * shame shalbee discouered and thy punitie shalbe sene. ¶ The. xlvii. Chapiter.

Heare this, O thou house of Jacob, ye that are called by the name of Israel, and are come out of one florke with Juda: Which swore by the name of the Lord, & beare witnesse by the GOD of Israell (but not with truth and right (whiche are called * fre men of the holy citie, are grounded vpon the God of Israel, * whose name is the Lorde of hoostes. The thynges that I shewed you euen fence the beginnyng haue I not brought thē to passe immediatly, as thei came out of my mouth and declared them: and thei are come. Howbeit, I know that thou art obstinate, & that thy necke hath an yron vaine, and that thy browe is brasse, neuertheleffe I haue euer fence the beginnyng shewed the of thynges for to come, and declared them vnto the, or euer thei came to passe: that thou shouldest not say, myne ydoll hath doen it, my carued, or molten ymage hath shewed it. Thou herdest it before, & behold, it is come to passe and whether can ye prophecy of thynges to come? But as for me I told the before at the beggynnyg, newe and secrete thynges that thou knewest not of. * And some daen now, not of olde tyme, whereof thou neuer heardest, before thei were brought to passe: that thou sayst not say. Behold, I knewe of thē: Moreouer, there be some whereof thou hast neither heard nor knowē, neither haue thei been opened vnto thine eares afore tyme. For I knew that thou wouldest maliciously offend, therefore haue I called the a transgressour, euen from thy mothers wombe. Neuertheles, for myne names sake, I will withdraw my wrath and it shalbe for myne honours sake yt I parciently forbeare the: I roote the not out. Behold, I haue pourged the, yet not as siluer. * I haue chosen the in the fyre of affliction, and that onely for myne owne sake, yea, euen * for myne owne sake will I do this or els, what dishonour would thei do to my name? (My name vnto me, O Jacob and Israel whom I haue called. I am euen he, that is, I am the first and the last. My hande hath layed the foundacion of the yearth, and my right hande hath spanned ouer the heauens. If I call vnto as I cal them, thei are there. Gather you all together and herken: whiche of yonder godes hadde declared this? The Lorde hath a loue vnto hym, and he shal perfourme his will against Babell, & declare his power against the Caldees. I myselfe alone, euen I haue told you this before. Yea, I did cal hym: and bryng hym forth: and he shall make his wayes prosperous. Come nye and herke this: haue I spoken any thyng darkely, sence the beggynnyg? When a thyng beggynneth I am there. Wherefore the Lorde God, and his spirite hath sent me, and thus saith the Lorde God thy redemer, the holy one of Israell. I am the Lord thy God: which teache the profytable * thynges, and leade the thy way, that thou shouldest go. * O that thou haddest regarded my commaundementes, then had thy welthynes been as the water streame and thy righteousnes as the waues flowyng in the Sea. Thy seede also had been lyke as the sande in the Sea, and the fruite of thy body lyke the grauell stones thereof. His name shoulde not be rooted out, nor destroyed before me. * Go away from Babylon, flye from the Caldees, with a mery voyce speake of this, declare it abrode, and go forth vnto the ende of the worlde, say ye: The Lorde hath redemed his seruaunt Jacob, that thei suffered no thurste, he ledde them thorowe the wildernes, & caused the waters to flowe out vnto them from out of the rocke. * He claue the rocke in sundre, and the water gushed out. * As for the vngodly, thei haue no peace, saieth the Lorde.

Then answered I: I haue labour, I haue spente my strength in vaine. Neuertheles, I will commit my cause, and my worke vnto thee Lorde my God. And now saieth the Lorde, euen he that fashioned me from my mothers wombe to be his seruaunt, that I may bryng Jacob againe vnto hym: howbeit Israel wil not be gathered vnto hym againe. In whose sighe I am great, whiche also is my Lorde, my God, and my strength. And he saide: it is but a small thyng that thou art my seruaunt, to sette vp the kynredes of Jacob, and to restore the destruction of Israel. * For I haue made the, the light of the Gentiles, that thou maiest be my helth vnto the end of the worlde. and holy one of Israel: because of the abhorryng & despisyng among the Gentiles, concernyng the seruaunte of all them that beare rule. Kynges and Princes shal se, and arise and worshippe, because of the Lorde that is faithfull, and because of the holy one of Israel, whiche hath chosen the. And thus saith the Lorde: * In the tyme accepted haue I hearde the, and in the day of saluacion haue I helped the. * I will preserue the, and make the to be the attonement of the people, that thou maist helpe vp the yearth againe: and possesse again the desolate heritages. That * thou maiest saye to the prisoners: go forth, and to them that are in darckenes: come into the light, thei shal fede in the hye wayes, and gette their pasture in all hye places. * Thei shall neither hunger nor thurste, heate nor Sunne shal not hurt the. For he that fauoreth them, shal leade them, & geue the drincke of the springe of welles. I will make wayes vpō al my mountaines, & my foote pathes shal be exalted. And beholde thei shall come from farre: Loo, come from the North and West, come from the lande of Sinym, whiche is in the South. * Reioyce ye heauens: and syng praises, thou yearth. Talke of ioye ye hilles: for God hath comforted his people, and wil haue mercy vpon his that be in trouble. But Syon said: * God hath forsaken, and my lord hath forgotten me. Will a wyfe forgette the childe of her wombe, and not pitie the sonne, whom she hath borne? And though she doo forget, yet wil I not forget the. Beholde, I haue written the vpe vpon my handes, thy walles are euer in my sight. Thei make hast to builde the vp againe. & for those that ouerthrewe the, & made the waste, thei shall departe from the. Lift vp thyne eyes, and loke about the: al these gather them togethee, and come to the. As truely as I liue (saieth the Lorde) thou shalt put them al vpon the: as an apparell, and gyrde them to the as a bryde doeth her iewels. As for thy lande that lieth desolate, wasted & destroyed, it shalbe to narowe for them that shall dwell in it. And thei that would deuoure the, thei shalbe far away. Then the childe whō the barrein shal bring forth vnto the, shall saye in thyne eare: this place is to narowe, geue place that I maye haue rowme. Then shalt thou thynke by thy selfe: Who hath begotten me these? seyng I am bare & alone, a captiue, & an outcaste? And who hath norished them vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but frō whence come these?

And therefore thus saieth the Lord God: Beholde, I wil stretche out myne hand to the Gentiles, and set vp my token to the people. Thei shal bryng the thy sonnes in their lappes: and carry thy daughters vnto the vpon their shoulders. For kynges shalbe thy nurssyng fathers, and quenes shalbe thy nurssyng mothers. Thei shal fal before the with their face flat vpon the yearth: and lycke vp the dust of thy feete: that thou maiest know, how that I am the Lord. * And whose putteth his trust in me shal not be confounded. Who spoileth the graunt of his pray? Or who taketh the prisoner from the mighty? And therefore thus saieth the Lord: The prisoners shalbe taken from the giaunt: and the spoile deliuered from the violent, for I wil maintein thy cause against thyne aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And will fede thyne enemies with their owne flesh: and make them dronke of their owne bloude, as of swete wyne. And all flesh shall knowe, O Iacob, that I am the Lorde, thy Sauioure, thy noble redemer.

The. l. Chapitre.

Thus saieth the Lord: * where is the bil of your mothers deuorcement that I sent her away? or who is the dettor to whome I solde you? * Behold, for your owne offences are ye solde, and because of your transgressiō, is your mother forsaken. For why? when no man receiue me, when I came? and when I called, no man gaue me answere. * Is my hād shortened, that it might not helpe? or haue I not power to deliuer? Lo, at a worde I driue vp the sea, * and of water floudes I make dry lande: so that for want of water the fishe corrupte & dye for thirst. * As for heauen, I cloth with darckenesse, and put as it were a sacke vpon it. The Lorde God hath geuen me a wel learned tongue, * so that I can comfort them whiche are troubled: yea, and that in due season. He waketh me vp betymes in the morning, betymes in the morning, I saye: he will wake myne eare that I might heare it as to the scolemaisters. * The Lord God hath opened myne eare, therefore can I not say nay: nor withdraw my selfe: but I offer my backe vnto the smyters, & my chiekes to the nippers. * I turne not my face from shame and spittyng: and the Lorde God shal helpe me, therefore shal I not be confounded, I haue therefore hardened my face like a flint stone, for I am sure that I shal not come to confusion. He is at hande that iustifieth me, who will then goo with me to lawe? Let vs stād one against another: ye if there be any that wil reason with me, let him come here for the to me. * Behold, the Lord God helpeth me. What is he then that can condempne me? Lo, thei shalbe lyke as an olde cloth, the mothe shall eat them vp. Therefore, who so feareth the Lord among you, let him heare the voice of his seruaunt. Who so walketh in darckenesse, and no light shyneth vpon him, let him put his trust in the name of the Lord, & holde him by his God. But take hede, ye al kyndle a fyre of the wrath of God, and blare vp the coales, walke on in the glitterynge of youre owne fyre, & in the coales that ye haue kindled

The.li. Chapiter.

Gentong.A. HEarken vnto me, ye that holde of righteousnesse, and ye that seke the Lord. Take heede vnto the stone, whereout ye are hewē, & to the graue whereout ye are digged. consider* Abraham your father, & Sara that bare you: how that * I called hym alone, and blessed hym, and encreassed hym. Therefore shall the Lord comfort Syon, and repaire all her decay, makyng her desert as a paradise: and her wildernes as the garden of the Lorde. Myrth & ioye shalbe found ther, thanckesgeuyng & the voice of prayse. Haue respect vnto me then, O my people both hyghe & lowe, and laye thyne eare to me,* for a law and ordinaunce shal go forth fro me, to lighten the Gentiles. It is heard by that my healthe and my righteousnes shal go forth, and the people shalbe ordred with myne arme. The Ylandes shall waite and looke for me, and putte their trust in myne arme. Lift vp your eyes toward heauen, and looke vpon the yearthe beneth. For the heauens shal vanishe away lyke smoke, and the yearth shall waxe olde lyke a clothe, and they that dwell therein shall perish in lyke maner. But my saluation shal endure for euer, and my righteousnes shall not ceasse. Hearke vnto me ye that haue pleasure in righteousnes, thou people that * beareest my law in thyne harte: Fere not the curse of men: be not afraied of their blasphemies, and reuilynges* for wormes and mothes shall eat them vp lyke cloth & woll. But my righteousnes shal endure for euer and my sauyng health from generacion to generacion. Awake vp, awake vp, and bee strong. O thou arme of the Lord, wake vp lyke as in tyme past euer and seuen the world began.* Art not thou the same arme, that hast wounded the proude Egypte, & hewen the Dragon in peces?* Art not thou euen he, whiche hast dryed vp the diepe of the Sea, whiche madest plaine the sea grounde that the deliuered might go thorowe? Therfore the redemed of the Lord shal turne again, and come with ioye vnto Syon, there to endure for euer. * What mirth and gladnes might be with them, that sorow and wo might flye from them.* Yea, I, I am euen he, that in all thinges geueth you consolacion. What art thou then, that feareest a mortal man the child of man,* which goeth away as doth the floure? And forgettest the Lord that made the, that spredeth out the heauens, and laied the foundacions of the yearth. But thou art euer afrayed for the syght of thyne oppressour, whiche is ready to do harme. Where is the wrath of the oppressour? med vnto his tenisement,* I am the Lorde, thy God (that make the sea to be still, and to rage:) whose name is the Lord of hostes.* I haue put my woordes in thy mouth, and haue defended the in the shadowe of my hande: that I may plant the heauens, and laye the foundacions of the yearth, and say vnto Syon: thou art my people. Awake, awake, and stand vp, O Jerusalem, thou that from the hand of the Lorde hast dronken out* the cup of his wrath: thou that hast supped of, and sucked out the dregges of his deadly cup to the bottome. For amōg al the sonnes, whom he hath begotten, there is not one that may holde it vp, and not one to leade it by the hande of all the sonnes that he hath norished. Both these thynges are happened vnto the, but who is sory for it? Yea, destruction: wastyng, hunger and sweard, but who will comforte the? Thy sonnes lye comfortelesse at the heade of euery strete lyke a taken venison, and are full of the terrible wrath of the Lord, and punishement of thy God, and therfor thou miserable and dronken (howbeit not with wine,) hear this: Thus saith the Lord thy Lord, & God, the defender of his people: Behalde, I wil take the trembryng cup out of thy hand, euen the cup with the dregges of my wrath: that from hēce forth, thou shalt neuer drinck it more, but I wil put it into their hande that trouble the: which haue spoken to thy soule, stoupe downe, that wee may go ouer the, and thou laydest thy body euen with the ground, and as the strete to go vpon.

WHo hath* geuen credence vnto the is the arme of the Lorde knowen? For he did growe before the Lord lyke as a braunche & as a roet in a dryе ground,* He hath neither hewty nor fauoure. When we shall loke vpon hym, there shalbe no fairnes: we shal haue no lust vnto hym.* He is despysed, & abhorred of men, he is such a man as is ful of sorow & as hath good experiēce of infirmities. We haue reuerenced hym so vyle, that we hid our faces from him: yea, he was despised & therfore we regarded hym not. Howbeit * he onely hath taken on hym our infirmities, and borne our paines. Yet we did iudge hym, as though he were plaged and cast down of God: & punished.* where as he (notwithstanding) was wounded for our offences, & smitten for our wickednes. for the chastisemēt of our peace was layed vpon hym, & with his stripes we are healed. * As for vs, we haue goone al a-strayе (lyke sheepe) every one hath turned his owne way. But the Lorde hath heaped together vpon hym the iniquitie of vs al. He suffered violence & was euel entreated, & did not yet open his mouth.* He shalbe led as a sheepe to be slaine, yet shal he be as stil as a lambe before the shearer, & not open his mouth. He was harde away from pryson: his cause not heard & without any iudgement: Whose ge-neraciō yet who may nombre? he was cut of from the ground of the liuyng: which punishment did go vpon hym, for the transgression of my people, which in deede had deser-ued that punishement.* His graue was geuē hym with the condemned, & with the riche man at his death.* Where as he did neuer violence nor vnright, neither hath there ben any deceitfulnes in his mouth.* Yet hath it pleased the Lord thus to bruse hym with plages, and to smyte hym with infirmitie, that when he had made his soule an offeryng for synne he might se long lastyng seade. And this deuyse of the Lord shal prosperе in his hande. With trauel and labour of his soule, shal he optaine knowlege, and he shalbe satisfied * by the knowlege of hym which is my righteous seruaunt: he shal iustify the multitude, for he shal beare away their synnes. Therefore will I geue hym the multitude for his parte, & he shall deuyde the spoile with the strongest, because he geueth ouer his soule to death.* And is reckened among the transgressours, which neuertheles hath taken away the synnes of the multitude, and made intercession for the misdoers.

¶ The. lix. Chapiter.

Beholde, the lordes hande is not so shortened, that it cannot helpe, neither is his eare so stopped, that it maie not heare. But your wickednes haue separated you from your God, and your synnes hide his face fro you, that he heareth you not. For your handes are defiled with blood, and your fingers with iniquite: your lippes speake lesynges and your tonge setteth out wickednes: no man regardeth righteousnes, and no man iudgeth truely. Every man hopeth in vaine thynges, and imagineth deceipt, conceiueth wickednes, and bringeth forth euill. Their hennes Cockatrice egges, and weaue the spiders webbe: who so eateth of their egges, dieth. But if one tread vpon them, there ryseth vp a serpent. Their webbe maketh no clothe, and they maie not couer them with their labours. Their deedes are the deedes of wickednes, and the worke of robbery, is in their handes. Their feete run to euill, and they make haste to shed innocent blood: their cogitacions are wicked cogitacions, harme and destruction are in their waies. But the waie of peace they knowe not. In their goyn-ges is no equitie: their waies are so croked that whosoeuer goeth therin knoweth of no peace. And this is the cause that equitie is so far from vs, & that righteousnes commeth not nigh vs: we loke for light, lo, it is darkenes, for the we hope for cleere, we walke in the darke. We grope like the blynde vpon the wall, we grope as we had no eyes: we stomble at the noone daie, as though it were owre night, in the fatnes places, like men that are halfe dead. We roze all like beares, and mourne still like doues. We loke for equitie, but there is none: for helth, but it is far from vs. For our offences are many before thee, & our synnes testifie against vs: for we confesse our offences, namely, transgression and dissem-blynge against the lorde, and fal awaie from our God, vttryng presumptuous & traiterous imaginacions, and cattyng fulle matter in your hartes. And therfore is equitie gone aside, & righteousnes standeth farre of: truth is fallen downe in the strete, and the thyng that is playne and open, maie not be shewed. Yea, the truthe is taken awaie: and he that departeth from euill, maketh himself to be spoyled. When the Lorde sawe this, it displeased him, for that there was no equitie. He sawe also, that there was no man righteous, and he wondered that there was no man to helpe him. Wherefore his owne armes brought saluacion vnto him, and his righteousnes was his helper. He put on righteousnes as an habergion, and an helme of saluacion vpon his head. He put on the garmentes of vengeaunce, and was clothed with zele as with a cloke. According to their deedes, so wil he quite, wrath to his aduersaries, and rewarde to his enemies, & to the vttermoste of the sea aduersaries. So shal they feare the name of the lorde from the weast, and his glorie from the sonne rysynge. For he shal come as a violent water stremme, which the wynde of the lorde hath moued. But vnto Sion there shall come a redemer, and vnto them in Jacob, that turne from wickednes, saith the lorde. I will make this couenaunt with the, saith the lorde: My spirit that is vpon thee, and the wordes which I haue put in thy mouthe, shall neuer go out of thy mouthe, nor out of the mouth of thy children, nor out of the mouth of thy childrens children, from time forth for euermore, saith the lorde.

¶ The. lx. Chapiter.

Get thee vp be tymes, & be bright O Jerusalem, for thy light commeth, and the glorie of the lorde is risen vp vpon thee. For lo, while the darknes and cloud coureth the earth and the people, the Lorde shall shewe thee light, and his glorie shalbe seen in thee.
The Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kynges to the brightnesse that springeth forth vpon thee. Lift vp thine eyes, & loke round about thee. All these gather themselues and come to thee, thy sonnes shall come vnto thee from far, and thy daughters shall gather themselues to thee on euery side. Then thou shalt see this: and be glorious, thou shalt maruell exceadyngly, and thine harte shalbe opened, when the abundaunce of the sea shalbe co-uerted vnto thee, that is, when the riches of the Gentiles shal come vnto thee. The multitude of Camels shal couer thee, the promeduries of Madian and Epha. All they of Saba shall come, bringyng gold and encense, & shewyng the prayse of the lorde. All the cattel of Cedar shalbe gathred vnto thee, the rammes of Ne-baioth shall serue thee, to be offered acceptably vpon mine altar, which I haue chosen, & in the house of my glory, which I haue garnished. But what are these that flee here like the cloudes, and as the doues flyeng to their windowes? Verily the yles shall waite for me, and especially the shippes of Tharsis shal bryng thy sonnes from far, & their siluer and their gold with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto the holy one of Israel, that hath glorified thee. Strangers shall buylde vp thy walles, and their kynges shall doo thee seruice. For when I was angry, I smote thee, and of my mercie I pardoned thee. Thy gates shall euer open, they shall not be shut day nor night, that the hoose of the Gentiles make seme, and their kynges make be brought vnto thee. For euery people and kyngdome that serueth vs not, shall perishe and be vtterlye wasted.

The glorye of Libanon shall come vnto thee. The fyrre tree, Boxe, and Cipres to gether, to garnishe the place of my Sanctuarie, for I will glorifie the place of my fete. Moreouer, those shall come kneelyng vnto thee, that haue vexed thee: and all they that despised thee, shall fall downe at thy fete. Thou shalt bee called the cittee of the Lorde, Sió the cittee of the holy one of Israel. Because thou hast been forsaken & hated, so that no man went through thee: I will make thee glorious for euer and euer, a ioyfull thyngwe out al posteritien. Thou shalt sucke the milke of the Gentiles, and kinges breestes shall fede thee. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lorde, am thy sauioz and redemer, the mightie one of Jacob. For brasse wil I geue thee golde, and for yron, siluer: for wood, brasse, and for stoone, yron. I will turne thyne oppression into peace, and thyne exactions into righteousnes. Violence and robbery shal neuer be heard of in thy lande, neither hawne and destruction within thy borders. Thy walles shalbe called healthe, and thy gates the praise of God. The Sonne shall neuer be thy daie light, and the light of the Moone shall neuer shine vnto thee: but the lorde himself shalbe thyne euerlasting light, & thy god shalbe thy glorye. Thy sonne shall neuer go downe, & thy Mawne that not be hid: for the Lorde himself shalbe thyne euerlastyng light, & thy sorowful daies shalbe ended. Thy people shalbe all righteous, and possesse the land euer, the floure of my plantyng: the worke of my handes, wherof I will reioyce. The youngest and least, shall grow into a thousande, and the simplest into a stronge people: I the Lorde will hastily bryng this thyng to passe in his tyme.

The. lxi. Chapitre.

The spirite of the lorde God is vpon me, for the lorde hath annoynted me, and sent me to preache good thynges vnto the poore, that I might bynde vp the wounded harted, that I might preache deliueraunce to the captiue, and open the prison to them that are bound that I might shewe the acceptable yere of the lord, & the daie of the vengeaunce of our God: that I might coforte all them that are in heauines, that I might geue vnto the that mourne in Sion, that I might geue vnto them beautifie stede of ashes, ioyfull ointment for sighyng, pleasaunt raiment for an heuy mynde. That they might be called trees of righteousnes, a plantyng of the lorde for hym to reioyce in. They shall build the long rough wilderneses, and set vp the old decayes, they shall repaire the wast places, and suche as haue been longe throughout many generacions desolate. Strangers shall stande and feede your cattell, and the aliaunces of the vyle people shall be plowmen & dressers of your vines. But ye shalbe named the priestes of the Lorde and men shall call you seruauntes of our God. Ye shall eate the goodes of the Gentiles, & triumphe in their substaunce. For your great confuse, you shall haue double ioy, & for shame that they haue ioye of their portion. For they shall haue double possession in their lande, and euerlastyng ioye shalbe with them. For I the Lorde, whiche loue right, and hate robberie, (though it were offered me) shall make their workes full of faithfulnes, and make an euerlastyng conenaunt with them. Their seede also, and their generacion, shalbee knowen among the Gentiles, and among the people. All they that see them, shall knowe that they are the high blessed seede of the Lorde, and therefore I am ioyfull in the Lorde, and my soule reioyceth in my God. For he hath put vpon me, the garment of saluacion, and couered me, with the mantell of righteousnes: he shall decke me like a bridegrome, & as a bride that hath her apparel vpon her. For like as the ground bryngeth forth fruite, and as the garden bryngeth forth seede: so shall the lorde God cause righteousnesse and praise, to florishe before all the Heathen.

The lxij. Chapitre.

For Sions sake therefore will I not hold my tongue, and for Jerusalems sake, wil I not cease, vntill their righteousnesse breake forthe, as the shynyng light, and their saluacion as a burnyng lampe: then shall the Gentiles sathy righteousnesse, and all kynges thy glorye. Thou shalt be named with a newe name, whiche the mouthe of the Lorde shall shewe. Thou shalt be a crowne in the hande of the Lorde, and a glorious garlande in the hande of thy God. From this tyme forthe, thou shalte neuer bee called the forsaken, and thy lande shalbee no more called the wildernesse, but thou shalte bee called, my pleasure is in her: and thy land shalbe called, the maried mannes, for the Lorde loueth thee, and thy lande shalbe ioyned in maryage. And like as a yong man, taketh a daughter to maryage, so shall thy sonnes be maried vnto thee. And as a bridegrome is glad of his bride, so shall thy God reioyce ouer thee. I haue set watchmen vpon thy walles (O Jerusalem) whiche shall neither cease daie nor night, to preache the Lorde. And ye also that remember the Lorde, ye shall not kepe hym stille, nor leaue to speake of hym, vntill Jerusalem be set by, and make the praise of the worlde. The lorde hath sworne by his right hande, and by his strong arme, that from henceforthe he will not geue thy corne to bee meate for thyne enemies, nor thy wine (wherein thou hast laboured) to bee drinke for the straungers. But they that haue gathered in the corne, shall ceaue it, and geue thankes vnto the Lorde, and thei that haue bosne in the wine, shall drinke it in the Courtes of my Sanctuarie. Go you, go you through the gates, make cleane the waie for the people, make plain, make plain the hie pathe, and take awaie the stones out of, and sette out a token for the people. Beholde, the Lorde proclaimeth vnto the endes of the worlde: tell the daughter Sion, Se thy saluation commeth, behold, he bringeth his Threasaure with hym, and his workes go before hym. For thei whom the Lorde deliuereth, shalbe called the holy people: and as for thee, thou shalt bee named, the greatly occupied, and not the forsaken citee.

The lxiij. Chapiter.

WHo is he this, that commeth from Edom, with red coloured clothes of Bostra? Which is so costly clothe) and commeth in so mightely with all his strengthe? I am he that teacheth righteousnes, and am of power to helpe. Wherefore then is thy clothyng red, and thy rayment like his, that treadeth in the wine presse? I haue trode the presse my self alone, & of al people, there is not one with me. Thus will I tread doune myne enemies in my wrath, and set my feete vpon them in myne indignacion. And their bloude shalbe sprong vpon my clothes, and so will I staine all my rayment. For the daie of vengeaunce is assigned in my harte, and the yere, when my people shalbe deliuered is come. I looked aboute me, and there was no man to shewe me any helpe: I marueiled that no manne held me vp. Then I held me by myne awne arme, and my feruentnesse sustained me. And thus will I treade doune the people in my wrathe, and bathe them in my displesture, and vpon the earth will I laie their strength. I will declare the goodnes of the Lorde, yea, and the praise of the Lorde, for all that he hath geuen vs, for the greate good that he hath doen to Israell: which he hath geuen them of his awne fauor, and according to the multitude of his louyng kyndnesse. For he said: these no doubte are my people, and no lyeyng children, and so he was their sauior. In their troubles, he was also troubled with them, and the Angell that went before them, and saued them. He hath bosne them, and raised them vp, euer since the worlde began. But after thei grieued hym to wrathe, and vexed his holy ghoste, he was their enemie, and fought against them hymself. Yet remembred Israel the olde time of Moses and his people, saying: where is he that brought them from the waues of the sea with them that feede his shepe? Where is he that hath geuen his holy spirite among them? Which led them by the arme: diuiding the water before them (whereby he got hymself an euerlastyng name) he led them in the depe, as an horse is leade in the plain, that thei should not stumble, as a tame beast goeth in the fielde: and the breath geuen of God, geueth hym rest. Thus (O God) hast thou led thy people, to make thy self a glorious name withal. Look doune then from heauen, and beholde the dwelling place of thy Sanctuary, and thy glory. How is it that thy zelousy, thy strengthe, the multitude of thy mercies, and thy louyng kyndnesse will not be entreated of vs? Yet art thou our father. For Abraham knoweth vs not, neither is Israell acquainted with vs. But thou Lorde art our father and redemer, and thy name is euerlastyng. O Lorde, wherefore hast thou led vs out of the waie: wherefore hast thou hardened our hartes, that we feare thee not? Bee at one with vs again, for thy seruauntes sake and for the generacion of thyne heritage. Thy people haue had but a litle of thy Sanctuary in possession, for our enemies haue troden doune thy holy place. And we wer thyne eu̇ the beginnyng, when thou wast not their lorde, for thei haue not called vpō thy name.

The lxiiij. Chapiter.

THat thou wouldest cleaue the heauen in sonder, and come doune: that the mountaines might melt awaie at thy presence, like as an hotte fire: and that the malicious might boyle as the water doth vpon the fire. Whereby thy name might bee knowen emong thyne enemies, and that the Gentiles might tremble before thee. When thou wroughtest wonderous straunge workes, wee looked not for them. Thou camest doune, and the hilles melted at thy presence. For sence the beginnyng of the worlde, it hath not been heard or perceiued, neither hath any eye seen any other God beside thee, which doth so muche for the that put their truste in thee. Thou helpest hym that doth right with cheerefulnesse, and them that thinke vpon thy waies. But lo, thou hast been angry, for we offended, and haue been euer in synne, though the worlde haue cleaued to them, yet shall we be saued. We are all as an vncleane thyng, & all oure righteousnes is as the clothes of a seuered woman, we fal euerichone as the leaf, for our sinnes carry vs awaie like the wind. There is no man that calleth vpon thy name, that taketh vp to take hold by thee. Therefore hidest thou thy face fro vs, and consumest vs, because of our synnes. But now, O Lorde, thou father of ours, we are the clay, and thou art our potter and we all are the worke of thy handes. Be not so sore displeased (o Lorde) & kepe not our offences to long in thy remembraunce, but consider that we are all thy people. The cities of thy Sanctuary lie wast, Sion is a wilderne, and Ierusalem a desart. Our holy house, where-

¶ The lxv. Chapiter.

Thei * seke me, that hetherto haue not asked for me, thei finde me, that hetherto haue not sought me. I haue said, I am here, I * am here. I am found of a people, that neuer called vpon my name. For thus long haue I euer holden out my handes, to an vnfaithfull people, that go not the right waie, but after their awne imaginations: to a people that is euer defying me to my face. That * make their oblations in gardens, and their smoke vpon * altars of bricke, that lurke emong the graues: and lye in their bounes all nyghte. That eate swines flesh: and vncleane broothes in their vesselles. Je thou comnest nigh theim, thei saie touche me not: for I am holier then thou. All these men when I am angrie, shalbe turned to smoke and * fire, that shall burne for euer. Behold, it is written before my face, and shall not be forgotten, but recompenced. I * shall rewarde it them into their bosome: I meane your misdeedes, and the misdeedes of your fathers together (saith the Lorde) which haue made their smokes vpon the mountaines, and blaspheined me vpon the hilles: therfore will I measure their old deedes into their bosome again. Moreouer, thus saith the Lorde: * like as when one would gather holy grapes, men saie vnto him, breake it not of, for it is holy: * euen so will I do also for my seruauntes sakes, that I will not destroye them all. But I will take a sede out of Jacob and out of Juda one, to take possession of my hill. My chosen shall possesse these thynges, and my seruauntes shall dwell there. Saron shalbe a stepe folde, and the valley of Achor shall serue thee Cattyng, for the cattell of my people that seeke me. * But as for you, ye are they that haue forsaken the Lorde, and forgotten my holy hill. Ye haue set vp an altar vnto Jupiter, and geuen riche drinke offeryngs vnto the planettes. Therfore will I nomber you with the sword, that ye shalbe destroyed al together. For when I called, no man gaue me answere: when I spake, ye harkened not vnto me, but did wickednes before myne eyen, & chose the thyng that displeased me not. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: Behold, my seruauntes shall eate, but ye shall haue hunger. Behold, my seruauntes shall drinke, but ye shall suffer thirste. Behold, my seruauntes shalbe merry, but ye shalbe confounded. Behold, my seruauntes shall reioyce, for very quietnesse of hart. But ye shall crie for sorowe of hart: and complain for vexation of mind. Your name ye shall leaue as a curse emong my chosen, for unnates by another name. Whosoe reioyceth vpo yearth, shall reioyce in the true God, and whoso sweareth vpon the yearth, shall sweare in the true god. For thou shalte forgotten, and taken awaie out of my sight. For lo, I shall make a new heauen, & a new yearth. And as for the old, thei shal neuer be thought vpon, nor kept in mynde: but the lorde saieth, be glad, and euermore reioyce, for the thynges that I shall doo. For why? Beholde, I shall make a ioyefull Jerusalem, and his people ioyfull: yea, I my self will reioyce with Jerusalem, and bee glad with my people. * And the voyce of weepyng and wailyng, shall not be heard in her from thence furthe. There shall neither be childe, nor olde man, that haue not theire full daies. For that sixth but an hundred yeare old, shal be a childe, & he that is an. c. yeare of age do wrong, he shalbe cursed. Thei * shall buyld houses and dwell in them, thei shall plant vineyardes, and eate the fruite of them: thei shall not buyld, and another possesse: thei shall not plant, and another eate. But * the life of my people shalbe like a tree, and so shall the woorke of their handes. My chosen shall liue long, thei shall not labour in vaine, nor beget with trouble: for they are the high blessed seede of the lord, and their seruauntes with them. And it shalbe, that or euer thei call, I shall answere them. While thei are yet but thinkyng how to speake, I shall heare them. * The Wolfe and the Lambe shall feede together, and the Lion shall eate hay like the Bullocke. * But yearth shalbee the serpentes meate. There shall no man hurte nor slea another, in all my holy hill, saieth the Lorde.

Thus saieth the Lorde: * heauen is my seate, and the yearth is my footestoole, where shall now the house stande, that ye wil buylde vnto me? And where shalbe the place, that I wil dwell in? As for these thynges my hande hath made them all, & thei are al created, saieth the lorde. But whether * of them shall I regarde? Euen him that is poore, & is lowly troubled in spirite, and trembleth in awe of my woorde. For whoso sleath an Oxe for me, doth me as great dishonor, as he that killeth a man. He that killeth a sheepe for me, kaccheth a Dogge. He that bringeth me meate offeryng, offereth Swines blood. Whoso burneth me a memorial of encense, praiseth the thyng that is vnright. Yea take thei their owne thynges in hande, and their soule delighteth in their abominations. * Therefore will I also haue pleasure in laughing their confusion and the thyng that thei feare, will I bryng vpon them. For * when I called, no man gaue answere: when I spake, thei would not heare: but did wickednes before myne eyes, & chose the thynges that displeased me. Heare the

C. Esa.lxvj.a. Then shalbe heard a greate noyce from the citee and temple, the voyce of the Lorde, that will rewarde, and recompence his enemies, like as when a wife bringeth furthe a manne child, or euer she suffer the pain of the birth, and anguishe of the trauaill. Who euer heard or saw suche thynges? both the ground beare in one daie, or are the people borne at once, as Sion trauailed in child birthe, and bare her sonnes? For thus saieth the Lord: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my self? Am not I he that beareth, and maketh barren: saieth thy God? Reioyce with Ierusalem, and bee glad with her, all ye that loue her: be* ioyfull with her, all ye that mourned for her. For ye shall sucke comfort out of her breastes, and be satisfied. Ye shal taste, and haue delight in the plentifoulnes of her power. For thus saith the Lorde: behold, I will let peace flote her, like a water floud, and the mighte of the Heathen, like a flowyng streme. Then shall ye sucke, ye shalbe borne vpon her sides and be ioyfull vpon her knees. For like as a childe is comforted of his mother, so shal I comfort you, and ye shalbe comforted in Ierusalem. And when ye se this, your hart shall reioyce, and* your bones shall florishe like an herbe. Thus shall the hande of the Lorde be knowen, emong his seruauntes, and his indignacion emong his enemies. For behold, the Lorde shall come with fire, and his Charret shalbe like a whirle wynde, that he maie recompence his vengeaunce in his wrathe, and his indignacion, with the flame of fire. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesshe with the fire, and with his sweard, and there shalbee a greate nombet slain of the Lorde. Suche as haue made themselues holy and cleane in the gardens, and those that haue eaten swines flesh, mice, and other abhominacions, shalbee taken awaie together, saieth the Lorde. So shall your seede and your name continue. And there shalbe a newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabboth for the other, and all flesshe shall come to worshippe before me (saieth the Lorde.) ¶ The ende of the boke of the Prophete Esaie.

HEre are the Sermons of Jeremie, the sonne of Helkiah the priest, one of them that dwelt at *Anathoth, in the land of Benamin, when the Lorde had first spoken with hym, in the tyme of Iosiah the sonne of Amō kyng of Juda, in the xiij. yere of his reigne: and so durying vnto the tyme of Jehoakim, the sonne of Josiah, kyng of Juda, * and vntill the. xi. yere of Zedekiah the sōne of Josiah kyng of Juda were ended, when Jerusalem was taken, euen in the fifth moneth. The worde of the Lorde spake thus vnto me: Before* I fashioned thee in thy mothers wombe, I did knowe thee. And or euer thou waste borne, I sanctified thee, and ordeined thee to be a Prophet vnto the people. Then saied I: Oh* Lorde God, I cannot speake, for I am yet but young. And the Lorde answered me thus. Say not so, I am to yong. For * thou shalte go to all that I shall sende thee vnto, and* whatsoeuer I commaund thee that shalt thou speake. Be not afraied of their faces. For I am with thee, to deliuer thee, saieth the Lorde. And* with that, the Lorde stretched out his hand, and touched my mouth and the same Lorde said vnto me, behold: I put my wordes in thy mouth, and behold, this day do I set thee ouer the people and kyngdoms, that thou maiest roote out, breake of, destroye and make wast, and that thou maiest build vp, and plant. After this the Lorde spake vnto me saying: Jeremie, what seest thou? And I said: I se a rod of an Almonde tree. Then said the Lorde vnto me: thou hast seen right, for I wil make hast spedely vpō my word, to performe it. It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me again, and said: what seest thou? And I said: I do se a seething* pot looking from out of the North. Then said the Lorde vnto me: out of the North the shall come a plague, vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I* will call all the kyndredes of the kyng thinges of the Worthe (saieth the Lorde.) And thei shall come, and every one shall sette his

And through them shall I declare my iudge-ple of the land. Thei shall fight against thee,

I am with thee, to deliuer thee, saith the lord.

The .5. Chapiter.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: go thy waie, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, and saie thus: saieth the Lorde: I remember thee, for the kyndnesse of thy youth, and because of thy stedfast loue, at the tyme of thy despousyng, in that thou fo-lowest me through the wildernesse, in an vntilled lande. Israell was an hallowed thyng vnto the Lorde, and so was his first fruites all: thei that deuoure Israell shall offende: misfortune shall fall vpon them, saith the lorde.
Heare therefore the worde of the Lorde. O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacion of the house of Israell. Thus saieth the Lorde: What vnfaithfulnesse founde your fathers in me, that thei went so farre away fro me, fallyng to lightnesse, and beyng so vain?
Thei thought not in their hartes: we haue left the lorde, that brought vs out of the land of Egipt: that led vs through the wildernes, through a desert and rough lande, through a drie and deadly lande: yea, a lande that no man had go en through, and where no manne had dwelte. And when I had brought you into a pleasaunt well buylded lande, that ye might enioye the fruites, and all the commodities of the same: ye went furth and defiled my land and brought myne heritage to abhominacion.
The priestes themselues saied not: where is the Lorde? Thei that had the lawe in their handes, knowe not me. The Shepherdes offended against me. The Prophetes did seruice vnto Baal, and folowed suche thynges, as shall bryng them no profite. Wherefore, I am constrained (saith the Lorde) to make my complaint vpon you, and vpon your children children. Go into the iles of Cethim, & loke well, and vnto Cedar, take diligent heede and se whether suche thynges be doen there: whether the Gentiles themselues, deale so falsly and vntrewly with their Goddes (whiche yet are no goddes in deede.) But my people haue geuen vnto their high honor, for a thing that maie not help them. Be astonished, (O ye hea-uens) be afraied and abashed at suche a thyng saith the lorde. For my people haue doen two euilles. Thei haue forsaken me, the well of the water of life, and digged them pittes: yea, vile and broken pittes, that can holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the houshold? Why then is he spoyled? Why doo thei roare and crie then vpon hym as a lion?
Thei haue made his land waste, his cities are so brent vp, that there is no man dwellyng in them. Yea, the children of Noab & Taphnis haue defiled thy necke. Commeth not this vnto thee, because thou hast forsaken the lorde thy God, euer sence he led thee by the waie? and what hast thou now to do in the waie of Egipt: to drinke the water of Nilus? either what maiest thou in the waie of Assiria? To drinke water of the flood. Thyne awne wickednes shall reprone thee, and thy turnyng awaie shall condempne thee, that thou maiest knowe and vnderstand, how euill and hurtfull a thyng it is, that thou hast forsaken the lord thy God, and not feared hym, saieth the lorde God of hostes. I haue euer broken thy yoke of old, and burst thy bondes, yet saiest thou: I wil no more offende, but (like an harlot) thou runnest about vpon al high billes, & emong al grene trees, where as I planted thee a noble vine, and a good roote, whose seede is al faith-full. How art thou then turned into a bitter vnfruitfull and straunge grape? yea, and that so sore, that though thou wasshest thee with Nitrum, & make thy selfe to sauor with that swete smelling herbe of Worth: yet in my sight thou art stained with thy wickednesse, saieth the lord thy God. Say not now, I am not vnclene and I haue not folowed Baal. Looke vpon thyne awne waies in the vnndes, valleis, and denes, to waite thou knowe, what thou hast doen? Thou art like a swifte dromedary, that goeth easely his waie, and thy wantonnes is like a wilde asse, that seeth the wildernesse, and that snoffeth & blowseth as his wil. Who can tame thee? Al thei that seke thee, shal not faile, but finde thee in thyne awne vncleanesse.
Kepe thou thy foote from nakednesse, and thy throte fro thirst, and without shame thou answerest. No, for I haue loued straungers, and them will I folowe. Like as a theefe that is taken with the deede, commeth to shame, euen so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the common people, their kynges and rulers, their priestes and Prophetes. For they saie to a stocke, thou art my father: and to a stone: thou hast begotten me, yea, they haue turned their backe vpon me, and not their face. But in the tyme of their trouble, when they saie, Aryse vp, and helpe vs: I shall answere them.
Where are now thy Goddes, that thou hast made thee? Let them aryse vp and helpe thee Euangelion. The.iij. Chapiter.

Deut. xxiij.a Commonly, when* a manne putteth awaie his wife, and she goeth from hym, and ma-rieth with another, then the question is: should Dete..6.a. he resorte vnto her any more after that? Is Ezech.xvi.b. not this sield then defiled and vnclene? * But as for thee, thou hast played the harlot with many lovers: yet turne again to me, saith the Lorde. Lifte vp thyne eyes vnto the hill Sul-ters, and looke if thou bee not defiled with whoredom. Thou hast waited for them in the stretes, and as a murtherer in the wildernes.
Through thy whoredom and shamefull blas-B. phemies: is the lande defiled. * This is the Ji.Me.xvi.a. cause that the rain and euenyng dewe hath ceased. Thou hast gotten thee a whores fo-hedde, and wilt not be ashamed. Is it wonder thou saie vnto me: O my father, thou arte he that hast brought me vp, and ledde me fro my youth: wilt thou then put me awaie, and came of for euer? Or wilt thou withdrawe thy sele cleane fro me? Nevertheless, thou spea-C. kest suche woordes, but thou art euer doyng Jere.i.a.b.b. worse and worse. The* Lorde saied vnto me: Ezech.xxij.b in the tyme of Josia the kyng, hast thou sen what the rebellion of Israell hath doen? and emong all the chiefe Trees, and there played the harlotte, hast thou seen also (when she had doen all this) how I saied vnto her: that she should turne again vnto me, and yet she is not returned? * Juda that vnfaithfull sister of hers also sawe this, namely: that altere I had well seen the aduoutrie of the chil-dryng harlotte Israell, * I put her awaie, and gaue her a bill of denouncement. For all this, her vnfaithfull sister Juda was not ashamed, but wente backe, and played the whore also: yea, and the noyse of her whoredome, hath defiled the whole lande. For she hath committed fornication, with stones and stockes. Neuertheless, her vnfaithfull sister Juda, is not* turned vnto me againe with her whole harte, but fainedly, saieth the Lorde.
And the Lorde saied vnto me: * The backe-sliding Israell is more righteous, then the vnfaithfull Juda, and therefore go preache these wordes towarde the North, and saie: thou disobedient Israell, turne again (saieth the Lorde) and I will not lette my wrathe fall vpon you, for I am mercifull (saieth the Lorde) and I will not alwaie* beare displeasure against thee: but this I will, that thou knowe the greate blasphemies. Namely, that thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken the Lorde thy GOD, and hast made thy self partaker of straunge Goddes,* vnder all grene trees, but hast had no will to heare my voyce, saith the Lorde. * O ye disobedient children, turne againe saieth the Lorde, and I will be maried with you. For I will take one oute of the citee, and twoo out of one generacion, from emong you, and bryng you into Syon:
and will geue you herde menne after myne awne mynd, which shall feede you with learnyng and wisedome. Moreover, when ye be encreased and multiplied in the lande, then (saieth the Lorde) there shall no more boaste bee made, of the Arke of the Lordes Testament: and no manne shall thynke vpon it, neither shall any manne make mencion of it, nor from thence it shall neuer be visited, nor honored with giftes. Then* shall Jerusalem bee called the lordes seate, and al Heathen shalbe gathered vnto it: for the name of the Lordes sake, which shalbe set vp at Jerusalem. And fro that tyme furth, thei shall folowe no more the imagination of their awne frowarde hart.
In those dayes that be of the house of Juda, shal go vnto the house of Israel* & thei shal come togethers out of the North, into the same lande that I have geuen your fathers. I have shewed also, how I tooke thee vp, beeyng but a child, and gaue thee a pleasaunt land for thine heritage: yea, and a goodly porte of the Heathen, and how I commaunded thee, that thou shouldest* cal me father onely, & not to forsake fro me. But like as a woman vnfaithfully forsayeth her husband, so are ye vnfaithful vnto me

(O ye house of Israell) saith the lorde. And therfore, the voyce of the children of Israel was heard on high, weping and wailyng: for thei haue defiled their waie, & forgotten god their Lorde. O ye disobedient children, turne again, (saying, we are thyne, for thou art the Lorde our God:) and so shall I heale youre backeturnynges. Truly, vainly trusteth he for healeth, that loketh for it in the hilles, and in vain is it sought in the multitude, of the mountaines, *but the healthe of Israell, standeth onely vpon God our Lorde. Confusion *hath deuoured our fathers labour from our youth vp: yea, their shepe and their bullockes, their sonnes and daughters. So do we also lepe in our confusion, and shame couereth vs, *for we & our fathers, frō our youth vp, vnto this daie, haue synned against the lorde our God, & haue not obeyed the voyce of the lord our god

The.iij. Chapiter.

If Israell, if thou wilte turne thee, then turne vnto me, saieth the Lorde. And if thou wilt put awaie thyne abhominacions out of my sight, thou shalt not be moued: and *shalt sweare. The Lorde liueth: in truthe, in equitie and righteousnesse: and all people shalbee fortunable, and ioyful in hym. For thus saith the Lorde, to all Juda and Jerusalem: plowe your lande, and sowe not emong the thornes. Be *Circumcised in the Lorde, and cut awaie the foreskynne of your hartes, all ye of Juda and all the indwellers of Jerusalem, that my indignacion, breake not out like fire & kindle, so that no man maie quenche it, because of the wickednes, of your imaginacions. Preache in Juda and Jerusalem, crie out and speake blowe the Trompettes in the lande, crye that euery manne maie heare, gather together and saie: gather you together, and we will go into strong cities. Set vp the tokens in Sion spede you, and make no tarying. For I will bryng a greate plague, and a greate destruccion from the North. For the spoyler of the Gentiles, is broken vp from his place, as a Lyon out of his denne, that he maie make thy lande waist, and destroye the cities, so that no man maie dwell therin. Wherefore, gird your selues about with sacke clothe, mourne and wepe, for the fearfull wrathe of the Lorde is not withdrawen frō vs. At the same time (saith the Lorde) the harte of the King and of the princes shalbe gone, the priestes shalbe astonied, and the Prophetes shalbe sore afrayed. Then saied I, O Lorde God, hast thou then deceiued this people, and Jerusalem, saiyng: ye shal haue peace, and now the sweard goeth through their liues? Then shall it be saied to the people, and to Jerusalem: a strong wynd in the high places of the wilderues, commeth through the waie of my people: but neither to fan, nor to clense. Even that shal there come then will I geue sentence vpon them. For lo he commeth, howe like a cloude, & his chaunetes are like a tempeste: his *horse men are swifter then the Eagle. Wo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Jerusalem, washe *thyne harte frō wickednesse, that thou maiest be helped. How long shall thy noysome thoughtes remain with thee? For a voyce from Dan and from the hille of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruccion. Remember the Heathen, and geue Jerusalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that watchers come out of far countries. Thei haue cried out against the cities of Juda. And thei haue beset her about in euery place, like as the watche men in the field: for thei haue prouoked me to wrath, saith the lorde. Thy waies and thy thoughtes, haue brought thee vnto this, euche is thyne awne wickednes and disobedience, and because it is a better thyng, it hath striken thee to the harte. Ah my belly, ah my bely (shalt thou crie) how is my harte so sore? My harte panteth within me: I cannot bee still, for I haue heard the crieng of the trompettes, and peales of warre. Thei cry: murther vpon murther, the whole lande shall perishe. Immediatly, my tentes wer destroyed and my hangynges, in the twinkelyng of an eye. How long shall I se the tokens of warre and heare the noyse of the trompets? Neuertheles, this shal come vpon them, because *my people is become foolishe, and hath not knowen me. Thei *are the children of foolishnes, and without any discrecion. To do euill, thei haue wit enough: but to do well, thei haue no wisedome. I haue loked vpon the yearth, and lo, it was waist and voyde. I loked toward heuen, and it had no shine. I beheelde the mountaines: and lo, thei trembled, and all the hilles wer in a feare. I loked about me, & there was no body, & all the birdes of the ayre wer awaie. I marked well, and the plowed fielde was become waste, yea: all their cities were broken doune, at the presence of the lorde, and indignacion of his wrath. For thus hath the lorde said, the whole lande shalbe desolate, yet will I not then haue doen. And therfore shal the yerth mourne, & the heauen be sory aboue for the thyng that I haue spoke (to the prophetes) purposed & taken vpō me to do, shal not repent me. And I wil not go frō it. The whole land shall flie, for the noyse of the horsmen & bow men: thei shal run into denes, into woddes, and climbe vp the stony rockes: all the cities shalbe voyde, & no man dwellyng therin: what wilt thou now do, thou beyng destroyed? For though thou clothest thy self with Crarlet, & deckest thee with golde: *though thou paintest thy face with colours, yet shalt thou trim thy self in vain. For those that hetherto haue been thy great louers, shal abhorre thee, Pentong ii. 1 Orke thorowe Jerusalem, beholde and see seeke through her stretes also within, if ye can find one man that doth equall e right or seketh for the trueth, and I shal spare that citie saith the lorde. 2 For though they saine say, the lorde liueth, yet doe they sweare too deceiue. Where as thou o lord lokest only vpon fayth and truth. Thou hast scourged the but they toke no repentaunce, thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused thy correction. Thei made their faces harder then a stone, and would not amende. Therfore Jer. 5, vs. c. M. I thought in my selfe, peraduenture they are so symple and coolyshe that they vnderstande nothing of the lordes waye and iudgementes of our god. 3 Therfore will I go vnto theyre heades and rulers, and talke with them, if thei know the waye of the lord, & the iudgementes of our god. But these in lyke maner haue broken the yoke, & burste the bondes in sunder. Deut. xxxii. b * Wherfore a lyon out of the wood hath hurt them, and a woulfe in the euening shal destroy them. The Leopard doth lye lurking by their cities to teare in peces, all theym that come therout. For their offences are multiplyed, and their departing away is encreased. Vnlde I then for all this haue mercy vpon the? thy children haue forsaken me, and * sworne by them that are no Goddes. And albe it, that I fedde them to the ful, yet thei fell to adultery and haunte harlottes houses. Osee. iii. a Hoseae. iii. a ¶ In the myre of vncleanly lust, they are become lyke the stoned horse: 4 euery manne neyeth at his neighbours wyfe: * Should not I correcte thys? saith the lorde? Shoulde not I be auenged of euery people that is lyke vnto this? Clime vp vpon their walles, beate theym doune, but destroy them not vtterly. Take away their forteresses, because they are not the lordes. For vnfaithfulnes hathe the house of Israel, and Juda forsaken me, saieth the lorde. 5 they haue denied the lorde, and sayde: it is not he that loked vpon vs. * Vnto them shal no misfortune come vpō vs, ne shal se neither sworde nor hunger. 6 And for the warning of the prophetes they take it but for wynderyen, there is none of these whiche wil tel them, that the thinges shal happen vnto them. Wherfore thus saith the lord god of hostes: by cause ye speake suche wordes, beholde * The wordes that are in thy mouthe wyll I turne to fire, & make the people to be wood, that the fire may consume the. 7 Lo I wyl bring a people, vpon you from farre. O house of Israell saith the lorde, it is a mighty people, a people of olde, a people whose tonge thou knowest not, neyther vnderstandest what they say. Their arrowes are lyke vnto open graues, they themselues be very giauntes. This people shall eate vp thy frute & thy meate: yea, they shall deuoure thy sonnes and thy daughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes. They shal eate vp thy grapes and figges. & so thy strong, and wel defenced cities, wherein thou diddest trust, they shal bring to pouerty, and that throughe the sweard. Neuerthelesse I wil not then haue done with you saith the lorde. Ezech. xxxiii. c. Jeremy. xvi. c. Deu. xxviii. 8 And if they shal wherfore doth the lord our god al this vnto vs? Then answer them: 9 because, that like as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge goddes in youre owne lande, euen so shal ye serue other gods also in a straunge land. Preache this vnto the house of Jacob and cry it out in Juda, and say thus: Heare this thou coolyshe and vnderstode people, 10 ye haue eies but ye se not me, saith the lorde. Are ye not ashamed to feare me? 11 which bind the sea with the sande, so that it cannot passe his bondes. For though it rage yet it can doo nothyng, & though the wawes ther of doo swell, yet maye they not go ouer. But this people hathe a false and obstinate harte, they are departed, & gone away from me. Thei thinke not in their hartes: O let vs feare the lorde our god that geueth vs rayne early and late, when nede is whiche keepeth euer til the harueste for vs ye reip. * Neuerthelesse, youre wickednes haue turned these from you, and youre sinnes haue robbed you therof. For among my people are founde wicked persones, that priuily lay snares for other men, to take theym and destroye them. And lyke as a net is ful of birdes, so are their houses ful of that which they haue gotten with falshed and disceit. Therof commeth their great substaunce and riches, hereof are they fat and wealthye, and are more mischieuous then any other. 12 They ministre not the Lawe: they make no ende of the fatherlesse cause: yea, and they prospere: yet they Iudge not the poore according to equitie. 13 Should I not punish these thinges? saith the lorde? should I not be auenged of al suche people as these be? Horrible and grieuous thynges are done in the lande. The prophetes teache falsely, and my people lyketh pleasures therin? What wil come therof at last?

Make battell against her (that they may not) let vs go vp, while it is yet daye. Alas the daye goeth awaye, and the nyghte shadowes fall downe. Aryse let vs go up by nyghte, and destroy her strong holdes. For thus hath the lorde of hoostes commaunded. Hew downe her trees, and set vp bulwarkes against Jerusalem, for she is come, that this citie must be punished: for in her is nothing but violence. Lyke as a Fountaine powreth out her waters, soo she powreth out her wickednesse. Robberye and vnrighteousnes is heard in her, continually in my sight, for sowe & slaughter. Amend the o Jerusalem lest I withdrawe my harte from the, and make the desolate, and thy land also that no man dwell in it. For thus sayeth the lorde of hoostes. The residew of Israell shalbe gathered, as a remnaunte of grapes, And therfore turne thy hand ageyne into the basket lyke the Grape gatherer. But vnto whome shall I speake whome shall I warne that he may take hede? Their eares are so vncircumcised, that they may not heare. Behold they se the woorde of the Lorde but for a scorne, & haue no lust therto. & therfore I am ful of thine indignatiō, (o lorde) that I may suffre no longer, but sheadde it oute vpon the children that are without and vpon al yong menne. Yea, the manne muste be taken prysoner with the wife, and the aged with the creple. Their houses with their landes, and wiues, shalbe turned vnto straungers when I stretche oute my hande vpon thinhabitaunte of this lande, sayth the Lorde. For from the least vnto the most, they hang al vpon couetousnes. And from the Prophette too the Priestes, they goo al about with falshod and lies.* And beside that, they healle the hurte of my people withe sweete Woordes: saying: peace, peace, when there is no peace at al. Were they ashamed when they hadde committed abhominacion? Truly nay they be past shame.* And therfore they shal fal among the slayne, and in the houre when I shall vysyte them, they shall be brought doune (saieth the Lorde). Thus sayeth the Lorde: goo into the stretes, consider and make inquisicion for the olde way, and if it be the good and ryght way then go therin, that ye may find rest for your soules, but they say we will not walke therin, and I wil set watche men ouer you, and thee to take hede vnto the voice of the trompet. But they sayde we will not take hede. Herke therfore ye gentiles, and thou Congregacion shalt knowe, what I haue deuised for them. Heare thou earth also, beholde I wil cause a plague to come vpon this people, euen the frute of their owne imaginacions. For they haue not ben obedient vnto my Lawes, but abhorred them. Wherefore bring ye me incense fro Saba, and sweete smelling Calamus, fro a farre countrey. Your burnte offringes pleace me, and your sacrifices are not swete vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde, behold, I will make this people fall, and there shall fall from amonge them, the father with the children, one neighboure shall perish with an other. Thus sayeth the lorde, *Beholde there shal come a people from the North: and a great people shal aryse fro the ende of the yerth, with bowes and with darts shal they be weaponed. It is a rough and fearce people, and an vnmerciful people, they roore roareth lyke the sea, they ryde vpō horses wel appointed to the battail against thee o daughter Syon. The fame of them haue we hearde. Our armes are feble, heauines & sorow is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelling with childe. Let no man go forth into the fielde, let no man come vpon the highe streate, for the Swearde and feare of the enemie is on euerye side. Wherefore gird a sacke cloth about thee (O thou daughter of my people) & sprinckle thy self with ashes: mourne, and wepe bitterly as vpon thine onely & loued sonne. For the destroyer shal sodeynlie fall vpon vs. The lorde I sette for a stronge tower (O thou prophet) and a wel fenced wal among my people, to seke and trie their waies For they are al stubborne apostataes, and fallen awaye, walking deceitfully, they are cleane drosse, and Iron, for they hurt and destroy euery man. The billowes are burnte in the fire, the leadde is not molten: the Welter melteth in vayne for the euell is not taken awai from them. Therfore doo they call them naughty Siluer, because the Lorde hath cast them out.

Wherfore I wil geue their wyues vnto aleauntes and their feldes to destroyers. * For from the lowest to the highest, they followe all filthy lucre, and from the prophete vnto the priest, they deale all with lies. * Neuertheles, they heale the hurte of my people verye slyghtly, saying, peace, peace, where is no peace at al. Were they ashamed when they haue abhominable thinges doe they? yet they are not ashamed: yea, they knowe of no shame. * Wherfore in the time of their visitacion, they shal fall among the dead bodies, and bee ouer throwen saieth the Lorde. Moreouer I wyl consume them in dede sayth the lorde so that there shal not be one grape vpõ the vine, nor one figgue vpon the figtree, and the leaues shalbe pluckt of. And the thinge that I haue geuen them shalbe taken from them [why prolong wee the time. Lette vs gather our selues together, and go into the stroge cities, and there shal we be in rest. For the Lorde oure God hath putte vs to silence, and geuen vs water mixt with gal to drincke, because wee haue sinned against him. * We loked for peace and we fare not the better, we wayted for the time of healthe, And loo, here is nothing but trouble. The noyse of hys horses is heard from Dan, the whole lande is afrayed at the neighing of hys strog horses, for they are come in, and haue deuoured the land, with all that is in it, the Cities and those that dwel therein. * Moreouer I wil sende Cockatrices and Serpentes among you (that wil not be charmed) and they shall bite you saieth the lorde. I wolde haue comfort against sorowe, but sorow is come vpon me, and heauines bereth my hart, for lo, the voice of the crieng of my people is heard, for fere of the, that come from a farre country. Is not the lord in Syon? Is not the kyng in her? Wherefore then haue they grieued me (shal the Lord say) with their Images, and soliue straunge fashions of a forrein god? The Haruelle is gone, the Sommer hath an ende, and we are not holpen. I am sore vexed because of the hurte of my people. I am heauy and abashed, as there not Treacle at Gilead? Is there no Phisicien there? Why then is not the helth of my people recouered.

¶ The. ix. Chapitre.

O Who will geue my head water enoughe and a well of teares for mine eies, that I may weepe day and night for the slaughter of my people? Wold god that I had a cottage some where farre from folke, that I might leaue my people, and goo from them, for they be al aduoutrers and a vnpacyent folke. They bende their tongues like bowes for lyes and lies. They waxe strog vpon earth but not for the truthe, there maye nothing alwaye withal in the worlde. For they goo from one wickednesse to an other, and wil not know me (sayth the lorde.) * Yea one must kepe hymselfe from an other, no mã may safely trust his owne brother, for one brother vndermineth an other, one neighbour begileth an other. Yea, one dissembleth with an other, and their talke with no truthe. * They haue practised their tongues to lye, and taken great payne to be mischiefe. Thou sittest in the middest of a deceiptful people, whiche for very dissemblyng refused, wil not know me (saith the lord, therfore thus (sayth the lorde of hostes, behold, I wil melt them, & try them, for what should I els do to my people. * Their tongues are like sharpe Arrowes, to speake deceypte. With their mouthe they speake peaceably to their neighbour, but priuely they lay wayte for him. * Should not I punishe them for these thynges (sayth the lorde? Or should not I be auenged of any such people as this? Vpõ the mountaynes wyll I take vp a lamentacion, & a sorowful cry and a mourning vpon the faire plaines of the wildernes. Namely how they are so burnte vp: that no man goeth there any more. Ye a man shal not heare one beaste crye there. Birdes and cattal are gone from thence * I wil make Jerusalem also an heape of stones, and a denne of venymous wormes. And I wil make the Cities of Juda waste, so that no man shal dwel therein. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstande this? Or to whome hathe the lorde spoken by mouth, that he may shew vs this? and say, O thou lande, why perisshest thou so? Wherefore art thou so burnt vp, and lyke a wildrenes, that no man goeth thorowe? Yea, the lorde himself told the same vnto them that forsoke his law, and kept not the thing that he gaue them in commaundement, neyther lued therafter * but followed the wickednes of their owne hearte, and serued straunge goddes, as their fathers taught them. Therfore thus (sayth the lord of hostes the god of Israell: Beholde I wil fede this people with Woorme woodde, And geue them Gall to drincke: * I wyll scatter them also among the Heathen, whome neyther they, nor their forefathers haue knowen, * and I wyl sende a Swearde amongeste them, to persecute them vntil I bringe them to nought

More ouer thus (sayeth the Lorde of hoostes) beeware of the vengeaunce that hangeth ouer you, And cal for mourninge wyues, and sende for wyse wemenne, that they come hyderye, and synge a mournynge Songue ouer you, that the Teares may fall oute of youre eyen, and that youre eye Lidder may gushe oute wythe Watre.

byon, O howe are wee to soze destroyed? O how are we spiteously confounded? we must sozsake our owne natural country, & wee are thus out of our own lodginges. Yet heare the wordes of the lozde (O ye wemen) & let youre eares regard the wordes of hys mouth, that ye maye learne your doughters to mourne, and that every one may teache hys neighboures to make lamentacion, namely thus: deathe is climbing vp in at our windowes, he is come into our houses, to destroye the childe beforze the woze, and the yong man in the strete. But tell thou plainly, thus sayeth the lozde. The dedde bodies of men shall lye vpon the ground as the doung vpon the fielde and as the haie after the mower, and there shalbe no mā to take them vp. Thus sayth the lozd, Let not the wyse mā reioyce in hys wisedō, nor the stōg man in his strength, nyther the riche mā in his riches. But whoso will reioyce let hym reioyce in this, that he vnderstandeth & knoweth me: for I am the lozd which vse mercye, equitie and rightuousnes vpō earth. For in soze have I pleasure in such things, sayth the lozde. Beholde the time commeth sayth the lozde, that I wyl visit all theim, whose foreskinne is vncircumcised. The Egiptiens, the Iues, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the haue Madianites that dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentiles are vncircumcised in the flesh, but all the house of Israel, are vncircumcised in the harte.

Here the wordes of the lozde that he speketh vnto thee. O thou house of Israell. Thus sayth the lozd. Ye shal not learne after the maner of the heathē, ye shal not be afraid for the tokens of heauen: for the heathen are afraid of such: yea al the ructomes and lawes of the gentiles are nothing but vanite. They hew doune a tree in the wood, with the handes of the worckmā, & fashion it with an axe, they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nailes, and hammer, that it mone not. It standeth as stiffe as the palme tree & neither speake nor go on fote, but must be borne. Be not afraied of suche, for they cā neyther good nor euel. But there is none like vnto the, O lozde, and great is the name of thy power. Who would not feare the? O king of the gentils, for thine is the worship. For among al the wise men of the Gentiles, and in al their kingdomes, there is none that may be likened vnto thee. They are altogether vnlearned and vnwyse in this one thyng. All their cunning is but vanitie: Namelye wood. Syluer: whych is brought oute of Tharsis, and beaten to plates: and gold from Ophir, a worke that is made with the hōd of the craftesman, and the casters cloched with purple and Scarlet, euen so is the

lozde is a true God, a liuyng God, and an euerlasting kyng. At his wrath, the earth shaketh, al the Gentiles maye not abide hys indignacion. As for their gods thus you shal say vnto thē: thei are gods, that made neither heauen nor yearth, therfore shal they perishe from the yearthe, and from all thinges vnder heauen. But (as for our God) he made the earth with hys power, and with hys wyte dome doeth he ordre the whole rompasse of the worlde, with hys discretiō hath he spred oute the heauens. At his voyce the waters gather together in the ayre: he draweth vp the cloudes from the vttermost partes of the erth: he turneth the lightning to rayn, & bringeth forth the windes out of their treasures. His wisedome maketh al men fooles: and confounded be al crafters of images, for that their craft, is but a vayne thing, and hath no lyfe. The vayne craftesmen with their worckes that they in their vanitie haue made, shal perysh one with an other in tyme of visitacion. Neuer the lesse Jacobs porcion is no such but it is hee that made all thinges, and Israel is the rodde of his enheritaunce. The lozde of hostes is hys name. Gather vp thy wares oute of the lande thou that sittest in the strong place. For thus sayth the Lozde. Behold, I wyl now throw as with a stone ling the inhabitours of this lande at ouce, and wil bring trouble vpon them that they shall proue true, the worde that I haue spoken by the prophetes. Alas howe am I hurte? Alas howe painful are my scourges vnto me? For I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and al my cordes are broken. My children are gone from me, and can no where be founde. No mowe haue I none to set vp my tent, & to set vp my hangynges. For the herd men haue done foolyshly that they haue not sought the lozde. Therefore haue they dealt vnwisely with their cattaill, and are al scattered abrode. Behold, the noyse of them is harde at hande, and greate sedicion out of the north to make the Cities of Juda a Wildernes, and a dwelling place for dragons. Now I know o lozde that it is not in mānes power to ordre his own wayes or to rule hys owne steppes and goinges. Therfore chasten thou vs, o lozde, but with iudgemēt not in thy wrathe, bring vs not brely to naught. Poure out thine indignacion rather vpon the Gentiles, that know the not and vpon the people that cal not on thy name: for that they haue deuoured, deuoured, and destroyed Jacob: and haue made his habitacion wast.

The. xi. Chapitre.

This is an other sermon, wherin the lozde commaunded Jeremy for to preache saying: Heare the wordes of the couenaūte, and speake vnto the men of Juda, and to al theim

thus (thus) sayth the lorde god of Israel. Cursed be euery one that is not obedient to the wordes of this couenaunt: which I commaunded vnto youre fathers, what time as I brought them out of Egipte, from the yerne bolnace, saying: Be obedient vnto my voyce and do according to all that I commaunde you so shall you be my people, and I wylbe youre god, and wyl kepe my promise, that I haue sworne vnto your fathers. Manyche that I wold gene the a land that floweth with milk and hony, as ye see, it is come to passe vnto this day. Then answered I and sayd Amen. Let it be euen so lorde as thou sayeste. Then the lord sayd vnto me agayne: Preache these wordes in the cities of Iuda & round about Ierusalem, & say heare the wordes of this couenaunt that ye may kepe them, for I haue diligently exhorted youre fathers euer sence the tyme that I brought them out of the land of Egipte vnto this day. I gaue them warnyng betimes saying: Herken vnto my voice. Neuertheles they wold not obey me, nor enclyne their eres vnto me, but folowed the wicked imaginacions of their owne hartes. And therfore, I haue accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of this couenaut, that I gaue the to kepe which they not withstanding haue not kepte. And the lord said vnto me: Is it found out that whole Israel, and all the citizens of Ierusalē are gone back. They haue turned themselues to the blasphemies of their forefathers which he had no lust to heare my wordes. Euen like wise haue these also folowed straunge gods, & worshipped them. The house of Israel and Iuda haue broken my couenaunte, which I haue made with the theire fathers. Therefore thus (thus) sayth the lord. Behold I wyl sende a plage vpon them, which they shal not be able to escape, and though they crie vnto me, I wyll not heare them. Then shal the townes of Iuda and the citizens of Ierusalem go, and call vpon theire Goddes vnto whome they haue made their oblacions, but they shal not be able to help them in tyme of their trouble. For as many cities, as thou hast O Iuda, so many gods hast thou also. And lyke how many stretes there be in the, O Ierusalem so many shameful altars haue ye set vp, altars I say to offre vpon vnto Baall. Therefore prayse thou not for this people, neither bidde thou prayse nor prayer for them, for though they crie vnto me in their trouble yet will I not heare them. What parte hathe my beloued in my house, & yet he hath wrought abomination, seruing many Goddes? The holy flesh of the offringes is from the Temple are gone from ther O Iuda, and thou when thou hast euel, makest thy boaste still. The lorde called the a greue olyue tree, a fayre one & fruitfull one, a goodly one: but vpon great clamour hath he set fyre vpon it, & the braunches of it are broken. For the lorde of hostes that planted the, hath wrought a plage for the, for the house of Israel & Iuda for the euel that ye haue wrought to prouoke me to wrath, in that ye offre vnto Baall.

This o lorde I learned of the, and thou hast shewed it, for thou hast shewed me their imaginacions. But I am as a meke lambe or oxe that is caried awaye to be slaine, nor knowing that they had deuised euel a counsell against me, saying: We wyl destroy him & his meate with woodde, and perish him oute of the lande of the liuynge: that his name shalbee neuer thought vpon. Therfore I wil declare the vnto o lorde of hostes thou righteous Iudge thou that tryest the reynes and the hartes: let me se the auenged of them: For vnto the hast I committed my cause. Therfore thus spake the lorde of the citizens of Anathoth that sought to slea me saying: Prearche not vnto vs in the name of the lorde, or ells thou shalte dye of our handes. Thus I say sayd the lord of hostes. Beholde I wyl visite you. Youre yong men shal dye with the sworde, youre sonnes and your daughters shall vtterly dye of hunger, so that none shal remayne. For vpon the citizeines of Anathoth wyl I bring a plague, euen the yeare of their visitacion.

O Lord thou art more righteous the that I shuld dispute with the. Neuertheles let me talke with the in thynges reasonable. Now happeneth it that the way of the vngodly is so prosperous, and that it goeth so wel with them whyche (without any fawte) offen and lyue in wyckednesse. Thou plantest them they take rote, they grow, & bring furth fruite. They boast muche of the, yet art thou farre from their reynes. But thou O lord to whom I am wel knowen) thou that hast sene and proued my hearte, take them awaye, lyke as a sheep is caried to the slaughterhouse, and poynt them for the day of slaughter. How long shal the lande mourne, and all the herbes of the felde grene, for the wickednesse of them that dwel therin. The cattel and the birdes are gone: yet say they (vnto) God wil not destroy vs vtterly. Seyng thou art wery as running with the footemen, how wylte thou then runne with horses? in a peaceable lande maydest thou be safe. But how wilte thou doe in the swelling pryde of Iordanes? For thy brethren and thy kinred haue also gethe despised the, and cried oute vpon the in thyne absence. Beleue them not, though they speake fayre words vnto the. For I say I haue forsaken myne owne dwelling place, & left myne heritage. My lyfe also that I longe vnto wel haue I geuen into the handes of myne enemies. Mine heritage is become vnto me as a lion in the wode. It crieth out vpon me therfore haue I hated it. Is myne heritage vnto me as a speckled bird? are not the birdes rounde about her? Come ye and gather all the beastes of the felde, and bring them to deuour her. Many shepherdes haue destroyed my vineyarde, and trode my portion vnder fote, and haue made my pleasaunt portion a wildernesse of desolacion. It is layed waste, and mourneth vnto me, and all the countrey is desolate, because no man regardeth it. The destroyers are come vpon all the hye hilles in the wildernesse: for the sworde of the lorde shal deuour from the one ende of the lande vnto the other, that no flesh shal haue peace. They haue sowen wheate, but haue reaped thornes: they haue wearyed themselues, but they haue not profited. Be ye ashamed therfore of your encrease, because of the fierce wrath of the lorde. For thus sayth the lorde concernyng all myne euel neighbours that touche the heritage which I haue geuen my people Israel to possesse: Behold I wyl plucke them out of their owne lande, and the house of Iuda wyl I plucke out from amonge them. And it shal come to passe that after I haue plucked them out, I wyl haue mercy vpon them, and bring them againe, euery man to his heritage, and euery man to his owne lande. And if they wyl learne the wayes of my people, to sweare by my name, as they taught my people to sweare by Baall, then shal they be set vp in the myddes of my people. But if they wyl not obey, then wyl I plucke that nacion vp by the rootes, and destroy it, saith the lorde.

Thus sayd the lorde vnto me: Go and get the a lynnen girdle, and put it about thy loynes, but put it not in water. So I went and put it about my loynes, according as the lorde commaunded me. And the worde of the lorde came vnto me the seconde time, saying: Take the girdle that thou hast gotten, which is about thy loynes, and arise, and go vnto Euphrates, and hyde it there in a hole of the rocke. So I went and hyd it by Euphrates, as the lorde commaunded me. And it came to passe after many dayes, that the lorde sayd vnto me: Arise, go vnto Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commaunded the to hyde there. Then went I vnto Euphrates, and digged, and toke the girdle from the place where I had hyd it, and behold the girdle was rotten, and good for nothing. Then came the worde of the lorde vnto me, saying: Thus sayth the lorde: Euen so wyl I destroy the pryde of Iuda, and the great pryde of Ierusalem. This wicked people, which refuse to heare my wordes, which walke after the imaginacion of their owne hartes, and folowe straunge gods, to worship them, and to fall downe before them, shal be euen as this girdle, which is good for nothing. For as the girdle cleaueth to the loynes of a man, euen so haue I caused all the house of Israel and all the house of Iuda to cleaue vnto me, saith the lorde, that they might be my people, my name, my prayse, and my glory, but they wold not obey. Therfore speake thou vnto them this worde: Thus sayth the lorde god of Israel: Euery bottel shalbe filled with wyne. And if they say vnto the: Knowe we not well that euery bottel shalbe filled with wyne? Then shalt thou say vnto them: Thus sayth the lorde: Behold I wyl fyll all the inhabitours of this lande, euen the kynges that sytte vpon Dauids seate, the priestes, the prophetes, and all the inhabitours of Ierusalem with drunkennesse. And I wyl dashe them one against another, euen the fathers and the children together, saith the lorde: I wyl not spare, neither haue pitie, nor be mercyfull, that I shuld not destroy them. Heare and geue eare, be not proude: for the lorde hath spoken. Geue glory vnto the lorde your god, before he cause darkenesse, and before your fete stomble vpon the mountaynes of darkenesse: and while ye look for light, he turne it into the shadowe of death, and make it grosse darkenesse. But if ye wyl not heare it, my soule shal weepe in secret for your pryde, and myne eye shal mourne and runne downe with teares, because the flocke of the lorde is caried away captyue. Say vnto the kyng and to the quene: Submit your selues, and sytte downe: for your crowne of glory shal come downe from your heades. The cities of the south shalbe shut vp, and no man shal open them: all Iuda shalbe caried away captyue, euery one of them. Lyft vp your eyes O Ierusalem, and beholde them that come from the north. Where is the flocke that was geuen the, thy glorious flocke? What wylte thou say when he shal visite the? For thou hast taught them to be thy chefe and principall, and to be ouer the. Shal not sorowe take the, as a woman in trauayle? And if thou say in thyne hert: Wherfore come these thinges vpon me? For the greatnesse of thyne iniquitie are thy skyrtes vncouered, and thy heles made bare. Can the Mooren change his skynne, or the leopard his spottes? Then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do euel. Therfore wyl I scatter them as the stobble that goeth by the wynde of the wildernesse. This is thy lot, and the portion that I haue measured vnto the, saith the lorde, because thou hast forgotten me, and trusted in lyes. Therfore wyl I discouer thy skyrtes before thy face, that thy shame may appeare. I haue sene thyne abhominacions, thyne adulteries, and thy neyghyng, the wickednesse of thy whordome vpon the hylles in the felde. Wo be vnto the O Ierusalem, wylte thou not be clensed? when shal it be once? Is it found out that whole Israel, and all the citizens of Ierusalē are gone back. They haue turned themselues to the blasphemies of their forefathers which he had no lust to heare my wordes. Euen like wise haue these also folowed straunge gods, & worshipped them. Come ye and gather all the beastes of the felde, and bring them to deuour her. Many shepherdes haue destroyed my vineyarde, and trode my portion vnder fote, and haue made my pleasaunt portion a wildernesse of desolacion. It is layed waste, and mourneth vnto me, and all the countrey is desolate, because no man regardeth it. The destroyers are come vpon all the hye hilles in the wildernesse: for the sworde of the lorde shal deuour from the one ende of the lande vnto the other, that no flesh shal haue peace. They haue sowen wheate, but haue reaped thornes: they haue wearyed themselues, but they haue not profited. Be ye ashamed therfore of your encrease, because of the fierce wrath of the lorde. For thus sayth the lorde concernyng all myne euel neighbours that touche the heritage which I haue geuen my people Israel to possesse: Behold I wyl plucke them out of their owne lande, and the house of Iuda wyl I plucke out from amonge them. And it shal come to passe that after I haue plucked them out, I wyl haue mercy vpon them, and bring them againe, euery man to his heritage, and euery man to his owne lande. And if they wyl learne the wayes of my people, to sweare by my name, as they taught my people to sweare by Baall, then shal they be set vp in the myddes of my people. But if they wyl not obey, then wyl I plucke that nacion vp by the rootes, and destroy it, saith the lorde.

Thus sayd the lorde vnto me: Go and get the a lynnen girdle, and put it about thy loynes, but put it not in water. So I went and put it about my loynes, according as the lorde commaunded me. And the worde of the lorde came vnto me the seconde time, saying: Take the girdle that thou hast gotten, which is about thy loynes, and arise, and go vnto Euphrates, and hyde it there in a hole of the rocke. So I went and hyd it by Euphrates, as the lorde commaunded me. And it came to passe after many dayes, that the lorde sayd vnto me: Arise, go vnto Euphrates, and take the girdle from thence, which I commaunded the to hyde there. Then went I vnto Euphrates, and digged, and toke the girdle from the place where I had hyd it, and behold the girdle was rotten, and good for nothing. Then came the worde of the lorde vnto me, saying: Thus sayth the lorde: Euen so wyl I destroy the pryde of Iuda, and the great pryde of Ierusalem. This wicked people, which refuse to heare my wordes, which walke after the imaginacion of their owne hartes, and folowe straunge gods, to worship them, and to fall downe before them, shal be euen as this girdle, which is good for nothing. For as the girdle cleaueth to the loynes of a man, euen so haue I caused all the house of Israel and all the house of Iuda to cleaue vnto me, saith the lorde, that they might be my people, my name, my prayse, and my glory, but they wold not obey. Therfore speake thou vnto them this worde: Thus sayth the lorde god of Israel: Euery bottel shalbe filled with wyne. And if they say vnto the: Knowe we not well that euery bottel shalbe filled with wyne? Then shalt thou say vnto them: Thus sayth the lorde: Behold I wyl fyll all the inhabitours of this lande, euen the kynges that sytte vpon Dauids seate, the priestes, the prophetes, and all the inhabitours of Ierusalem with drunkennesse. And I wyl dashe them one against another, euen the fathers and the children together, saith the lorde: I wyl not spare, neither haue pitie, nor be mercyfull, that I shuld not destroy them. Heare and geue eare, be not proude: for the lorde hath spoken. Geue glory vnto the lorde your god, before he cause darkenesse, and before your fete stomble vpon the mountaynes of darkenesse: and while ye look for light, he turne it into the shadowe of death, and make it grosse darkenesse. But if ye wyl not heare it, my soule shal weepe in secret for your pryde, and myne eye shal mourne and runne downe with teares, because the flocke of the lorde is caried away captyue. Say vnto the kyng and to the quene: Submit your selues, and sytte downe: for your crowne of glory shal come downe from your heades. The cities of the south shalbe shut vp, and no man shal open them: all Iuda shalbe caried away captyue, euery one of them. Lyft vp your eyes O Ierusalem, and beholde them that come from the north. Where is the flocke that was geuen the, thy glorious flocke? What wylte thou say when he shal visite the? For thou hast taught them to be thy chefe and principall, and to be ouer the. Shal not sorowe take the, as a woman in trauayle? And if thou say in thyne hert: Wherfore come these thinges vpon me? For the greatnesse of thyne iniquitie are thy skyrtes vncouered, and thy heles made bare. Can the Mooren change his skynne, or the leopard his spottes? Then may ye also do good, that are accustomed to do euel. Therfore wyl I scatter them as the stobble that goeth by the wynde of the wildernesse. This is thy lot, and the portion that I haue measured vnto the, saith the lorde, because thou hast forgotten me, and trusted in lyes. Therfore wyl I discouer thy skyrtes before thy face, that thy shame may appeare. I haue sene thyne abhominacions, thyne adulteries, and thy neyghyng, the wickednesse of thy whordome vpon the hylles in the felde. Wo be vnto the O Ierusalem, wylte thou not be clensed? when shal it be once?

me, as a speckled byrde, a birde of diuerse colours is vpon it. Come & gather ye together all the beastes of the felde. Come yonge eate it vp. Diuerse heardemen haue destroyed my vineyarde, and troden vpon my portion. Of my pleasaunt portion, they haue made a wyldernes and desert, they haue layed it waste and vnfruitfull, it is waste, it cryeth vnto me. Yea, the whole land lieth waste, & no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heath euery way, for the sweorde of the lorde shall consume from the one ende of the lande to the other, & no flesh hath rest. They haue sowen wheate, and reaped thornes. They haue taken heritage in possession, but it is to their no good. And the prophetes were ashamed of their vision, because of the great wrath of the lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde vpon all myne euel neyghbours, that laye hand vpon myne heritage, which I haue possessed, euen my people of Israel: Beholde, I will plucke them (namely Israel) out of their lande, & put out the house of Iuda from among them. And when I haue roted them out, I will be at one with them agayne, and will haue mercie vpon them, & bring them agayne, euery man to his owne heritage, and into his land. And if they (namely that trouble my people) will learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name The lorde liueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shal they be restored among my people. But if they will not obey, then will I roote out the same folke, and destroy them sayth the lorde.

The .xiij. Chapitre.

Thus sayd the lorde vnto me, go thy waye and get the a linnen breche and gird it about thy loines, and let it not be wet. The I gat me a breche according to the commaundemente of the lorde, and put it about my loynes after thys the seconde time the lord spake vnto me agayne. Take the breech that thou hast prepared & put it about thee, and get thee vp, and go vnto Euphrates, and hide it in an hole of the rocke. So went I, & hyd it at Euphrates, as the lorde commaunded me. And it happened long after thys, that the lord spake vnto me. Vp get the to Euphrates, & fetch the breche from thence, which I commaunded the to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, and digged it vp, & toke it from the place where I had hid it, & behold the breche was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothing. Then sayed the lorde vnto me, thus saith the lord. Euen so will I roote vp the pride of Iuda, & the great pride of Ierusalem. Thys people is a wicked people, they will not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked imaginations of their owne hert, and hang vpō straunge gods: them they serue and worshippe, and therefore shal they be as this breche that breche lieth vpon a mannes loynes, so craftely did I bynde the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Iuda vnto me, sayeth the lorde: that they might be my people: that they might haue a glorious name: that they might be to honoure, but they would not obey me. Therefore say this riddel before them and say: Thus sayeth the lord God of Israel. Euery pot shalbe filled with wine. And they shal say, this wot we thou we knowe not that euery pot shalbe filled with wine? Then shalt thou say vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lorde. Behold I shal fyll all the inhabitours of this lande with dronkennes, the kinges that sit vpon Dauids stole, the priestes and prophetes, with all that dwell at Ierusalem, and I will set them one against an other, yea the fathers against the sonne sayth the lorde. I will not pardon them, I will not spare them nor haue pitie vpon the, but destroy them. Be ware, geue eare: take no disdayne at it, for it is the lorde himselfe that speaketh. Honoure the lord your god herein, or he take his light fro you, & or euer your fete stumble in darckenes at the hill, leaste when you loke for the light he turne it vnto the shadow & darckenes of deth. But yf ye will not heare me, that geue you secrete warning, I will mourne from my whole hart for your stubbernes. Vnto my lye will I weep, & the teres shal gush out of myne eyes. For the lordes flocke shalbe caried awaye captiue. Tell the king and the quene humble yourselues, set you downe low, for your dignitie shalbe thrown downe, and the crowne of your glory shal fall from your heade. The cities toward the south shalbe shut vp, & no man shal open them. All Iuda shalbe caried awaye captiue, so that none shall remayne. Lyft vp your eies, & behold them that come from the north, where is the flocke of thy land that was geuen the? And where are the fat & riche sheep? To whome wilte thou make thy mone when the enemy shal come vpon the? thou hast taught them thyselfe and made them maisters ouer the. Shal not sorow come vpō the, as on a woma trauailing with childe and if thou medest then saye in thine hart. Wherefore come these thinges vpon me? Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemies shall thy hinder partes be discouered & thy fete be scrouched. Can a man of Inde change his colour, & the cat of the mountayne her spottes? no more maye ye that be exercised in euel doe good. Therefore will I scatter them, lyke as the stubble that is taken away with the south wynd, that walke in your owne, and the portion of your measure, where with ye shalbe rewarded of me. Sayeth the lorde: by cause ye haue forgotten me, and put your truste in disceiptfull thinges. Therefore shall I turne the clothes ouer thy head, and discouer thy shame that thy filthynesse may be seene. And thy abo-

The worde of the Lorde that came vnto Jeremy, concerninge the deathe of the kinges, Juda hath mourned, and gates are desolate: they are brought to heauinesse euen vnto the ground, and the cry of Jerusalem goth vp. The lordes sent their seruantes to fetch water, and when they came to the welles, they did finde no water, but caried their vessels home empty. They be ashamed and confounded and couer their heades. For the grounde is dryed vp, because there commeth no raine vpon it. The plowmen also be ashamed, and couer their heades. The hynd also forsaketh the yong faune, that he brought forth in the feld because there was no gras. The wild Asses did stand in the high places, & drue in theyre wind lyke the Dragons, their eyen did faile for want of grasse. Doubtles our owne wickednesse doth reward vs. But Lorde do thou according to thy name, though our trasgressiõ and sinnes be many, agaynst the haue we sinned. For thou art the comforte and helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble. Why wylt thou be as a straunger in the land, and as one that goth ouer the feld, and commeth in only to remayne for a nyght? Why wilt thou make thy selfe a coward, & as it were a giant that yet may not helpe? For thou art in the middes of vs o thy name is called vpō vs, forsake vs not. Thus hath the lord sayd vnto this people, seyng they haue had such lust soo wander abroade, and haue not refrayned their feete, and therfore displeaseth the Lorde, but wyll now bringe agayne to remembraunce all their wickednes, and punish all their sinnes. Ye, euen thus sayth the lorde vnto me, Thou shalt not pray to do this people good. For though they fast, I wyl not here their prayers, and though they offre burnt offeringes and sacrifices, yet wil not I accepte them. For I wyl destroy them with the swearde, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O lorde god, the prophetes saye vnto them, Ye shal nede to feare no warres nor hunger shal come vpon you, but the lord shall geue you full welle in this place. And the lorde sayde vnto me: The prophetes prophesie lesynge in my name, where as I haue not sente them, neither gaue I them any charge, neyther spake vnto them, yet they preache vnto you false visions, thynges vayne & diuerse fantasies of their owne hartes. Therfore sayeth the lorde: As for those prophetes that preach in my name, whome neuer I sente, & that saye and dayly hearken vnto the visions of their owne hartes, and the people to whome they preache shall cast out at Jerusalem, dye of hunger and warre with their wyues (and their husbandes, men to bury them) & the selues and their sonnes, their sonnes and their daughters. For I shal powre their wickednes vpon them. Thus shalt thou say vnto them. Mine eyen shal weep without ceasling daye and nyght. For my people shalbe destroyed with greate harme and shall perish with a great plague. For yf I go into the felde: Lo, it lyeth full of slayne men. Yf I come into the citie: Lo, there is al famished of hunger. Yea, the prophetes also and preistes, haue lopen into a straunge lande. Hast thou then vtterly forsaken Juda? Doest thou so abhorre Sion? Or hast thou so plaged vs, that we can be healed nowoute? We loked for peace, and there commeth no good: for the tyme of healthe: and lo here is nothynge but trouble. We acknowledge o Lorde all our wickednes, and the sinnes of our fathers that we haue offended the. Be not displeased o lorde for thy names sake: forget not thy louing kyndenesse. Remembre the thone of thyne honor, breake not the couenaunte that thou haste made with vs. Are there any among the goddes of the gentiles, that sende rayne or gene showres of heauen? Or may the heauen drop rayne without thy cõmaundement? Doest thou not it. O Lorde, our god in whome we trust? For, Lorde thou doest al these thynges.

Then sayd the Lorde vnto me. Thoughe Moses and Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no harte to this people. Wayne them away that they may go out of my sighte: and yet they say vnto the whether shal we go then tel them: The lorde geueth you this answere. Suche vnto death: come to the sweard, come to hunger, come into Captiuitie. For I wyll dayne .iiii. plages vpon them (sayeth the lorde) The sweard shal slay them: the dogges shall teare them in peces: the foules of the ayre, & beastes of the earth shal eate them vp. I wil terrefy them & cause al kyndes to be plaged because of Manasses the sonne of Ezechias kyng of Juda, for the thinges that he dyd at Jerusalem. Who shalle haue pitie vpon the? Who shal bewayle the? Or who shal go aside to aske how thou doest? Thou hast forsaken me (sayeth the lorde) & gone backwarde: therfore wyl I stretche out my hande ouer the, & destroye the: for I am weary of repentaunce. I wyl fanne them with a fanne in the gates of the lande. I haue spoyled my people and destroyed them: yet they haue no lust to turne from their wicked wayes. childrẽ, did I bring a destroyer in the noone daie. Sodainly* I brought vpon them the mother of the young men: I caused anguish and feare to fall vpon her suddenly. She that hath borne seuen children, languisheth: she hath giuen vp the ghost: her sunne is gone downe while it was yet day: she hath been confounded and ashamed: and the residue of them will I deliuer vnto the sword before their enemies, saith the Lord. Woe* is me, my mother, that thou hast borne me a man of strife and a man of contention in all the earth: I haue neither lent vpon vsurie, nor men haue lent to me vpon vsurie, yet all men curse me. The Lord said, Verely it shall go well with thy remnant: verely I will cause the enemie to entreat thee well in the time of affliction and in the time of aduersitie. Can yron breake the yron from the north and the brasen pot? Thy substance and thy treasures will I giue to the spoile without any price, and that for all thy sinnes, euen in all thy borders. And I will cause thine enemies to passe with thee into a land which thou knowest not: for a fire is kindled in mine anger, which shall burne vpon you. O Lord, thou knowest: remember me, and visite me, and auenge me of my persecutors: take me not away in thine patience: consider that for thy sake I haue suffered rebuke. Thy* words were found, and I did eate them: and thy word was vnto me the ioy and rejoycing of mine heart: for I am called by thy name, O Lord God of hosts. I sate not in the assemblie of the mockers, nor reioyced: I sate alone because of thine hand: for thou hast filled me with indignation. Why is my griefe perpetuall, and my wound desperate, which refuseth to be healed? wilt thou be vnto me as a deceitfull man, and as waters that are not sure? Therefore thus saith the Lord, If thou returne, then will I bring thee againe, that thou mayest stand before me: and if thou take forth the precious from the vile, thou shalt be as my mouth: let them returne vnto thee, but returne not thou vnto them. And I will make thee vnto this people a strong brasen wall: and they shall fight against thee, but they shall not preuaile thee: for I am with thee to saue thee and deliuer thee, saith the Lord. And I will deliuer thee out of the hand of the wicked, and I will redeeme thee out of the hand of the terrible.

The. xvi. Chapiter.

THe word of the Lord came vnto me, saying, Thou shalt not take thee a wife, neither shalt thou haue sonnes or daughters in this place. For thus saith the Lord concerning the sonnes and concerning the daughters that are borne in this place, and concerning their mothers that bare them, and concerning their fathers that begate them in this land, They shall die grieuous deaths: they shall not be lamented, neither shall they be buried, but they shall be as dung vpon the face of the earth: and they shall be consumed with the sword and with famine, and their carkeises shall be meate for the foules of the aire, and for the beasts of the earth. For thus saith the Lord, Enter not into the house of mourning, neither go to lament nor bemoane them: for I haue taken away my peace from this people, saith the Lord, euen loue and mercie. Both great and small shall die in this land: they shall not be buried, neither shall men lament for them, nor cut themselues nor make themselues bald for them: neither shall men breake for them in mourning, to comfort them for the dead, nor giue them the cup of consolation to drinke for their father or for their mother. Thou shalt not also go into the house of feasting to sit with them to eate and drinke. For thus saith the Lord of hosts the God of Israel, Behold, I will cause to cease out of this place before your eyes and in your dayes the voice of mirth and the voice of gladnesse, the voice of the bridegroome and the voice of the bride. And when thou shalt shew this people all these words, and they say vnto thee, Wherefore hath the Lord pronounced all this great euill against vs? or what is our iniquitie? or what is our sinne that we haue committed against the Lord our God? Then say thou vnto them, Because your fathers haue forsaken me, saith the Lord, and haue walked after other gods and haue serued them and worshipped them, and haue forsaken me and not kept my law: And ye haue done worse then your fathers: for behold, ye walke euery one after the imagination of his euill heart, that they may not hearken vnto me: Therefore will I cast you out of this land into a land that neither you nor your fathers haue known, and there shall ye serue other gods day and night, where I will not shew you fauour. Behold, therefore the dayes come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, The Lord liueth which brought vp the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt: But the Lord liueth that brought vp and led the seede of the house of Israel out of the north country and from all countries whither I had driuen them: and I will bring them againe into their land that I gaue vnto their fathers. Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them: and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them out of euery mountaine and out of euery hill and out of the holes of the rockes. For mine eyes are vpon all their wayes: they are not hid from my face, neither is their wickednesse hidden from mine eyes. And first I will recompence their wickednesse and their sinne double, because they haue defiled my land with the carkeises of their abominations, and haue filled mine heritage with their idols. O Lord, my strength, my power and refuge in the day of affliction, the Gentiles shall come vnto thee from the des of the world, and that hetherto our fathers haue cleaued vnto them, their Idols are but vain and vnprofitable. Now can a man make vnto his Goddes, which are not able to bee Goddes? And therfore, I will once teache the this time, and cause the Lorde: I will shewe them my hand and my power, that they may knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

Quenlyng. ii.

Yet (saith the Lorde) is the sinne of Juda written in the Table of youre hartes, and grauen vpō the edges of your altares, with a penne of yron, and with an Adamant clawe, that as the fathers thynke vpon their children, so thynke you also vpon your altares, woddes, thicke trees, high hilles, mountaines and fieldes. Wherfore, I will make my mount that standeth in the field, all your substaunce and Threasure, to bee spoyled, for the greate sinne that ye haue doen vpon your high places, throughout all the costes of your land, ye shalbe cast out also, from the heritage that I gaue you. And I wil subdue you, vnder the heuie bondage of your enemies, in a land that ye knowe not. For ye haue mynistred fire, to myne indignacion, whiche shall burne euermore. Thus saieth the Lorde: cursed* be the man, that putteth his truste in man, and that staieth the fleshe for his arme, and he, whose harte departeth from the Lorde. He shalbe like the heath, that groweth in the wildernes. And for the good thyng, that is for to come, he shall not see: but dwell in a drie place of the wildernes, in a salt and vnoccupied land. O blessed* is the man, that putteth his truste in the lorde, and whose hope is in the lord hymselfe. For* he shalbe as a tree, that is planted by the waters side: which spreadeth out the roote vnto moystnesse, who the heate cannot harme when it commeth, but his leafe shalbe grene. And though there growe but litle fruite, because of drouthe, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueth of, to bryng forth fruit. For all thynges, manne hath the moste deceiptfull and stubburne hart. Who shal then knowe it? Euen* I the lorde, searche out the ground of the harte, and trie the reines* and reward euery man, accordyng to his waies, and accordyng to the fruit of his workes. The* Partriche maketh her nest of egges, whiche she laied not. He cōmeth by riches, but not righteously. In the middest of his life, must he leue them behinde hym, and at the last be founde a very foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose throne is moste glorious, excellent, and of moste antiquitie, whiche dwellest in the place of oure holy rest: thou art the comfort of Israell. All they that forsake thee, shalbe confounded: all they that depart from thee, shalbe written in yearthe for* they haue forsaken the lorde, the very conduite of the waters of life. Heale me O Lorde, and I shalbe whole: saue thou me, and I shalbe saued: for thou arte my praise. Behold, these men saie vnto me: where is the worde of the lorde? (Let it come now.) Where as I neuertheles, obediently followed thee, as a shepherd, & haue not vncalled, taken this office vpon me, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were right before thee. Bee not now terrible vnto me, o lorde, for* thou art he in whom I hope, whē I am in perill. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let the be afraied, and not I. Throw shalt bryng in vpon them, the tyme of their plage, and shalt destroye them right sore. Thus hath the lorde saied vnto me: go* and stande vnder the gate, where through the people, and the kynges of Juda, go out and in, yea, vnder all the gates of Jerusalem, & saie vnto them: heare the worde of the lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and all thou people of Juda, and all ye citezeins of Jerusalē, that go through this gate. Thus the lorde commaund: take* hede for your liues that ye cary no burthen vp̄ you in the Sabboth, to bryng it through the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also out of your houses, in the Sabboth. Ye shall do no labor therin, but hallowe the Sabboth, as* I commaunded your fathers. Howbeit, they obeyed me not, neither harkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne, and neither obeied me, nor receiued my correccio. Neuertheless, if ye heare me (saieth the Lorde) and beare no burthen into the citee, through this gate vpon the Sabboth, if ye will hallow the Sabboth, so that ye do no worke therein: then shall there go through the gates of this citee, kynges and princes, that shall sit vpon the throne of Dauid: they shalbee caried vpon Charettes, and ride vpon horses, bothe they and their Princes. Yea, whole Juda and the citezeins of Jerusalē, shall go here through: and this citee shall euer be the more and more inhabited. There shal come men also, from the citees of Juda, from about Jerusalem, and from the land of Beniamin, fro the plaine fieldes, from the mountaines, and from the wildernesse, whiche shall bryng burnt offrynges, sacrifices, obiacions, and encence, and offer vp thanckesgeuyng, in the house of the lorde. But if ye will not be obedient vnto me, to hallowe the Sabboth, so that ye will beare your burthen through the gates of Jerusalem vpon the Sabboth. Then shall I set fire vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the houses of Jerusalem, & no man shalbe able to quenche it.

So he began a newe, and made another vessell, accordyng to his mynd Then said the lorde thus vnto me: maie* not I do with you, as this potter doeth, O ye house of Israell, saieth the lorde? Behold, ye house of Israell, ye are in my hande, euen as the clay in the potters hand. When* I take in hande to roote out, to destroye, or to waste awaie any people or kyngdome. No more of this,* wee will followe our awne imaginacions, and do euery man, accordyng to the wilfulnes of his awne mind. Therefore, thus saieth the lorde: aske emong the Heathen, if any manne haue heard, suche horrible thynges, as the daughter of Sion hath doen. Shall not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stonie cockes of Libanus) moysten the fieldes? or may the sprynges of waters be so grauen awaie, that they run no more, geue moystnes, nor make fruictfull? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto vain goddes. And their Prophetes make them fall, in their waies, from the auncient pathes, and to go into a foote waie, not vsed to be troden of iust men. Where through they haue brought the their lande, into an euerlastyng wildernes and scorne. So* that whosoeuer trauaileth thereby, shalbee abashed, & wag their heddes. With an East wynde will I scatter theim, before their enemie. And when their destruccion cōmeth, I will turne my backe vpon theim, but not my face. Then said they, com.* let vs imagine some thyng against this Jeremie: for the preestes shall not be destitute of the lawe, neither shall the wisem* be destitute of counsail, nor the Prophetes destitute of the worde of God. Come and lette vs smite hym with the tongue, and let vs marke all his wordes: consider me, O lorde, & heare the voyce of myne enemies, shall* they recompence euil for good? For they haue digged a pit for my soule. Remember* that I stode before thee, to speake good for theim, and to turne awaie thy wrath from them. Therefore, let* their children die of hunger, and let theim bee oppressed with the sweard. Let their wiues bee robbed of their children, and become widowes: let their husbandes be slain, let their young men be killed with the sweard in the field. Let the noyse be heard out of their houses, when the murtherer commeth sodainly vpon theim. For* they haue digged a pit to take me, and laied snares for my fete. Yet lorde thou knowest all their counsaill, that they haue deuised to slea me. Forgeue not their wickednesse: and lette not their synne be put out of thy sight, but let the be ouerthrowen before thee as the giltie. Thou shalt thou do vnto them, in tyme of thy indignacion.

Thus saith the lorde: go thy waie and buy thee an yearthen pitcher, and bring forthe the Senatours and chief Priestes, vnto the valley of the children of Hennon, which lieth before the dooze, that is made of bricke, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell thee, and saie thus vnto them: heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and ye citezeins of Jerusalem. * Thus saieth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: *behold, I will bryng suche a plague vpon this place, that the eares of al that heare it shall glowe. And that because they haue forsaken me, and vnhallowed this place, and haue offered in it vnto straunge goddes: who neither they, their fathers, nor the kinges of Juda haue knowē. They haue filled this place also with the bloud of innocentes. * For they haue set vp an Altar vnto Baall, to burne their children for a burnt offeryng vnto Baall, whiche I neither cōmaunded nor charged them, neither thought once there vpon. Behold, therefore* the tyme commeth (saieth the Lorde) that this place shall no more bee called Topheth, nor the valley of the children of Hennon, but the valeye of slaughter. For in this place will I slea the Senatours of Juda and Jerusalem, and kill them doune with the sweard, in the sight of their enemies, and of theim that seke their lifes: and their dedde carcasses will I geue to bee meate for the foules of the ayre, and the beastes of the field. And I will make this citee so desolate and despised, that* whosoeuer goeth therby, shalbe abashed and iest vpon her, because of her plagues. I* wil sede them also with the flesshe of their sonnes, and their daughters.* Yea, euery one shall eate vp another, in the besiegyng and straightenesse, wherwith their enemies (that seke their lifes) shal kepe them in. And the pitcher that thou breake in the sight of the menne, that shalbee with thee, and saie vnto theim: thus saieth the Lorde of hostes. * Euen so will I destroye this people and citee, as a man breaketh an yearthen vessell, that cannot be made whole again. * In Topheth shall they bee buried, for they shall haue none other place. Thus will I do vnto this place also, (saieth the Lorde: and to them that dwell therin: yea I will doo to this citee, as vnto Topheth.

When Phashur the Priest, the sonne of Emer, chief in the house of the Lorde, hard Jeremy preache so stedfastly: he* smote Jeremy, & put hym in the stockes, that are by the high gate of Beniamin, in the house of the lord. The next day folowing, Phashur brought Jeremie out of the stockes again. Then said Jeremie vnto hym: the Lorde shall call thee no more Phashur (that is excellent and encreasyng,) but Magor (that is fearefull and afraied) euery where. For thus saith the lord behold, I will make thee afraied, euen thy self and all that fauor thee, whiche shall perishe with the sweard of their enemies: euen before thy face. And I will geue whole Juda vnder the power of the kyng of Babilon, whiche shall cary some vnto Babilon prisoners, and slea some with the sweard. Moreouer, al the substaunce of this lande, all their precious and gorgeous workes, all costlinesse, and all the threasure of the kynges of Juda, will I geue into the hādes of their enemies, whiche shall spoyle them, and cary thē vnto Babilon. But as for thee (O Phashur) thou shalte bee caried vnto Babilon, with all thine household, and to Babilon shalte thou come, where thou shalte dye, and be buried: thou and all thy fauourers, to whom thou hast preached lies. O Lorde: if I be deceiued, then hast thou deceiued me: thou hast dealt strongly, and hast preuailed, and maiest me strong again. All* the daie long am I despised, and laughed to scorne of euery manne, because I haue nowe preached long, against malicious tiranny, and shewed them of destruccion. For* the whyche cause, thei cast the worde of the Lorde in my tethe, and take me euer to the worst. Wherefore, I thought from hence furthe, not to speake of hym, nor to preache any more in his name. But the worde of the Lorde was a very burnyng fire in my hart, and in my bones, which whē I would haue stopped: I might not. For why? I* hard so many detractions, and blaspheimies on euery side of me, complain vpō hym, saie thei: and we wil tell his tale, yea, euen of myne awne compagnions: and suche as were connectaunt with me, went about to murther me, saiyng: vpon him, vpon him shall one maie ouerthrowe hym, and preuaile against hym: and be aduenged of hym. Syng vnto the Lorde, and praise hym: for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppressed, from the hande of the violent: Cursed* be the daie, wherin I was borne, vnhappie be the daie, wherin my mother brought me furthe. Cursed* be the man, that brought my father the tidynges, to make hym glad, saiyng: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let* it paye vnto that man, as to the citees, whiche* the lorde turned vpside doune. The. xxij. Chapiter.

Woe be vnto the shepherdes, that destroy & scatter my flocke, saieth the Lorde: wherefore, this is the commaundement of the lord god of Israel: vnto the shepherdes that feede my people. Ye scatter and thrustle out my flocke, and loke not vpon them. Therfore now will I visit the wickednes of your imaginacions, saieth the lorde: & wil gather together the remnaunt of my flocke, frō al landes that I had driuen thē vnto, and wil bring them again to their pastures, that thei maie growe and encrease. I wil set shepherdes also ouer thē, whiche shal fede them. Thei shal no more feare & dread, for there shall none of them be lost, saith the lorde. Behold the time cōmeth saith the lorde, that I will raise vp the righteous braunche of Dauid, whiche reyng shal beare rule, & he shall prosper with wisedom, and shal set vp equitie & righteousnes again in yearth. In his tyme shall Juda be saued, & Israel shal dwell without feare, and this is the name that thei shal cal hym: euen the lord our righteousnesse. And therfore behold, the tyme commeth, saieth the Lorde, that it shalbe no more said, the lorde liueth, whiche brought the childre of Israel out of the lād of Egipt But the lorde liueth, whiche brought furth, & led the seed of the house of Israell out of the North land, & frō al countries, where I had scatred them: & thei shall dwell in their awne land again. My harte breaketh in my body, because of the false Prophetes, al my bones shake. I am become like a dronken man (that by the reason of wine can take no rest) for verie feare of the lord, & his holy wordes: because the land is full of adulterers, & through thē reyng, it mourneth, & the pleasaunt pastures of the desert are dried vp. Yea, the waie that men take is wicked, & their gouernaunce is nothyng like the holy worde of the lord. For the Prophetes & the priestes themselues, are polluted wyttes, & their wickednes haue I found in my house, saieth the lorde. Wherefore their way shalbe vnto them as slipery in the darknes, wher in thei may stacker & fall. For I wil bryng a plague vpō thē, euen the yere of their visita-cīō, saith the lord. I haue seen folye emong the prophetes of Samaria, that preched for Baal and deceiued my people of Israel. I haue seen also emong the Prophetes of Jerusalē soule aduiterie, and presumpteous lies. They take the moste shameful men by the hand, fatteryng thē, so that they cannot returne frō their wickednes. al these with their citezeins are vnto me, as Sodome, & as the inhabiters of Go-more. Therfore thus saith the lord of hostes concernyng the Prophetes. Behold, I will Jerem. xlv.b fede them with wormewood, & make thē drink the water of gall. For frō the Prophetes of Jerusalē is ypocrisie come into that land. And therfore the lorde of hostes geueth you this warnyng. Heare not the wordes of the pro- D. Jere. xxvij.b. pheten that preache vnto you, & deceiue you, and. xxiij.b. truly thei preache you vanite, for thei speake the meanyng of their awne harte, & not out of the mouthe of the lorde. They saie vnto them Jer. xii. xiij.a that despise me, the lorde hath spoken it: thus Sopho. i. c. ye shall prosper right well. And vnto all thē that walke after the lust of their awne harte: thei saie: thus, there shal no misfortune happen you. For who hath sitten in the counsail of the lorde, that he hath heard & vnderstande what he is about to do? who hath marked his deuice, & heard it? Behold, the stormy wether Jere. xxx.b. of the lorde (that is his indignation) shall go furth, & a violent whirle wynd shall fal doune vpon the hed of the vngodly. And the wrathe of the Lorde shall not turne again, vntill he performe and fulfill the thought of his hart.
* And in the latter daies ye shall knowe his Jerem. xxx.b. meanyng. I haue not sent these Prophetes E.
(saith the lorde) and yet thei ran, I haue not Jere. xiij.b. spoken to them, and yet thei preached. But if thei had continued in my counsail, thei had opened to my people my wordes, & thei had turned my people frō their euill waies & wicked imaginacions. Am I then God that seeth but psal. cxxxix.a the thyng, whiche is nigh at hand, & not that Ezech. vi.b.b. is far of, saith the lorde? Maie any man hide Psal. cxxix.a hymself so, that I shall not se hym, saieth the Amos. ix.a. lord? Do not I fulfill heauen & yerth, saith * Esa. lxvi.a the Lorde? I haue heard well enough, what Acts. vi.b. the Prophetes saie, that preache lies in my and. xvi.b. name, saiyng: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed.
How long will this continue in the prophetes hart, to tell lies, & to preache the craftie subtelties of their awne harte? Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as their fore fathers did, whē Baal came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame, let hym tel it: and he that 1. Cor. iij.a vnderstandeth my worde, let hym shew it faith i. Peter. iij.b fully. For what hath chaffe and wheat to do F. together, saieth the Lorde? Is not my worde like a fire, saith the lorde? And like an hāmer that breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus saith the lorde: behold, I will vpon the prophetes, that steale my worde priuily frō eue-ry man: behold, here am I (saith the lorde) against the Prophetes, that make tōgues tender to speake and to saie: the lorde hath said it. Behold, here am I (saith the lorde) against these thoce prophetes, that dare propphecie lyeng dreames, and deceiue my people with their damities and miracles, whō I neuer sent nor commaunded. Thei shall doo e this people great harme, saieth the lorde. If this people, either any prophet or priest aske thee, & saie What is the burthen of the lorde? Thou shalt saie vnto them: what burthen? Therfore will I cast you fro me (saith the lorde) because ye your selues are a burthen. And the prophet & priest, or people that vseth this tearme (the burthen of the lorde) hym will I visite: & his house also. But thus shall ye saie euery one to another, & euery man to his brother. What answere hath the lorde geuen? or what is the lordes commaundement? And as for the burthen of the lorde: ye shall speake no more of it, for euery manes awne worde, is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the liuyng God, the lorde of hostes our god. Thus shall euery man saie to the prophetes, What answere hath the lorde geuen thee? Or what saith the lord? and not once to name the burthen of the lorde. Therfore thus saith the lord. For comme as ye haue vsed this terme the burthen of the lorde, where as I, notwith standyng sent vnto you, & forbad you to speke of the lordes burthen. Behold, therfore I will repute you as a burthen, and will cast you out of my presence, yea, and the cities also that I gaue you and your fathers: and will bryng you to an euerlastyng confusion, & into suche a shame, as shall neuer be forgotten.

¶ The. xxiiij. Chapiter.

The.bij.daie. Nattins. A. The lorde shewed me a vision: behold, ther stode two maundes of figges, before the iij.re.xxiij.b temple of the Lorde, after that Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilon, had led awaie captiue Iechonias the sone of Ioeakim, kyng of Juda, the mightie menne also of Juda, with the worke maisters, and conyng menne of Jerusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maunde were very good figges, euen like as those that be first ripe. In the other maunde were very naughtie figges, whiche might not be eaten, ther were so euill. Then saied the lorde vnto me, what seest thou Jeremie? I said: Figges, wherof some be very good, and some so euill, that no man maie eate theim. Then came the worde of the lorde vnto me after this maner: thus saieth the lorde the God of Israel, like as thou knowest the good figges, so shall I knowe the men led awaie, whom I haue sent out of this place, into the lande of the Chaldees, for their profit, & will set myne eyes vpon them, for the best, and I will bryng theim again into this land: I will buylde them vp, & not breake them downe: I wil plant them, and not roote them out. And I will geue them an hart to knowe how that I am the lorde, thei shalbe my people, and I wil be their God, for thei shall returne vnto me with their whole hart. That like as then knowest the naughtie figges, whiche maie not be eaten, ther are so euill. Euen so will I (saith the lorde) let Jedekias the king of Juda eyea, & al his princes and the residue of Jerusalē, that remain ouer in this land, and thē also that dwell in Egipt be vexed & plagued in al kyngdoms and landes. And wil make thē to be a reproche, a common dysworde, a laughyng stocke & shame: in al places, where I shall scatte theim. I will send thee sweard, hunger & pestilence, emong them, vntill I haue clene cōsumed thē out of the land, that I gaue vnto thē & their fathers.

¶ The. xxv. Chapiter.

A Sermon that was geuen vnto Jeremy, vpon al the people of Juda, in the. iij. yere of Jeoakim the sone of Josias kyng of Juda that was in the first yere of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babilon. Whiche sermon Jeremy the prophet, made vnto al the people of Juda, and to al thenhabitours of Jerusalem, on this maner. Frō the. xiij. yere of Josias the sonne of Amon kyng of Juda, vnto this present day (that is euē. xxiij. yere,) the word of the lorde hath been committed vnto me. And so I haue cpkē to you, I haue risē vp early, I haue geuen you warnyng in season, but ye would not heare me. Though the lord hath sēt his seruaunters, al the prophetes vnto you in season yet wold ye not obey, ye wold not encline your eares to heare. He said: turne again euery mā frō his euil way, & frō your wicked imaginacions, & so shall ye dwell for euer in the land, that the lorde promised you, and your fathers. And go not after straūge goddes, serue them not, worship them not, and angre me not with the workes of your handes: then will I not punishe you. Neuertheles, ye would not heare me (saith the lorde) but haue defiled me with the workes of your hāds, to your awn great harme. Wherfore, thus saith the lord of hostes, because ye haue not harkened vnto my word. Lo, I wil send out, & cal for al the people, that dwell in the north (saith the lorde) & will prepare Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon my seruaunt, & wil bryng them vpon this land, & vpon al that dwell therin, & vpon all the people that are about them, & will vtterly roote thē out. I will make of thē a wilderne, a mockage and a continuall desolate. Moreouer, I will take from thē the voyce of gladnes & solace, the voyce of the bridegrome and the bride, the voyce of the anoynted with the creffettes, & this whole land shalbecome a wildernesse, and these nacions shall serue the kyng of Babilon lx. yeres and ten. Whē the. lxx. yeres are expired, I will visite the wickednesse of the kyng of Babilon, and his people, saieth the Lorde: yea, and the lande of the Chaldees, and wil make it a perpetuall wildernesse, and will fulfill all my wordes vpon that land, whiche I haue deuised against it, yea, all that is written in this boke, which Jeremy hath prophecied of al people: to that thei also shalbe subdued vnto diuers nacions, & great kynges, for I wil recompence thē, according to their dedes, & workes of their awn hādes. For thus hath the lord god of Israel spoken vnto me: take this wine cup of indignacio ero my hand, that thou maiest cause al the people, to whō I send the, for to drinke of it: that whē thei haue dronken therof, thei may be mad, & out of their wittes, whē the sweard rommeth that I will sende emong thē. Then toke I the cup ero the lordes hand, & made al people to drinke therof, vnto whō he lord had sent me. But first, the citee of Jerusalem, & al the citees of Juda, their kynges & princes, to make thē desolate, waste, despised, & hissed at, & cursted, according as it is come to passe this daie. Yea, and Pharao the kyng of Egipte, his seruauntes, his Princes and his people all togethir, one with another. And al kynges of the land of Hus, all kynges of the Philistines, and with Ascalon, Azah, Accaro and the remnaunt of Azdod. The Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, all the kynges of Tyrus, and Sydon, the kynges of the Iles, that are beyond the sea. Dedan, Thema, Hus, and all theim that dwell in the outmoste partes of the worlde, all the kynges of Araby, and (generally) all the kynges that dwell in the desert, all the kynges of Zamri, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of the Medes, all the kynges toward the North whether thei dee farre or nigh, euery one a gainst his neighbour: yea, and all the kyngdomes that are vpon the whole yearth. The kyng of Serach saied he: shall drynke with theim also. Therefor, saie thou vnto theim: this is the commaundement of the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: drinke, and be dronken, & spewe and fall, that ye neuer arise, and that through the sweard, which I will sende emong you. But if thei will not receiue the cuppe of thyne hande, and drinke it, then tell them: thus doeth the Lorde of hostes threten you: drinke ye shall, and that worthy. For lo, * I begin to plague the citee, that my name is geuen vnto, thinke ye then, that I will leue you vnpunished? ye shal not go quite, for why? I call for a sweard, vpon all thenhabiters of the yearth: saith the lorde of hostes. Therfor, tell them all these wordes, and saie vnto them: the Lorde shal cry from aboue, & let his voyce be heard ero his holy habitation. With a great noyse shall he cry ero his court regal he shal geue a great voyce like the grape gatherers, & the sound therof shalbe heard vnto the endes of the world. For the lorde hath a iudgement to geue vpon al people, & will hold his court of iustice with al flesh, and punish the vngodly: saieth the lorde. For thus saieth the lord of hostes: behold a miserable plague that go ero one people to another, and a great stormy water shal arise, ero all thendes of the yerth, & the same daie shal the lord himself slea thē, ero one ende of the yerth to another. Ther shal no mone be made for any of thē, none gathered vp, none buried: but shall lye as dunge vpon the ground. Mourne (o ye shepherdes) & cry, sprinkle your selues with ashes, o ye rāmes of the flocke: for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slea one another, and ye shalbe scatred, & ye shall fall like vessels newly made. The shepherdes shall haue no waie to flie, & the rambes of the flock shal not escape. Then shal the shepherdes cry horribly, & the rambes of the flocke shal mourne for the lorde hath destroied their pasture, and their welfieldes lie ded, because of the horrible wrathe of the lorde. Thei haue forsaken their holdes like as a lion. For their land is wast, because of his furious cruelitie, and for his fearfull indignacio.

In the beginnyng of the reigne of Iehoiakim, the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, came this worde ero the Lorde, saiyng: thus saith the lorde: stande in the court of the lordes house, & speake vnto al them, whiche (out of the citees of Juda) come to do worship in the lordes house, all the wordes that I commaunde thee to saie. Loke that thou kepe not one word backe, if (peraduēture) thei wil herken, & turne euery man ero his wicked waie, that I maie also repent of the plague, which I haue determined to bring vpon thē, because of their wicked inuencions. And after this manner shalt thou speake vnto thē. Thus saith the lord: if ye wil not obey me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the Prophetes, whō I sent vnto you, rising vp tymely, & stil sendyng. If ye wil not folow thē (I say) then wil I do to this house, as I did vnto Silo, and wil make this citee to be abhorred of all the people of the yerth. And the priestes, the Prophetes, & all the people heard Jeremie preche these wordes, in the house of the lord. Now when he had spoken out al the wordes that the Lorde commanded him to preache vnto the people: then the Priestes, the Prophetes, and all the people toke hold vpō him, and saied: thou shalte dye. How darest thou be so bold, as to saie in the name of the lorde it shall happen to this house, as it did vnto Silo: and this citee shalbe so wast, that no man shall dwell therin. And when al the people were gathered aboute Jeremie, in the house of the lorde, the princes of Juda hard of this rumour, and thei came lone out of the kynges palace, into the house of the lorde, & sat them doune before the newe doore of the lorde. Then spake the priestes and the Prophetes, vnto the rulers, and to all the people these wordes: * This man is worthy to dye, for for he hath preached against this citie as ye youre selues haue heard with youre eares.

D Then sayd Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people. The lord hath sent me to preache against this house and against this citie all the wordes that ye haue heard. Therfore amende youre wayes, and youre aduisementes and be obedient vnto the worde of the Lorde youre god, so that the lord repet of the plague that he hath deuised against you, now as for me: I am in your handes, to with mee, as yee thinck expedient and good. But this shall ye know, yf ye put me to deathe: * yee shall make youre selues, this citie, and all the inhabitauntes therof guilty of innocent blond. For this is of a truthe, that the lord hath sent me vnto you, to speake all these wordes in youre eares
E Then sayde the Rulers and the people vnto the priestes and prophetes. Thys man maye not be condempned vnto deathe, for hee hathe preached vnto vs in the name of the Lorde our God. Then the eldres also of the lande rose vp, and sayed thus vnto all the people: * Michias the Morasthite which was a prophet vnder Ezekiah king of Juda: * spake to al the people of Juda thus sayeth the lord of hostes: * Sion shalbe plowed like a feld, Jerusalē shalbe an heep of stones & the hil of the lordes house shal be turned to an high wood. Did Ezekiah the King of Juda and the people of Juda put him to death for this? No verely, * but rather feared the Lorde, and made their prayer vnto him. For the which cause also the Lord repented of the plague, that he had deuised against them. Shulde we then do suche a shameful dede against our soule? There was a prophete also, that preached richly in the name of the Lorde, called Uriah the sonne of Semiah, of Cariath Jarim, this man preached also against this citie, and against this land according to all that Jeremy sayth. Nowe when * Jehoakim the kyng with al the estates and princes heard these wordes, the king went about to slay him. * When Uriah perceiued that, he was afrayed and fled, and departed into Egipte. Then Jehoakim the kyng, sent his Seruauntes into the land of Egipt: namely Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, and certeine men with him into Egipt, which fetched Uriah oute of Egipte, and brought him vnto king Jehoakim, which slue him with the sword, & cast his dede body into the cōmō peoples graue. But Ahicā the sonne of Saphan helped Jeremy that he came not into the handes of the people to be slayne

The. xxvj. Chapitter.

In the beginning of the raigne of Jehoiakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda came this worde vnto Jeremy, from the lord which spake thus vnto me saiyng. Make the bandes, and chaynes, and put them about thy necke, and send them to the kyng of Edom, to the king of Moab, to the King of Ammon to the Kyng of Tirus, and to the king of Sydon: and that by the messengers whyche shal come to Jerusalem vnto Zedechiah the king of Juda, and bid them say vnto their maisters Thus sayth the lorde of Hoostes the God of Israel, speake thus vnto your maisters. * I am hee that made the earth, the men, and the cattaill that are vpon the grounde with my great power, and out stretched arme: and haue geuen it to whome it pleased mee. * And now wil I deliuer al these landes into the power of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon * my seruaunt The beastes also of the feld shal I geue him to do him seruice * And al the people shal serue him. and his sonne, and his childres childzen, vntill the time of the same land be come also. yea, many people, and great kinges shal serue him. Moreouer, that people & kingdome, that wil not serue Nabuchodonozor, and that wil not put their neckes vnder the yooke of the King of Babilon: the same people wil I visite with the Swearde with hungre, and with pestilence, vntil I haue consumed them in his handes sayth the lord * and therfore folow not your prophetes, soth sayers, expounders of dremes, charmers, and witches, whyche say vnto you: yee shall not serue the king of Babilon. For they preache you lies: to bring you farre from youre land and that I might cast you oute, and destroy you, but the people that put their neckes vnder the yooke of the Kyng of Babilon, and serue him: those wil I lette remaine stil in their owne lande (sayth the Lorde) and there shal occupie it, and dwel therin. All
C these thinges told I Zedekiah the Kynge of Juda and sayd: * Put youre neckes vnder the yoke of the King of Babilon, and serue him, and his people that ye maye liue. Why wilte thou and thy people perysshe with the Swearde with hungre, and with pestilence: lyke as the lord hath deuised for al people that wyll not serue the kyng of Babilon? * Therfore geue no eare vnto those prophetes (that tell you ye shal not serue the king of Babilon: for they preache you lies: neyther haue I sente them sayth the lorde: how be it they are bold falsely to prophecie in my name, that I myght thrust you out, and that ye myght perish with your preachers. I speake to the priestes also, and to al the people. Thus sayth the lord Heare not the woyce of those prophetes, that preache vnto you, and say: Beholde * the vesselles of the lordes house shalbe shortely brought hether agayne from Babilon: For they prophesy lies vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kyng of Babilon, that ye may liue.
D Wherfore wil ye make this citie to be waste? But if they be true prophetes in very deede, and if the woorde of the Lord be committed vnto them, then let them praye to the Lorde

IN the fourth yeare of the reigne of Zedekiah kyng of Juda, in the fifth ma-neth it happened that Hananiah the sonne of Azur, the prophete of Gibeon, spake vnto me in the house of the Lorde, in the presence of the priestes and of al the people, and sayd Thus sayth the lorde of hostes the God of the lordes house, that Nabuchodonozor king niah the sonne of Jehoakim the king of Juda hym self, with all the prisonners of Juda that are caried vnto Babilon) euen vnto this place, sayth the Lorde. For I wil breake the yoke of the king of Babilon. Then the pro-phete Jeremy gaue answer vnto the prophete Hanania before the priestes, and before al the people that ware present in the house of the Lorde, * and the prophete Jeremy said. Amen the Lorde do that, and graunt the thing that thou hast prophecied: that he may bringe a-gayne al the ornamentes of the Lordes house and restore all the prisonners from Babilon into this place. Neuertheles, hearken thou also what I wil saie, that thou and al the people may heare. The prophetes, that ware before vs in time past, whiche prophecied of warr, trouble, or pestilence, either of peace, v pon many nations, & great kingdomes, ware proued by this (if god had sent them in very deede) * when the thing came to passe, whyche prophet toke the chayne from the prophete

Thus hath the lorde spoken: Euen so wil I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonozor king of Babilon, from the neckes of al nations, yea, and that within this two yeare. And the prophet Jeremy went his waye. Now after that Hananiah the prophete had taken the chayne from the prophet Jeremies neck and broken it. The woorde of the lord came vnto the prophet Jeremy, saing: Go, and tel Hana niah these woordes. Thus sayth the Lorde.
Thou hast broken the chayne of woode, but in stede of wood thou shalt make the chaynes of yron. For thus saith the Lorde of hoo-stes the God of Israel: I wil put a yooke of yron vpō the neck of al this people, that they may serue Nabuchodonozor the king of Ba-bilon: yea, and so shal they do. And I will giue him the beastes of the fielde. Then sayd the prophete Jeremy vnto the prophete Hananiah: Heare me Hananiah. The Lorde hath not sent the, but thou bringest this peopeople into a false beliefe. And therefore thus sayeth the lorde, behold, I wil send the out of the lande and within a yeare thou shalt die because thou hast falsly spoken against the Lorde. So Hananiah the prophete died the same yeare in the seuenth moneth.

THese are the woordes of the booke, that Jeremy the prophet sent from Jerusalem vnto the prisonners, the Senatoures, priestes, prophetes, and all the people whome Nabu-know what I haue deuised for you (sayeth the Lord. My thoughtes are to gene peace, and not trouble. (whiche I gene you already) and that ye might haue hope agayne* Ye shal cry vnto me, ye shal go & cal vpō me, & I wil here you.* Ye shal seke me, and find me. But wherein ye say, that god hathe raised you vp prophetes at Babilō: thus hath the lord spokē to the king that sitteth in the throne of dauid and to al the people that dwel in this Citie, your brethrē that are not gone with you into captiuitie/ Thus I saie (speaketh the lorde of hoostes, beholde, I will sende a Sweardе, hunger and pestilence vpon theym and will make them lyke vnfruitful figgues, that maye not be eaten for bitternes, & I will persecute them with Sweard, with hunger, & pestilence. I wil deliuer them vp to be vexed of al kingdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, & put to confusion of al people, emōg whō I haue scattered theim, and that because they haue not bene obediente vnto my commaundementes: (sayth the lord) whiche I sente vnto them by my seruantes the prophetes* I stode vp early, and sent vnto them: but they would not heare (sayth the lord,) heare therefore the word of the lord, al ye prisoners, whō I sent from Jerusalem vnto Babilō, Thus hath the lord of hostes the god of Israel spokē of Achab the sonne of Colaiah, & of Sedekiah, the sonne of Maaciah, whiche prophecy lies vnto you in my name, beholde I will deliuer thē into the hande of Nabuchadonozor the king of Babilon, that he may slea thē before youre eyes. And al the prisoners of Juda, that are in Babilon, shal take vp this terme of cursing & say, Now god make vnto the, as he dyde vnto Sedekiah, & Achab, whome the king of Babilon rosted in the fire, because thei sinned shametully in Israel. For thei haue not onely defiled their neighbors wines, but also preched lieng wordes in my name, whiche I haue not commaunded them. This I testifie, and affirme (sayth the lord.) But as for Semiah the Nehelamite, thou shalt speke vnto him. Thus (sayth the lord of hostes the god of Israel, because thou hast sealed lres vnder thy name vnto all the people, that are at Jerusalem, & to Sophoniah the sone of Maaciah the preest: yea, & vnto theym to al the priestes, wherin thou writest thus vnto him, the lord hath ordrined thee to be a priest in the stede of* Jehoiada the preest, that thou shuldest be chief in the house of the lord, above al prophetes and preachers, & that thou mightest set them vpon the pillorr, & in the stockes. Nowe happeth it then, that thou hast not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth, which neuer leaueth of his prophecieng? & wrote al this he hath sēt vs word vnto Babilō, & told vs plainly: that our captiuitie shal longe endure, that we shold build vs houses to dwel in & to plant vs gardens, that we may enioy the frutes therof. Whiche lettre Sophoniah the preest red, & let Jeremie the prophet heare it. then came the word of the lord vnto Jeremy (saieng,) Send word to al thē that be in captiuity on this maner: thus hath the lord spoken concerninge Semeiah the Nehelamite* because that Semiah hath prophecied vnto you without my cōmission, & broughte you into a false hope, therfore thus the lord doth certifye you: behold I wil visite Semiah the Nehelamite & his sede, so that none of his shal remain amonge this people, & none of thē shal see the good that I will do for this people: (saieth the lord.) For he hath preched faithly of the lorde.

Al they that make the wast, shalbe wasted thē selues, and al those that robbe the, wil I make also to be robbed, for I wil geue the thy helth agayne, and make thy woundes whole saithe the lorde: because they reuiled the, as one cast away, and despised. Sion (sayed they) is thee whome no man regardeth, for thus sayth the lorde. Beholde* I will bring agayne the captiuitie of Jacobs tentes, and defend his dwelling place, The citie shalbe builded in her old estate, and the houses shall haue their ryghte foundacion. And out of them shal go thankes geuing: and the voyce of ioye I wil multiply them, and they shal not be fewe: I shall endue them with honour, and no man shal subdue thē Their children shalbe as afore time, and their congregacion shal continue in my sight, And al those that vexe thē will I visite.* A captein also shal come of them, & a prince shal spring out frō themidest of thē, Him will I chalenge to my selfe, & he shal come vnto me.* For what is hee that geueth ouer his hearte to come vnto me (sayth the lorde.* Ye shalbe my people also, and I will be youre god. Beholde on the other side shal the wrathe of the lorde breake out as a stormye water as a myghtye whirle winde, and shal fal vpon the heades of the vngodly. The terrible displeasure of the lorde, shal not leue of, vntil he haue done, and performed thentent of his hearte,* whyche in the latter dayes ye shal vnderstand. At the same tyme: sayth the Lord, shal I be the god of al the generations of Israel, and they shal be my people.

Thus sayth the lorde the people of Israel whiche escaped in the wylderneße from the Sweard, found grace to come into their reste. Euen so shall the Lorde nowe also appeare vnto me from a farre of and saye I loue thee with an euerlasting loue, therefore by my mercy haue I drawē the to me, I wil repayre the againe, O thou daughter of Israel that thou maiest be cast and cure. Thou shalte take tabrettes againe, and go furthe with thē that leade the daunce. Thou shal plant vines agayne vpon the hilles of Samaria, And the grape gatherers, shall plante and commonly eate of it. For the dayes shall come when the watchemen vpon the mount of Ephraim shal cry.* Aryse let vs go vp vnto Syon to oure lorde God for thus sayth the lorde: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, cry vnto the head of the gentiles: speake out, syng and say O lorde saue thy people, the remnaunt of Israel, and make theym whole. Beholde, I wyll bryng them agayne from the north lande and gather them frō the endes of the world, with the blind and lame, that are among them with the weomen that be great with chylde, & such as be also deliuered: and the compaignie of them that come again shalbe great: They shal come weping, & with mercyful pitee I bryng them hether agayne, I will leade theym to the riuers of water, in a streight way, wher they shal not stumble.* For I am Israels father, and Ephraim is my first borne. Heare the worde of the lorde O ye gentiles, preache in the yles, that lie far of, and say: he that hath scatered Israel, shal gather him together agayne, and shal kepe him, as a shepeheard wth his flocke. For the lorde hath redemed Jacob and ridde him from the hande of the violente, and they shal come, and reioyce vpon the hyl of Sion, and shal haue plentuousnes of goodes, whyche the lord shall geue them. Namely, Wheate, Wyne, Oyle, young Shepe, and calues/ And their conscience, shalbe as a wel watred gardeine, for they shal no more be hungry. Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yea both yong and old folkes. For I wil turne their sorow into gladnes, and wil conforte them from their sorowes: and make thē ioyful, I wil power plentuousnes vppon the hartes of the priestes, and my people shalbe satisfied with my goodnes, sayth the Lorde, Thus sayth the lord:* the voice of heauines weping, and lamentacion was herd on hygh, euen of Rachel, mourning for her children, & would not be conforted, because they were away. But now sayth the Lorde, leaue of from weping, and ceasse, withholde thine eies from teares, for thy labor shalbe rewarded, saieth the Lorde: And they shal come agayne oute of the land of enemies. Yea, euen their posteritie shal haue consolation in this, sayeth the Lorde, that thy children shal come again into their owne lande. Moreouer I heard Ephraim, that was ledde away captiue, complayne on this maner.* O Lorde thou hast corrected me, and thy chastenyng haue I receyued, euen as an vntamed Caulfe.* Conuerte thou mee, and I shall be conuerted: For thou arte my Lorde GOD: Yea, and as soone, as thou conuertest mee, I shall reforme my Selfe. I haue borne the reproofe, & confusion of my by my self, Is not Ephraim my deare sonne?

Is not he the childe, with whom I haue had al my mirthe and pastime? For sence the tyme that I spake commaned with hym, I haue hym euer in my remembraunce: therfore, my that thou shouldest walke and turne agayne, o thou doughter of Israell, turne agayne to the cities of thyne. How long wilte thou go astraye, o thou wauering daughter? For the lord wil worke a newe thing vpon yearthe: A woman shal compasse a man. For thus sayth the lorde of hostes the God of Israel. It wil come therto, that when I haue brought Iu-da out of captiuitie these wordes shalbe hard in the lande, and in his cities. The lord wi soule, and refreshe al fainte hartes. Wher I heard this, I came agayne to my self, I mused vpon it, & I was awaked out of a swete sleep Beholde sayth the lorde, the dayes wil come that I wil sow the house of Israel, & the hou-come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to roote them out, to scattre thē to breake theym doune, to destroye theym, and chasten them. Euen so wil I also go diligent ly about to builde them vp agayne, and to plāt the fathers haue eaten a soure grape, and the childrens tethe ar set on edge: for euery one shal die for his owne misdedes, so that whoso eateth a sower grape, his teeth shalbe set on edge. Behold the dayes come (sayth the lord) that I will make a newe couenaunte with the house of Israel and with the house of Iuda, not after the couenaunt which I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande and led them out of the land of Egipt: which couenaunt they brake, yea, euen when I as an husband had rule ouer them (sayth the lorde) but this shalbe the couenant that I wyl make with the house of Israel, after those dayes (saith the Lorde) I wyll plante my Lawe in their inward partes, and wyl wryte it in their harts, and wilbe their god, & they shal be my people. And from thence furth, shall no man teache his neighbor or his brother: and say: knowe the lorde. But they shal know me from the lowest vnto the highest (sayth the & wil neuer remembre their sinnes any more.

Thus sayeth the lorde which gaue the sōne moueth the Sea, so that the flowdes therof waxe fearce: His name is the lord of hostes like as thys ordinaunce shal neuer bee taken out of my sight, (sayeth the lorde.) So shal the sede of Israel neuer cease, but alway be a people before mee. Moreouer, thus sayeth the lorde, Lyke as the yeare aboue cannot be mesured, and as the foundacions of the yearthe beneth may not be sought out: So wil I al so not cast out the whole sede of Israel, for that they haue committed (sayth the lord.) Be-holde, the dayes come, (sayeth the Lorde) that the Citie of the lord shalbe enlarged from the toure of Hananeell, vnto the Gate of the corner wal. From thence shal the right measure be taken before her, vnto the Hill top of Ga-reb, and shal come aboute Gath, and the hole valley of the ded carkasses, and of the asshes & al the feldes vnto the broke Cedron, & vnto the corner of the horse gate toward the East wher as the Sanctuary of the Lord also shal be set. And when it is newe buylded, and sette vp on this fashion, it shal neuer be broken, nor caste doune any more.

These wordes spake the lord vnto Jereof Iuda: which was the. 18. yere of Nabucho donozer. What time as the kyng of Babilons host layde seege vnto Jerusalem. But Jeremy the prophet lay bound in the court of the prison, which was in the Kynge of Iudaes sed hym to be laide, because he had prophesied on this maner. Thus saith the lorde: Be-holde I wil deliuer this citie, into the han-des of the king of Babilon, which shal take it. As for Zedekiah the king of Iuda, he shal not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely hee shal come into the handes of the kyng of Babilon, whyche shal speake with hym mouthe to mouth, and one of them shal looke the other in the face. And Zedekiah shalbe caryed vnto Babilon, and there hee shalbee, vntil the time that I visit him (sayeth the lorde.) But ye thou takest in hād to fight against the Chal dees thou shalt not prosper. And Jeremi sayed. Thus hath the lord spoken vnto me. Be holde Hananeell, the sonne of Selum, thine vncles sonne shal come vnto thee and require thee, to redeame the lande that liethe in A-nathoth vnto thy self: for by reason of kynred it is thy right to redeme it, & buy it oute.

And Hananeell, myne vncles sonne, came vnto me into the court of the prison according to the word of the Lorde and sayde vnto me, buy my land I praye thee, that lyeth in Anathoth in the country of Ben Jamin, for by heritage, thou hast ryght to loose it oute for thyself.
Therefore redeame it. Then I perceyued that it was the Commaundement of the lord.

The woorde of the Lorde vnto mee, Saiyng: Beholde I am the Lord God of al flesshe is there any thing to harde for mee. Therefore thus sayth the Lorde: * Behold, I shall deliuer thys Citie into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchadonozor, the king of Babilon, they shal take it. For the Chaldees shall come and winne this Citie, and sette fyre vpon it, with the gorgeous houses, in whoose parlers theye haue made Sacrifice vnto Baal, and poured drincke offeringes vnto straunge Gods, to prouoke mee vnto wrathe. For seyng the chyldren of Israel, and all the Chyldren of Juda, haue wroughte wyckednes before mee euer from theyre youthe vp, what haue theye els done, but prouoked me wyth the woorkes of theyr owne handes, sayeth the Lorde. Or what hath this cite ben els but a prouoking of my wrathe, euer sence the Daye that they buylded it, vnto this houre wherin I caste it out of mi sight, because of the great blasphemies, of the childrē of Israel & Juda, which they haue done to prouoke me, yea, thei, their Kynges, their Princes, their Priestes, their Prophetes, the menne of Juda, and the Citezeines of Jerusalem. * When I rose vp early, and taught theym and instructed them, they turned their backes to me, and not their faces. They would not heare, to be reformed, and correct. * but sette theyr idols in the house that is hallowed vnto my name, to defyle it. Moreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy on this maner, * when hee was yet bounde in the court of the prisō, thus saith the lord, which fulfilleth the thing that he speaketh: the lord which performeth the thing that he taketh in hande, euen he whose name is the Lorde. * Cry vnto me and I will answer, and shew the great and myghe thinges, whiche ware vnknowen vnto the. Thus (I say) spake the lorde God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this Citie, and the houses of the Kynges of Juda, that thei are broken through the ordinaunce, and the sweardes because the inhabitauntes of this Citie haue come to fight against the Chaldees. and they are filled with deade carkasses of menne, whome I haue slayne in my wrath and displeasure: When I turned my face from this Citie, because of all her wickednesse. Beholde sayeth the lorde, I wyl repayre and heale their woundes, and make them whole I wyll open the large threasoure of peace and truthe. And wyl returne the captiuitie of Juda and Israel: and wil set them vp agayne, as they ware afore. * From all wickednes, wherin they haue offended against me, I wyll cleanse theym. And all their blasphemies which they haue wen against me, when they regarded me not, I wil forgeue them, and this shall gette me a name, a prayse, and honour amongest all the people of the yearthe, whiche shall heare of all the good, that I will shewe vnto theym Yea, they shalbe afrayed, and astonnied at all the good dedes and benefites that I wyll me for them. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: * In this place whereof you say, It shalbe a Wildrenesse, wherin neyther people nor cattall shall dwel: In lyke maner in the Cities of Juda & without Jerusalē (which also shal be so voyde) that neyther people nor Cattal shal dwel, there shal the voyce of gladnesse & hearde agayne, the voyce of the bridegrome and of the bryde, the voyce of them that shall syng: * Prayse the Lorde of Hostes for hee is louing, & his mercy endureth for euer and the voyce of them that shall offer vp gyftes, in the house of the lorde. For I wyl restore the captiuitie of this lande, as it was afore sayth the lorde. Thus saith the lord of Hostes, Yt shal come yet thereto, that in this lād which is voyde from men and Cattal and in al the cities of the lande, there shalbe set vp Shepheardes cotages, in the cities vpon the mountaynes: and in the Cities that lye vpon the playne, and in the Cities of the Southe. In the lande of Ben Jamin, in the fieldes of Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda shal the Sheepe be nombred agayne vnder the handes of hym that telleth them, sayth the lord: * Beholde, the tyme commeth sayth the Lorde, that I will performe that good thing, whiche I haue promised vnto the house of Israel, and to the house of Juda. In those dayes and at the same tyme, I wyl bryng forth vnto Dauid the braunche of ryghteousnes, and he shal do equite and ryghtousnes in the lande. In those dayes shal Juda be healped * and Jerusalē shal dwel safe, & he that shal cal her, is god our righteousnes. For thus the Lord promiseth. * Dauid shall neuer wante one to sit vpon the throne of the house of Israel. * neyther shal the priestes, and leuites wāt one to offre al mā before me burnt offringes & to kyndle the meat offringes, & to prepare the Sacrifices. And the word of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy after this manner. Thus saieth the lorde: May the couenaunt * wyth Jhaue made wyth daye and nyghte be broken, That there should not be day and nyght in due season? Then may my couenaunt also be broken which I made wyth Dauid my seruaunt, and so yee not to haue a Sonne to reigne in his throne. * So shall also the priestes and Leuites neuer fayle but serue me. * For lyke as the Starres of heauen maye not be nombred neyther the sande of the Sea measured: so wil I multiply the seede of Dauid my seruant the Leuites, my ministres. Moreouer the word of the lorde came vnto Jeremy, saying: Considerest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kinredes hath the Worde chosen & those same two, hath he caste away. For so they haue despised my people, & they reputed thē as though thei ware no people, therefore thus sayth the Lorde, yf I haue made no couenaunte wythe day and nyghte, and geuen no Statute vnto heauen and yearth: them wyl I also cast awaye the sede of Jacob, and Dauid my seruaunt, so that I wil take no prince out of his sede, to rule the posterite of Abraham Isaac, and Jacob. But yet I wil turne agayne their captiuitie, and be merciful vnto them.

hadze his power) and all hys people foughte

Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: Go and speake vnto Zedekiah the king of Juda, and tel hym, The lord sendeth the this word Beholde, * I will deliuer this citie into the hande of the kyng of Babilon: he shal burne it, and thou shalte not escape hys handes, but shalt be led away prisoner, and deliuered in to his power. Thou shalt looke the King of Babilon in the face, and he shal speake with the, mouth to mouth, and then thou shalt go to Babilon. Yet heare the worde of the lord, O Zedekiah thou king of Juda. Thus saith the Lord vnto the. Thou shalt not be slayne with the sword, but thou shalt die in peace, like as * thy forefathers the kinges, thy progenitors were burnt, so shalt thou be burnt also, and in thy mourning they shal say: o lord. For thus haue I determined, sayth the lorde. Then spake Jeremy the prophete al these woordes vnto Zedekiah king of Juda in Ierusalem, what time the king of Babilons host besieged Jerusalem, and the remnaunt of the cities: Namely Lachis, and Azekah, whiche yet remayned of the strong defenced cities of Juda. These are the woordes that the lord spake vnto Jeremy the prophete, when Zedekiah was agreed with al the people at Ierusalem, that there should be proclaimed * a liberty, so that euery man should let his seruant and handmaid go free Hebrue, & Hebruesse, and no Jew to hold his brother as a bondman. Now as they had con sented, al the princes, and al the people, whiche had gathered vnto this agreemente, that euery man would set at libertie his bondser uaunt, and bonde woma, and no longer to hold them bonde, euen so they were obedient, & lett them go free. But afterward they repented and toke agayne the seruantes and handmaydens, whome they had let go free, and so made theim bonde againe. For the which cause the word of the lord came vnto Jeremy from the Lord him self saiyng: Thus sayeth the lord god of Israel. * I made a couenaunte with your fathers, when I brought you oute of Egipt, (that there shoulde no more be bondmenne) saiyng: when seuen yeares are out, euery man shal let his bought seruant an hebrue go free ye he haue serued him sixe yeres. But your fa thers obeyed me not, nor harkened vnto mee.
As for you, ye were now turned, and did right before me, in that ye proclaymed, euerye man to let his neighbour goo free, and in that yee made a couenant before me, in the temple that bereth my name. But yet ye haue turned your selues agayne, and blasphemed my name. In this, that euery man hath required his seruant and handmaiden againe, whome ye haue let go quite, and free, and compelled theym to serue you agayne, and to be your bondmen and bond women. And therefore thus sayeth the lorde, ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to pro claime freedome vnto his brother and neigh-boure, therefore I wil cal you vnto a freedm sayth the lorde euen vnto the Sweard, to the pestilence and to hunger, and wil make you to be plaged in al the kingdomes of the earthe Yea, those men that haue broken my couena-unte, and not kept the woordes of the appointement whyche they made before mee, when * they hewed the calf in two, & when they went thorow the two halues therof: the princes of Juda, the Princes of Jerusalem, the gelded men the priestes, and al the people of the lād whyche went thorowe the twoo sydes of the calf. Those meane wil I geue into the power of their enemies, and into the handes of them that folow vpon their lyues. * And their ded bodies shalbee meate for foules of the ayre, & beastes of the felde. As for Zedekiah the king of Juda and his princes. I wil deliuer theim into the power of their enemies, and of theim that desire to slea them, and into the hande of the kyng of Babilons host, that nowe is departed from you: But thorowe my cōmaundement (sayth the lorde) they shal come again before thys citie, they shal fyghte against it winne it, and burne it: Moreouer I wil laye the cities of Juda so waste, that no man shal dwel therin.

THe woordes which the Lorde spake vnto sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda are these: Go vnto the house of the * Rechabites, and call

C. not ryghe lande to kepe: but we dwel in tentes, we obey and do accordyng vnto all that Ionadab our father cõmaunded vs. But now that Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon came vp into the lande, we saied: come, let vs go to Ierusalem, that we may escape the hoaste of the Chaldees, and the Assyrians, and so wee dwelt at Ierusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ieremy, saiyng: Thus saieth the Lorde of hoastes, the God of Israel: Go and tell the men of Iuda, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem: Will ye not be reformed to obey my wordes, sayeth the Lorde? The wordes whiche Ionadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that thei shulde drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kept: for vnto this day thei drinke no wyne, but obey their fathers commaundement. But as for me* I haue stande vp early, Jer.xliij.a.e xlv.a. I haue spoken vnto you, and geuen you earnest warnyng: and yet haue ye not been obedient vnto me. Yea, I haue sent my seruauntes, all the Prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, and sent you woorde, saiyng: O turne you now euery man from his wicked way: amende your lyues, and go not after straunge goddes to worship theim: that ye may con- D. tinue in the lande, whiche I haue geuen vnto you and your fathers, but ye wolde neither heare me, nor folowe me. The children of Ionadab Rechabs sonne, haue stedfastly kept their fathers commaundement, that he gaue theim, but this people is not obedient vnto me. And therfore thus saieth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I wil bringe vpon Iuda, and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue denyced against them.* For I haue spo- Psa.x.xi xlv.b. ken vnto them, but thei wolde not folowe: I Jere.vij.d. haue called vnto them, neuertheles, thei wolde geue me no answere: Ieremy spake also to the housholde of the Rechabites: Thus saieth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab your father, and kepte al his preceptes, and doen accordyng vnto all that he hath bidden you. Therefore thus saith the Lorde of hoastes the God of Jer.xxxiij.e Israel:* Ionadab the the sonne of Rechab shal not faile, but haue one out of his lynde, to stande al way before me.

The.xxxvi. Chapiter.

IN the fourthe yeare of Iehoakym, the sonne of Iosiah the kyng of Iuda, came the worde of the Lord vnto Ieremy, saiyng: Jer.xxx.a. Take a booke, and write therin al the wordes that I haue spoken to the against Israel against Iuda, and against al the people, from the tyme that I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the tryme of Iosiah) vnto this day. That when the house of Iuda heareth the plage, wherwith I haue denised for them thei may peraduenture repenteuery man from his Jere.xlvi. wicked way: that I may forgeue their offences and sinnes. Then did Ieremy cal Baruch the sonne of Neriah* and Baruch wrote in Jere.xlv.a. the booke at the mouth of Ieremy al the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had spoken vnto hym. And Ieremy commaunded Baruch, saiyng: I am in pryson, so that I may not come into the house of the Lorde: therefore go thou thether & reade the booke that thou hast written at my mouth. Namely, the wordes of the Lorde and reade them in the Lor- D. des house vpon the fastyng day, that the people, whole Iuda, & al thei that come out of the cities may heare. Peraduenture, thei wil praye mekely before the face of the Lorde, & turne euery one from his wicked way. For greate is the wrath and displeasure, that the Lorde hath taken against this people. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah did accordyng vnto all that Ieremy the Prophet commaunded hym, readyng the wordes of the Lorde out of the booke in the lordes house. and this was doen in the fiueth yeare of Iehoakim the sonne of Iosiah kyng of Iuda, in the .ix. moneth, wher* it was commaunded, that all the people of Jer.iii.a. Ierusalem shulde fast before the Lorde, and thei also that ware come from the cities of Iuda vnto Ierusalem. Then redde Baruch the wordes of Ieremy out of the booke with C. in the house of the Lorde: out of the treasury of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan the scribe, whiche is beside the hyer lofte of* the Jer.xxvi.a. newe dore of the Lordes house: that all the people might heare. Nowe when Micheah the sonne of Gamariah, the sonne of Saphã had heard al the wordes of the Lorde out of the booke, he went downe to the kynges palace into the Scribes chambers, for there al the princes ware set. Elisama the scribe, Delaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, Gamariah the sonne of Saphan, Zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah, with al the princes. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes that he heard Baruch reade out of the booke before the people. Then all the princes sent Iehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Salamiah, the sonne of Chu D. si, vnto Baruch, saiyng Take in thyne hande the booke, wherout thou hast red before all the people, & come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah, toke the boke in his hande, & came vnto them: and thei said vnto hym. Sit downe and reade the booke, that we may heare also. So Baruch redde that thei might heare. Now when thei had heard al the woordes, thei ware abashed one vpon another, and said vnto Baruch: We wil certifie the kyng of al these wordes. And thei examined Baruch, saiyng: Tel vs, how diddest thou write al these wordes out of his mouth. Then Baruch an- swered them: He spake al these wordes vnto me with his mouth, and I wrote them in the booke. Then said the Princes vnto Baruch C. Go thy way, hyde the with Jeremy, to that noman know where ye be. And thei went into the kyng to the courte. But thei kepte the booke in the chambre of Elizama the Scribe, and tolde the Kyng all the woordes that he might heare. So the kyng sent Jehudi to fet hym the booke whiche he brought out of Elizama the Scribes chambre. And Je-hudi red in it that the kyng and all the Princes whiche ware about hym might heare.

Now the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the .ix. moneth, & there was a fyre before hym. And when Jehudi had red thre or foure leaues thereof, he cut the booke in peces with a penknyfe, and * cast it into the

F. was abashed therof, or rent his clothes: neither the kyng hymselfe, nor his seruauntes, though thei hearde al these woordes. Neuer-theleße, Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Gamariah besought the kyng that he wolde not burne the booke: notwithstandyng the kyng would not heare them: but commaunded Jerahmael the sonne of Amelech: Saraiah the sonne of Ezrael, and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to lay handes vpon Baruch the Scribe, and vpon Jeremy the Prophete. But the Lorde kept them out of sighte. After nowe that the kyng had brent the booke, and the sermons, which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremy The woorde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy, saying: Take an other booke and write in it all the foresaide sermons, that ware writen in the first booke, which Jehoakim the kyng of Juda hath brent. And tell Jehoakim kyng W. of Juda: thus sayeth the Lorde: thou hast brent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why hast thou written therein, that the kyng of Babilon shall come, and make this lande waste: so that he shal make both people and cattel to be out of it. Therefore thus the Lord saith of Jehoakym the kyng of Juda:
4. Reg. xxiij. c. Jere. xxij. e. There shal none of his generation sit vpō the throne of Dauid. His dead corpse shalbe cast out, that the heate of the day, & the frost visite the wickednes of hym, of his sede, and of his seruātes. Moreouer, al the euel that I haue promised them (though thei heard me not) wil I bryng vpon them, vpon the enhabitours of Jerusalem, and vpon all Juda.

Then toke Jeremy another booke, and gaue it Baruch the Scribe, the sonne of Neryah, which wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremy, all the sermones that ware in the first booke, whiche Jehoakym the kyng of Juda, did burne. And there ware added vnto them many mo sermons then before.

ZEdekiah the sonne of Josiah, which was * made kyng thro the Babylonyans kyng of Babilon, reigned in the lande of Juda in the stead of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakym. But neither he, nor his seruauntes, nor the people in the lande wolde obey the woordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the Prophet Jeremy. * Neuertheleße, Zedekiah the kyng sent Jehucall the sonne of Selemi-ah, and Sophamiah the sonne of Maasiah the priest, to the Prophete Jeremy, saying: O pray thou vnto the Lorde our God for vs.
Now Jeremy walked tre among the people at that tyme, & was not put in prysō as yet.
* Pharaos host also was come out of Egipt which when the Chaldees that besieged Jerusalem perceiued, thei departed from Hyēs.
Then came the woorde of the Lorde vnto the Prophete Jeremy, saying: Thus saieth the Lord God of Israell, this answere shall ye geue to the kyng of Juda that sent you vnto me for counsail. * Behalde, Pharaos hoaste whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypte into his own lande: but the Chaldees shal come again, and fight against this citie, wynne it, and set fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lord: disceiue not your own myndes, thynkyng on this maner: Truthe, the Chaldees go nowe their way from vs. No, thei shall not go their way. For though ye had slaine the whole hoaste of the Chaldees that besiege you, and euery one of the slaine laye in his tent, yet shoulde thei stande vp, & brēne vpon this citie. Now, when the host of the Chaldees was broken vp from Jerusalem, for feare of the Egipcians armes: Jeremie went out of Jerusalē, toward the land of Ben Jamin, to gette hym from among the people. And when he came vnder Ben Jamins porte, there was a porter, called Jeriah, the sonne of Selemiah, the sonne of * Hananiah, which set vpō hym, and take hym, saying: thy mynde is to run to the Chaldees. Then said Jeremy: It is not so, I go not to the Chaldees. Neuertheles, Jeriah would not belene hym: but brought Jeremy bounde before the princes. Wherfore the princes ware angry with Jeremy, and smote hym, and laide hym in prysō in the house of Jonathas the Scribe.
For he was the ruler of the prysō. Thus was Jeremy put into a dongeon and prysō & so laye there a long time. * Then Zedekiah the kyng sent for hym, and called hym, & asked hym quietly in his owne house, saying: thynkest thou this busines (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the Lorde? Jeremy answered, Yea: that it doeth: and thou (saith he) shalt be delinered into the kyng of Babylōs power. Moreouer Jeremy said vnto kyng Ze-dekiah: What haue I offended against the, against thy seruātes, or against this people, that ye haue put me in prysone? Where are your prophetes, which haue prophecied vnto you, and saide that the kyng of Babilon should not come against you and this land? And thes fore heare now, O my lord the Kyng: let my prayer be accepted before the, & send me no more into the house of Jonathas the scribe, that I dye not there. SAphatiah the sonne of Mathan, Godoliah the sonne of Phashur, Jucall the sonne of Semeliah, and Phashur the sonne of Melchiah perceiued the wordes, that Jeremie had spoken vnto all the people: namely on this maner: Thus saith the Lord God, Who so remaineth in this citie, shal perish, either with the sweard, with hunger, or with pestilence. But who so flyeth to the Chaldees shall escape with ynuyng his soule for a pray, & shal lyue. For thus saith the Lord: This citie (no doubte) muste be deliuered into the power of the kyng of Babilon, and he shall wynne it. Then saied the Prynces vnto the Kyng: We beseche you, lette this man be put to death, For thus he discourageth the handes of the souderes that bee in this citie, and the handes of al the people, when B. he speaketh such woordes vnto them. This man verily laboureth not for peace of the people but mischiefe. Zedekyas the Kyng answered and said: Lo, he is in your handes for the kyng may denye you nothyng. Then toke thei Jeremie, and cast hym into the dongeon of Melchiah the sonne of Amelech that dwelt in the fore entry of the prison: And thei let down Jeremy with coardes into the dongeō, where there was no water but mire. So Jeremy stacke fast in the mire. Nowe, when Abedmelech the Moxiā, beyng a chaberlaine in the kinges court, vnderstode that thei hadde cast Jeremy into the dongeon, he went out of the kynges house, & spake to the kyng, which then sat vnder the porte of Benjamin) these woordes: my Lorde the Kyng, wherein these men merle with Jeremie the Prophete, thei to hym wrong, namely in that thei haue put hym in prison, there to dye of hunger, for there is no more breade in the citie. Then the kyng commaunded Abedmelech the Moxian and said: Take from hence .xxx. men whom thou wilt, and drawe vp Jeremie the Prophete out of the dongeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with hym, and went to the house of the kyng: and there vnder the treasury he gat olde ragges, and worne cloutes, & let them downe by a coarde into the dongeon to Jeremy. And Abedmelech the Moxian said vnto the Prophet Jeremy: Put these ragges and cloutes vnder thine armeholes, betwixt them and the coardes: And Jeremy did so, Then thei drewe vp Jeremy with coardes, and toke hym out of the dongeon, and he remained in the fore entry of the prison. Then Zedekiah the Kyng sent, and caused Jeremy the Prophete to bee called vnto hym, into the thirde entrie, that is in the house of the Lorde. And the Kyng said vnto Jeremy: I will aske the counsayl, but hyde nothyng from me. Then Jeremie answered Zedekyah: If I bee plaine vnto the; thou wilt cause me to suffre death: If I geue the counsaill, thou wilt not folowe me? So the Kyng sware in the secretely vnto Jeremy, saiyng: As truely as the Lord liueth, that made vs these soules, I will not slea the, nor geue the into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe. Then said Jeremye vnto Zedekyah: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoastes, the God of Israell. If ye cause bee, that thou wilt go forthe vnto the kyng of Babilons Prynces, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this Citie shall not bee burnt: Yea, both thou and thy housholde shal escape with your lyues. But if thou wilte not go forth to the Kyng of Babylons Prynces, then shall this Citie bee deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees, which shal set fire vpon it, and thou shalt not bee able to escape them. And Zedekyah saide vnto Jeremy: I am afrayed for the Jewes that are fledde vnto the Chaldees, lest I come in their handes, and they thei me in derision. But Jeremy answered: No, thei shall not betray F. thee: O heareken vnto the voice of the Lorde (I beseche the) whiche I speake vnto the so shalt thou bee well, and saue thy lyfe. But if thou wilt not go forthe, the Lorde hath tolde me this plainly: Beholde, all the women that are left in the Kyng of Judaes house, shalbee led forthe vnto the Kyng of Babilons Prynces. And thei shall say, that thou art deceiued: and the menne in whome thou hiddest put thy trust haue gotten the vnder, and sette thy feete fast in the myre, and gone their way from the. Therfore all the wyues with their children shal thei leue forth vnto the Chaldees, and thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the kyng of Babilons prysoner: and this citie shalt thou cause to bee burnt. Then said Zedekyah vnto Jeremy: Loke that nobody know of these woordes, & thou shalt not G. dye. But if the Prynces perceiue that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, saiyng: O speake, what saide the kyng to the? hyde it not from vs, and we will not put the to death. Tell vs (we pray the) what saide the Kyng to the? Then thou geue them this answere: I haue humbly besought the Kyng that he will let me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not there. Jer. xlv. a. 4. Re. xxv. a. IN the ninth yere of Zedekiah kyng of Juda, in the tenth moneth, came Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon & all his host, and beleged Jerusalem, and fought against it. Then al the princes of the kyng of Babilon came in, and set them downe vnder the porte Neregell, Sarezer, Sangarnebo, Sarsachym, Rabsaris, Neregal, Sarezer, Rabmag with all the other princes of the kyng of Babylon. And when Jer. xxxviii. a. Zedekyah the kyng of Juda, with his souldiers saw them, they fled, and departed out of the citie by nyght, thorowe the Kynges garden, and thorow the port that is betwene the two walles, and so they went toward the wildernes. But the Caldees host folowed fast after them, and toke Zedekyah in the felde of Jericho, and brought hym prisoner to Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the lande of Hemah, where he gaue iudgement vnto hym. So the kyng of Babilon caused the children of Zedekiah, and al the nobles of Juda to be slaine before his face at Reblath. And made Zedekias eyes to be put out, and bounde hym with two chaines, & sent hym to Babylon. Moreouer, 4. Re. xxv. b. Jere. xxii. b. * the Chaldees brent vp the Kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake down the walles of Jerusalem. C. Nabuchodonozor also the kyng of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captaine a charge concernyng Jeremy saying: take and cherishe hym and make much of hym, se thou do hym no harme, but intreate hym after his owne desyre. So Nabuzaradan the chefe capitaine, Nabusazban Rabsaris, Nergal, Sarezar, Rabmag, and all the kyng of Babilons lordes sent for Jeremy, Jer. xxxviii. d. * and caused hym to be set out of the fore entrie of the prison, and committed him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan: that he should carry hym home: and Jere. xl. b. * so he dwelt among the people. ¶ The. xl. Chapiter.

THis is the worde that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy, when Nabuzaradan the chefe capiteine had let hym go fre from Ramath, * whether he had led him bound among all the prisoners that were caried from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babylon. The chefe capiteine called for Jeremy and sayed vnto hym. The Lord thy God spake mightely before, of the misery vpon this place. Now the Lorde hath sent it, and performed it, as he hath promised, for ye haue synned against the Lord: and haue not ben obedient vnto his voice, therefore commeth this plage vpon you. Beholde, I lose the handes from thy handes this day: yf thou wilt nowe go with me vnto Babylon, vp then: for I will see to the, and prouide for the. But if thou wilt not go with me vnto Babylō, then remaine here. * Beholde, all the lande is at thy will, loke where thou thynckest conuenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. For as yet he was not gone backe againe to Godolyah, therefore he sayed to hym: Go backe to Godolyah, the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan, * whom the kyng of Babilon hath made gouernour ouer the cities of Juda, and dwel with hym among the people, or remaine whereсoeuer it pleaseth the. So the chefe capitaine gaue hym his expences with a reward and let hym go. * Then went Jeremy vnto Godolyah the sonne of Ahyck, to Mizpa, and dwelte there with hym, among the people that were lefte in the lande. Now when the Capitaines of the hoste of Juda (whiche with their fellowes were scatered abroade on every syde in the lande) vnderstode, that the kyng of Babylon hadde made Godolyah the sonne of Ahicam gouernour in the lande: and that man, wyfe, & child yea, and the poore men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babylon) shoulde be vnder his iurisdiction: they came to Godolyah vnto Mizpa: Namely Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah Johanan, & Jonathan the sonnes of Kariah, Seriah the sonne of Thanhometh: the sonnes of Ophai, the Netophathite: Jesaniah the sonne of Machaath, with their

BVt in the seuenth moneth it happened, that * Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Elysama (one of the kynges bloud) came with them that ware greatest about the kyng, and ten men that wer swoorne with hym: vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicã to Mizpa, and thei did eat together. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those ten men that ware swoorne to hym, slarte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan with the swearde, and slew hym, whom the kyng of Babilon had made gouernour of the lande. Ismael also slew all the Iewes that ware with Godoliah at Mizpa, and all the Chaldees that he founde there waityng vpon hym, & those that ware able to fight he slewe with hym. The nexte day after that he hadde slaine Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowen) and there came certaine men from Sichem, from Silo, and Samaria, to the nombre of.lxxx. which had shauen their beardes, rent their clothes, and wer al beny byrnyng meat & weppynges, and encense in their hãdes to offre it in the house of the Lord. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah went forth of Mizpa * wepyng to mete them. Now when he met thẽ, he said: go your way to Godoliah the sone of Ahicã. And whẽ thei came into the middest of the citie, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (with them that were swoorne vnto hym) slew them, euen at the middest of the pit. Among these foure score men there wer ten that said vnto Ismael: Oh, slea vs not for we haue yet a great treasure in the felde of wheat, barly, oyle, and hony. So he spared them, and slewe them not with their brethren. Nowe the * pit wherein Ismaell did cast the deade bodies of the men (whome he slewe because of Godoliah) had kyng Asa caused to be made for feare of Baaza the king of Israel, & the same pit did Ismael fil with slaine men. As for the remnaunt of the people the kynges daughters and al the people that ware yet lefte at Mizpa vpon whom * Nabuzaradan the chefe capitaine had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernour: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah caried them away prysoners toward the Ammonites. But when Johanã the sonne of Careah, & al thei whiche had been capitaines ouer the kinges hoast with hym, hearde of all the wickednes that Ismael the sone of Nathaniah had doen * thei toke their companions, and went out for to fight with Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah, and founde him by the great waters that are in Gibeon. Nowe when al the people whom Ismael led captyue, sawe Johanã the sonne of Careah, and all the other capitaines of the host, thei were glad. So al the people that Ismael hadde caryed away from Mizpa, were brought againe. And when thei returned, thei came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. but Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fledde fro Johanan with.viij. of his swoorne companions, and went to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah & al the capetaines of the hoast, that ware with hym tooke al the remnaunt of the people: whom Ismael, the sonne of Nathaniah had led away. (Whyle he hat slaine Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whom thei also had referred from hym: eight-tyng men, women & children, and gelded men, whom thei brought again from Gibeon, and went from thence and sat them down at Geruth Chimam whiche lyeth beside Bethlem, * that thei might go into Egypt for feare of the Chaldees: of whom thei were afraied, because that Ismaell the sonne of Nathaniah had slaine Godoliah Ahicams sonne, * whom the kyng of Babilon had made gouernour in the lande.

Che.xxi. day a. Mattyas.

Osiah, came with all the people from the leest vnto the most, and said vnto Jeremy the Prophet. O * hear our petition, that thou mayest pray for vs, vnto the Lorde thy God, namely for all the remnaunt whereof there bee very fewe of vs left of many, as thou seest vs, that the Lorde thy God may shewe vs what we shoulde do. Then Jeremy the Prophete said vnto them, I haue heard you. Beholde, I will pray vnto God your Lorde as ye haue required me: and loke what aunswere the Lorde geueth you, I shal certifie you thereof, and kepe nothyng backe from you. And they saide vnto Jeremy, The * Lorde of truth and faithfulnes bee our recorde, that we will do all that the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it bee good, or euell. We will hearken vnto the voice of the Lorde God, to whome wee sende the that we may prospere, when we haue followed the voice of the Lorde our God. And after tenne dayes came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captaines of the people that were with hym from the leste to the most, and said vnto them: Thus saieth the Lorde God of Israell vnto whome ye sente me to lay for the your prayers before hym: * Ye ye wil dwel in this lande, I shal builde you vp, and not breake you downe, I shall plante you, and not roote you out: For I repente, as concernyng the trouble that I haue done vnto you. Feare not the King of Babylon of whom ye stande in awe. O, be not afrayed of hym (sayeth the Lorde:) For I wil be with you, to healpe you, and deliuer you from his hande: I will pardon you, I will haue mercie vpon you, and cause hym to pitie you, and bryng you againe into your owne lande. Neuertheleste, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nor to folowe the voice of the Lorde your God, but will say thus: Wee will not dwell here, but go into Egipte, where wee shall neither see warre, heare the noise of the trompet, nor suffre hunger, there wil we dwel. Wherefore heare now the word of the Lord: O ye remnaunt of Juda. * Thus saith the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Yf ye be wholy purposed to go in to Egipt, & to dwel there as straungers: The sweard that ye feared, shall ouertake you in Egypt, and the hunger whereof ye be here afrayed: shal hange vpon you, and followe you into Egypt, and there shal ye dye. And al they that of set purpose vndertake to go into Egypt to soiourne there, shal perish with the sweard, with hunger, and pestilence, not one of them shall remaine, there shal none escape the plage, that I wil bryng vpon them. For thus saith the lord of hostes the God of Israell, lyke as my wrath and indignacion is moued against the inhabitaunts of Jerusalem, so shal my displeasure be kyndled against you also, ye ye go into Egypte, & there ye shalbe reuiled, abhorred: brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place ye shal neuer se it more. The Lord forbiddeth you (O ye remnaunt of Juda) that ye shall not go into Egypte. And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye, for ye haue dissembled with me: * For ye sent me vnto the Lorde your God and saied: O pray thou the Lorde our God for vs: and loke what aunswere the Lorde our God geueth the, that bryng vs againe, and we shall do thereafter. Now haue I shewed and declared vnto you, but you haue not obeyed the voice of the lord your God, for the which cause he hath sent me vnto you. Now therefore, * Ye ye will not folow it, be sure that ye shall perish with the sweard, with hunger and pestilence: euen in the same place, where your lust is to go and dwel.

¶ The xliij. Chapiter.

Now whe Jeremy had ended al the wordes of the Lord his God: vnto the people which to declare the Lord their God had sent hym to them (euen all these wordes, I say) Jazariah the sonne of Osaiah and Johanan the sonne of Careah with all the stubbourne persons, saied vnto Jeremy: * Thou lyest, The Lord our God hath not sent the to speake vnto vs, that wee shoulde not go into Egypt, and dwel ther. But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoked the against vs, that he might betraye vs into the captiuite of the Chaldees, that they might slea vs, and cary vs away prysoners vnto Babylon. So Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the captaines of the host, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lord: Namely, to dwel in the land of Juda. But Johanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaines of the host caryed away al the remnaunt in Juda * that were come together againe from all the heathen among who they had been scattered vnto dwel in the lad of Juda, men, women, children, the kynges daughters: al those that Nabuzaradā the chefe captein had left with Godeliah the sonne of Ahykam, the sonne of Saphan. They caried away also the Prophet Jeremy: Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypt (for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God.) Thus they came to Taphnis. And in Taphnis the worde of the Lord happened vnto Jeremy, saying: Take greate stones in thyne hand, and hyde them in the bricke wal, vnder the doze of Pharaos house in Taphnis: that al the men of Juda may se, and say vnto them: Thus saith the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: * Behold, I wil sende and cal for Nabuchodonozor the kynge of Babilon my seruaunt, and wil set his seas vpon these stones that I haue hyd, and he shal spreade his tente ouer them. And when he cometh, he shal smite the lande of Egipt: some with slaughter, some with prisonment and some with the sweard. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians Goddes, and burne them vp, and take them selues prisoners. The.xvi. day. Mattyas. A.

This is the woorde that was shewed to Jeremy concernyng all the Iewes: which dwelt in Egypt: at Magdoli, at Taphnis, at Noph, and in the lande of Pathures. Thus saieth the Lorde of hoastes the God of Israel: Ye haue seen al the misery that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, and vpon the cities of Juda: so that this day thei are desolate, & noman dwellyng therein: and that because of the greate blasphemies whiche thei committed, to prouoke me vnto angre. In that thei went backe to do sacrifice and worshyp vnto straunge goddes: whom neither ye nor your fathers haue knowen. Nowbeit, I sent vnto them my seruauntes al the Prophetes. * I rose vp earely, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng (W) ye no suche abhominable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But thei would not folowe nor hearken to turne from their wickednes, and to do nomore Sacrifices vnto straunge goddes. Wherefore myne indignacion and wrath was kyndled, and it brent vp the cities of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that thei ware made wast & desolate, as it is come to passe this day. Nowe, therfore thus saith the Lord of hoastes, the God of Israel: How happeneth it, that ye do so greate euell vnto your owne soules: thus to destroie the men, and women: children and babes of Juda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the woorkes of your owne handes: When ye offre vnto straunge goddes in Egipte, where as ye bee gone to dwel, That ye might vtterly perishe, and that ye might be reuiled and shamefully intreated of al nacions. Or haue ye now forgotten the wickednes of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kynges of Juda, and their wyues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue doen in the lande of Juda, in the citie, and in the stretes of Jerusalem? Yet are ye not sory vnto this day, ye feare not, neither walke ye in my lawe, and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you, and your forefathers. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde of hoastes, the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised, and determined to punishe you, and to roote out all Juda. And for the remnaunt of Juda, that purposly went in to Egypte, there to dwell, I will take them, * and thei shal al be destroyed. In the lande of Egipte shall thei perishe, beyng consumed with the sweard and with hunger. For from the least vnto the moste, thei shall perishe with the sweard and with hunger. Moreouer, thei shalbee reuiled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded: For I will visit theim that dwel in Egypte, * as I haue visited Jerusalem with the sweard, with hunger and with pestilence. So that none of the remnaunt of Juda, whiche are gone to dwel in Egypte, shalbe lefte to come againe into the lande of Juda although thei thincke to come thether againe, and to dwel there. For noone shall come againe, but suche as are fled away. Then all the men whiche knewe that their wyues hadde offered vnto straung Goddes, and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there: Yea, and all the people that dwelte there in Egypte in the Citie of Pathures, aunswered Jeremy, and sayed: As for the woordes that thou haste spoken vnto vs: in the name of the Lorde wee wil in no wyse heare them, but what soeuer goeth out of our owne mouth, that we will doe. Wee will do sacrifice, and offere oblacions vnto the Quiene of heauen. * Lyke as wee, and our forefathers, our Kynges, and our heades haue doen in the Cities of Juda, and in the stretes and feldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of victailes, then ware wee in prosperitie, and no misfortune came vpon vs. * Vnt sence we left to burne encence: and to do sacrifice vnto the quiene of heauen, wee haue halde scarcenes of all thynges, and perishe with sweard and hunger. Last of all: when wee women did sacrifice and offered vnto the Quiene of heauen, did wee make her cakes and powre vnto her dryncke offeryngs, euen to that ymage dyd we sacrifice and serue, without our husbandes willes. Then saide Jeremy vnto al the people, to the meane, to the women, and to all the folcke whiche hadde geuen hym that aunswere, did not the Lorde remembre the Sacrifices that ye, your forefathers, your Kynges, and rulers, with all the people haue offered in the Cytes of Juda, in the stretes, and landes of Jerusalem? And hath he not considered this in his mynde? In so muche that the Lorde might no longer sufferre the wickednesse of your inuencions, and the abhominable thynges whiche ye did? Is * not your lande desolate and boyde: Yea, abhorred and accursed, so that noman dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe this day? did not al this happe vnto you, because ye made surhe sacrifices to idolles, & synned Deuc.iij.a. against the Lorde? Ye haue not folowed his voice, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes. Yea, this is the cause that all misfortune happened vnto you: as it is come to passe this day. Moreouer Jeremy spake vnto al the people, and to al the womē. Heare the woorde of the Lorde, all Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egypt. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hoastes the God of Israell. Ye and your wyues haue spoken with your own mouthe, that thyng that ye haue fulfilled in deede. * Yea, thus haue ye saied: we will not faile but performe the vowes that we haue vowed, wee will do sacrifice and powre out drynckeofferynges to the queene of heauen: Purposely wil ye set vp your owne meaninges and performe your vowes. THese are the woordes, that Jeremy the Prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, * after that he had written these sermones in a booke at the mouth of Jeremy in the fourth yeare of Jeoakym the sonne of

A. Josyas kyng of Juda, saiyng: Thus sayeth

B. selfe with syghyng, and haue founde no rest. Therfore tel hym, O Jeremy: that the Lord saieth thus: Beholde, the thyng that I haue builded, wil I breake downe againe & roote out the thyng that I haue planted, yea, this whole land. And seke thou yet promocions? Loke not for it, and desyre it not. For I wil bryng a myserable plage vpon al flesh, saieth the Lord. * But thy lyfe wil I geue the for a pray in al places, whersoeuer thou goest. Jer.xxxi.b.

¶ The.xlvi. Chapiter.

THe woorde of the Lorde to the Prophet Jeremy, which he spake against al the Gentilles. These woordes folowyng preached he to the Egyptians cōcerning the host of Pharao Necho, kyng of Egipt * when he was in Charcamis beside the water of Euphrates: what time as Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylō slewe him in the fourth yeare of Jehoakym the sonne of Josyas kyng of Juda. * Make ready buckler and shild: and go forth to fight, harnes your horses, and set your selues vpon them, set your sallettes fast on, bryng forthe speares, crowne your swoordes: and put on your brest plates. But alas howe happeneth it, that I see you so afrayed? why turne ye backe? Their worthies are slayne. Yea, thei runne so fast away, that none of them looketh behynde hym, Fearfulnes is fallen vpon euery one of them, sayeth the Lorde. The lightest of foote shal not flye away, and the worthies shal not escape. Toward the north by the water of Euphrates, thei did stumble and fal. But what is he this that swelleth vp, as it were a floude roaryng and raging lyke the streames of water? Is it Egypt that riseth vp lyke a floude, and casteth out the waters with so great noyse. And he saied, I will go vp, and will couer the yearth, I will destroy the cytie with them that are therein, get ye vp ye horses: coule forth ye charettes come forth worthies: ye Morians, ye Libeans with your buklers, ye Lydians with your bowes. This day of the Lord God of hostes is a day of vengeaunce, that he may auenge him of his enemies. The sweard shal deuoure it shalbee satisfied and bathed in their bloude. For the lord God of hostes shal haue a slain offeryng toward the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Gilead, and bryng triacle vnto the daughter of Egypte. But in vaine shalt thou go to surgerie, for thy wound shal not be stopped. The heathen haue heard of thy shame, and the lande is ful of thy confusion: for one stronge man did stomble vpon another, and they are fallen both together. B. C.

* These are the woordes that the Lorde spake Jere.xlvi.b. D.

to the prophet Jeremy, concernyng the comyng of Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon, whiche was sent to destroye the lande of Egipte. Preache out thorowe the lande of Egypte, and cause it to be proclaimed at Migdol, Noph and Tapnis, and saye: stande stil, make the ready, for the sweard shal consume the round about. Howe happeneth it, that thy mighty worthyes are fallen? Why rode they not fast? Euen because the Lorde thrust thē downe. The slaughter was great tey out till ouer fall vpon another. One cried vpon another. Up let vs go agayne to oure people, and to oure owne naturall countrey, from the cruell Cwearde. They dyd crie euen there, O Pharao, kyng of Egypte thou troublous kynge, the tyme will bryng sedicion.

E. As truly as I liue (sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hoastes) it shall come as the mounte of Tabor, and as Lybanus if it stode in the sea. O thou daughter of Egipt make ready thy geare to lye. For Noph shal be voide and desolate, so that no man shal dwel therin. The lande of Egipte is lyke a goodly fayre calfe, but destruction shall come out of the north, I saye it cometh. Her wages (an diers that be with her) are lyke fatte calues. They also shall be away together, and not abyde, for the daie of their slaughter, and the tyme of their visitacion shal come vpon thē.

F. The cry of them shall make a noyse, as the blaste of a trompet. For they shall enter in with their hoastes, and come with axes, as it were hewers down of wood. And they shal cut downe her wood, (sayeth the Lorde) They shalbe innumerable, for they shalbe more in nombre then the grashopper, so that no man shalbe able to tell them. The daughter of Egipt is confounded, and deliuered into the hāde of the people of the North. Thus saieth the Lorde of Hoastes the God of Israell. Beholde, I will visit that rebelles people of Alexandria, Pharao, and Egipte, yea, bothe their Goddes and their kynges, euen Pharao, and all them that put their trust in hym. Yea, I will deliuer them into the handes of those, that seke after their liues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of his seruauntes. And after all these thynges it shalbe inhabited as afore tyme, (sayeth the Lorde.

G. But be not thou afrayed (O my seruaunt Jacob) feare not thou O Israell. For lo, I will helpe the from farre, and thy seed from the lande of their captiuite. Jacob also shal rome agayne and be in rest, he shal prosper and no man shall do hym harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunt) (sayeth the Lorde) for I am with the: and will destroye all nations, among whom I haue scatered the. Neuerthe les, I will not consume the, but chasten the and correcte the, yea, and that with discretiō, neither will I quite the, as one that were cauteles. ¶ The. xlvi. Chapiter.

The. xvij. day Mattins. H. There are the wordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremyth the prophet, against the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the cytie of Azah. Thus (sayeth the Lorde) Beholde, there shall waters ryse out of the North, and shall growe to a great floude run nyng ouer and couering the lande, the cities I. and them that dwell therein. And the men shall crye, and all they that dwell in the land, shall mourne at the noyse and stamping of their strong barbed hoyses, at the rumbling of their charettes, and at the rumbling of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their children, so feble and weke shall their handes be at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistines. He shal make waste both Tyrus, Sidon, and all other that are swoyne vnto them. For the Lorde will destroye the Philistines, the remnaunt of the yle of Caphtor. Waldnes is come vpon Azah, Ascalon with other dalies shall kepe her peace. Howe longe wilt thou cease, O thou swearde of the Lorde? When wylt thou cease? Turne agayne into thy swete rest and leaue of. But howe can it cease, when the Lorde hymselfe hath geuen hym a charge against Ascalō & raised it vp against the cities of the sea coastes. ¶ The. xlviij. Chap.

Thus (sayeth the Lorde of hoastes the God of Israel against Moab, wo be to the citie of Nebo, for it is laid wast, brought to confusion, and Kariathaim taken. Misgab is brought to shame and afrayed, Moab can boast no more of Nebebon, for they haue deuysed agaynst it. Come shall they saye, let vs roote them out, that they maye be no more amonge the nombre of the Gentyles, and that thou Madmena mayest no more be thought vpon, and the swearde shall persecute the. A voyce shall crie from Horonaim: with great wastyng and destructiō in Moab made desolate. Children could tel of the crie therof. For at the goyng vp vnto Luyth, he arose with lamentacion and mournyng, and down towarde Horonaim, they heard a cruel and deadly crie. Get you away, saue your liues, and be lyke vnto the heate in the wylder nesse. For because thou hast trusted in thine owne woorkes and treasure, thou shalt be taken. Chamos with his priestes and princes shall go away into captiuite. The destroyer shall rome vpon all cities, none shall escape. The valleys shalbe destroyed, and the fieldes shalbe layed waste, like as the Lorde hathe spoken. Geue wynges vnto Moab, that she get her away spedyly, for her cities shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therin. Cursed be he that doth the woorke of the Lord negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe his swearde from shedyng of blonde. Moab hath euer ben ryche and carelesse from her youth vp, she hath rotten & taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer put out of one vessell into another (that is) he neuer went away into captiuite, therfore her taste remayneth, and her sauoure is not yet chaunged. But lo, the tyme cometh (sayth the Lorde) that I shall sende her trussers to truſſe her vp, whiche shall remoue her from her dwellyng, and empty her vesselles, and breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was Wherfore ho ye thy take thus, ye mete myghty and strong men of warre: Moab is destroyed, and her cities brent vp, her chosen youngmen be slayne, saith the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hoastes. The destruction of Moab cometh on a pace, and her fal is at hande. All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall saye, O howe happeneth it, that the strong staffe, and the goodly rodde is thus broken? And thou dough-ter Dibon come downe from thy glory, & sit in thyrste. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stronge holdes. And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete, & loke about the acke them that are fled and escaped, and saye: what thyng is happened? Oh, Moab is con founded and ouercome. Mourne and crie, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroied. For iudgement shall come vpon the playne lande.

Namely, vpon Holon, and Jahazah, vpon Mephaath and Dibon: vpon Nabo, and the house of Diblathaim, vpon Cariathaim, and vpon the house Gamul, vpon the house Moan, and Cariothe, vpon Bozrah, and all the cities in the lande of Moab, whether thei be farre or neare. The horne of Moab is smytten downe and her arme broken, saieth the Lorde. Make her droncke, for she magnified herselfe above the Lorde, that men maye clap their handes at her vomite, and that she also may be laughed to scorne. O Israell, shall thou not laughe hym to scorne, when he is taken among theues? * Yea, because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken against hym thou shalt be driuen away. Ye Moabites shal leaue the cities, and dwell in rockes of stone and become like doues, that make their nestes in holes. * As for Moabs prayde, we haue hearde of it: their very hye mynded. I knowe her stoutnesse, her boasting, her arogancie, and the prayde of her stomacke, saieth the lorde, I know (saieth the lorde) her indignacion, she doth not ryght, her wordes are lies, and they haue not dealt truly. Therfore shal there mour nyng be made for Moab, and euery man shall crye for Moabs sake, a lamentacion shalbe made to the men that stande vpō the wal. So will I mourne for the also, O Jaser, and for the, O thou vineyarde of Sabmah. Thy vine braunches shall come ouer the Sea, and the braunches of Jazer, but vnto the sea the destroyer shall breake into thy haruest & grape gathryng: myrthe and cheere shall be taken away from the tymbre field, and from the pole lande of Moab. There shalbe no twete wyne in the prasse, the treader shal haue no stomack to crie: yea, there shalbe none to crie vnto hym: whiche afore tyme were heard from Hezebō to Eleale and Jahaz, whiche lifted vp their voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim, the heifer of three yeare olde shall go mourning. The waters also of Nemrim shall be dryed vp.
Moreouer, I will make Moab ceasse, saieth the Lorde, from the offeringes and censyng that he hath made vnto her Goddes in hyghe places. Wherefore my harte mourneth for Moab, lyke a croude playing an heye song, and for the menne's sake of the brickwall my harte mourneth also, euen as a pype that pi-peth a dolefull song, for they shalbe very few, and destroyed. * All heades shalbe shauen, and all beardes clypped of, all handes bounde, & loynes gyrded about with sackecloth. Vpon all the housetoppes and streates of Moab, there shalbe lamentable mourning: For I will breake Moab lyke an vnprofitable vessell, saieth the Lorde: O howe is he destroyed! O howe mourneth she! O howe dothe Moab hange downe her head, and is ashamed! Thus shall Moab be a laughyng stock, and had in derysion of all them that be round about her. * For thus saieth the Lorde: Be-holde, the enemy shall come flying as an Eagle, and spred his wynges vpō Moab. They shall clyme ouer the the walles, and wyn the strong holdes. Then the mighty mennes har tes in Moab shall be lyke the harte of a woman trauelyng with chylde. And Moab shal be made to desolate that she shall nomore be a people because she hath set vp her selfe against the Lorde. * Feare, pyt and snare shal come vpon the, O Moab, saieth the Lorde.
Whoso escapeth the feare shall fal in the pit, and whoso getteth out of the pytte shalbe taken in the snare. For I will bryng a yeare of visitacion vpon Moab, saieth the Lorde.
They that are able to flye, shal stande vnder the shadowe of Hezebon: For there shal go a fyre out of Hezebon, and a flambe from Syō, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, & the top of those ledicious chyldren.
Wo be vnto the, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos shalt perysshe. Yea, thy sonnes and doughters shalbe led away captiue. Yet at the laste, will I bryng Moab out of captiuite a-

Get you hēce, turne your backes, crepe down come a wildernes, an open shame, a laughyng stocke and curssyng: and all her cities shalbe

Like as Sodom, Gomorre, & the cities that lye there about were turned vpsyde downe sayeth the Lorde: so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habita-cion there. Beholde, like as the Lyon, so shal a destroyer come vp from the pleasant medewes of Jordan vnto the stronge dwellynge place: and when I haue made hym quiet, I wyll make hym to flye from her, and all chosen menne will I set in araye against her.
Who is like vnto me? What is he that wyll stryue with me? What shepherde may stande in my handes? Therfore heare the coun-sayll of the Lorde that he hath taken vpon Idumea, and his purpose that he hath deuy-sed vpon the cytezens of Theman. The least of the flocke shall teare them in peces, and loke what cause thyng they haue: they shall the crye of their voyce shalbe heard vnto the flye vp hether, lyke as it were an Egle, and spred hys wynges vpon Bozrah. Then shall the hartes of the worthies in Edom be as fore, her young menne shall fal in the stretes, and all her men of warre shalbe taken awaye in that tyme, sayeth the Lorde of hoastes: I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damasthus vpon the: Aryse, & get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye the people toward the east.

Their tentes and their flockes, shall they take awaye: yea, their hangynges and their vessels. Their Camels also shall they carry away with them. They shal crye to the: Feare inhabiters of Hazor, sayeth the Lorde: for Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilō hath holden a counsayll, concernyng you, & cōceiued his deuice against you. Aryse, & get you vp against yonder nacion & careles people, sayeth the lorde, which hath neither gates nor dooze barres, but dwel alone. Their Camels shalbe stolē, & the droues of their cattel driuē away. Moreouer, those wil I scatter to ward all the windes: and bryng them to destruction: yea, and that of all the foure vttmost corners, sayth the lord. Hazor also shalbe a den of dragons, & an euerlastyng wildernes: so that no body shall dwel there, & no man shall haue there his habitacion. These are the wor-des that the lord spake to the prophet Jeremy concer-concernyng* Elam, in the begynnyng of the

Dan. viii. a. yeth the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde, I will breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye their strength and vpon Elam I will bryng the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of the heauen, and will scatter them against the same foure wyndes. And there shalbe no people, but some of Elam shall flee vnto them.
For I will cause Elam to be afraied of their enemies, and of thē that seke their lyues, and will bryng vpon them the indignacion of my wrath, sayeth the Lord. And I will persecute them with the swearde, so long till I haue brought them to naught. I will set my throne in Elam, I will destroye both the kyng and princes from thence sayeth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme I will bryng Elam out of Je men enquire for the synne of Juda, ther shalbe none for I wilbe merciful vnto them, whom I suffer to remayne ouer. Go downe to thē that dwell in the enemies lande, and visite them, that dwell therein: downe with thē, and smite them vpon the backes, saieth the Lorde, doe according to all that I haue commaunded the. There is wone aboute the lande a crye of a slaughter and a great murther, namely on this maner. Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and broosed in sonder? Howe chanceth it, that Babylon is become a wylderues among the Heathen on this maner? I my selfe haue laid wayte for the, and thou art taken, vnaware: art thou trapped and snared: for why? thou hast prouoked the Lord vnto angre. The lord hath opened his house of ordinaunce, and brought forth the weapons of his wrath.

Jere. l. e. For the thyng that is wonne in the lande of the Chaldees, it is the Lorde of hoostes worke. Come against her, for this is her end deſtroye, deſtroye her that nothyng ſhalbe left. Slea all her myghtie ſouldiers, and put the to death. Woe be vnto them, for the daye and tyme of their viſitacion is at hand. Methinke I heare all ready a crye, of them that be fled and eſcaped out of the lande of Babylō, whiche ſhew in Sion the vengeaunce of the lord our God, the vengeaunce of his temple: yea, a voyce of them, that crye againſte Babylon. Call vp all the Archers againſte Babylon, pytche youre tentes rounde about her, that none eſcape. * Recompences her as ſhe hath deſerued: and accordyng as ſhe hath done, ſo deale with her againe, for ſhe hath * ſet vp her ſelfe againſt the Lorde, againſt the holy one of Iſrael. Therefore ſhall her young men fall downe in the ſtreates, and all her men of warre ſhalbe rooted out in that daye ſaieth the Lorde. Beholde, I ſpeake vnto the O thou proude, ſaieth the Lorde GOD of hoaſtes, for thy daye ſhall come, euen the time of thy viſitacion. And the proude ſhal ſtomble and fall, and no man ſhall helpe him vp. I will burne vp his cyties with fire, and it ſhal conſume all that is rounde about him. F. Thus ſaieth the Lord of hoaſtes: The children of Iſraell and Iuda, ſuffre violence toguether. All they that haue them in captiuite, kepe the faſte, and will not let them go, but their auenger and redemer is myghty. Whoſe name is the Lorde of hoaſtes: he ſhal mayntayne their cauſe, he ſhall make the lande ſhake, and iudge them that dwell therein, one with another.

The ſwearde ſhall come vpon the Chaldees, ſaieth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon their princes, & vpon their wiſe men. The ſwearde vpon their ſothſayers, for thoſe, they ſhall become fooles. The ſwearde vpon their worthies, ſo that they ſhall ſtande in feare. The ſwearde vpon their horſemen and charettes, and vpon all the comen people that dwel vnder them, ſo that thei ſhall all become lyke women. The ſwearde vpō their treaſure, ſo that it ſhalbe ſtollen awaye. Drought vpon their waters, ſo that they ſhalbe dried vp. For the lande worſhippeth ymages, and deliteth in ſtraunge wonder full thynges. Therfore ſhall wylde beaſtes, Lamia, and Catte of mountaines Oyſtruthes dwell therein, for there ſhall neuer man dwell there, neither ſhall any man haue his habitacion there for euermore. Lyke as GOD deſtroyed * Sodom and Gomorre, with the cities that laye there about, ſaieth the Lorde. So ſhall no man dwel there alſo, neither ſhal any man haue there his habitacion. * Beholde there ſhall come a people from the north with a great houde of men, and many kynges ſhall ſtande vp from the endes of the yearth. They beare bowes and buckelers, cruell are they & vnmercifull. Their voyce roareth like the ſea, they ryde vpon horſes, and come weapoured to fight againſt the, O Babylon. Alſone as the kyng of Babylon heareth tell of them, his handes ſhall waxe feble. Sorow and heuines ſhall come vpon hym, as a woman trauelyng with chylde. Behold, lyke as the Lyon cometh vp from the pleſaunt mendowes of Jordan vnto the grene paſtures of Gehan, ſo will I driue them furth, and make them runne againſt her. But whom ſhall I chooſe out, ordeine to ſuche a thynge? * For who is lyke me, or who wyl cryue with me? Or what ſhepeherde may ſtande againſt me? Therfore heare the counſaill that the Lorde hath geuen vpon Babylon, & the iudge that he hath taken vpon the land of the Chaldees. The leaſte among the people ſhal teare them in pieces, and loke what pleſaunt thyng they haue, thei ſhal laye it waſte. The noyce at the wynnyng of Babylon ſhall moue the yearth, & the crye ſhalbe heard among the Gentyles.

The. l. Chapiter.

Thus hath the Lorde ſayde: * beholde I will rayſe vp a perilous winde againſte Babylon and her cytezens that dwell within againſt me. I will ſende alſo into Babylon, fanners to fanne her out, and to deſtroye her lande, for in the daye of her trouble they ſhal be about her on euery ſyde. Moreouer, the lord hath ſayde vnto the bowmen, and to them that clyme ouer the walles in ſtrett platez. Ye ſhall not ſpare her young men, kyll downe al her hoaſte. Thus the Gayus ſhall fall downe in the lande of the Chaldees, & ſhe wounded in the ſtreates. * As for Iſrael and Iuda, they ſhall not be forſaken of their GOD of the Lorde of hoaſtes, for the holy one of Iſraels ſake: no, though they haue fylled al their land full of ſynne. * Flie away from Babylon, euery man ſaue his lyfe, that ye be not rooted out with her wickednes: for the tyme of the Lordes vengeaunce is come: yea, he will reward her againe. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hande, * a golden cuppe that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue al people dronken: therfore, are they out of their wittes. * But ſodenly is Babylon fallen, and deſtroyed. Mourne for her, bryng playſters for her woundes, if ſhe may peraduenture be healed againe. We would haue made Babylon whole, ſaie they: but ſhe is not recouered. Therfore will we let her alone, and go euery man to his owne countrey. For her iudgemēt is come into heauen and is gone vp to the clouden. The Lorde hath brought furth our righteouſnes. And therfore come on, we wyl declare vpon the worke of the Lorde our God. Make charpe the arrowes and multiplye your bylder, * for the Lorde ſhall rayſe vp the ſpirite of the kyng of the Medes, whiche hath already decreed to deſtroye Babylon. Thou hast bene myne hammer & weapons for warre, for with the haue I broken the people in peeces, and with the haue I destroyed kyngdomes. Therow the I haue beaten to poulder horse and horseman, yea, the charetter and such as sat vpon them. Therowe the I haue broken man and woman, old and young, bachelor and mayden. Therowe the I haue destroyed the shepeherde and his flocke, the husbandman & his catel, the prince and the rulers. Therfore wil I reward the cytie of Babylon, and all her citezens, the Chaldees with al the euill whiche they haue done vnto Syon: yea, that ye your selues shal se it, sayeth the lord: Behold, I come vpon the, thou noysome hyll, sayeth the lorde: thou that destroyest al landes: I will stretche out my hande ouer the, & cast the downe from the stony rockes, & will make the a brent hyll, so that neyther corner stones, nor pinacles, nor foundacions of stones shalbe taken any more out of the, but wast and desolate shalt thou lie for euer more, sayeth the lorde. Set vp a token in the lande, blowe the trompettes among the Heathen, prouoke the nacions against her, cal the kingdomes of Ararat, Mynny, & Ascanes against her, set the prince against her, bring against her a route of terrible hostes: against her, as if they were grashoppers. Prepare against the the people of the Medes with their kynges princes, and all their chefe rulers: yea, and the whole lande that is vnder him. The lande also shall shake and be afrayed when the deuice of the lorde shal come furth against Babylon, to make the lande of Babylon so waste that no man shall dwell any more therein. The worthies of Babylon shall leaue the battayll and kepe the selues in stōg holdes, their strengthe hath failed them, they shalbe like wome. Their dwelling places shalbe brent vp, their barres shalbe broken. One pursuyuaunt shall mete another: yea, one postle shal come by another to bryng the kyng of Babylon tydynges that his cytie is taken on euery syde, the foordes occupied, the fennes brent vp, & the souldiers sore affrayed. For thus sayeth the lorde of hostes the God of Israell, the doughter of Babylon hath bene in her tyme like a wa thrashyng flour, but shortly shal her harnest come. Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swalowed me vp lyke a dragō, and filled his belly with my delicates, he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substaunce away, and the thyng that was left me hath he caried vnto Babylon, sayeth the doughter that dwelleth in Syon: yea, and my bloud also vnto the Chaldees, sayeth Jerusalem. Therefore thus sayeth the lord: Behold, I will drinke vp her sea, and drie vp her water springes. * Babylon shall become an hepe of stones & a dwelling place for dragōs, a fearfulnes and wondryng, because no man dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke lions, and as the young lions when they be angry, so shall they bende them selues. In their heate I shall geue them a dyner and they shalbe ponisht forlore. * When shal they slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the lorde. I shall cary them downe to be slain like sheepe, like wethers & goates, o how was Sesach wonne! O how was the glorye of the whole lande taken! How happeneth it, that Babylon is so wondered at among the Heythen! The sea is ryssen ouer Babylon, & hath couered her with his great wawes. Her cities are layed wast, the lande lieth vnbuylded & voyde, it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauayleth therowe. Moreouer, * I wyl vysyt Bel and Babylon, & the thynge that he hath swalowed vp, that came shall I plucke out of his mouthe. bounded: yea, and her slayne shall lye in the myddest of her. Heauen and yearth with all that is therein, shall reioyce ouer Babylon when the destroyers shall come vpon her (sayth the North, sayeth the Lorde.) Like as Babylon hath beaten downe and slayne many out of Israell, so shall there fall many and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the sweorde haste you, stande not still, remembre the Lorde afarre off, and thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we are ashamed to heare the blasphemies, our eares were couered with shame, because the straunge alearntes came into the sanctuarye of the Lorde. Wherfore beholde (sayethe the Lorde) the tyme cometh that I will visite the ymages of Babylon, and throwe the hole lande they shall mourne and fall. Though Babylon clymed vp into heauen, and kepte her power on hye: yet shall I sende her destroyers, sayeth the Lorde. A pytious crye shalbe heard from Babylon, and a great mystery from the lande of the Chaldees, when the Lord destroyeth the, and when he driueth out the hye stomack and proude boastyng, wherewith they haue bene as furious as the waues of great water floudes, and made great crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her, euen vpon Babylon: whiche shall take their worthyes, and breake their bowes, for God is disposed to auenge hym selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yea (sayeth the Lorde) I will make their princes, their wyseme, their chefe rulers, and all their worthies dronken, so that they shall slepe an euerlastyng slepe: and neuer wake. Thus sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hoastes. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde of hoastes. The thycke wall of Babylon shalbe broken, and her hye gates shalbe brent vp. And the thyng that the Gentyles and the people haue wrought with great trauayle and labour, shall come to nought and be consumed in the fyre. This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the sonne of Neriah, the sonne of Maasiah, when he went toward Babylon with Zedekiah the kyng of Juda, in the fourth yeare of his reigne. Nowe this Saraiah was a peaceable prince. Jeremy wrote in a booke all the mystery that should come vpon Babylon: yea, and all these sermons that be written against Babylon, and gaue Saraiah this charge. When thou comest vnto Babylon, see that thou reade all these wordes, and saye: O Lorde, thou arte determined to rote out this place, so that neither people nor catell shall dwell there any more, but to lye waste for euer, and when thou hast redde out the booke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: Euen thus shall Babylon syncke, and be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble, that I will bryng vpon her, so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachynges of Jeremye.

The.li. Chapitre.

Zedekiah was one and twenty yeare olde, when he was made kyng, and he reygned eleuen yeare in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutall, Jeremias daughter of Libna. He lyued wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Jehoachym dyd. For the Lorde was angry at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of his presence. And Zedekiah fell from the kyng of Babylon. But in the nynthe yeare of his reigne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth it happened, that Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babylon with all his hoaste came before Jerusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwoorkes rounde aboute it. And this besiegynge of the cytie endured vnto the eleuenth yeare of kyng Zedekiah. And in the fourth moneth, the nynth daye of the moneth, there was so great honger in the cytie: that there were no more victuailes for the people of the lande. So all the souldiours brake awaye, and fledde oute of the cytie by nyghte throwe the waye of the porte, betwene the twoo walles bythe kynges garden. Nowe the Chaldees had compassed the cytie round aboute, yet went these menne their waye towarde the wyldernesse. And the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke Zedekiah the kyng in the fielde of Jericho, when his hoaste was runne from hym. So they caried the kyng away prysoner to Reblath, vnto the kyng of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. The kyng of Babylon also caused Zedekiahs sonnes to be slayne before his face, yea, and put all the princes of Juda to death at Reblath. Moreouer he put oute the eyes of Zedekiah, and caused hym to be bounde with two cheynes, to be caried vnto Babylon, and let hym lye in prysone tyll he dyed. Nowe the tenthe daye of the eyfth moneth, in the nynth yeare of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon, Nabuzaradan the chefe captayn, and the kyng of Babylons seruantes came vnto Jerusalem, & brent vp the house of the Lorde. He brent vp also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgeous buyldynges in Jerusalem. And the whole hoaste of the Chaldees that were with the chefe captayn, brake downe all the walles of Jerusalem round about. As for the poore people & such folke as yet were left in the cytie, which also were falle to the kyng of Babilon, yea, & what people as yet remained: Nabuzarada the chefe capitain caried thē away prysoners. but the poore people of the countrey, did Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupie the vyneyardes a siluer. The chaines also both the pillers that were in the house of the lorde, the seate and the brasen laner that was in the house of the Lorde, and caried all the metal of them vnto Babylo. They toke away also the caldrons, mouldes, sethekes, cyssmekers, spones, and all the brasen vessell that was occupied in the seruice, with the basens, colepannes, snaynekers, potes, candelsticke, spones and cuppes, whereof some were of golde, and some of syluer. The chefe capitayne toke also the two pillers, the laner, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate, * whiche kyng Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessell conteyned so muche metal, that it myght not be weyed. For euery piller was eyghtene cubytes hye, and the rope that went about it, was xii. cubytes, and foure fyngers thicke and round. Howe vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knoppe was eyne cubytes hye: and vpō the knoppes were hoopes, and pomgranates rounde about of cleane brasse. After this maner were both the pillers fashioned with the pōgranates, whereof there were an hū dreth. xxi. which hanged vpon the hoopes rounde about. The chefe capitaine also toke Seriah the hie preest, and Sophoniah that was chefe next vnto him, the thre kepers of the treasury. He toke out of the cytie a chamberlayne, which was a capitayn of the souldiers: and seuen men that were the kynges seruauntes, whiche were found in the cytie: and Sephet a capitayne that vsed to muster the men of warre, with threscore men of the countrey that were taken in the cytie. These nabuzaradan the chefe capitaine toke, and caried them to the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath, and the kyng of Babylon caused them to be put to death at Reblath, in the lande of Hemath. And thus Juda was led away captiue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whō Nabuchodonozor led away captyue. In the seuenth yeare of his reygne, he caried away of the Jewes thre thousand and thre and twenty. In the xviii. yeare Nabuchodonozor caried away from Jerusalē viii. hundreth two and thirty persones. In the xviii. yeare of Nabuchodonozor Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, toke awaye seuen hundreth fourty and eyne Jewes prysoners. The whole summe of all the prysoners, is foure thousande and eyght hundreth. In the xxxvii. yeare after that Jechachym the kyng of Juda was caried away in the. xxv. daye of the. xii. moneth, Euilmerodach kyng of Babylon (the same yeare that he reygned) gaue Jechachim the kyng of Juda his pardon, & let him out of prysō, and spake louingly to him. And set his seate aboue the seates of the other kynges that were with him in Babylon. He changed also the clothes of his prysō, & he dyd eate with him all the dayes of his lyfe. And he had a continuall lyuyng geuen him of the kyng of Babylon, euery daye a certayne thynge allowed him all the dayes of his lyfe vntyll he died.

How sytteth the cite so desolate, that sometyme was full of people? Howe is she become lyke a wydowe * whiche was the lady of all nacions? Howe is she brought vnder tribute, that ruled all landes? She weepeth sore in the nyght, so that the teares runne downe her chekes: for among all her louers, there is none that geueth her any comforte: * yea, her next frendes transgresse against her and are become her enemies. Juda is taken prisoner, because she was vexed and for seruyng so many straūge goddes she dwelleth nowe among the Heathen. She findeth no rest, all they that persecuted her, take her in strayte places, where she coulde not escape. The stretes of Sion mourne, because no man cometh nowe to the solempne feastes. All her gates are desolate, her preestes make lamentacion, her maydens are carefull, and she her selfe is in great heuinesse. Her enemies haue bene maysters ouer her, and her enemies haue prospered, because the Lorde hath chastened her for her great wickednesse: her children are led away captiue before their enemy. All the beauty of the daughter of Sion is away. Her princes are become lyke hartes that fynde no pasture. They are dryuen away before their enemy, so that they haue nomore power. Now doth Jerusalem remembre the tyme of her misery and disobedience: yea the hope & pleasure that she hath had in tymes paste, seyng her people is brought downe into the power of their enemy, and there is noman to helpe her, her enemies stand lokyng at her, & laugh her Sabbath dayes to scorne. Jerusalem hath synned ouer moze and moze, therefore is she come in decaye. All they that had her in honoure despise her, for they haue sene her vnchastnesse. Yea, she her selfe sygheth, and is ashamed of her selfe. Her chyldren are deceyued, for remembred not what would folowe, therfore is her fall so wonderfull, & there is no mā to cōforte her. O Lorde, consyder my trouble, for myne enemy hath the vpperhande: The enemy hath put his handes to all the precious thynges that she had, yea, euen before her eyes came the Heythen in and out of the Sanctuary: * whom thou (neuertheles) hast forbydden to come into thy congregacion. Stande vp, and make thy prayer in the fyrste watche of the nyght, poure out thyne harte like water before the Lorde: lift vp thyne handes for the lyues of thy young chyldren, that die of hongre in the stretes. Beholde, O lorde, and consider, why haste thou gathered me vp so cleane? Shall the women then eate their own frute, euen chyldren of a spanne long? Shall the prieste and prophetes be slayne thus in the sanctuary of the Lorde? Young and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the ground, my maydens and young men are slayne with the swearde: whome thou in the day of thy wrath hast indignacion hast put to death, yea euen thou hast put them to death, and not spared them. My neyghbours that are round about me, hast thou called as it were to a feast day: so that in the daie of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was any left behynde. Those that I haue brought and nourysshed, hath myne enemy destroyed.

The.iij. Chapiter.

I am the man (that haue sene the rod of his wrath) haue experience of myserye. He hath led me, yea, into darkenesse, but not into lyght. Against me only he turneth his hande, and layeth it euer vpon me. My flesshe and my skynne hath he made olde, and my bones hath he brused. He hath buylded round about me, and closed me in with gal and trauaile. He hath set me in darkenesse, as they that be dead for euer. He hath so hedged me in, that I can not gette out, and hath layde heuy lynkes vpon me. Though I crye and call pitefully, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vp my wayes with foure squared stones, and made my pathes crooked. He laieth wayte for me like a Beare, and as a Lyon in a hole. He hath marred my wayes, & broken me in peces, he hath layed me waste al together. He hath bent his bowe and made me a stil mete a marke to shote at. The arrowes of his quyuer hath he shote euen into my reynes. I am laughyng to scorne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the day long. He hath fylled me with bitternesse, and gyuen me wormewood to drynke. He hathe smytten my tieth in peces with stones, and rolled me in the dust. He hath put my soule out of rest, I forgette all good thynges, I thoughte in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde. Remembre yet my misserie, and my trouble, the wormewood and the gall. Yea, thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth away in me. While I consydre these thynges in my harte, I gette a hope agayne. Namely it is of the Lordes mercies that we are not vtterly consumed. For truly his pytifull compassion hath not ceased. Newe mercies shall they be, that shewe vpon the early yeas in the day spryng (so) great is thy faithfulnesse. The Lorde is my portion, saieth my soule therefore will I hope in hym. The Lorde is good vnto them, that put their trust in hym, and to the soule that seketh after hym. It is good man with rulnes and pacience tarieth for the health of the Lorde. It is good for a man to take the yoke vpon hym from his youth vp. He sitteth alone, he holdeth hym styl, & dwelleth quietly by hym self. He layth his face vpon the yearth, if (perchance) there happen to be any hope. He offereth his cheke to the smyter. He wyl be content with reproues. For the Lorde wil not forsake for euer, but though he punyshe hym: yet according to the multitude of his mercies, he sorryeth to grace agayne: For he doth not plage, and cast out the chyldren of men from his harte.

To treade all the prysoners of the yearth vnder his feete. To mowe the iudgement of man before the hyghest. To condempne a man in his cause. The Lord hath not pleasure in such thynges. What is he then that saieth: there should some thyng be done with out the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouthe of the Hyghest goeth not euell and good? Wherefore then murmureth the lyuyng man? let him murmure at his own sinne. Let vs loke wel vpon our owne wayes, and remembre our selues, and turne agayne to the Lorde. Let vs lyft vp our hartes with oure handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen. We haue bene disseblers, and haue offended, wilt thou therefore not be entreated? Thou hast couered vs in thy wrath, and persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without any fauoure. Thou hast hyd thy selfe in a cloude, that our prayer should not go thorowe. Thou hast made vs outcastes, and to be despysed among the people. All oure enemyes gape vpon vs. Feare, and pytie is come vpon vs, yea, decaye and destruccion. Whole ryuers of wa-

How is the gold become so dimme. How is the goodly colour of it so soore chaunged and the stones of the Sanctuary thus scattered in the corner of euery strete. The children of Syon that were alwayes so bewdefull, and clothed with the most precious golde: howe are they now become lyke the pearthen vessells, whiche be made with the potters handes. The Dragons gene their young ones sucke with bare brestes: but the daughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wildernesse like the Ostriches. The tongues of the suckyng childē cleaue to the rofe of their mouthes for very thirst. The yong children aske bread, but there is no man that geueth it them. They that were wont to fare delicately, perysh in the stretes, they that afore were brought vp in purple, maze nowe vpon dongehilles. The synne of the daughter of my people is become greater thē the wickednesse of Sodome, that sodeynly was destroyed, and not taken with handes. Her abstinence (or Nazarites) were whyter then the snowe or mylke, their colour was fresher then Corall, their beauty lyke the Sapphir. But nowe their faces be very black. In somuche that men shall not know them in the stretes. * Their skynne cleaueth to their bones. It is wythered, and become lyke a dry stocke. They that be slayne with the swearde are happier then suche as die of hunger, and perysshe alwaye sampe (wyng) for the fruites of the fielde. The women (whiche of nature are pitifull) haue sodden their owne children with their handes, that they myght be their meate in the miserable destruction of the daughter of my people. [The Lorde hath performed his fearce wrath, he hathe powred out the furiousnesse of his displeasure, he hath kyndled a fyre in Syon, whiche hath consumed the foundacions thereof. Neyther the kynges of the yearthe, nor all the enhabitours of the worlde, would haue beleued that the enemy and aduersary should haue come in at the gates of the cytie of Jerusalem, whiche nowe (wherefore is) come to passe (for the synne of the prophetes, and for the wickednesse of her priestes, that haue shed innocentes bloude within her. So that blynde men wente stombling in the stretes, and stayned themselues with bloude. They woulde in no wyse touche their garmentes. But they cried vnto euery man, fye the staynyng, away get you heare, touche it not. Yea, they fled, & remoued from them: yea, they haue sayd amōg the Gentyles, they shall no more dwell in this cytie. The countenaunce of the Lorde hathe deuyded them, and shall neuer loke more vpō them. For they them selues neyther regarded the priestes, nor pytied the elders. Wherefore yet our eyes fayle vs, while we loke for vayne helpe, seyng we be euer waytyng vpon a people, that can doe vs no good. They layd so sharpe wayte for vs, that we cannot go saufe vpon the stretes, for our ende is come, oure dayes are fulfylled, oure ende is here. * Oure persecutors are swifter then the Egles of the ayre, they followed vpon vs ouer the mountaynes, and layd wayte for vs in the wildernesse. The breth of our mouthe, euen the anoynted Lorde him selfe was taken in their net, of whom we say: Vnder his shadowe we shalbe preserued among the Gentyles. The. first. Chapiter.

1. It chaunced in the thirty yere the fyfth daye of the fourth moneth, that I was among the prisoners by the ryuer of Cobar: where the heauens opened, & I sawe a vision of God. Now the fyfth day of the moneth made out the fifth yeare of king Joachims captiuitie. At the same tyme came the worde of the lord vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the preest, in the lande of the Chaldees, by the water of Cobar * where the hande of the lorde came vpon hym. And I loked, & beholde, a stormie winde came out of the north with a great cloude full of fyre, which with his glittring lightened al rounde about. And in the middest of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an Aungel, and as it were the lykenesse of foure beastes, and this was their likenesse. They were fashioned lyke a man, sauyng that euery one had foure faces, and foure wynges. Their legges were streyght but their feete were lyke bullockes feete, and they glistered, as it had bene fayre couched metall. Vnder their wynges, vpon all the foure corners they had mennes handes. Their faces and their wynges were towarde the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one ouer touched an other. When they went they turned not about, but euery one went streyght forwarde. Furthermore this was the similitude of their faces. * Vpon the right syde of these foure, these faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a Lyon. But vpon the left syde they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Aegle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue, so that twoo wynges of one touched euer two wynges of an other, and with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it went, it went streyght forward. Where as the spirite ledde them, thether they went, * and turned not about in their goyng. The fashion and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hote coales of fyre, euen as though burnyng cressettes had bene among the beastes, (this was the vision) and the fyre gaue a glysten, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenyng. When the beastes went forward and backewarde, one would haue thought it had lyghtened. Now when I had well coasyded the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpon the yearthe, with foure faces also vnto the beastes. The fashion and worke of the wheles was lyke the sea. The foure wheles were fayned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in an other. When one went forwarde, they wente all foure, and turned them not aboute in their goynges. They were large, greate and fearyble to looke vpon. Their backes were full of eyes rounde about them all foure. When the beastes went, the wheles went also with them. And when the beastes lifte them selues vp frõ the earth the wheles were lyft vp also. Whether soeuer the spirite went, thether went they also, and the wheles were lyft vp and folowed the for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles. When the beastes went forthe, Gode fyll, & lift them selues from the yearth, then the wheles also went, Gode fyll, and were lift for the byrth of lyfe was in the wheles. Aboue ouer the heades of the beastes there was a firmament, which was fashioned as it hadde bene of the moste pure Christal, and that was spred out aboue vpon their heades, vnder the same firmament were their wynges layde abroad, one toward an other and two wynges couered the body of euery beaste. And when they went forth, I herde the noyse of their wynges, lyke the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the noyse of the greate God, and a rushyng together as it were of an hoaste of men. And when they stoode still, they lette bowne their wynges. Marke when they stode still and had letten downe their wynges, ie thundred in the firmament that was above their heades. Above the firmament that was ouer their heades, there was the likenes of a G. seate, as it had bene made of Saphire. Upon Ezec.viii.a. the seate there sat one like a man. I beheld hym, and he shone like an Aungell, as it had bene all of eye within from his loynes vpwarde. And beneth, when I loked vpon hym vnto the loynes, me thought he was like a shyning eye, the greatly light on euery side of him, the lyne a glittering that lightened rounde about, was like a raynbowe, which in a rainy daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherin the glory of the Lorde appeared. When I saw it, I fell vpon my face & worshipped vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

Moreouer came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and he sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and go forth into the fielde, that I may there talke with the.
So when I had risen vp, and gone forthe into the fielde: Beholde, the glory of the Lorde stode there, like as I came it afore, by the water of Chebar. Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the spirite came into me, which sette me vp vpon my fete, and spake thus vnto me: Go thy wayes and shutte thy selfe in thine house. Beholde, O thou sonne of man, there shall vnpayen be brought for to bynde the it is an obstinate housholde. But whē I speake vnto the, then open thy mouthe, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, whose hearyng let hym heare: whose will not, let hym leaue, for it is an obstinate housholde.

The.iv. Chapiter.

Thou sonne of man, take a tyle stone & lay it before the, and describe vpon it the cy-tie of Ierusalē, how it is besieged, how bule wourkes and strong degches are trenched on euery syde of it, destroyde also tentes and an hoaste of men rounde about it with engines of warre. Moreouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwixte the and the tyle, to be made as yron wall. Then set thy face towardes it, to besiege it, and laye ordinaunce against it to inwarde. This shalbe a token vnto the house of Israell. But thou shalt lepe vpon thy left syde, and laye the synne of the house of Israel vpon the. Euen eue dayes appointed, thou shalt lepe vpon that syde, & beare their synnes. Neuertheles, I will appoint the a tyme to put of their synnes, and the nombre of the dayes. Three hundred & xc. dayes must thou beare the wickednesse of the house of Israell. When thou hast fulfilled these daies lye downe agayne, and lepe vpon thy right side eourtye daies, and beare the sinnes of the house of Iuda. A daie for a yeare, a day (I saye) for a yeare will I euer laye vpon the.
Therefore set nowe thy face against that besieged Ierusalem, and discouer thine arme, that thou maiest prophecy against it. Beholde, I will laye chaynes vpon the that thou shalt not turne the frō one syde to another, til thou hast ended the dayes of thy besegyng.
Therefore take vnto the wheate, barly beanes, and lentes, Millum, & fitches, and put them together in a vessell, and make the loues of breade therof, according vnto the nombre of the daies that thou shalt lie vpon thy syde: that thou maiest haue bread to eate euen three hundred & xc. daies. And the meate that thou eat-test shall haue a certeine weyght appointed, namely twenty sycles euery day. This appoynted meate shalt thou eate daily from the beginnyng to the ende. Thou shalt drynke also a certeyne measure of water: Namely, the sixth parte of an Hin shalt thou drynke daily from the beginnyng vnto the ende. Daily eate it shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou first bake barly cake vpon a synder made with mans dounge, that they may so it. And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shall the children of Israell eate their defy-led breade in the middest of the Gētiles, amōg whom I will scatter them. Then sayd I: Oh Lorde God. Beholde, my soule hath neuer yet defyled it selfe: for my youth vp hetherto, vnto this houre, haue I not eaten of anye carkase or of that which was rauyne of wilde beastes, neyther came there euer any vncleane flesh in my mouth.
Where vnto he answered me, & sayde: Se then I will graunt the to take cowes dounge for the dounge of man, & to bake the bread with all before them. And he sayd vnto me: Behold, thou sonne of man, I wil minge all the pro-uision of bread in Ierusalē, so that they shall eate their bread, and eate it with carefulnesse.
But as for water, they shall haue their lyke measure therof to drinke. And when they haue no more bread, nor water, one shalbe destroyed with an other, and famished away for their wickednesse.

The.v. Chapiter.

Thou sonne of man, take the a sharp knyfe, namely a rasoure. Take that and shaue the heare of thy head and bearde. Then take the scales and the weyght, and pondre that heare a sondre. And after thou hast accomplished the dayes of the siege: burne the third parte therof in the fyre in the middest of the cyte, & cut the other third part in pe-ces with a knife. But as for the third part that remaineth cast it in the wynde, & I will drawe out a swearde after them. Yet after warde take a litle of the same, and binde it in thy cote lap.
Then take a certeine of it and caste it in the middest of the fire, & burne it in the fire. Out of the same fire shal there go a flame vpō the whole house of Israel. Moreouer thou saist the lord God: Thus saieth Ierusalem. I set her in the middest of the Heythen, and aboue that are rounde about her, but she hath despised my iudgementes more then the Heythen haue themselues, and broken my commaundemen-tes more then the nacions that lie round about her. For they haue cast out mine ordinaunces, and not walked in my lawes. Therfore thus saieth the Lorde God: For so much as ye have done more angwysted in numbre of people, then the Heythen that dwel round about you, and ye have not walked in my lawes, nether have ye kepe myne ordinances, & ye have not iuged ryghteously as the Heythen that are rounde about you. Therfore thus saith the Lorde God: I will also come upon the, I my selfe, I saye: for in the myddest of the, will I sitte in iudgement in the syght of the Heythen, and will fulfille the of such a fashion as I never did before, nor as I never will do eftsones more: for in the, the fathers* shall eate in the myddest of thine owne towne, & the sonne & their owne fathers eate. & upon all thine will I kepe in the, and the whole remnaunt of the will I scatter into all the wyndes. Wherfore, as truly as I lyve (saith the Lorde God) seyng thou hast defyled my Sanctuary, with all manner of abhominacions, and with all thy shamefull offences: forthis cause will I also destroye the. Myne eye shal not over the, neither will I spare the. One thirt part within the shalt dye of the pestilence and of hunger: An other thyrd parte shalbe slayne to and, rounde about with the swearde: The other thyrd parte that remayneth will I scatter abroade towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out the swearde after them. Thus I will performe my indignacion, and cease my wrath against them, and ease my selfe. So that when I have fulfylled myne angre against them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, which with a fervent gelousy have spoken it. Moreover, I will make the waste and abhorred, before all the Heythen that dwell about the, and in the syght of all them that go by the. So that when I punyshe the in my wrathfull angre, and with the plage of my wholesome correction, thou shalt be a very abhominacio, a shame & gasing & wondryng token among the Heythen that dye about the. Even I the lorde have spoken it, & it shall come to passe, when I shote among them the perylous darte of hunger, which shall be but death. Yea, therfore shall I shote them because I will destroye you. I will* encreace hunger, and minishe all the provision of bread among you. Plages and mysery will I sende you rye, & wilde beaste also to destroie you. Pestilence and bloudshedyng shal come upō you, and the swearde will I bryng ouer you. Even I the Lorde have sayd it.

AND the worde of the Lorde came unto me, saiyng: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the* mountaynes of Israell, that thou mayest prophecie unto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, Ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleys, & dales, Beholde I, I my selfe I saye, will bryng a swearde ouer you, and cause your hye places: I will cast downe your aulters, and breake downe your ymages. Your slayne men will I lye before your gods, & the dead carcases of the children of Israell will I cast before their idoles, your bones will I destroye rounde about your aulters and dwellyng places. Where ever ye dwelle, the pill chapels layed waste; your aulters destroyed and broken, your goddes cast downe and taken awaye, your temples layed even with the ground, your owne workes cleane rooted out. Your slayne menne shall lye among you, that ye may learne to knowe howe that I am the Lorde. Those that be amonge you, and have escaped the swearde, will I leave among the Heythen, for I will scatter you among the nacions and they that escape of you, shall thynke upon me among the Heythen, where they shalbe in captivite. For that whoredome and unfaythfull harte of theirs, wherewith they runne away from me I will breake in two, and put out those eyes of theirs, that committe fornication with their goddes. Then shall they be ashamed and displeased with their selves, for the wickednesses and abhominacions which they have done, and shal learne to knowe that I am the Lorde how that it is not in vayne, that I the Lorde spake, to bryng such myserye upon them. The Lorde sayde moreover unto me: Smite thine handes togyether, & stampe with thy syete, and saye: Woe with all the abhominacions and wickednesse of the house of Israell, for because of them they shall perysshe with the swearde, with hunger, & with pestilence. Whosoo farre or nye of the pestilence be that is nye at hand, shal pezish with the swearde, and the other that remayne and that are besieged, shall die of hunger. Thus will I satisfie my wrathfull displeasure upon the. And so shal ye learne to knowe that I am the lord, when your slayne men lie amōg your goddes, and about your aulters, upon all hye hilles and toppes of mountaines, among all grene trees, among all thicke okes, even in the places where they did sacrifice to all their goddes. I will stretche mine hande out upon them, and will make the lande waste. So that it shall lie desolate & boyde, from the wildernesse of Riblathah furth, throwout all their habitacions, to learne them to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The vij. Chap.

THe worde of the lord came unto me on this manner: The I call O thou sonne of man, thus saieth the Lord God unto the land of Israel: The ende cometh upō the land of Israell: yea, verely the ende cometh upon all the foure corners of the land. But now shal the ende come upō the, for I will sende my wrath upō the, and will punyshe the according to thy wayes, & reward thee after all thine abhominacions. one plage and stroke after another shall come vpon the. The ende is come, is come vpon the, beholde, it is come already, thy destruccion is early come against the, that dwellest in the lande. The tyme is at hande, the daye of trouble is nye by, and the crie shall not be as the soundyng against the mountaynes. Therfore will I shortly poure out my feare displeasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpon the. I will iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy day is come, the houre is runne out, the rodde floryssheth, pride waxeth greene, malicious violence is growen vp, and the vngodly waxen to a rodde. None of them shall remayne ouer, none of their riches, not one of their feete, and no lamentacion shalbe made for the. The time cometh, the day draweth nye: Who so byeth, let him not reioyce, he that selleth lette him not be sory, for why? Trouble shall come in the myddest of them all: so that the seller shall not come againe to the thyng that he solde, although their lyfe be yet with the lyuyng: for why the prophecie was preached vnto all the people, none turned from their synne, no man toke strength to him against his wickednesse, to saue his owne lyfe. The trompetters shall be blowne, and make you all ready, but no man shall go to the battayl, for I am wrothe with all the whole multitude.

The swearde without, pestilence and hunger within: so that whoso is in the fielde shalbe slayne with the sweard, and he that is in the citie shall perysshe with hunger and pestilence. And such as escape, and flie from among them shalbe vpo the hilles, lyke as the doues in the field, every one shalbe sorayed, because of his owne wickednesse. All handes shalbe let downe, and all knees shalbe weake as the water, they shall girde them selues with sackecloth, feare shall fall vpon them, their faces shalbe confounded, & their heades shalbe their owne: all their cast cloth in the streetes, and their golde shalbe despised: Yea, their siluer and golde may not deliuer them in the daye of the feersull wrath of the Lord. They shall not satisfie their hungrie soules neither fill their empty bellies therewith: For it is become their owne decaye through their wickednesse. And their beautifull rotlly ornament (that God had ordeined to be their great vnto their idols. For this cause will I make them vnclit to beholde. Moreouer, I will deliuer the prayes of the straungers to be spoiled, and the wicked for to be robbed, and they shall defyle it. My face will I turne from them, my treasury shalbe defyled, for the theues shall go into it, & spoyle it.

Make a chayne, for the lande is whole beset-led with vnrighteous iudgement of innocent bloude, and the citie is full of violent oppression. Wherfore I will bryng the moste cruell tyrannes from among the heathen, to take their houses in possession. I will make the pompe of the proude to ceasse, and their sanctuary shalbe defyled. When trouble cometh, they shall seke peare, but they shall haue none. One mischefe and rumour shall followe another, and one rumour shall come after another. Then shal they seke visions of prayne at their prophetes, the lawe shalbe gone from the priestes, and counsell from the elders. The kynges shall mourne, the princes shalbe clothed with heuynesse, and the handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I will do vnto them after their owne wayes, according to their owne iudgementes will I iudge them, to the entent they may knowe that I am the Lorde.

The. viii. Chapiter.

It happened, that in the sixth yere, the fifteth day of the sixth moneth, I sate in my house, and the lordes of the counsell of Iu-da with me, and the hande of the Lorde God fell euen there vpon me. And as I loked vp, I sawe as it were a lykenesse of fyre from hys loynes downwarde, and from his loynes vpwarde it shyned marueilously cleere, and lyke as Aumbre is wont to loke vpon. And it stretched forth an hande and tooke me by the heare locke of my head, and the spirite lyft me vp betwixt heauen & earth, and brought me in a vision to Ierusalem, into the entry of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the North, where stode an ymage, with whome he that hath all thynges in his power, was very wroth. And beholde, the glory of the God of Israell was in the same place, euen as I had sene it afore in the fielde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, lyft vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the North.
Then lyft I vp myne eyes towarde the North, and beheld: beside the porte Northe-warde, there was an aultar made vnto the ymage of prouocation in the very entryng in. And he sayde furthermore vnto me: Thou sonne of man, seest thou what these do? Seest thou the great abhominacions that the house of Israell committeth in this place, to driue me from my sanctuary? But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions.
And when he brought me to the court gate hole in the wal. Then said he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, digge thorough the wall, and when I had digged thorough the wal, behold there was a dore. And he said vnto me, go thy way in, and loke what wicked abhominacions thei do here. So I went in, and sawe, & behold, there ware al maner images of wormes and beastes, all idolles and abhominacions of the house of Israell, painted euery one rounde about the wall. There stode also before these ymages. * lxx. lordes of the counsel of the house of Israel, and in the mids dest of them stode Jazanias the sonne of Saphan. And euery one of them had a censour in his hande, and out of the encense there went a smoke as it had been a cloude. Then said he vnto me: thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what the senatours of the house of Israell do secretly, euery one in his chambre? * For thei say: Tushe, the lorde seeth vs not, the lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayed vnto me: Turne the yet again, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions that thei doe. And with that he brought me to the dore of the porte of the lordes house, towarde the North. And behold there satte women mourning for Thamus. Then said he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the about, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions then these are. And so he brought me into the inwarde courte of the lordes house and beholde at the porte of the lordes house betwixt the coore entry and the aultar, there ware .xxv. men, that tourned their backes vpon the temple of the lorde, and their faces towarde the East, and these worshipped the Sunne. And he said vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of man? thynketh the house of Juda that it is but a trifle, to do these abhominacions, here? Should they fyl the land ful of wickednesse, and vndertake to prouoke me to angre? Yea, and purposely to caste vp their noses vpon me? Therefore wil I also do some thyng in my wrathfull displeasure, to that myne eye shal not ouersee them, neither wil I spare them. * Yea, and though thei cry in myne eares with a loude voice, yet will I not heare them.

The. ix. Chapiter.

Also cryed with a loude voice in myne eares, saying: Come, heare ye rulers of the citie, euery man with his weponed hand to the slaughter. Then came there sixe men out of the strete of the vpper porte towarde the North, & euery man a weapon in his hand to the slaughter. There was one amongest them that had on him a lynnen raiment, and a writers ynkhorne by his syde. These wente in, and stode before the brasen aultar: for the glory of the Lord was gone away from the * Cherub whiche was vpon hym, and was come downe to the threshold of the house, and he called the man that hadde the lynnen raiment vpon hym, and the writers ynkhorne by his syde, and the Lorde said vnto hym: go thy way thorough the citie of Jerusalem, and set a marke vpon the foreheades of them that mourne and are sory for all the abhominacions that be doen therin. And to the other he said, that I might heare. * Go ye after hym through the citie, slea, and ouer see none, spare none: kyll, and destroy both olde men and young, maidens, children and wiues But as for those, that haue the marke vpon them, se that you touch them not. * & begynne at my sanctuary. Then thei beganne at the elders, which ware in the temple, for he had said vnto them: When ye haue defyled the temple, and filled the courte with the slaine, the go your way forthe. So thei went out, and slue downe through the citie. Now when thei had doen the slaughter, and I yet escaped: I fel down vpon my face, and cryed, saying: O Lorde God, wilt thou then destroy al the residue of Israell, in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Jerusalem? Then said he vnto me: The wickednesse of the house of Israel and Juda is very great so that the lande is ful of bloude, and the citie ful of vnrighteousnesse. For thei say: Tush * the Lorde regardeth not the yearthe, he seeth vs not. Therefore will I vpon them, * myne eye shal not ouersee them neither will I spare them, but wil recompence their wickednesse vpon their heades. And beholde, the man that had the lynnen raiment vpon hym, and the writers ynkhorne by his syde tolde al the matter how it happened, and said: Lord as thou hast commaunded me, so I haue doen.

The. x. Chapiter

And as I loked, behold, in the firmament that was above the Cherubins there appered the similitude of a stoole of Saphir vpon them. * Then said he that satte therin, to hym that had the lynnen raiment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, & take thyne handful of hote coales out from betwene the Cherubyns, and cast them ouer the citie. And he crept in that I might see. Now the Cherubyns stode vpon the righte syde of the house, when the man went in, and the cloude filled the inner ouert. * But the glory of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, & came vpon the threshold of the house: so that the temple was ful of cloudes, and the court was full of the lyght of the lordes glorie: Yea, & the sound of the Cherubyns wynges was harde into the vtter court, lyke as it had ben the voice of the almighty God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bidden the man that was clothed in lynnen, to go and take the hote coales from the middest of the wheles whiche ware vnder the Cherubyns: he went and stode be-

tyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forthe his hande from vnder the Cherubyns, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the lynen raiment in his hande: who the toke it, and went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubins, there appeered the likenesse of a mans hande. I sawe also foure wheles beyde the Cherubynnes, so that by euery cherub ther stoode a whele. And the wheles ware (to loke vpon) after the fashion of the precious stone of Tharsis, yea (vnto the sight) thei wat al foure of one fashion, as if one whele had been within another. When thei went forth, thei went al foure togeither, not turnyng about in their goyng. But where the first went, thether went thei after also, so that thei turned not about in goyng. Their whole bodies, their backes, their handes and wynges: yea, and the wheles also ware al ful of yies round about them al foure. And I hearde hym call the wheles. * Euery one of them had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a Man, the thirde of a Lyon, the fourth of an Eagle, and thei ware lifted vp a boue. This is the beaste that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubins went, the wheles went with them, and when the Cherubyns moued their wynges to lifte them selues vpwarde: the wheles remained not behynd, but ware with them also. Shortely when thei stode, there stode also. And when thei ware lifted vp, the wheles ware lifte vp also with them, for the spirite of life was in the wheles. * Then the glory of the Lord was lifte vp from the threshold of the temple, and remained vpon the Cherubyns. And the Cherubyns lyfted vp their wynges, and lifte them selues vp from the yearth: so that I sawe when thei went, the wheles with them. And thei stode at the East syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glory of the Lord was vpon them. This is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israel by the water of Cobar. And I perceiued that it was the Cherubyns. Euery one had foure faces, and euery one foure wynges, and vnder their wynges, as it ware mens handes. Now the figure of their faces was euen as I had seen the by the water of Cobar, so was the countenance of the. Euery one in his goyng went streight forward.

MOreouer, the spirite of the Lord lifte me vp, and brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And behold, there were xxv. men vnder the dore among whom I sawe Jaazniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah, the rulers of the people. Then said the Lorde vnto me. Thou sonne of man, these men ymagine mischiefe, & a wicked counsail take thei in this citie, tellynge: Tush, there is no destruction at hande, let vs builde houses: this Jerusalem is the cauldron, and we be the flesh. Therfore shalt thou prophesy vnto the: O sonne of man, prophesy shalt thou vnto the. Then fell the spirit of the Lorde vpon me, and said vnto me: Speake, thus saith the Lorde: On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) & I know the ymaginacions of your hartes. Many one haue ye murthered in this citie, and tilled the stretes full of the slaine. Therfore thus saith the lord God: the slaine men that ye haue laied on the grounde in the citie are the flesh, and this citie is the cauldron: But I wil bryng you out of it. Ye haue feared the sweard, & I wil bryng a sweard ouer you saith the Lorde God. I will bryng you out of this citie & deliuer you into your enemies hande, & wil condempne you. Ye shal be slaine in al the coastes of Israel, I wil be auenged of you: to learne you to knowe that I am the Lorde. This citie shall not be your caudron, neither shal ye be the flesche therin but in the coastes of Israel wil I punish you, that you may knowe that I am the Lorde in whose comaundementes ye haue not walked, nor kepte his lawes: * but haue doen after the customes of the Heithen, that ye rounde about you. Nowe when I preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah died. Then fell I downe vpon my face and cried with a loude voice, saiyng: O Lorde God, wilt thou then vtterly destroy all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: thou sonne of man, thy brethre, thy kynsfolke, and the whole house of Iudah, which dwel at Jerusalem, say: Withdraw ye fare from the Lorde, for the lande is geuen vs in possession. Therfore tell them, Thus saith the Lord God: I will scatre you far of among the Gentiles, and scattre you among the nations, & I wil hallowe you but a litle in the landes where ye shal come. Tel them also, Thus saith the lord God: I wil gather you again out of the nacions, and bryng you from the countries where ye be scattred, & I wil geue you the lande of Israel again. And thei shal come thether. And ther shall take away all there ye mis, and all their abhominacions from thence: * and I wil geue you one harte, & I wil plant a new spirite within your bowels. That stony hart wil I take out of your body, and geue you a fleshy hart, that ye may walke in my commaundementes, & kepe myne ordinaunces, and do them: that ye may be my people, and I your GOD. But loke whose hartes are disposed to folowe their abhominacions and wicked lyuynges, those mens dedes wil I bryng vpon their owne heades, saieth the Lorde GOD. After this did the Cherubyns lifte vp their wynges, and the wheles went with them, and the glorye of the Lord was vpon them. * So the glorye of the Lorde went vp from the middest of the citie, and rode vpon the mount of the citie, towarde the East. But the wynde tokeme vp, and in a vision (whiche came by the spirite of God) it brought me againe into Chaldea among the prysoners. Then the vision that I hadde seen vanished away from me. So I spake vnto the prisoners, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had shewed me.

The. xi. Chapiter.

1. THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saiyng: Thou sonne of mā that dwellest in the middest of a frowarde houshold whiche * haue eyes to see and yet see not, eares haue thei to heare, and yet heare thei not, for thei are an obstinate houshold. Therfore (o thou sonne of man) make thy geare ready to flit, and go to the by faire day light, that thei may see. Yea, euen in their sight shalt thou go fro thy place to an other place: if peraduenture thei will consyder, that thei be a disobedient houshold. Thy geare that thou hast made redie to flit withall, shalt thou beare out by faire day light, that thei may se: and thou thy self shalt go forth also at euen in their sight, as a man doeth when he sitteth vp gge thy rowme the wal, that thei may se and beare thy geare it the same thyng, that thou to kest vp in their sight. In their sight shalt thou beare it vpon thy shoulders, and cary it forth in the darcke. Hyde thy face that thou see not the yearth, for I haue made the a shewtoken vnto the house of Israell. Lyke as the Lorde commanded me, so I did: the geare that I had made ready brought I out by day. At euen I brake downe an hole through the wall with my hand and when it was darck, I tokе the geare vpon my shoulders, and bare them out in their sight. And in the morning came the word of the Lord vnto me, saiyng: Thou sonne of man, ys Israel that frowarde houshold acke the, & say: what doest thou there? Then tell them: Thus saith the Lorde God: This punishement toucheth the chefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that dwel among them. Tell them: I am your shewtoken: lyke as I haue doen, so shal it happen vnto you. Flet shal you also and go into captiuitie. * The chefest that is among you, shal lade his shoulders in the darke, and get him away. He shal breake downe the wal, to cary stuffe through: He shall couer his face that he se not the grounde with his eyes: * My line will I spreade out vpon him, and catche him in my net, and cary him to Babilon in the lande of the Chaldees, whiche he shal not se, and yet shal he dye there. As for all his helpers and al his hoste (that be about him) I will scattre them towarde al the wyndes, and drawe out a sweorde after them. * So when I haue scattered them among the heathē, and strowed them in the landes: thei shall knowe that I am the Lorde. But I will leaue a litle nombre of them from the sweorde, hunger & pestilence: to tell al their abhominacions among the heathē, where they come, that thei may know, that I am the Lorde. Moreouer, the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, saiyng: Thou sonne of man, with a fearful tre- 6.
bling shalt thou eate thy breade, with carefulnesse & sorowe shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of the lande speake thou on this maner: thus saith the lord God to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shal eate your bread with sorowe, and drynke your water with heauinesse, yea the land with the fulnesse thereof shalbe laied waste for the wickednesse of the, that dwel therin. And the cities that nowe be wel occupied, shalbe voide and the lande desolate, that ye may know, how that I am the Lorde. Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me againe, saiyng: Thou sonne of man, 7. what maner of byword is that, which ye vse in the lande of Israel, saiyng: Tush, * saiyng that the dayes are so lacke in comming al the visions are of none effecte. Wel then therefore, thus saieth the Lorde God: I will make that byworde to ceasse, so that it shall nomore be commenly vsed in Israell. But say this vnto them: the dayes are at hand, that euery thyng which hath been prophecied, shal be fulfilled. There shal no vision be in vaine neither any prophecie faile among the children of Israell: For it is I the Lorde that speake it: and whatsoeuer I the lord speake it shalbe performed, and not be lacke in commyng. Yea, euen in your dayes (O ye frowarde houshold) will I deuyse some thyng, and bryng it to passe, saieth the Lorde God. 8.
And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saiyng: Beholde, thou sonne of man. The house of Israel saith on this maner. Tushe, as for the vision that he hath seen it wilbe many a day or he come to passe. It is farre of yet, the thing that he prophecieth. Therfore say vnto them: Thus saieth the Lorde God. All my woordes shall nomore be slacke. Loke what I speake, that same shal come to passe, saith the Lorde.

Prophecy against those Prophetes, that preache in Israell: and say thou vnto them that prophecie out of their owne hatter: Heare the woorde of the Lorde, thus saieth the Lorde God: * Woe be vnto those foolishe Eze. xxxiii. a.
Prophetes that folowe their owne spirite, and speake where they se nothyng, O Israel thy prophetes are lyke to rey vpon the dry sedes: for they stande not in the gappes neither make thei an hedge for the house of Israell, that men might abide the battaile in the day of the Lorde. Maine thynges thei se, & tell lyes, * to maintaine their preachyng withal. The Lord (say thei) hath spoken it, when in very diede the Lorde hath not sente them. Maine visions haue ye seen, and spoke false prophecies, when ye say: the Lord hath spoken it, whereas I neuer said it. Therefore thus saith the Lord God: Because your wordes be vain, and ye loke out lyes. Behold I wil vpon you (sayeth the Lord. Myne hādes shal come vpon the Prophetes that loke out vaine thinges, and preache lyes: thei shal not be in the councel of my people, nor written in the booke of the house of Israel, neither shall thei come in the lande of Israell that ye may knowe that I am the Lord God. And that because: thei haue deceiued my people, * and colde them of peace, where no peace was. One setteth vp a walle, and thei dawbe it with lose clay. Therefore tell them whiche dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shal fal. * For there shal come a great shower of raine, great haile stones shall fall vpon it, & a rose storme of wynde shal breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shal it not the be said vnto you: where is now the morter that ye dawbed it withal? Therefore thus saith the Lorde God: I will breake out in my wrathful displeasure with a stormy wynd, so that in myne angre there shal come a mighty shower of raine, & haile stones in my wrath to destroy withal. As for the wall that ye haue dawbed with vntempred morter, I will breake it downe, make it euen with the grounde: so that the foundacion thereof shall remoue, & it shal fal, yea, and ye your selues shal perish in the middest thereof, to learne you for to know that I am the Lorde: Thus wil I performe my wrath vpon this wal, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempred morter, and then wil I say vnto you: the wall is gone, and the dawbers are away. These are the Prophetes of Israel, whiche prophecie vnto the citie of Jerusalem, and loke out visions of peace for them, whereas no peace is, sayeth the Lorde God. Wherefore, (O thou sonne of man) set thy face against the daughters of thy people, whiche prophecy out of their owne hartes: and speake thou prophecy against them, and say thus. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Wa be vnto you, that sowe pillowes vnder all arme holes, and bolsters vnder the heades both of young, and olde to catche soules withal. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuitie, ye prompte them lyes and dishonoure me to my people for an handful of barly, and for a pece of breade, when ye kil the soules of them that dye not, and promise lyfe to them that lyue not. Thus ye dissemble with my people, that beleuyth your lyes. Wherefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will also vpon the pillowes, wher with ye catche the soules in flying: them will I take from your armes, and let the soules go that ye catche flying. Your bolsters also wil I teare in peces, and deliuer my people out of your hande, so that thei shal come no more in your handes to be spoiled, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lord. Seyng that with your lyes ye discomforte the hartes of the righteous, whom I haue not discomforted. Againe, for so muche * as ye encourage the hande of the wicked, so that he may not turne from his wicked way, and liue, therefore shal ye spie out no more vanitie, nor prophecy your own gestynges: for I will deliuer my people out of your hande, that ye may knowe that I am the Lorde.

Here resorted * vnto me certaine of the elders of Israel, and satte down by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: thou sonne of manne, these men beare their vncleanes in their hartes, and go purposely vpon the stombling blocke of their owne wickednesse: shoulde I then aunswere at their request? Therefore speake vnto them and say: Thus saith the Lorde God. Euery man of the house of Israel, that beareth his vncleane Idolles in his harte, purposyng to stomble in his own wickednes, and commeth to a Prophete to enquire any thyng at me by hym: vnto that man will I the Lord my selfe geue aunswere, accordyng to the multitude of his Idolles: that the house of Israel may be snared in their owne hartes, because thei be cleane gone from me, for their abhominacions sake. Wherefore, tel the house of Israel, thus saieth the Lorde God: * Be conuerted, forsake your Idolles, and turne your wyues from your filthinesse, and turne your faces from all your abhominacions. For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israell, or a straunger) that forsaketh me in Israel, which departeth fro me, and taketh Idolles in his hart, purposyng to go till stomblyng in his owne wickednesse, & cōmeth to a Prophete, to aske counsell at me thorough hym: vnto that man will I the Lorde geue aunswere, by myne owne self. I will set my face against that man, and will make hym to be an example for other, yea, and a comme byworde: & will cleare hym out of my people, that he may know, how that I am the Lord. And if that Prophete be deceiued, when he telleth hym a woorde: then I the Lorde my selfe haue deceiued that Prophete, and will stretche out myne hande vpon hym, to roote hym out of my people of Israell: & thei both shalbe punished for their wickednesse. H. The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: What commeth of the vyne among all other trees: and of the wilde vyne stocke among al other tymber of the groue. Do men take wood of it, to make any worke withal? Or may there a naile be made of it, to hange any thyng vpon? Behold, it is cast into the fyre to be brent, the fire consumeth both the endes of it, the middest is brent to ashes. Is it mete then for any worke? No. Seyng the that it was mete for no worke, beyng whole: much lesse may there any thyng be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed & brent it. And therfore thus saith the Lorde God: Lyke as I cast the vyne into the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wood: Euē so wil I do with them that dwel in Jerusalem and set my face against them: thei shal go out frō the fire, and yet the fire shall consume them.* Then shall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I sette my face against them, and make the land waste: because thei haue so fore offended, saieth the Lorde God. Againe the worde of the Lorde spake vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man shewe the citie of Jerusalē their abhominacions, & say: Thus saith the Lord God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny & kindred came out of the lande of Canaan thy father was an Amorite thy mother a Cethite, thus was the maner of thy birthe. In the day of thy birthe when thou wart borne, the stryng of thy nauel was not cut of: thou wart not bathed in water to make the cleane: Thou wart neither rubbed with salt, nor swadled in cloutes. No man regarded the so muche, as to do any of these thynges for the, or to shewe the suche fauour, but thou wart vtterly cast out vpon the felde: yea despised wart thou in the day of thy birth. Then came I by the, and sawe the troden downe in thine owne bloud, and said vnto the: Liue, although thou be defiled in thyne owne bloud, yea, euen I (I tel the) said vnto the, lyue, although thou be defild in thyne owne bloud.* So I planted the, as the blossom of the felde thou art growen vp, & waxen great: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaūt beuty, thy brestes are come vp, thy heare is goodly growen, where as thou wart naked, and bare afore. Now when I went by the, & loked vpon the: beholde, the tyme was come: yea euē the time to woue the. Thē spredе I my clothes ouer the to couer thy dishonesty, yea, I made an othe vnto the, & * maried my selfe with the (saith the lord God) & so thou becamest myne own. Then washed I the with water, & pourged thy bloude from the. I annointed the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raimentes, I made the shoes of tayns leather: I girded the about with white silke: I clothed the with kercheses, I decked the with costly apparel, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chaine about thy necke, spanges vpō thy fore heade, eare rynges vpon thine eares and set a beutifull crowne vpon thyne heade. Thus wart thou decte with siluer and gold, and thy raiment was of fyne white silke & nedle worke, & of diuers colours. Thou didest eat nothyng but synnet, hony and oyle: maruelous goodly wart thou and beutifull: yea, and a very queue wart thou. In so much B. Eze.b.a. Jere.ij.c. C. Jere.ij.a. Ose.ij.c that thy beuty was spoken of amog the Gentyles, for thou wast excellent in my beutie, which I put vpon the, saith the Lord God.

But thou hast put confidence in thyne owne beuty, and playde the harlot: when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou hast cõmitted whoredome with all that went by the, & hast fulfilled their desyres: yea, thou hast taken thy garmentes of diuerse colowres, and derte thyne altres therwith, wherupõ thou mightest fulfill thyne whoredom, * and of suche a fashiõ, as neuer was doen, nor shalbe. The goodly ornamentes & iewels which I gaue the of myne owne gold and siluer, hast thou taken, and made the mens ymages therof, and committed whoredom withall. Thy garmentes of diuerse colowres hast thou taken, and derte them therewith: myne oyle and encense hast thou set before them. My meat, which I gaue the, as symnels, oyle, & hony (to feede the withall) that hast thou set before them for a swete sauour. And this came also to passe saith the Lord God: * Thou hast taken thyne owne sonnes and daughters, whom thou hast bestl begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vp vnto them, to be their meat. Is this but a small whoredome of thyne (thynkest thou) that thou hast my children, and geuest them ouer, to be brent vnto them? And yet in al thy abhominacions and whoredomes, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youthe, how naked and bare thou wart at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne blood. After al these thy wickednesse (wo wo vnto the, saith the Lorde) thou hast builded thy stewes & bordel houses in euery place. Thou hast built hye places: yea, at the heade of euery strete hast thou builded the an aulter. Thou haste made thy beuty to be abhorred, thou hast layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multiplied thyne whoredõ. * Thou hast committed fornication with Egiptians thy neighbours: which had mutche flesshe: and thus hast thou encreased thyne whoredom, to angre me. Behold, I did stretch out mine hãd ouer the, & did * minish thy foode of longe, & deliuered the ouer into the willes of the Philistines thyne enemyes, which are ashamed of thyne abhominable way. * Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable: yea thou hast (I say) with them played the harlot and yet haddest not thou enough. Thus hast thou furthermore committed thy fornication from the land of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, and yet thy lust not satisfied. How ofcaste is thine harte (saith the Lorde God) seyng thou doest all these wanckes of an errauate whore: buildyng thy stewes at the head of euery strete, & thy bordel houses in al places. Thou hast not been as another whore that holdeth scorne of a final reward, but a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in stede of her husband. Gyftes are geuen to all other whores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto al thy louers, & offerest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of al places, & to committe fornication with the. It is come to passe, with the in thy whoredomes contrary to the vse of other women, yea, these hast no suche fornication been committed after the, seing that thou proferest gyftes vnto other, & no reward is geuen the: this is a cõtrary thyng. Therfore, heare the worde of the Lorde, O thou harlot, thus saith the lord God. For so muche as thou hast lette forth thy youthe to whoredome & discouered thy shame, thy whoredome thy whoredom with al thy louers, & with all the idols of thy abhominacions, & in the blood of thy children, * whom thou hast geuen the: Behold, therfore I will gather together all thy louers, vnto whõ thou hast made thy cole cõmen, yea, & all them whom thou fauourest, & euery one that thou hatest. I will (I say) gather them together rounde about the, & will discouer thy shame before thẽ that they may see al thy filthines. * Moreouer, I will iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murtherer, & recompence the thyne own bloud in wrath and gelousy. I will geue the ouer into their power, that shal breake down thy stues & destroy thy bordel houses: they shall stripe the out of thy clothes, al thy faire & bewtiful iewels shal they take from the, & so let the lye naked & bare: * yea, they shal bryng the cõmen people vpon the which shal stone the, & hew the downe with their swordes. They * shall burne vp thy houses, & punish the in the sight of many women. Thus will I make thy whoredome to cease, so that thou shalt geue out no mo rewardes. Shoulde I make my wrath to be stil, take my gelousy from the, be content, and nomore to be displeased? seyng thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thy gyftes? Behold, therefore, I wil bryng thyne owne wayes vpon thyne head, saith the Lord God howbeit I neuer did vnto the accordyng to thy wickednes, & al thy abhominacions. Behold, all they that vse common prouerbes, shal vse this prouerbe also against the, Such a mother, such a daughter. Thou art ouer thy mothers owne daughter that hath cast of her husband and her children. Yea, thou art the sister of thy sisters, whiche forsoke their husbandes and their children. Your mother * is a Cethite, and your father an Amorite. Thine eldest sister is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwel vpon thy left hand. But thy youngest sister that dwelleth on thy right hande is Sodoma & her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes, nor doen after these abhominacions: but thou (sayest) a litel and very smal tyme, was it al thy wayes thou haste bene more corrupte then thei. As truely as I liue, saith the Lord God: Sodoma thy sister with her daughters, hath not doen so euell, as thou & thy daughters. Behold, the synne of thy sister Sodoma ware these: pride, fulnesse of meate, aboundance, & idelnesse, these thynges had she & her daughters. Besides that thei reached not their hād to the poore and nedie, but ware proud & did abhominable thynges before me: therfore, I tooke the away, as pleased me. Neither hath Samaria doen half of thy synnes, * yea thou haste exceaded them in wickednesse: In so muche that in comparison of all the abhominacions whiche thou haste doen, thou hastte made thy sisters good women. Therfore thou (whiche iudgest condempne thy sister) beare thyne owne shame, for thyne owne offences, that thou haste committed, more abhominable then thei did which in diede are more righteous then thou art, be thou (I say) ashamed, and beare thy shamefull rebuke: seyng that thou haste proued thy sisters in cōparison of the righteous. As for their captiuitie, namely, the captiuitie of Sodoma, and her daughters: I wil bryng them againe, so wil I also bryng again thy captiuitie among them: that thou maiest take thyne owne confusion vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou haste doen, & to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma & her daughters: Samaria & her daughters shalbe brought againe to your old estate. Whē thou wast in thy pryde, & before thy wickednes came to light: thou wouldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntil the tyme that the Syrians with all their townes, & the Philistines with all that lye rounde about them, brought the to shame and confusiō: that thou mightest beare thyne own filthines, & abhominacion saieth the Lorde. For thus saieth the Lord God, I shoulde (by right) deale with the, as thou haste doen, thou haste despised the oth, & broken the couenaūt. Neuertheleſſe, I wil remēbre the couenaunt that I made with the in thy youth, in so much that it shalbe an euerlastyng couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, & be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receiue of me thy elder and yonger sisters, whome I will make thy doughters, and that beside thy couenaunt. * And so will I renue my couenaunt with the, that thou maiest knowe that I am the Lorde, that thou maiest thynke vpon it: be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne confusion no more: when I haue forgeuen the, al that thou haste doen, saith the Lorde God.

The. xvij. Chapiter.

THE worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: put forth a darke speakyng & a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and say: Thus saith the lorde God. Three came a great Aegle with great wynges, & long, with a mighty longe body, & full of fethers of diuers colours vpon the mount of Libanus, and toke the hyest braunche from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of his twigge, and caried it into the lande of Canaan, and sette it in a citie of marchaūtes. He toke also of the seade of the lande, and planted it in a frutefull grounde, he brought it vnto greate waters, and set it as a willowe therby. When did it growe, and was a great vynestock, but lowe by the grounde, whose braunches turned into it self, and the rootes of it ware fastened vnder it. Thus there came of it a vine, and it brought forth blossoms, & spred out braunches. But there was another Aegle, a greate one, whiche had greate wynges, and many fethers: and Behold, the rootes of this vyne had an hunger after hym & spreade out his braunches toward hym that he might water her with the orchyard that he had planted. Neuertheles, it was planted vpon a good ground beside great waters: so that (by reason) it shoulde haue brought out braunches and frute, and haue been a goodly vine. Speake thou therfore, thus saieth the Lorde God: Shal this vyne prospere? Shall not his rootes be plucked out, his frute be broken of, his grene braunches wyther and fade away? yea, without either strōg arme or many people, shal it be plucked vp by the rootes. Behold, it was planted: shall it prospere therfore? Shal it not be dryed vp and withered: yea, euen in the shotyng out of his blossoms, assone as the east wind bloweth? Moreouer, the word of the lord came vnto me, saiyng (speake to that frowarde household: know ye not, what these thynges do signifie? Tell them: Behold, the kyng of Babilon came to Jerusalem, & toke the kyng & his princes, & led them to Babilon. He toke of the kynges seade, & made a couenaunt with him, & toke an othe of hym: The princes of the lande toke he with hym also, that the land might be holden in subiection, & not to rebel, but kepe the couenaunt, & fulfil it. But he fel from hym, & sent his ambassatours into Egypte, that he might haue horses & much people. Shoulde that prospere? Shoulde he be kepte saufe, that doeth suche thynges? Or shoulde he escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As truely as I lyue saieth the Lorde God: He shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, that made hym kyng: whose othe he hath despised, & whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neither shall Pharao with his greate hoaste and multitude of people, maintaine hym in the warre: when thei caste vp ditches, and sette vp bulwarkes to destroy muche people; For seyng he hath despised the othe, and broken the couenaunt (whereas he yet gaue his hande therupon) and doen al thefe thynges, he ſhall not eſcape. Therefore thus ſaieth the Lorde God: As truely as I liue, I will bryng myne othe that he hath deſpiſed, and my couenaunt that he hath broken vpon his owne heade. * I will caſt my net about hym, and catche hym in my yarne. To Babilon will I carry hym, there will I punyſhe hym, becauſe of the great offence that he made me. As for thoſe that ſle from hym out of the hoſt, thei ſhalbe ſcatred towarde al the windes: and ye ſhal knowe that I the Lord haue ſpoken it. Thus ſaith the Lord God: I will alſo take a braunche from an hye Cedre tree and will ſet it, and take the vppermoſt twigge that yet is but tender, & plante it vpon an hye hil. Namely vpō the highe hil of Iſrael will I plante it, that it may bryng forth twigges and geue fruite, and be a greate Cedre tre: ſo that al maner of foules may builde in it, and make their neaſtes vnder the ſhadowe of his braunches. And al the trees of the felde ſhal knowe that I the Lorde haue brought down the hie tree, and ſette the lowe tree vp: that I haue dried vp the grene tree, and made the drye tree to floriſhe. Euen I the Lorde that ſpake it, haue alſo brought it to paſſe.

The. xvij. Chapiter.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me on this maner: what meane ye by this common prouerbe, that ye vſe in the lande of Iſrael ſaiyng: * The fathers haue eaten ſoure grapes, and the childrens tethe are ſet on edge. As truely as I liue, ſaieth the Lorde God, ye ſhal vſe this biworde nomore in Iſrael. Beholde * al ſoules are myne. Lyke as the father is myne, ſo is the ſonne mine alſo. The ſoule that ſynned ſhal dye. * Yf a man be godly, and doe the thyng that is equall, and right, he eateth not vpon the hilles: he lifteth not his eies vp to the foule ydols of Iſrael: he defileth not his neighbours wyfe: he medleth with no menſtruous woman: he greueth nobody: he geueth his detter his pledge again, he taketh none other mās good by violence: * he parteth his meat with the hūgry: he clotheth the naked: * he lendeth nothyng vpon vſury, he taketh nothyng ouer: he withdraweth his hand from doyng wrōg he dealeth faithfully betwene man and man: and walketh in my commaundementes, & kepeth my lawes, and performeth them faithfully. * This is a righteous mā: he ſhal ſurely liue, ſaith the Lord God. Yf he now get a ſonne, that is a murtherer, a ſheder of blood: yf he doe one of theſe thynges * (though he do not al) he eateth vpon the hilles, he defileth his neighbours wyfe, he greueth the poore and nedy, he robbeth, ſpoileth, he geueth not the detter his pledge again, he lifteth vp his eyes vnto ydols, & medleth with abhominable thynges, he lendeth vpon vſury and taketh moreouer. Shal this man lyue? he ſhal not lyue. Seyng he hath doen all theſe abhominacions, he ſhal dye, his bloude ſhalbe vpon hym. Now yf this man get a ſonne alſo that ſeeth al his fathers ſynnes, whiche he hath doen: and feareth, neither doeth ſuche lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaines: he lifteth not his eyes to the ydols of Iſrael: he defileth not his neighbours wyfe: he hurteth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he neither ſpoileth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meate with the hungry: he clotheth the naked: he oppreſſeth not the poore: he receiueth no vſury, nor any thyng ouer, he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes. This man ſhal not dye in his fathers ſynne, but ſhal lyue without faile. As for his father, becauſe he oppreſſed & ſpoiled his brother, and did wickedly among his people: lo, he is dead in his owne ſyn. And yet ſay ye: Wherefore then ſhulde not this ſonne beare his fathers ſynne? Therefore, becauſe the ſonne hath doen equitie and right, hath kept all my commaundementes, and doen them: therfore ſhal he liue in liede. The ſame ſoule that ſynneth ſhall dye. * The ſonne ſhall not beare the fathers offence, neither ſhall the father beare the ſonnes offence. The righteouſneſſe of the righteous ſhalbe vpon him and the wickednes of the wicked ſhalbe vpon hym ſelfe alſo. * But yf the vngodly will turne away from all his ſynnes that he hath doen, and kepe al my commaundementes, and do thyng that is equall & right: doubtles he ſhal liue, and not dye. As for al his ſinnes that he did before, thei ſhall not be thought vpon, but in his righteouſneſſe that he hath doen, he ſhal lyue. * For haue I any pleaſure in the death of a ſynner, ſaith the Lord God, but rather that he conuert and lyue? Again: yf the righteous turne away from his righteouſnes, and do iniquitie, according to all the abhominacions that the wicked man doeth ſhall he lyue? All the righteouſnes that he hath doen ſhal not be thought vpō, but in the faulte that he hath offended withal, and in the ſynne that he hath doen, he ſhal dye. And yet ye ſay: Tushe, * the way of the Lorde is not indifferent. Heare therefore ye houſe of Iſrael: is not my way right? Or are not your wayes rather wicked? * When a righteous man turneth away from his righteouſneſſe, & medleth with vngodlineſſe: he muſt dye therin. Yea, for the righteouſneſſe that he hath doen, muſt he dye? Again, * when the wicked man turneth away from his wickednesſe, that he hath doen, and doeth the thyng whiche is equal and right: he ſhall ſaue his ſoule alyue. For in ſo muche as he conſydereth hym ſelfe, and turneth hym frō al the vngodlineſſe that he hath vſed, he ſhall lyue, and not dye. And yet ſaith the houſe of Iſrael: Tushe: the waie of the lorde is not equall. Are my waies vnright, O ye house of Israell? Are not your waies rather vnequal? As for me I will iudge

The.xix. Chapiter.

A. Bvt thou sonne of mā, mourne thou for the princes of Israell, and saie. Wherefore lay thy mother that lionesse emōg the lions, and nozished her yong ones emong the lions whelpes? one of her whelpes she brought vp and it became a lion, it learned to spoyle, and to deuoure folke. The Heathen heard of hym, and toke hym in their nettes, and brought him in chaines, vnto the land of Egipt. Now whē B. the damme sawe, that all her hope & comfort was awaie, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lion of hym: whiche went emong the lions, and became a fearce lion: learned to spoyle and to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cities waste. In so much that the whole lād, & euery thing therin was vtterly desolate, through the very voyce C. of his roaryng. Then came the Heathen together on euery side, out of all countries against hym, laied their nettes for hym, & toke Iii.Me.xxv.a hym in their pitte. So* thei bound hym with Iere.xxxix.a cheines, and brought hym to the kyng of Ba-and.ly.a. bilō: which put him in prison, that his voyce should no more be hard, vpon the mountaines of Israell. As for thy mother, she is like a vine in thy bloud, planted by the water side: her fruites and braunches are growen out of many waters, her stalkes were so strong, that men might haue made staues of them for officers: she grew so high in her stalkes. So when men sawe that she exceded in heigthe and multitude of her braunches, she was rooted out in displeasure, and caste doune to the ground. The East wynd dried vp her fruite, her strong stalkes wer broken of: withered and brent in the fire. But now she is planted in the wildernes, in a drie and thirsty ground.
And there is a fire gone out of her stalkes, whiche hath brent vp her braunches and her fruite: so that she hath no mo strong stalkes, to bee staues for officers. This is a pitcous and miserable thyng.

The.xx. Chapiter.

A. In the. vij. yere, the tenthe daie of the. v.
Ezech.xiij.a moneth, it* happened, that certain of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske cou saill at the Lorde, and sat them doune by me.
Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, on this maner: thou sonne of man, speake vnto the elders of Israell, and saie vnto theim: thus saieth the Lorde God, are ye come hither, to aske any thyng at me? As truely as I liue (saieth the Lorde) I will geue you no an-swere. Wilt thou not reproue thē (thou sonne of man) wilt thou not reproue them? Shewe them the abhominaciōs of their forefathers B. and tell them. Thus saith the lorde God: * in Exod.iij.b. the daie when I chase Israell, and lifte vp myne hande vpon the seede of the house of Iacob, and shewed my selfe vnto theim, in the land of Egipt: yea, when I lift vp myne hand ouer them, and said: I am the lorde your God euen in the daie that I lift vp myne hande ouer them, to bring them out of the land of Egipt, into a land that I had prouided for thē, whiche floweth with milke and hony, and is a pleasaunt land emong all other. Then caied I vnto them. Cast* awaie euery man, the ab-Deut.vij.a. hominaciōs that he hath before hym, and defile not your selfes with the Idolles of Egipt, for I am the Lorde your God. But thei rebelled against me, and would not folowe me to cast awaie euery man the abhominaciōs of C. his yes, and to forsake the Idols of Egipt.
Then I caste me to powre myne indignacion ouer them, and to satisfie my wrathe vpon thē yea, euen in the middest of the land of Egipt.
But I would not doe it, for my names sake: that it should not bee vnhallowed before the Heathen, emong whom thei dwelt, and emong whō I shewed my selfe vnto thē, that I would bring them out of the lande of Egipte. Now when I had caried them out of the lande of Egipt, and brought them into the wildernes I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed theim my lawes, whiche* whoso kepeth, shall liue in them: I gaue them also my holy daies, to be a token betwixt me and them, and therby to knowe that I am the lorde, whiche hallowe them. And yet the house of Israell rebelled against me in the wildernesse, thei would not walke in my commaundementes, thei haue cast awaie my lawes (whiche who daies haue thei greatly vnhallowed. Then* I caste me to powre out myne indignacion vpō them: and to consume them in the wildernes.

Yet I would not doe it, for my names sake, lest it should be dishonored before the Heathē before whose eyes I had caried them awaie.
But I sware vnto theim in the wildernesse, that I would not bring them into the lande, whiche I gaue theim: a lande that floweth with milke and hony, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because thei refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes but had vnhallowed my Sabboth, for their harte was gone after their Idolles. Neuer-theles, myne eye spared them, so that I would not vtterly slea theim, and consume theim in the wildernes. Moreouer, I saied vnto their sōnes in the wildernes: walke[3] not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not their ordinaunces, & defile not your selues with their idols, for I am the lord your God. But walk in my statutes, kepe my lawes and doo them, hallowe my Sabbothes, for[3] thei are a token betwixte mee and you, that yee maie knowe that I am the lorde your God. Notwithstandyng, their sonnes* rebelled against me also, thei walked not in my statutes, thei kept not my lawes to fulfill them (whiche he that doth shall liue in theim) neither hallowed thei my Sabboth daies. Then I satde me again to powre out myne indignacion ouer theim, and to satisfie my wrathe vpon them in the wildernesse. Neuertheles, I withdrew my hand for my names sake, lest it should be vnhallowed emong the Heathen, before whom I had brought them furth. I lift vp myne hand ouer them also in the wildernes, that I would scatre them emong the Heathen, and strawe them emong the nacions, because thei had not kept my lawes, but cast aside my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, & lift vp their eyes to their fathers Idolles. Wherefore I gaue them also commaundementes not good, and lawes through the whiche thei should not liue, and I vnhallowed them in their awn giftes* (when I appoynted for my self, all their first borne) to make them desolate: that thei might knowe that I am the Lorde.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man, tel the house of Israell, thus saith the lorde God.) Beside all this, your forefathers haue yet blaspemed me more, and greatly offended against me. For after I had brought them into the land, that I promised to geue them, when thei saw euery high hill, and al thicke trees: thei made there their offrynges, and prouoked me with their oblacions, makyng swete sauours & ther and powred out their drinke offrynges. Then I asked them, what is the hill Altar that ye go to it? And therefore is it called the high place vnto this daie. Wherefore, speake vnto the house of Israell: thus saieth the Lorde God, ye are euen as vnclene as your forefathers, and commit whoredome also with their abhominacions. In all your Idolles, wherevnto ye bryng your oblacions, and* to whose honor ye burne your children, ye defile your selues, euen vnto this daie: how dare ye then come, and aske any question at me? O ye house-hold of Israell? As truly as I liue (saith the Lorde God) ye gette no answere of me. And as for the thyng that ye go about, it shal not come to passe, where as ye saie, we will be as the Heathen, and doo as other people in the lande, wodde and stone will wee worship. As truely as I liue, saieth the lorde God, I my self will rule you with a mightie hande, with a stretched out arme, & with indignacion powred out ouer you: I will bryng you out of the nacions and landes, wherein ye are scatred, and gather you together with a mightie hand with a stretched out arme, & with indignacion powred out vpon you: and will bryng you in to the wildernesse of the people, and there I will reason with you face to face. Like as I punished your fathers, in the wildernes of Egipt, so wil I punishe you also, saith the lord God. I will bryng you vnder my iurisdiccion and vnder the bonde of the couenaunte. The forsakers also and the transgressors, will I take from emong you, and bryng theim out of the lande of your habitacion: as for the land of Israell, thei shall not come in it: that you maie knowe that I am the Lorde. Go to now then (saieth the Lorde God) ye house of Israell. Euery* one of you folowe your Idolles, and serue them, seyng ye refuse to obey me. And my holy name shal ye no more vnhallowe, with your offerynges & idols. For vpon my holy hill, euen vpon the high hill of Israel, saith the lorde God, shall al the house of Israel, and all that is in the land, worship me: and[3] in the same place will I fauor theim: and there will I require your heaue offerynges, & the firstlynges of your oblacions, with al your holy thinges. I wil accept your swete sauor, when I bryng you fro the nacions, and gather you together out of the landes, wherin ye be scatered: that I may be hallowed in you before the Heathen, and that ye maie knowe, that I am the lord, whiche haue brought you into the land of Israel: yea, into the same land that I swore to geue vnto your forefathers. There shal ye cal to remembraunce your awne waies, & all your imaginacions, wherein ye haue been defiled: and[3] ye shal iudge your selues worthy to be destroyed, for al your wickednes, that ye haue doen. And ye shal knowe that I am the lorde, when I entreate you after my name; not after your wicked waies, nor accordyng to your corrupt workes, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lorde. Moreouer, the worde of the lorde came vnto me, saiyng: thou sonne of manne: set thy face toward the South, & speake to the South winde, and say to the wood toward the south: heare the word of the lorde, thus saith the lord God. Behold I will kindle a fire in thee, that shal consume the grene trees with the drie. No man shalbe able to quenche his flame, but al that loketh fro the South to the North, shalbe brent therin: and all flesshe shall se, that I the lord haue kindled it, so that no manne maie quenche it. Then saied I: O Lorde, thei will saie of me: tushe, thei are but fables; that he telleth.

vael. Thus saith the lorde: behold, I will vpō the, & wil draw my swerd out of the sheath and rote out of the, both the righteous & the wicked. Seyng thē that I wil root out of the bothe the righteous and wicked, therfore shal my swearde go out of his sheathe, against all fleshe, from the Northe to the Southe: that all fleshe maie knowe that I the Lorde, haue drawen my swearde out of the sheathe, and it shall not be put in again. Mourne therefore, (O thou sonne of man) that thy loynes crack withall, yea, mourne bitterly for them in their presence. And if thei saie: wherfore mournest thou? Then tell theim: for the tidynges that commeth, at the whiche all hartes shall melt, all handes shalbe letten doune, all stomackes shall faint, and all knees shall waxe feble. Behold, it commeth and shalbe fulfilled, saith the Lorde God. Again, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saiyng: thou sonne of man, prophecie, and speake. Thus saith the lorde god: speake. The sword, the sword is sharpened and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maie be bright. Shal we then make mirthe? against the trib * of my sonne it is gone further, destroying all trees. He hath put his sword to the bigh-tyng, that good hold maie be taken of it. This sword is sharpened & bight, that it maie be geuen vnto the hande of the manslear. Crie, (O thou sonne of manne and houle, for this sword shall smite my people, and all the rulers in Israell,) my people shalbee feared through this sword. Smite thou therefore vpon thy thigh, for it is gone further to make a triall. And what a triall shall this be, when euen my scepter shalbe refused? It shall not bee saieth the Lorde God. Prophecie thou sonne of man, and smite thyne hādes together: make the sword twoo edged, yea, make it thre edged, that manslears sword, that sword of the greate slaughter, whiche shall smite them euen in their priuie chambres: to make them abashed and faint at the hartes, and in al gates to make some of theim fall haue: I geuen that fearfull sword. O how bright & sharpe is it, how wel dight and mete for the slaughter? Set thee some place alone, either vpon the right hand, or on the left, whether soeuer thy face turneth. I will smite my handes together also, & satisfie my wrathfull indignacīō: euen I the lord haue said it. The word of the lord came yet vnto me again, saiyng: thou sonne of man, make thee two stretes, that the sword of the kyng of Babilon, maie come. Both these stretes shall go out of one kynges land. And choose the a place, at the hed of the strete, choose out a corner. Make the a strete that the sword may come toward Rabath of the Ammonites, & to the strong citie of Ierusalem. For the kyng of Babilon shall stand in

But the Southsayng shall pyne to the right side vpō Ierusalē, that he may set men of war to smite it with a great noyse, to cry out alarme, to set battail rambes against the gates, to trench vp dyches, & to make bulwarkes, neuertheles, as for the Southsayng, thei shal hold it but for vanitie, and ethieme thē as those, to whō thei haue often swoorne: notwithstādyng he shall remembre their wickednes, so that by right, thei must be taken and wonne. Therefore saith the lorde God. For comuche as ye your selues shew your offence, & haue opened your wickednes, so that in all your workes, men may se your sinnes: therfore are ye come to remēbraunce, & ye shalbe taken by violēce. O thou shamefull wicked guyde of Israell, whose daie is come: euē the time that wickednes shall haue an ende. Thus saieth the lorde God, take awaie the garlande, and put of the croune, & so is it awaie: the humble is exalted and the proude brought lowe. Punish, punish yea, punishe thē wil I, and destroye them: and that shal not be fulfilled vntil he come, to whō the iudgement belongeth, and to whō I haue geuen it. And thou (o sonne of man) prophecie and speake: thus saieth the lorde God, to the childzen of * Ammon, and to their blasphemie, speake thou: the sword, the sword is drawē forth already to the slaughter, and scoured to cōsume, that it glistreth (because thou hast loked thee out vanities, & prophecied lies) that it may come vpon thy necke, like as vpon the other vngodly, whiche is slain, whose day came when their wickednes was full. Should I put it vp again? nay I wil punish thee, in the lande where thou wart norished & borne, and powre myne indignacion vpon thee, & wil blow vpō thee in the fire of my wrath, & peliuer thee vnto cruell people, whiche are lerned to destroye. Thou shalt fede the fire, and thy bloud shalbe shed in the land, that thou maiest be put out of remembraunce. Euen I the lorde haue spoken it.

Euen so will I gather you, put you in together and melt you in my wrathe and indignacion. I will bryng you together, and kyndle the fire of my displeasure vnder you, that you maie be molten therin. ¶ The. xxiij. Chapiter.

THe worde of the lorde came vnto me, saiyng: thou sonne of man, there were twoo women, that had one mother: these (when thei wer yong) began to play the harlottes* in Egipt. There wer their breastes bruised, and the pappes of their maidenhed rid the Egipciās destroy. Theldest of them was called Oholah and her yongest sister Oholibah. These two wer my wifes, & bare sonnes and daughters. Their names wer Samaria, & that was Oholah: and Jerusalē, that was Oholibah. As for Oholah she begā to go a whooryng, whē I had taken her to me. * She was set on fire vpon her louers the Assirians, as her neighbors, which had to do with her, euen the princes & lordes, that were dede in costly araie, faire yong men, lustie riders of horses. Thus through her whoredō, she cleued vnto all the yong men of Assiria. Yea, she was mad vpon them, & defiled her self with al their Idolles. Neither ceased she from the fornicacion that she vsed with the Egipcians: for in her youth thei laye with her, thei bruised the brestes of her maidenhed, & powred their whoredō vpon her. Wherfore* I deliuered her into the hādes of her louers: euen the Assirians, whō she so loued. These discouered her shame, tooke her sonnes and daughters, and slue her with the sweard: an euill name gat she of all her people, and thei punished her. Her* sister Oholibah saw this, & destroyed her self with inordinate loue, more then she, and exceded her sister in whoredome, she* loued the Assirians, (whiche also lay with her) namely the princes, and great lordes, that wer clothed with al maner of gorgeous apparel, al lustie horse men & faire yong persones. Then I saw, that thei bothe wer defiled alike. But she encreased still in whoredom, for when she sawe men painted vpō the wal, the images of the Chaldees, set forth with fresshe colours, with faire theyr heddes, lokyng all like Princes (after the maner of the Babilonians, & Chaldees in their awne land, where thei wer borne) immediatly, assone as the sawe theim, the brent in loue vpon them, & sent messengers for thē in to the land of the Chaldees. Now when the Babilonians came to her, thei lay with her, & defiled her with their whoredom, & so was she polluted with them: and when her lust was a-Ezech. xvi. c harlot in the lande of Egipt: she * brent in lust vpon them, whose flesh was like the flesh of Asses, and their sede like the sede of horses. Thus thou hast renued the filthinesse of thy youth, when thy louers brused thy pappes, & marred thy breastes in Egipt. Therefore (O

M. Oholibah) thus saieth the lorde God: I will raise vp thy louers (with whō thou hast satisfied thy lust) against thee, and gather theim together round about thee: namely, the Babilonians, & all the Chaldees, rulers, mightie men and strauntes, with all the Assirians: all young and faire louers, Princes and lordes, knightes and gentlemen, whiche be all good horsmen. These shal come vpō thee with horses, charettes, & a great multitude of people: whiche shall be harnessed about thee on euery side: with brestplates, wieldes & helmettes: I will punishe thee before them, yea, thei thē selues shall punishe thee, accordyng to their awne iudgement: I will put my gelousy vpon thee, so that thei shal deale cruelly with thee. Thei shall cut of thy nose & thyne eares, and the remnaunt shall fall through the swearde. Thei shal cary awaie thy sōnes & daughters and the residue shalbe brent in the fire. Thei shall strip thee out of thy clothes, & cary thy costly iewels awaie with them. Thus will I make an ende of thy filthines & whoredome, whiche thou hast brought out of the lande of Egipt: so that thou shalt turne thyne eyes no E. more after them, & call thy mynd no more vpō Egipt. For thus saieth the Lorde: behold, I will deliuer thee into the handes of thē, whom thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of thē with whō thou hast fulfilled thy lust, whiche shall deale cruelly with thee: al thy labor shal thei take with them, and leaue thee naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy filthy whoredome shall come to light. All these thynges shall happē vnto thee, because of thy whoredō whiche thou hast vsed emong the Gentiles, with whose Idols thou hast defiled thy self. Thou hast walked in the waie of thy sister, therefore wil I geue thee her cup in thy hād. Thus saieth the lorde God: thou shalt drinke of thy sisters cup, how depe and far soeuer it bee to the botome. Thou shalt bee laughed to scorne, and had as greatly in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt be full of dronkēnes and sorow, for the cup of thy sister Samaria, is a cup of destruccīō and wastyng: the same shalt thou drinke, and sup it out, cue to the dregges yea, thou shalt eate vp the broken peces of it, and so teare thyne awne breastes. For euen I haue spoken it, saith the lorde God. Therefore F.
thus saieth the Lorde God. For somuche as thou hast forgotten me, and cast me a side behind thee, so beare now thyne awne filthines and whoredom. The lorde said moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, wilt thou not reproue Oholah, and Oholibah? Shewe theim their abhominacions, namely that thei haue broken their wedlocke, and stained their handes with bloud: yea, euen with their Idolles haue thei

For when thei had slain their children for their Idolles, thei came the same daie into my Sanctuarie to defile it. Lo, thus haue thei dooen in my house. Beside all this, thou hast sent thy messēgers for men, out of farre countries: and when thei came, thou hast bathed and painted thyne eyes with colours, trimmed & set furth thy self of the best fashiō: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed, & a table spred before thee, wherupon thou hast set myne en-

And thei went into her, as vnto a common harlot. Euen so went thei (I say) to Oholah and Oholibah, those filthy womē. O all ye that loue vertue and righteousnes, iudge them, punishe

Wherefore thus saith the lorde God: I will bryng a greate multitude of people vpon them, and make them be scattered and spoyled: these shall stone them, & goze them with their sweardes. Thei shall slea their sonnes and daughters, & burne vp their houses with fire. Thus wil I destroye all suche filthines out of the land: that all women maie learne, not to do after your bacleunes. And so thei shal laie your filthines vpon your awne selues, and ye shalbe punished for the sinnes, that ye haue committed with your idols, and ye shall knowe that I am the lorde God. The .xxiij. Ch.

In the ix. yere, in the. x. monethe, the. x. daie of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saiyng: O thou sonne of man, write vp the name of this daie: yea, euen the houre of this present daie, when the kyng of Babilon set himself a gainst Ierusalē. Shewe that obstinate housholde a parable, and speake vnto them. Thus saith the lorde god: set thee a pot, set it on, and powre water into it: put al the peces together in it, all the good peces: the loyne and the shulder, and fill it with the best bones. Take one of the best flepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones seeth wel therin. With that said the lorde God on this manet, Woe be vnto the bloudy citee of the pot, wherupō the rustines hangeth, and is not yet scoured awaie. Take out the peces that are in it, one after another there nede no lottes be cast therfore, for the bloud is yet in it. Vpon a plain drie stone hath she powred it, and not vpon the ground, that it might be couered with dust. And therfore haue I letten her powre her bloud vpon a plain dry stonie rocke, because it should not bee hid, and that I might bryng my wrathfull indignacio and vengeaunce vpon her. Wherefore thus saith the lorde God: O woe be vnto that bloud thirstie citee, for whom euen I my self, will make a great fire, and set muche wood, & kindle the fire, and seeth the fleshe, and spice the pot, so that the very bones shalbe brēt. More ouer, I will set the pot empte vpon the coles so that his metal shalbe brent, and molten also for heate, and the filthines of it shalbe molten in it, and the drosse of it shalbe consumed. Thou toilest great pain thus to defile thy self and it will not be purged from thee excedyng drosse in it: but through fire shal the drosse of it be purified. In thy filthines euen in thy mischeuous deedes thou doest continue, and because thy filthinesse is abhominable, for I haue clēsed thee, but thou art not clēsed. Thou shalt not bee purged from thyne vnclennesse, till I haue powred my wrathfull indignacion vpon thee. Euen I the lorde haue so diuised. Yea, it is come thereto already that I wil do it: I will not go backe, I will not spare, I will not be entreated, but accordyng to thy waies and imaginacions thou shalt be punished, saith the lorde god. And the worde of the lord came vnto me, saiyng: thou sonne of man, beholde, I will take awaie the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plague: yet shalt thou neither mourne nor wepe, nor water thy cheekes therfore, thou maiest mourne by thy self alone, but vse no dedly lamentacion. Hold on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, & eate no mourners bread. So I spake vnto the people, betymes in the morning, & at euen my wife died: then vpō the next morowe, I did as I was commaunded. And the people said vnto me, Why shew vs not all vs, what this is, that thou doest toward vs, for this thou doest for our sake? I answered thē, the word of the lorde came vnto me, saiyng: tel the house of Israel, thus saith the Lorde God: beholde, I will suspende my Sanctuarie, euen the glory of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your sonnes & daughters, whom ye haue left, shall fall through the sweard. Like as I haue done, so shall ye do also: ye shall not hide your faces, ye shall eate no mourning bread: your bonettes shall ye haue vpon your heddes and shoes vpon your fete. Ye shall neither mourne nor wepe, but in your synnes ye shalbe sorowful, and one repent with another. Thus Ezechiell is your likewe token. For like as ye haue done: so when this commeth ye shall do also: that ye maie learne to knowe, that I am the lorde God. But behold, O thou sonne of man: In the daie when I take from them their power, their ioye, and honor, the lust of their eyes, the burthen of their lifes: namely, their sonnes and daughters, shall not this be knowen? Then shall there one escape, & come vnto thee, for to shewe thee. In that daie shall thy mouthe be opened to him, which is escaped, that thou maiest speake, and bee no more dombe. Yea, & thou shalt be their likewe token that they maie knowe how that I am the lord.

The worde of the lorde came vnto me, saiyng: thou sonne of man, set thy face against the Ammonites, prophecie vpon thē, and saie vnto the Ammonites: heare the worde of the lorde God. Thus saith the lorde God: for so muche as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuary. A, ha, I trowe it be now suspended: and ouer the lande of Israell: I trowe it be now desolate: yea, and ouer the house of Juda, I trow they be now led away prisoners: behold, I will deliuer thee to the people of the East, that they maie haue ther in possession: these shall set their castles and houses in thee. They shal eate thy fruite, and drinke vp thy milke. And for Rabath, I will make of it a stall for Camels, and of Ammon a shepefolde, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde. For thus saieth the lorde God: in couche as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy fete: yea, reioyced in thyne hart ouer the land of Israel with despite: behold, I will stretch out myne hand ouer thee also, and deliuer thee to be spoyled of the Heathen, and rote thee out from emong the people, and cause thee to be destroyed out of all landes: yea, I will make thee to be laied wast, that thou maiest knowe that I am the Lorde. gest vpon the sea, with thyne enhabitoures, of whom all men stoode in feare. Now art thou now so vtterly destroyed? Nowe at the tyme of thy fall, the enhabitours of the Iles: yea, and the Iles themselues, shall stand in feare at thy ende. For thus saieth the lorde God: when I make thee a desolate citee (as other citees bee, that no man dwell in) and when I bryng the depe vpon thee, that great waters maie couer thee: Then will I cast thee doune vnto thē, that descend into the pit, vnto a people that hath been long ded, and set thee in a lande that is beneth, like the old wildernesse, with them whiche go doune to their graues, so that no man shall dwell more in thee. And I will make thee to be no more in honour, in the lande of the liuyng. I will make an ende of thee, and thou shalt be goen. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be founde for euermore: saieth the lorde God.

yng: o thou sonne of man, make a lamēta-ble complaint vpon * Tire, and saie vpon Tire: Eze.xxj.a. and.xxvij.a. thou which art a port of the sea, that occupiest with muche people, a many Iles: thus speketh the lorde God so Tire, thou hast said: what I am a noble citee, thy borders are in the middest of the sea, thy builders haue made thy ma-

Cipre trees of the mount Sanir from Libanus haue thei taken Cedre trees, to make the maistes, and the okes of Basa to make the rowers. Thy bordes haue thei made of yuory and of costly wood out of the Ile of Cethim. Thy saile was of diuerse colours, smal nedle worke out of the lande of Egipt, to hang vpō thy mast, and thy hangynges of yelowe silke, purple, out of the Iles of Elisah. Thei of Sidon and Arnad were thy mariners, and the wisest in Tire wer thy shipmasters. Theldest and wisest at Gebal wer thei, that amended & stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the Sea, with their shipmen occupied their marchaundise in thee. The Perses, Lidians & Phutens wer in thyne hoste, and helped thee to fight, theise hanged vp their shieldes and helmettes with thee, theise set furth thy beautie. Thei of Arnad wer with thine hoste round about thy walles, and the Pigmeians wer thy watchmen vpon thy Towers, theise hanged vp their quiuers, round about the walles, & made thee maruellous goodly. Tharsis occupied with thee in all maner of wares, in siluer, yrō, tyn, and leade, and made thy market greate. Iauan, Tubal and Mesech were thy Marchauntes, whiche brought thee men, and ornamentes of metal for thy occupying. Thei of the house of Thogarma brought vnto thee at the tyme of thy mart, horse, horsemen and mules. Thei of Dedan wer thy marchauntes: & many other Iles that occupied with thee, brought thee bethers, Elephant bones and Peacockes for a present. The Sirians occupied with thee, because of thy diuerse workes, and encreased thy Marchauntise, with Smaragdes, with Scarlet, with nedle worke, with white linen cloth, white silke, and with chrystal. Iuda and the lande of Israell occupied with thee, and brought vnto thy marketes wheat of Minith and Paneg, balme, hony, oyle, & Triacle. Damascus also vsed Marchaundise with thee, in the best wine of Helbon, & wolle, because thy occupying was so great, & thy wares so many. Dan, Iauan & Mesal, haue brought vn to thy marketes, yrō tedy made, with Casia and Calamus, according to thine occupying. Dedan occupied with thee in faire Tapisserie worke & cushins. Arabia, and all the princes of Cedar haue occupied with thee, in sheepe, bethers, & goates. The marchauntes of Seba and Rema haue occupied also with thee, in al costly spices, in al precious stones and gold, wherwith they brought vnto the marketes. Haran, Chenne & Eden the marchantes of Saba Assiria, and Chelmad wer al doers with thee and occupied with thee. In costly rayment of yelowe silke, and nedle worke, very precious and therfore parcked & bound together with cordes. Yea, and in Cedre wood, as they occupied thy Marketes. The shippes of Tharsis art ful, & in great worship, euen in the middest of the sea. Thy robbers shall bring thee in to great waters, the east wind shall ouerthrow thee into the middest of the Sea, so that thy wares, thy marchandise, thy riches, thy mariners, thy shipmasters, thy builders of thy broken places, thy occupiers (that brought thee thynges necessary) the men of warre that are in thee, and all thy cōmons shall perishe in the middest of the sea, in the daie of thy fall. The suburbes shall make at the loude crie of the shipmen. All whery men, and all mariners vpō the sea, shall leape out of their botes, and set themselues vpon the lande. Thei shall lift vp their voyce because of thee, and make a lamētable cry. Thei shall cast dust vpon their heades, and lie doune in the ashes. Thei shal shaue themselues, and put sackclothe vpon them for thy sake. Thei shal mourne for thee with hart full sorow and heuie lamentacion: yea, thei also shall wepe for thee. Alas, what citee hath so been destroyed in the sea, as Tire is? When thy wares and Marchaundise came from the sea: thou gauest al people inough. The kynges of the yerth hast thou made rich, through the multitude of thy wares & occupying. But thou art now caste doune, into the depe of the sea, all thy resort of people is perished with thee. All thei that dwell in the Iles are abashed at thee, and al their kynges are afraied yea, their faces haue chaunged colour. The marchauntes of the nacions wonder at thee, in that thou art so cleane brought to naught and commest nomore vp.

The worde of the lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, tell the prince of * Tire. D yrst yere, the first day of the nexte moneth came the woꝛd of the Loꝛde vnto me, saieng.
Thou sonne of manne, Nabuchodonoꝛ, the kyng of Babilon hath made hys hoost, wyth greate trauaille and labouꝛe, to come before Tire, that euery head may be balde, and euery shoulder bare. Yet hath Tire, geuen neyther hym, noꝛ his hoost any rewarde, foꝛ the great trauaile that he hath taken there. Therefore thus saith the loꝛde god: behold, I wil geue the land of egipt, vnto Nabuchodonoꝛ the kyng of Babilō, that he may take awai al her substaunce, robbe her robberies, spoile her spoiles, to pay his hoste their wages withal I wil geue hym the lande of Egipt foꝛ his la boue, that he toke foꝛ me before Tyre. At the same time wil I cause the hoꝛne of the house of Israel to growe furth, and open thy mouth again among them: that they may know how that I am the Loꝛd. The. xxx. Chapiter.

A. THe woꝛde of the Loꝛde came moꝛeouer vnto mee, saieng, thou sonne of man pꝛophecy and speake, thus saieth the loꝛde God, Mourne, woo woꝛthe this daye, foꝛ the day, is here, the day of the loꝛde is come, the dark day of the heythen, the houre is at hande, the swerd cōmeth vpon egipt. When the wounded men fal down in Egipt, when her people are taken awai, & her foundaciōs ar destroied, the Moziens lande shalbe affraid, yea the Moziens lande, Libia & Lidia, al their cōmune people, & Chub & all that be cōfederat vnto thē shal fal B with thē through the swerd. Thus saith the loꝛd. The mainteyners of the lande of Egipt shalle falle, the pryde of her power shal come downe, euen vnto the towre of Syenes shal they be slaine downe with the swearde, saith the loꝛde God, among other desolat countries they shalbe made desolat, and among other wast cities, they shalbe wasted. And thei shal know that I am the Loꝛde, when I kyndle a fire in Egipt, & when al her helpers ar destroied. At that tyme shal their messengers go foꝛth fꝛō me in shippes, to make the careles Moziens C afrayed, and soꝛow shal come vpon theym accoꝛdyng to the day of egipt, foꝛ doubteleslie it shal come. Thus saith the loꝛd god: I wil ma ke an ende of the people of Egipte, through the hande of Nabuchodonoꝛ the kyng of Babilon. He and al his people with hym: yea and the cruell tiraunes of the Heythen shalbe brought to destroy the lande. They shal draw out their swearde vpon egipt, & fil the land full of slaine men. I wil drie vp their fludes of water, & sel the land into the handes of wic D ked people. The land and al that is therein, I wil destroy thoꝛow the enemies. Euen I the Ezechiel. xiii. a loꝛd have said it. And thus saith the loꝛd god I wil destroy the Idolles, and bryng the Images of Moph to an ende. There shall no-moꝛe be a pꝛynce of Egipt, and a fearfulnesse wil I sende into the Egiptiens lande. And foꝛ pathures, I will make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zoan the citie. So, I wil punish and powre my wrathfull indignatiō vpō Sin which is the strength of Egipt. Al the sub-staūce of Alexandria wil I destroi, & kindle a fire in Egipt. Sin shalbe in great heauines, Alex dria shalbe roted out, & Noph shal haue day-ly soꝛow. The bulk men of Heliopolis, & Bubasto shalbe slaine with the sweard and cari-ed away captiue. At Capphnis the day shalbee E darke, when I breake there the sceptre of the lande of Egipte, and when the pompe of her power shal haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her daughters shalbee ledde awaye into captiuitie. Thus wil I punish Egipte, that theye maye knowe that I am the Loꝛde.

It happened in the eleuenthe yeare, vpon the seuenth day of the first moneth, that the Loꝛdes woꝛde came vnto me, saiyng: Behold thou sonne of man, I wil breake the arme of pharao kyng of Egipt, and lo, it shal not be bounde vp to be healed, neither shall any plaister be layde vpponit, foꝛ to ease it, oꝛ too make it F so strong, as to holde a Swearde. Therfore thus saith the loꝛde God: Behold, I will vp-on Pharao the kyng of Egipt, and bꝛouse his strong arme (yet is it but a bꝛoken one) & wyl smyte the swearde out of his handes. As foꝛ the Egiptiens, I wil scatte theim emong the heathen, and strawe them in the landes a-boute. Againe I wil strengthen the arme of the kyng of Babilon, & geue hym a swerd in hys hande, but I wil breake Pharaoes arme, so that he shal holde it before hym piteously like G a wounded man. Yea, I wil stablishe the kyng of Babilons arme, and the armes of Pharao, shal fal downe: that it may be knowen, that I am the loꝛde, when I geue the kyng of Babilon my swearde in hys hande, that he may dra we it out vpon the lande of Egipte, and that whenne I scatter the Egiptiens, amonge the Gentiles, and strawe theym in the landes a-boute, that they maye knowe that I am the loꝛde.

¶ The. xxxi. Chapiter.

MOꝛeouer, it happened in the eleuenthe yere, the firste daye of the .iij. moneth H. that the woꝛde of the Loꝛde came vnto mee, saieng, thou sonne of man speake vnto Pharao the kyng of Egipt, and to al hys people.
Whome art thou lyke in thy greatnes? Be-holde, Assur was lyke a Cedre tre vpon the moūt Libanus wyth faire branches, so thick that he gaue shadowes, and hys oute very hie Hys top reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made hym greatte, and the diepe sette hym vp on hie, Wounde about the roten of him ranne there flouddes of water, he sent out his B litle riuers, vnto al the trees of the feld, ther foꝛe was he hier then al the trees of the feld, & through the multitude of waters, that hee sent from hym, he obtained many long bꝛanc-ches. All soules of the aire made their nestes in hys braunches, vnder hys bowes gendred al the beastes of the feld, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Faire and beautiful was he in his greatnes, and in the length of hys braunches, for hys rote stode beside greate waters, no cedre tre might hide hym. In the pleasaunt gardeine of god there was no fayre tree lyke hys braunches, the plane trees were not lyke the bowes of hym. All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in hys beautie, so faire and goodly had I made him with the multitude of his braunches. In consuche that al the trees in the pleasaunt gardeine of God had enuy at him. Therefore thus saith the lorde God: For sonuche as he hath lyft vp hym hymselfe so hye, and stretched his toppe into the cloudes, & seyng his hart is proude in hys highnes. I wil deliuer hym into the hande of the mightiest among the heithen, which shal rote hym out. Accordyng to his wickednes, wil I cast him awai, the enemi shal destroy hym, & the mighty men of the heathen shal so scatre hym, that his braches shal ly vpon al mountains, & in al valeies: His bowes shalbe broke down to the ground, thorow out the land. That al the people of the land shal go from hys shadow, and forsake him. When he is fallen, al the foules of the aire shal sit vpon hym, and al the wilde beastes of the fielde shal go about among hys braunches, so that fromhencefurth, no tree in the water shal attaine to his highnes nor reache his top vnto the cloudes, neither shal any tre of the water stand so highe, as he hath done. For vnto death shal thei al be deliuered vnder the earthe, and go downe to the graue lyke other menne.

Moreouer thus saith the Lorde GOD: In the day when he goeth downe to the graue, I wyll cause a lamentacion to be made, I wyll couer the depe vpon hym. I wil staunche his floudes, and the great waters shalbe restrained. I shal cause Libanus to be sorowfull for hys sake, and al the trees of the felde shalbe smitten. I wil make the heathen shake at the sounde of hys fall when I cast hym downe to hel, with them that descende into the pit. All the trees of Eden, wich al the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yea, and al they that are stedfast vpon the waters shall mourne with hym also in the lower habitacions. For they shall go downe to hel with hym, vnto them that be slain with the swearde, whiche dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of hys arme, amonge the heathen. Vnto whome shalt thou be likened that art so glorious & great among the trees of Eden? Yet art thou caste downe vnder the earthe, among the trees of Eden, where thou must lie among the vncircumcised, with them that be slaine with the swearde. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all hys people, saith the lord god.

The xxxii. Chapiter

And it came to pas in the xii. yere, the xv. day of the moneth, came the worde of the lorde vnto me saieng: Thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon Pharao kyng of Egipt, & say vnto hym thou art reputed as a Lion of the Heathen, & as a whale in the sea. Thou raisest thy waters about the, thou troublest the waters with thy fete, and stampest in their floudes. Thus saith the lorde god: I wil spreade my net ouer the, namely a great multitude of people, these shal drawe the into my yarne, for I wyll cast the vppon the lande, and let the lye vpon the felde, that all the foules of the aire maie sit vpon the. I wille gene alle the beastes of the felde enough of the. Thy flesh wil I cast vpon the hilles, and fill the vallies with thy highnesse. I wil water the lande with the aboundaunce of thy bloud euen to the mountaines, and the riuers shalbe ful of thy blod whē thou art put out. I wil couer the heauen, and make his starres dymme. I wil spreade a cloude ouer the sonne, and the mone shal not gene her light. All the lightes of heauen will I put oute ouer thee, and bringe darkenesse vpon the lande, saithe the lorde GOD. I wil trouble the hartes of many people, when I bring thy destruction among the Heithen, and countries, whome thou knowest not, yea, I wille make manye people withe their kynges, sore afrayed through the, that their heare shal stand vp, when I shake my Swearde at their faces. Sodainly shal they be astonied, euery man in hymselfe, at the day of thy fal. For thus saithe the lorde god, the kyng of Babilons swearde shal come vpon the: with the sweardes of the Worthyes wille I smyte downe thy people. All they that be mighty among the gentils shal waste the proude pompe of Egipt, and bring downe al her people. All the cattal also of Egipt wil I destroy, that thei shal come nomore vpon the waters, so that neither mans foote, nor beastes claw shall stirre them any more. Then wil I make their waters depe, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oile, saith the lord god. When I make the land of Egipt desolat and when the country, with al that is therin, shalbe layed wast, & when I smyte all them whirbe dwel in it, that they may know that I am the lorde. This is the mourninge that the doughters of the Heythen shalle make. Yea, a sorow and lamentacion shal thei take vp vpon Egipt, and al her people saithe the lorde god.

In the xii. yere, the xv. day of the moneth, came the worde of the lorde vnto me saieng: Thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of egipt, and cast them downe, yea them I say, and the mighty people of the Heithen also euen with them * that dwelle beneth, and with them that goe downe into the graue. Downe, choose faure to euer thou dey and lye the with the vncircumcyled. Among those shalbe slaine with the Swearde shal lyueth therfore pluckt downe to the ground her & al her multitude. The myghty worthyes shal speake to hym out of the hel, and to his helpers that be gone downe, and are vncircumcised, and with theym that be slaine with the sweardc. Assur is there also with his company, and their graues rounde about, which wer slaine, and fel al with the sweard, whose graues lie beyde hym in the low pitte. His commōs are buried round about his graue, altogether wounded and slaine with the sweard, which the meane afore tyme, brought feare into the land of the liuyng. Therein is Elam also, with al hys people, and their graues rounde about: which al beyng wounded & slaine with the sweard are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the yearth, which neuertheless, somtime brought feare into the land of the liuyng, for the which they beare their shame, with the other, that are gone downe too the graue. Their burial is geuen them, and al their people, among them that be slaine. Their graues are rounde about theim which are vncircumcised, and with thē that be slaine thorowe the sweard: for seyng that in tymes past, they made the lande of the liuyng afraied, they must now beare their owne shame, with theym that go downe to the pitte and lie emong them that be slaine. There is Mesech also, and Tubal and their people, and their graues rounde about. These are al among the vncircumcised, and them that be slaine with the sweard, because afore tyme they made the land of the liuyng afrayed. Wold not they then lie also emōg the Worthies and vncircumcised Giauntes? which with their weapons are gone downe to hel, whose sweardes are layed vnder theyr heades, whose wickednes is vpon theire bones: because that as worthies they haue brought feare into the lande of the liuyng. Yea, among the vncircumcised, shalt thou be destroyed, and slepe with thē that perished through the sweard. There is the lande of Edom, with her kinges & princes also, which with their strength are laide by them that wer slaine with the sweard: yea, among the vncircumcised, & thē which are gone down into the pit. Moreouer, there be al the princes of the north with al the Sidonies, which are gone down to the slaine. With their feare & strength they are come to confusion, and lie there vncircumcised among those that be slain with the sweard, and beare their own shame, with thē that be gone downe to the pitte. Now when Pharao seeth this, he shalbe coforted ouer al hys people, that is slayne, with the sweard, both Pharao, and al his host, saith the lorde god. For I haue geuen my feare in the land of the liuyng. But Pharao and all his people shall lye emong the vncircumcised and among them that bee slaine with the Swearde, saith the lorde God.

Ezech. xxxij. d

Again the word of the lord came vnto me, saieng, thou sone of man, speake to the children of thy people, & tel thē: whē I send a sword vpon a land, yf the people of the land take a man of their country and set hym to be their watcheman, the same man (when he seeth the sword come vpon the land) shal blow the trompet & warne the people: Yf a man nowe heare the noise of the trōpet, & wil not be warned, & the sweard come and take him awai, his bloud shalbe vpon hys owne head: for he heard the sounde of the trompet, and wold not take hede therefore hys bloud be vpon hym. But yf hee wil receiue warnyng, he shal saue his lyfe. Agayne yf the watcheman se the sweard come, and blewe it not with the trompet, so that the people is not warned: if the sweard come and take any man from among theym, the same shalbee taken awaye in hys owne sinne, but hys bloud will I require at the watchemans hand. And now o thou sonne of man I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel that where as thou hearest any thyng out of my mouthe, thou maiest warne them on my behaulfe. If I say vnto the wicked, thou wycked, thou shalt surely die, and thou geuest him not warnyng, that he may beware of hys vngodly way: then shall the wicked dye in hys owne synne, but hys bloudde wil I require of thy hande. Neuertheless, yf thou warne the wicked of hys way, to turne from it, whereas he yet wil not be turned from it, thē shal he dy because of hys synne, but thou hast deliuered thy soule. Therefore o thou sonne of man, speake vnto the house of Israel, Ye say thus: our offences and sinnes lie vpon vs, & we be corrupted in them, howe should wethen be restored vnto lyfe. Tel theym: As truly as I liue sayth the lord god, I haue no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but much rather that the wicked turne from hys waie, and lyue. Turne you, turne you from your vngodly wayes, O ye of the house of Israel. Oh wherefore wyl ye dye. Thou sonne of man tel the children of thy people. The righteousnes of the righteous shal not saue hym, whensoeuer he turneth away vnfaithfully. Agayne, the wickednes of the wicked shal not hurt hym, whensoeuer he conuerteth from hys vngodlynes. And the ryghteousnesse of the righteous shall not saue hys lyfe, whensoeuer he synneth. If I say vnto the ryghteous, that he shal surely liue, and so he trust to his owne righteousnes and do synne, then shall his righteousnes bee nomore thought vpon, but in the wickednesse that he hath done, he shal die. Againe if I saie vnto the wicked, thou shalt surely die: & so hee turne from his synnes, and do the thyng that is lawfull & ryghte. Iustamurthe that the same wicked mā geueth the pledge again, restoreth that he had take away by robbery, walketh in the

Then shal he surely liue, and not die: Yea the sinnes that he hath wrought, shal neuer be thought vpon: For so muche as he with now the thing that is lawefull and right, he shall liue, and yet the children of thy people say: Tushe, the waye of the Lorde is not right, but they lie whereas their owne way is rather naught.

When the righteous turneth from his righteousnes, and with the thing that is wicked, doth E. shal dye therfore. But if the wicked turne from his wickednes, and doe the thing that is lawful and right, he shal liue therefore. Yet ye say, the way of the lorde is not equal, o ye house of Israel * I will iudge euery one of Ezech. xviij. d you after his waies. In the twelueth yeare Rom. j. a. the fifth day of the tenth month of our captiuitie, it happened that one whiche was fledde out of Ierusalem came vnto me, and sayd, the citie is destroyed. Now the hande of the lorde had bene vpon me the euening afore this man (whiche was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, vntil the morninge that he came vnto me: yea, he opened my mouth that I was no more dumme. Then the woorde of the lorde came vnto me, and sayd: Thou sone of man, these that dwel in the wasted lande of Israel saye: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession, now are we many, and the lande is geuen to vs to possesse, also, And therfore tel them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: In the bludde haue ye eaten, your eies haue ye lifte vp to idols, and haue shedde Leuit. xvij. c. Deut. iij. c. bloudde: shal ye then haue the lande in possession? Ye leane vpon your swoordes, ye worcke abhominations, euery one defileth his neighbors wyfe, and shal ye then possesse the lande? Say thou these woordes vnto them. Thus sayth the lorde god. As truly as I liue, all ye that dwelle in this wildernesse, shalbe slayne with the Swoorde: what soeuer is vpon the felde I wil geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in strong holdes & dennes shal die of the pestilence. For I wil make the lãd desolate & waste, & the pryde of her strẽgth shal come to an end. The mountaines of Israel shalbe so waste, that no man shal trauail by thẽ. Ezech. vj. b. Then shal they lerne to know that I am the G loorde when I make the lande waste and desolate, because of all their abhominations, that they haue wrought. And thou sonne of man, the children of the people that talke of the by the walles & in the doores of their houses, saieng one to an other. Come let vs here what word is gone furth from the lord. There come vnto the, after the maner of a great people: yea, as who sayth, they ware my people, they sytte mat Ezech. xiij. a. that they heare, but they wil not do therafter. When this commeth to passe, (For lo it commeth in deede) then shal they know, that there hath bene a prophet among them.

AND the woorde of the lorde came vnto me, Euenlong. A saieng thou sone of man prophecy against the shepeheardes of Israel, prophecy and speake vnto them. Thus saith the lord god, Wo Eze. xiij. a be vnto the shepeheardes of Israel, that fede Iere. xxiiij. b. xxiij. b. themselues, shoulde not the shepeheardes fede the flockes? Ye haue eaten vp the fat ye haue clothed you with the woole: the beste fed haue ye slayne, but the flock haue ye not norished. not The weake haue ye not holpen vp, the sicke Luke. xxi. a, haue ye not healed, the broken haue ye not bounde together, the outecaste ye haue not brought together again, the lost haue ye not sought. but churlishely and cruelly haue ye i. Thus are they scatred here and b. there without a shepherd, ye al the beastes of the felde deuoure them, and thei go astray, my shepe go wandring vpon all mountaines, & vpon euerye high hyl, Yea, they be scattred abrode in al feldes, & there is no man that careth for them or that seketh after them. Therfore o ye shepeheardes, heare the woord of the lord. Thus sayth the lord god: as truly as I liue, forsomuche as my shepe are thus robbed & deuoured of al the wilde beastes of the felde hauing no shepeheardes: seyng that my shepeheardes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede themselues onely, and not my shepe: C Therfore heare the woord of the lord O ye shepeherdes. Thus sayth the lord God. Beholde I my self wil vpon these shepeherdes: & require my shepe from their handes, and make them cease from feeding of my sheepe: yea the shepeheardes shal fede them selues no more. For I wil deliuer my shepe out of their mouthes, so that they shal not deuour them after Ihõ. x. a this. For thus sayth the lorde god, Beholde, Heb. xiij. I wil loke to my shepe my self, & seke thẽ like i. Pe. v. c. b, a. as a shepeherde emõg the flock, seketh after the shepe that are scatred abrode, euen so wil I seke after my shepe, & gather thẽ together out of al places, where thei haue ben scatred in the cloudy & dark day. I wil bring thẽ out from al people, & gather them together out D of al landes. I wil bring thẽ into their owne land, & fede them vpon the mountaines of Israel, by the riuers, & in all places of the country. I wil fede thẽ in right good pastures & vpon the highe mountaynes of Israel shal their foldes be, there shal they lye in a good fold, & in a fat pasture shal thei fede, euẽ vpon the mountaines of Israel. I wil fede my shepe my self, and bring them to their rest sayeth Mat the lord God. * Suche as bee lost wyl I Lu. xix. c. seeke, suche as go astraye wyl I bringe a- Ihon. x. a. gayne, suche as be wounded, wil I bynde vp, as ye eate and strong, those wil I roote oute and feede them with the thing that is lawfull. And as for you o my sheepe sayth the lorde god I will put a differēce amonge the sheepe, among the wethers and the goates. Was it not enough for you to eate up the good pasture, but ye must treade downe the residue of youre pasture with your feete also? Was it not enough for you to drincke cleare water, but ye must trouble the residue also with your feete? Thus my sheepe must be fain to eate the thing that ye haue troden downe wyth your feete, and to drinke it, that ye with your feete haue defiled. Therfore, thus sayth the lorde god vnto them. Beholde I wil seuer the fat sheepe frō the leane, for so muche as yee haue shotte the weake sheepe vpō the sides and shoulders, and runne vpon them with youre hornes, so long til ye haue vtterly scatred them abrode. I wil helpe my sheepe, so that they shal no more be spoiled. Yea, I wil discerne one sheepe frō an other. I wil rayse them vp one onely sheepeherde, euen my seruaunt Dauid, * he shal fede them, and he shal be their sheepeherde. I the lorde wilbe their god, and my seruaunt * dauid shalbe their prince. Euen I the lord haue spoken it. Moreouer I wyl make a couenaunte of peace with them, & driue al euel beastes oute of the lande, so that they maye dwelle safelye in the wildernesse, and slepe in the woodes. Good fortune, & prosperitie wil I geue them and vnto al that is rounde about my hil. * A prosperous shoure and rayne wil I send thē, in due season, that the trees in the wood maye bring furth their frutes, and the grounde her encrease. They shalbe safe in theyr land, and shal know, that I am the Lorde. whiche haue broken their yoke, and deliuered them oute of the handes of those that helde theim in subiection. They shal no more be spoiled of the heathen nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shal they dwel, and no manne shal fraye theym. I wil sette vp an excellente plant for them, so that they shal suffre no more hungre in the land, neyther beare the reproche of the heathen any more. Thus shal they vnderstande, that I the lorde their god, am wyth them, and that they euen the house of Israel, are my people, saith the lord god. Ye menne, are my flocke. * ye are the sheepe of my pasture and I am your god, sayth the lorde God.

Moreouer, the woorde of the Lord came vnto me saynge. Thy Cities wil I also breake downe: And thou shalte lye borde, that thou mayeste knowe that I am the Lorde. * For so muche as thou wareste an olde enemitie against the children of Israell, and hast drawē the children of Israel vpon the swearde, what tyme as they were troubled, and punished for their synne. Therfore as truelye as I liue sayth the lorde God: I wyl prepare the vnto bloud, yea, bloud shal folowe vpon the: * seyng thou layest wayte for bloud, Therefore shal bloud persecute thee. And because thou hast sayed: what? bothe these nacions, and bothe these landes, must be myne, & I wil haue them in possession * where as the Lorde was there. Therefore thus sayeth the lord God: As truely as I liue I wil handle the according to my wrath and gelousy, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly wyth them that I might be knowen among them howe I haue punished thee. Yea, and that thou mayest also be sure, that I the lord haue hearde al thy despiteful wordes, which thou hast spoken against the mountaynes of Israell saynge: lo they are made waste, and geuen vs to deuoure. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made your boast against mee, yea and multiplied your proude wordes against mee. whiche I haue heard altogether. clee of my gelouſy haue I take a deuice againſt the reſidue of the gentiles, and againſt al Edom: whiche haue taken in my lande vnto themſelues, for a poſſeſſion: whiche alſo reioyced from theyr whole hart with a deſpiteful ſtomacke, to waſt it, and to ſpoile it, prophecie therfore vpon the land of Iſrael ſpeke vnto the mountaynes, & hilles, valleyes, & dales, thus ſaith the lord god, Behold this haue I muſed in my gelouſy, and terrible wrathe. For ſomuch as ye haue ſuffred reproſe of the heathē. Therfore thus ſaith the lord god. I haue ſworne that the gentiles that lye about you ſhal beare their confuſion thē ſelues, and as for you o mouteins of Iſrael, ye ſhal ſhote out your branches, & bring furth your fruite vnto my people of Iſrael, for it is hard by that it wil come, Behold I come vnto you, and vnto you wil I turne me, that ye mai be tilled & ſowen. I wil ſēd you much people, which ſhalbe of al the houſe of Iſrael, the cities ſhalbe inhabited, & the decayed places ſhalbe repaired again. I wil prouide you with much people, & cattel, which ſhal encreſe & bring frute. I wil reſtore you alſo to your old eſtate & ſhew you more kindnes thē euer you had before, whereby ye ſhal know that I am the lord: Yea, people wil I ſend vnto you (o my folk of Iſrael) which ſhal haue the in poſſeſſiō, & thou ſhalt be their inheritaūce, ſo that thou ſhalt nomore be without thē. Again thus ſaith the lord god For ſomuch as thei ſay vnto you, thou art an eater vp of mē, & a waſter of thy people: therfore thou ſhalt eate no mo mē, neither deſtroi thy people any more ſaith the lord god, and I wil not ſuffre thee: to heare thine owne confuſion among the gentiles from hence furth. Thou ſhalt not beare the reproſe of the nacions, nor caſt out thine own people any more ſaith the lord God. Moreouer the word of the lord came vnto me, ſaieng: o thou ſōne of man whē the houſe of Iſrael dwelte vpon their owne ground, thei defiled thē ſelues with their own wayes, & imaginacions: ſo that in my ſighte, their way was like thunclennes of a menſtruous woman. Wherfore I powred my wrathful diſpleſure vpō thē, becauſe of the bloud that they had ſhed in the land, & becauſe of their idols, wherwith they had defiled thē ſelues. I ſcatred them alſo among the heathen, ſo that they ware ſtrowed about in the landes. Accoording to their waies and after theyr owne ymaginacions, ſo did I puniſh theym. Now when they ware gone vnto the heathen, and come in amonge theym, they dyſhonoured my holy name: ſo that it was ſayd of theym. Are theſe the people of God, and muſt go oute of theyr oune lande? Then ſpared I my holy name, whiche the houſe of Iſrael had diſhonored among the gentiles, to whome they came Therefore tell the houſe of Iſraell. Thus ſaieth the lord god: I ma not this for youre takes o houſe of Iſrael, but for my holye names take, whiche yee diſhonoured amonge the heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore I wil halow my great name agayne whyche among the gentiles is euel ſpoken of: for ye your ſelues haue diſhonoured it among them. And the gētiles ſhal know that I am the lord when I am honoured in you before their eies ſaith the lord god. As for you, I wil take you from among the heathen, and gather you together oute of al countries, and bringe you agayne into your owne lande. * Then wil I powre cleane water vpon you, and you ſhal be cleane: yea, from al youre vncleannes. And from al your idols ſhal I cleanſe you. A newe hart alſo wil I geue you, and a new ſpirit wil I put into you. As for that ſtony hart, I wil take it out of your body & geue you a fleſhye harte. I wil geue my ſpirite among you * and cauſe you to walke in my commaundementes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfil theim. And ſo ye ſhal dwel in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and yee ſhalbee my people and I wil be your god. I wil healpe you out of all your vncleannes. I wil cal for the corne, and wil encreaſe it, & let you haue no hunger. I wyl multiplye the fruites of the trees & the increaſe of the felde for you, ſo that yee ſhall beare no more reproſe of hunger amonge the Heathen. Then ſhal ye remembre youre owne wicked wayes, and your imaginacions, whiche were not good: ſo that ye ſhal think that ye ware worthy to be deſtroied: for your ſinnes & abhominacions. But I wil not do this for your takes (ſayth the lorde god) be ye ſure of it. Therfore, O ye houſe of Iſrael, bee aſhamed of youre ſinnes. Moreouer, thus ſayeth the lorde God. What time as I ſhal cleanſe you from al youre offences, then wil I make the cities to be repayred again & wil repaire the places that be decayed. The deſolate lād ſhalbe builded agayne, whiche afore tyme lay waſt in the ſight of al them that went by, thē ſhal it bee ſayed, this waſte lande is become lyke a Gardeine of pleaſure, and the boūte deſolate and broken downe cities, are nowe ſtrong and defenced againe. Then the reſidue of the heathen that lye rounde about you, ſhal know that I am the Lorde, whiche repayre that that was broken doune, and plant againe that that was made waſte. Euen I the lorde haue ſpoken it, and wil doe it in dede. Thus ſayth the Lorde God. I wil yet once bee ſounde agayne of the houſe of Iſrael, and dooe this for them: * I ſhal encreaſe theym as a flocke of meune. Lyke as the holy flocke of Ieruſalem are in the high ſolempne feaſtes: So ſhal alſo the wilde waſted Cities be tilled with flockes of men: and they ſhal knowe that I am the lord.

Ye hilles also shalbe turned vp syde down, the stayres of stone shal fal, and al walles shal sinke to the ground. I will cal for a sworde vpon them in all my mountaines (saieth the Lorde God) to al my euery man shalbe vpon his brother. With pestilence and bloude will I punishe him: a rayne, and hayle stones, fyre and brymstone will I cause to rayne vpon him, and al his company, yea, and vpon all will I be magnified, honoured, and knowen among the Heathen: that thei may know that I am the Lorde.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, prophecy
H. against Gog, and speake. Thus saieth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Gog: thou chefe Prynce at Meseth and Thubal, I will vpon the, and punishe the with fyre plagues and leade the from the North parte, and bring the vp to the mountaines of Israell. And tho thy bowe, I will smite it out of thy lifte hande, and cast thyne arowes out of thy righte hande. Thou with al thy heape, and al the people that is with the, must fal vpon the mountaines of Israel. Then wil I gene thee vnto coulen and wilde beastes of the felde to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, saieth the Lorde God. Into Magog, and among them that sit carelesse in the yles. Wil I
I. sende a fyre, and thei shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, I wil make also the name of my holynes to be knowen among my people of Israel: and I wil not let my holy name be euell spoken of any more: but the very Heathen also shal know, that I am the Lorde, the holy one of Israell: Beholde, it commeth, and shalbe fulfilled in deede, saith the Lorde God. This is the day where of I haue spoken. Thei that dwel in the cities of Israell, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapons, and burne them: shildes and speares, bowes, and arowes, billes, and clubbes: seuen yeres shal thei be burnyng therof, so that thei shal elles bringe no sticks from the felde, neither haue nede to hewe downe out of the wodde. For thei shal haue weapons enough to burne. Thei shal robbe those that robbed them, and
C. spoile those that spoiled them, saieth the Lorde GOD. At the same tyme will I gene vnto Gog a place to be buried in Israel, euen the valley, where those men go from the east to the Sea warde. Those that trauaile thereby, shal stoppe their noses for stenche. There shal Gog, and al his people be buried: and it shalbe called the valley of the people of Gog Seuen monethes long shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that thei may cleane the lande. Yea, al the people of the lande shal bury them. O it shalbe a glorious day, when I get me that honoure, saith the Lorde God.
D. Thei shall ouerse men also to be deade buriers, euer going thorowe the lande, & appoint them certaine places to bury those in, which remaine vpon the felde, that the lande may be cleansed. From ende to ende shall they seke, and that seuen monethes longe. Those that go thorowe the lande, where they see a mans bone, thei shal set vp a token by it, til the deade buriers haue buried it also in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the citie shalbe called Hamonah (that is a multitude.) Thus shal thei make the lande cleane.

E. And thou sonne of man: Thus saieth the Lorde God, Speake vnto all the fowles and euery byrde kynde, and to all the wilde beastes of the felde, Assemble your selues and come, gather your selues rounde about vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: euen a great slaughter vpon the mountaines of Israell, that ye may eate the fleshe, and drynke the bloude. Ye shal eate the fleshe of the mightie, and drynke the bloude of the Princes of the lande: of the wethers, of the lambes, of the goates, and of the oxen that be all fatte as Basan. Eate the fatte vntil your belly full, and drynke bloud, til ye be dronken of the slaughter, whiche I haue slayne vnto you. Fill you at my table with horses and strong horsemen, with captaines and menne of warre, saieth the Lorde God. I wil bryng my glorie also among the Gentiles, that all the Heathen may see my iudgement, that I haue kepte, and my hande which I haue laied vpon them: that the house of Israell may knowe, that I am the Lorde their God, from that day forth. And the Heathen shal knowe, that whare as the house of Israell was ledde into captiuitie: it was for their wickednes sake, because thei offended me. For the which cause I hyd my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of their enemies, that thei might all be slayne with the sweard. Accordyng to their vncleannesse, and vnfaithfull dealynges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them. Therefore thus saieth the Lorde God: Now will I bryng againe the captiuitie of Iacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israell, and be zelous for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence that thei haue done against me, shalbe taken away: and so sauely shal thei dwell in their lande, that noman shall make them afrayed. And when I haue brought them againe from among the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemies landes, and am sanctified in them before many Heathen: Then shall thei knowe that I am the Lorde their God, whiche suffred them to be ledde into captiuitie among the Heathen, but now haue I brought them againe into their owne land, and not lefte one of them yonder. Neither wil I hyde my face no more from them, but wil powre out my spirite vpon the house of Israel, saith the Lorde God.

The .xl. Chapter.

A. In the .xxv. yeare of our captiuitie, in the beginnyng of the yeare, the tenth day of the moneth: that is the .xiij. yeare after that the citie was smitten downe: the same day came the hande of the Lord vpon me, and caried me thether: euen into the lande of Israell brought he me in the visions of God, and set me downe vpon a meruelous hye mountaine, where vpon there was a buildyng (as it had been a citie) toward the South. Thether he caried me: and beholde, there was a man, whose fauilitie semed like brasse, which had a reede of flaxe in his hand, & a metered alo. He stode in the doze, & said vnto me: Thou sonne of man marke wel with thyne eyen, heare me with thyne eares, and take it to thyne hart, whatsoeuer I shal shewe the, for to the entent that I might shewe the, therfore art thou brought hether. Beholde whatsoeuer thou seest, thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof. Beholde, B. there was a wall without the outtyde rounde about the house: the meteroode that he had in his hande, was .vj. cubites longe and a spanne. So he measured the breadth of the buildyng, whiche was a metered, and the height also a metered. Then came he vnto the gate whose ante warde vp the trapes, and measured the postes of the doze, whereof euery one was a meteroode thycke. Euery chamber was a meteroode long and broder, betwene the chambres were fyue cubites. The post of the doze within the porche, was one meteroode. He measured also the porche of the inner doze, which contained a metered. Then measured he the entry of the doze, that contained eight cubites, and his pilleres two cubites: and this entry stode inward. The chambres C. of the doze East warde, were three on euery syde of like bredth and long. The pilleres also that stode on both the sydes, were of one measure. After this he measured the wideneße of the doze, whiche was ten cubites, & the heigth of the doze thirtene cubites. The edge before the chambres, was one cubite brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambres .vj. cubites wide on either syde. He measured the doore from the ridge of one chambre to another, whose wyndowes were .xxv. cubites, and one doze stode against another. He made pilleres also of .lx. cubites high, rounde about the court doze. Before the inward parte vnto the foze entry of the fauremoze doore, were fifty cubites. The chambres and their pilleres within, rounde about vnto the doze had syde wyndowes. So had the foze entries also, whose wyndowes went rounde about within. And vpō the pilleres there stode date trees. Then brought he me into the foze courte, where as were chambers and paued worke made in the foze courte rounde about. .xxx. chambers vpon one paued worke. And the paued worke lay a long beside the doores, euen as long as the lower gates were. Then he measured the breadth from the lower doze, vnto the fauremoze court of the outtyde, which had an hundred cubites vpon the East, and the North part likewise. And the doze in the outward

the length and breadth: his three chambers also on either syde with their pillers and their entries: which had euen the measure of the first gate. The height was fyue cubites, the breadth .xxv. cubites, his windowes, & porches with their Date trees, had euen like measure as the doore toward the East: there were seuen steppes to go vp vpon, and their porche before them. Ouer the doore of the inner court stode fast ouer against the doore that was toward the Northeast. From one doore to another he measured .C. cubites. Afterward he brought me to the South syde, where there stode a doore toward the South: which pillers & porches he measured, after these same measure, & with their porches there had windowes rounde about, lyke the first windowes. The height was .l. cubites, the breadth .xxv. with steppes to go vp vpō: his porche stode before, with his pillers & Date trees on either syde. And the doore of this inner court stode toward the South, & he measured from the one doore to another an hundreth cubites. So he brought me into the inner doore court through the doore of the south side which he measured: and it had the measure aforesaid. In like maner his chambers, pillers, & entries, had euen the foresaid measure also. And he had with his porches rounde about windowes of .l. cubites height, & .xxv. cubites breede. The porches rounde about were .xxv. cubites longe, and fyue cubites broade: his porche reached into the outmost court vpon the pillers, there were Date trees, and eight steppes to go vp vpon. He brought me also into the vtmost court vpon the East side & measured the doore according to the measure aforesaid, his chambers pillers & porches had euen the same measure, as the first had: and with his porches he had windowes rounde about. The height was .l. cubites, the breadth .xxv. cubites, his porche reached vnto the outmost court: his pillers also hadde Date trees on either syde, & viii. steppes to go vp vpon. And he brought me to the north doore, and measured it, which also had the foresaid measure. His chambers, pillers, & porches hadde windowes rounde about: whose height was .l. cubites, and the breadth .xxv. cubites. And there stode towarde the vtmost court, and vpon them both were Date trees, & viii. steppes to go vp vpon. There stode chambers also, whose entrance was at the doore pillers, and there the burnte offrynges were washed. In the doore of the gate there stode on either syde two tables, to the slaughtering of the burnte offrynges, of synne offrynges, and trespasse offrynges thereupon. And on the vtmost syde as men go forthe to the North doore, there stode two tables. Foure tables stode on either syde of the doore, that is eight tables, whereupon they slaughtered. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offrynges, of a cubite and an half long, & broade and one cubite high, whereupon were layed the vessellers and ornamentes wherwith they were slayne to the burnt and slaine offrynges. Moreouer there were foure fyngers broade, fastened rounde about to hange fleshe vpō, and vpon the tables was laid the offrynge of the meate. On the outside of the inner doore were the singers chambers in the inward court beside the North doore ouer against the South. Their syde one also beside the East doore of the North ward. And he said vnto me: This chambre on the South syde belongeth to the priestes, that kepe the habitacion and this toward the North, are the priestes that waite vpō the aulter: which be the sonnes of Sadoch that doe seruice before the Lorde in seruice of the children of Leui. So he measured the fore court, which had in length an hundred cubites, and as much in breadth by the foure corners, by one the aulter stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entry of the house, and measured the walles by the entry doore, which were fiue cubites longe on either syde. The thickenes also of the doore on either syde, was three cubites. The length of the porche was twenty cubites: the breadth .xi. cubites, and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the walles also were pillers on either syde one.

The .xli. Chapiter.

AFter this, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes, whiche were of both sydes fyue cubites thicke, according to the wideues of the tabernacle. The breadth of the doore was ten cubites, & the walles of the doore on either syde fiue cubites. He measured the length therof, which contained twenty cubites, and the breadth twenty. Then went he in and measured the doore postes, which were two cubites thicke, but the doore it selfe was sixe cubites, and the breadth of the doore was seuen cubites. He measured the length and breadth therof, which were euery one twenty cubites before the temple. And he said vnto me this is the holiest of all. He measured also the wall of the house, which was sixe cubites. The chambers that stode rounde about the house, were euery one foure cubites wyde: and one stode harde vpon another, wherof there were .xxxiii. There stode postes beareth vp the walles rounde about the house, to beare them vp, but in the wall of the house they were not fastened. The syde chambers were the higher the wyder, & had steppes that went them rounde about the house. Thus were they wyder about, that from the lowest, men might go to the highest by the middle chambers. I saw also that the house was very hye round about. The foundacion of the syde chambers was euen rounde, that is .vi. cubites hyde. The thickenes of the hyde wall without, contained .v. cubites, and so did the out wall of the chambers in the house. Betwene the chambers was the widenesse .xx. cubites rounde about the house. The chambre doores stode ouer against the outwal the one dore was towarde the North, the other towarde the South: and the thickenes of the outwall was .v. cubites rounde about.

Ouer the buildyng that was separated toward the West, was .lxx. cubites wyde, the wall of the buildyng was .v. cubites thicke round about, and the length foure score cu-bites and tenne. So he measured the house, which was an hundred cubites long, and the separated buildyng with the wall, ware an hundred cubites long also. The wideness before the house, and of it that was separated towarde the East, was an hundred cubites.
And he measured the length of the buildyng before and behynde, with the chambres vpon both the hydes, and it contained an hundred cubites. The innermost temple, the porche of the fore courte, the hyde postes, there thre had hyde wyndowes, and pillers round about ouer against the postes, from the ground vp to the wyndowes. The wyndowes them selues ware cieled ouer with bordes: and thus was it aboue the dore vnto the inmost house, and without also: Yea, the whole wall on e-uery hyde, both within and without was cieled ouer with greate bordes. There ware Cherubyns & Date trees made also, so that one Date tree stode euer betwixt two Cherubyns. One Cherub had two faces: the face of a man, lokyng asyde towarde the Date tree and a Lyons face on the other hyde. Thus was it made rounde about in all the house.
Yea, the Cherubyns and Date trees were made from the ground vp aboue the doore, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the Temple. The byposles of the temple were foure square, and the fashion of the Sanctuary was * euen as it appeared vnto me a fore in the vision. The table was of wood three cubites hye, and two cubites longe: her corners, the length and the walles were of wood. And he sayd vnto me: This is the table that shal stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holiest of all had either of the two dooores, and euery doore hadde two litle wicketes, which were folden one vpon another, on euery hyde two. And vpon the doo-res of the temple there were made Cherubyns and Date trees, like as vpon the walles: and a guest tre like the lathe of wood was before on the outside of the porche. Vpon the hyde hyes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes, and Date trees, hauyng beames and balkes, like as the house had.

Then he ledde me out into the fore courte toward the North, and brought me into the chambre that stode ouer against the buckbuildyng westwarde, which hadde the length of an hundred cubites, whose dore turned towarde the North. The wideness contained fifty cubites: ouer against the .xx. cubites of the innermost courte, and against the paued worke that was to the courte, hyde at these thre there stode pilliers, euen ouer against another. And before this chumbre there was a walkyng place of .x. cubites wyde, & within was a way of one cubite wide, and their doores towarde the North. Thus the hyest chambres were alway narrowest of the lowest and middlemost of the buildyng for they bare chambre vpon chambre, & stode thre together one vpon another, not hauyng pilliers like the fore courte: therefore were they smaller then those beneth, and in the middest to rehearse from the ground vp wards. The wal without that stode by the chambres towarde the outmost courte vpon the fore hyde of the chambres, was fyfty cubites long, for the length of the outmost chambres in the fore courte was fyfty cubites also: but the length therof before the temple was an hundred cu-bites. These chambres had vnder them ewen reasure on the East hyde, whereby a man might go into them out of the foore courte through the thicke wall of the foore courte toward the East, right ouer against the separated buil-dyng. Before the same buildyng vpon this hyde there were chambres also, which had a way vnto them, like as the chambre of the North hyde, of the same length, & wideness.
Their outwarde fashion, & doores were also of the same maner. Yea, euen like as the other chambres, so were those also of the South hyde. And before the way towarde the fyngers stopped in the East hyde there stode a dore to go in at. Then said he vnto me: The chambres towarde the North and the south, which lye before the backe buildyng, those be holy chambres, wherein the priestes that do seruice before the Lord, must eate the most holy offrynges: there must they lay the most holy offrynges: meate offrynges, sinne offrynges, and trespasse offrynges, for it is an holy place. When the priestes entre there in, they shall not go into the foore courte but there they be holy, put from them the clothes of their ministracion, and put on other other garmentes, that they hurtyng thynges be not with the people. Now when he had made an end of the inwarde house, he brought me forth the dore that lyeth toward the East, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east hyde with the measure, which rounde about contained .v. measures rodde. And the North hyde measured he, which contained rounde about as much.

the south and the West, whiche he measured conteined either of thē fyue hundred meterodes. So he measured al the foure sydes, wher there went a wal rounde about, fyue hundred meterodes long, and as brode also, whiche separated the holy from the vnholy.

¶ The.xlij. Chapiter.

B. SO he brought me to the dore that turneth toward the east. Behold, then came the glorie of the God of Israel, from out of the East, whose voice was lyke a great noise of waters, and the yearth was lightened with Eze.x.xi.b. his glory. His sight to loke vpon was * lyke the sight that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the citie should haue been destroyed: Eze.i.a. x.c. and xi.b. * and lyke the vision that I sawe by the waters of Cobar. Then fel I vpon my face: but the glory of the Lord came into the house, through the East dore. Then a wynde toke me vp and brought me into the innermer courte, and beholde: the house was full of the glorie of the Lord. I heard one speakyng vnto me out of the house: and there stode one by me, B. that said vnto me: O thou sonne of man, this * roume is my seat, and the place of my foote

Leuit.xxi.a. of Israel shall nomore defyle my holy name: neither thei, nor their kynges thorow their whoredome, thorow their hye places, & thorowe the dead bodies of their kinges, which haue builded their thresholdes in maner hard vpō my thresholdes, & their postes almost at my postes: & a wal betwixt me & them. Thus haue thei defyled my holy name with their abominacions, that thei haue cōmitted. Wher fore I haue destroyed them in my wrath. But
C. now thei shall put away their whoredome, & the deade bodies of their kynges out of my sight, that I may dwel amōg them for euermore. Therfore. O thou sonne of man shew Ezech.xx.a. thou the housholde of Israell a temple that thei may be ashamed of their wickednesse and measure them selues an example therat. And when thei be ashamed of al their workes, thē shewe them the fourme and fashion of the temple, the cōmyng in, the goyng out, all the maner and description therof. Yea, all the vses and ordinances of it, that thei may kepe and fulfill all the fashions and customes therof.
This is the description of the house. Aboue vpon the mount round about all the coastes, it shalbe the holyest of al. Behold, that is the description and fashion of the house. This is the measure of the aulter, after the true cubite: whiche is a spanne lenger then ano-

From the ground to the lower steppes, the length is two cubites: and the brede one cubite: and from the lower steppes to the higher, are foure cubites, and the brede but one cubite. * The Exod.xxvij. aulter was foure cubites high, and from the aulter vpward stode foure hornes, & it was twelue cubites long, & twelue cubites brode vpō the foure corners. The couering of the aulter was fourtene cubites long and brode vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that went rounde about had half a cubite, and the E. bottome therof rounde about one cubite: his steppes stode toward the East. And he sayed vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus saieth the Lorde God, these are the ordinances and lawes of the aulter, in the day when it is made to offer burnt offerynges, and to sprynckle bloude therupon. To the priestes, to the Leuites, that be of the seade of Sadoch * and

G. Seuen dayes shalt thou bryng euery day a goate bucke for synne. A young bullocke, and a rambe of the flocke, both without blemishe that thei offer. Seuen daies shal thei reconcile and clense the aulter, and offer vpon it. When these dayes are expired, then vpon the eight day, and so forth the priestes shal offer their burnt offerynges, and helth offerynges vpon the aulter: so will I be mercifull vnto you, sayeth the Lorde God.

AFter this he brought me again to the out-H. warde dore of the sanctuary on the East syde, and that was shut. Then said the Lorde vnto me: this dore shalbe stil shut: and not opened for any man to go thorow it: but onely for the Lorde God of Israel: yea, he shal go thorow it, elles shal it be shut stil. the prince hymselfe shall come thorowe it, that he may eate breade before the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in, and there shall he go out a-gaine. Then brought he me to the dore vpon the North syde of the house. And as I lo-Exo.xxiij.b. and.ij.c. Num.ix.a. ked about me: beholde, the glory of the Lorde filled the house, and I fell downe vpon my Iij.Ma.viij.b. face. Then the Lorde spake vnto me: O thou

B. sonne of man, take this to thyne hart: behold and take well yeut here to all that I will say vnto the concernyng all the ordinaunces of the Lord, and al his lawes: ponder wel with thyne hart the commyng in of the house, and the goyng forth of the Sanctuary: and tell that obstinate housholde of Israell. Thus saith the Lorde God: O house of Israel, ye haue now doen enough with al youre abhominacions, seyng that ye haue brought into my Sanctuarie straungers, hauyng vncircumcised hartes & flesshe, where thorowe my sanctuary is defiled, when ye offre me bread, fat and bloud. Thus with al your abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary: but set kepers of my Sanctuarie euen after youre owne mynde. C. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God of all the straungers that dwell among the children of Israell, no straunger whose hart and flesshe is not circumcised, shall come within my Sanctuarie. No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me: and haue disceiued the people of Israel with al errours, goyng after their Idolles: therfore shall thei beare their owne wickednes. Shoulde thei be set and ordeined to minister vnder the dores of the house of my sanctuary? And to do seruice in the house: to slea burnt offerynges and sacrifices for the people: to stande before them, & to serue them, seyng the seruice that thei do them, is before their idols, and cause the house of Israel to stomble thorow their wickednes. * For the whiche cause I haue §§. Me. §. c. D. pluckt out myne hande ouer them, saieth the Lord God: so that now thei must beare their owne iniquitie, & not to come nye me, to serue me with their priesthode, in my sanctuary, & most holyest of all, that thei may beare their owne shame & abhominacions, which thei haue doen. Shoulde I vse them to be porters of the house, and to al the seruice that is doen therin? But the Priestes, the Leuites, the sonne Eze. xliij. b. and. xlviij. b. of Sadoch, that kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary, when the children of Israel were gone from me, shall come to me, to do me seruice, to stande before me, and to offer me the fat and the bloud saith the Lorde, Thei shal go into my Sanctuary, and treade before my table, to do me seruice, & to waite E. vpon my ordinaunces. Nowe when thei go in at the dores of the innermer courte: thei shal putte on lynnen clothes, so that no wollenne come vpon them whyle thei do seruice vnder the dores of the innermer courte and within. Thei shall haue faire lynnen bonettes vpon their heades, and lynnen briches vpon their loynes, whiche in their labour thei shal not put about them. And when thei go forthe to the people into the outwarde courte, thei shall put of the clothes, wherin thei haue ministred, and lay them in the parditacion of the Sanctuary, and put on other apparell, lest thei vnhalowe the people with their clothes. * Thei shall not shaue their F. ¶ The. xlv. Capitole.

When ye deuyde the lande by the lot, ye A. shal put a syde one * part for the Lord Eze. xlviii. b to be holy from other landes. Namely. xxv. M. meterodes long, and. x. M. brode. This shalbe holy, as wyde as it is rounde about. Of this part there shal belong vnto the sanctuary. v. C. meterodes in all the foure corners, and fifty cubites wyde rounde about to the suburbes. And from this measure, namely of. xxv. M. metrodes longe, and. x. thousande brode, thou shalt measure wherin the Sanctuary and the holiest of al may stande. The residue of that holy grounde shalbe the B. Priestes, which do seruice in the sanctuarie of the Lorde, and go in before the Lorde to serue hym, that thei may haue rowme to dwel in. & for the sanctuary, it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in the house there shalbe geuen twenty habitacions of the. xxv. thousand length, and ten thousand breadth: ye shall geue also vnto the Citie a-possession of fyue thousand meetroddes brod, and .xxv. thousand longe, beside the parte of the Sanctuary: that shalbe for the whole house of Israel. * Upō both the sydes of the Sanctuaries parte, and by the citie, there shalbe geuen vnto the prynce what cōmeth lieth ouer against the citie: as farre as reacheth Westwarde and Eastward, which shalbe as longe as one parte, from the West vnto the East. This shalbe his owne lande in Israel that my prynces be nomore chargeable vnto my people. And suche as yet remaineth ouer in the lande shalbe geuen to the house of Israell accordyng to their tribes.

Thus saith the Lorde God: O ye Prynces ye haue now oppressed and destroyed enough nowe leaue of, deale nowe accordyng to the thyng that is equall and lawfull: and thrust out my people nomore, saith the Lorde God.

* Ye shal haue a true weight, a true Ephah, and a true bath. The Ephah a the bath shall be a lyke. One bath shall containe the tenthe parte of an homer, and so shal an Ephah do: their measure shalbe after the homer. * One cycle make twenty garras. So twenty cycles, and .xxv. and .xv. cycles make a pound. This is the heueofferyng that ye shall geue to be heaued: namely, the sixtenth part of an Ephah, out of an homer of wheate, and the sixtēth part of an Ephah, out of an homer of barley. The oyle shalbe measured with the bath: euen the tēth parte of one bath out of a Cor. Ten bathes make one homer: for one homer filleth ten bathes. And one lambe from two hundreth flepe out of the pasture of Israell: for a meate offeryng, burnt offeryng, and helth offeryng to reconcile them, saith the Lorde God. All the people of the lande shal geue this heaue offeryng with a frewil for the people of Israel. Again, it shalbe the Prynces parte to offer burnte offeryngs, meatofferyngs, and drynkeofferyngs vnto the Lorde, in the holy dayes, newe mones, Sabbothes, and in all the hye feastes of the house of Israel. The synne offeryng, meate offeryng, burnt offeryng, and helthofferyng shal he geue to reconcile the house of Israel.

Thus saith the Lorde God: The first day of the first moneth thou shalt take a young bullocke without blemishe, and clense the sanctuarie. So the Priest shal take of the bloud of the synne offeryng, and sprincle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the aulter, with the doze postes of the innermer court. And thus shalt thou do also the seuenth day of the moneth (for such as haue synned of ignorāunce, or beyng deceiued) to reconcile the house withall. Upon the .xiiii. day of the first moneth, ye shal kepe Easter. Seuen dayes shal the feast continue, wherin there shall no sowre nor leuened bread be eaten. Upon the same day, shall the Prynce geue for hym selfe, & all the people of the lande, a bullocke for a synne offeryng. And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shal offer euery day a bullocke and a rambe, that are without blemishe for a burnt offeryng vnto the Lorde: and an he gote daily for a synne offeryng. For the meate offeryng he shal geue euer an Ephah to a bullock, an Ephah to a Rambe, and an Hyn of oyle to an Ephah. Upon the .xv. day of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the seuen dayes holy, one after another, euen as the other seuen dayes with the synne offeryng, burnt offeryng, meat offeryng, and with oyle.

The .xlvi. Chapiter.

Thus saith the Lorde God: the doze of the innermer court toward the East shalbe shut the sixe worcyng dayes: but in the Sabboth, and in the day of the newe mone it shalbe opened. Then shall the Prynce come vnder the doze porche, and stand stil without by the doze cheke. So the priestes shall offre vp his burnt and helth offeryngs. And he shal worship at the doze post, & go his way forth again, but the doze shal nomore be shut til the euenyng. On the same maner shall the people of the land also do their worshyp before the Lorde without this doze vpon the Sabbothes and new mones. This is nowe the burnt offeryng, that the prince shal bring vnto the Lorde vpon the Sabboth, sixe lambes without blemishe, and a rambe without blemish, and an Ephah for a meate offeryng with the rambe. As for the lambes, he may geue as many meat offeryngs to them as he wil and an Hyn of oyle to an Ephah. In the day of the newe moneth it shalbe a young bullock without blemishe: sixe lambes & a rambe also without blemishe. With the bullocke he shall geue an Ephah, and with the Rambe an Ephah also for a meate offeryng, but to the lambes, what he may come by. And euer an Hyn of oyle to an Ephah. When the Prynce commeth he shall go vnder the doze porche, and euen there depart forth again. But whē the people of the lande come before the Lord in the hye solempne feaste, as many as come in by the North doze to do worshyp, shall go out againe at the South doze. And thei that come in at the South doze, shall go forth again at the North doze. There shal none go out at the doze, where he came in, but shal go right for the ouer on the other syde, and the Prynce shal go in and out among them. Upon solempne and hye feaste dayes this shal be the meate offeryng. An Ephah to a bullocke, and an Ephah to a Rambe, and to the lambes, as many as he will: but euer an Hyn of oyle to an Ephah. Now when the prynce bringeth a burnt offeryng, or an helth offering with a frewill vnto the Lorde, the East doze shalbe opened vnto hym, that he may do with his burnt and peth offeryngs, as he doeth vpon the Sabboth, and when he goeth forth, the doze shalbe shut after him again. ¶ He shal daily bring vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yere olde without blemishe for a burnt offeryng: this shall he do euery morning. And for a meat offeryng, he shal geue the sixth part of an Ephah, and the thirde parte of an Hyn, of oyle, to mingle with the cakes: euery morning. Yea, this shalbe a daily meate offeryng vnto the Lorde: for an euerlasting ordinance. And thus shall the lambe the meate offeryng and oyle be geuen euery morning, for a daily burnte offeryng. Moreouer, thus saieth the Lorde God: If the Prynce geue a gifte vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heritage perpetual, that he maie possesse it. But yf he will geue one of his seruauntes, some of his heritage, it shalbe his to the yere of fre yeare, and then to returne againe vnto the prynces: for his heritage shalbe his sonnes onely. ¶ The Prynce also shal take none of the peoples enheritaunce, nor putte them from their possession, but to his owne sonnes shall he geue his possession, that my people be not scattered abrode, but that euery man may haue his owne. And he brought me thorowe the entraunce at the syde of the doze to the habitacion of the Sanctuary that belongeth to the Priestes, and shewe toward the North, and beholde: there was a place vpon the West syde, then saied he vnto me. This is the place where the Priestes shal dight the trespace and synofferyngs, & bake the meate offeryngs, that thei niede not beare them into the outwarde court: and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the outemost court round about al the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the courte, there was yet a litle courte. Yea, in all the foure corners of the court, there was made a litle court of fourty cubytes long, and thirty cubites broder: these foure litle courtes ware of one like measure, and there went a ridge wal rounde about them al foure, vnder the which there ware harthes made round about. Then saied he vnto me. This is the kechen where the ministers of the house shall dight the laie offeryngs of the people.

¶ The xlvii Chapiter.

AFter this he brought me againe before the doze of the house: and beholde, there gushed out waters from vnder the poste of the house Eastwarde, for the house stode towarde the East, that ranne downe vpon the right syde of the house, which lyeth to the aulter Southward. Then caried he me out to the North doze, and brought me forth there rounde about by the outemost doze that turneth Eastwarde. Behold, there came forth the water vpon the right syde. Now when the man that had the metestod in his hand went vnto the East doze, he measured a thousand cubytes, and then he brought me thorow the water, euē to the ancles. So he measured yet a thousand, and brought me thorowe the water againe vnto the knees. Yet measured he a thousand, and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loines. After this he measured a thousand again, then was it suche a ryuer, that I might not wade thorowe it. The water was so depe, that it was nedefull to passe ouerwomed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he said vnto me: hast thou sene this, O thou sonne of manne? And with that he brought me to the ryuer banke againe. Now when I came there, there stode many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer banke. Then saied he vnto me: this water that floweth out toward the East, and runneth downe into the plaine felde, commeth into the Seas: & runneth out: and mayeth the waters whole. Yea, all that lyue and moue, whersoeuer this ryuer cōmeth shal recouer. And where this water commeth, there shalbe muche fishe. For al that come to this water shalbe lusty and whole. By this ryuer shall the fishers stande from Engaddi vnto En eglaim, and there spreade out their nettes: for there shalbe great peapes of fishe, lyke as in the maigne Sea. As for his clay & putter, thei shal not be whole, for why, it shalbe occupied for salte. By this ryuer vpon both the sydes of the doze there shal grow al maner of fruiteful trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shal their fruite perish: but euer be rype at their monethes for their water runneth out of their sanctuary. His frute is good to eate and his leafe profitable for medicine. Thus saieth the Lorde God. Let this be the border wherin ye shall deuide the lande vnto the xii. tribes of Israel, with the lyne. Parte it indifferentely vnto one as vnto another: for of the which lande I swore vnto your fathers, that it should fal to your enheritaunce. This is the border of the land vpon the North syde, frō the maigne Sea, as men go to Zadadar namely, Hemah, Berotha, Sabasim, from the borders of Damascus and Hemah vnto Hazar, Tichon, and that lieth vpon the coostes of Hauran. Thus the borders from the sea forth, shalbe Hazar, Enō: the border of Damascus, the North, and the borders of Hemah, that is the North parte. The East syde shal ye measure from Hauran and Damascus, from Galead and the land of Israel by Jordane and so forth, from the Seacoost, that lyeth Eastward: this is the Eastparte. The South syde is, from Thamar forth to the waters of Stryfe vnto Cades, the riuer to the maigne sea: that is the south part the west part: namely the greate sea from the borders therof, til a mā come vnto Hemah, this is the west part. This lād shal ye part amōg you, according to the tribes of Israell, and deuide it to be one heritage for you* and for the straungers that dwell among you, and beget children. For ye shall take them among the children of Israel, like as though they were of your owne houshold, & country, and they shall haue heritage with you among the children of Israel. Loke in what tribe the straunger dwelleth, in the same tribe shall ye geue him his heritage, sayeth the Lorde God.

8. These are the names of the tribes that lye vpon the Northside, by the waye of Hetlon, till thou comest vnto Hemath and Hazar, Enam, the borders of Damascus toward the north beside Hemath. Dan shal haue his portion from the east quarter vnto the west. Upon the borders of Dan, from the East syde vnto the weste, shall Aser haue his portion. Upon the borders of Aser, from the east parte vnto the weste, shall Nephtaly haue his portiō. Upon the borders of Nephtaly, from the east quarter vnto the west, shal Manasses haue his portion. Upon the borders of Manasses, from the east syde vnto the weste, shall Ephraim haue his portion. Upon the borders of Ephraim, fro the east parte vnto the weste, shall Ruben haue his portion. Upon the borders of Ruben, from the east quarter vnto the weste, shall Juda haue his portiō. Upon the borders of Juda, from the east parte vnto the west, ye shall set aside one portiō of xxv. Yea, this same place shalbe the priestes that are of the children of* Sadoch and haue kept my holy ordinaunce, whiche went not astraye in the errour of the children of Israell, like as the Lewites are gone astraye, and this separated piece that they haue of lande, shalbe the moste holy, harde vpon the borders of the Lewites. And next vnto the priestes shall the Lewites haue. xxv. M. log, & x. M. brode. This shalbe on euery side. xxv M. long, and. x. M. brode. Of this portion they shall sell nothyng, nor make any permutacion therof, least the chief of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lorde. The other. v. They that labour for the welth of the citie, shall mayntaine this also, out of what tryde soeuer they be in Israell. All that is separated of the xxv. M. long, & xxv. M. brode on the foure partes, that shal ye put aside for the separated portion of the sanctuary, & for the possession of the citie. The residue vpon both the sydes of the sanctuary and possession of the cytie, shall belonge to the prince, before the place of the. xxv. M. vnto the east end, and before the place of the. xxv. M. westward vnto the borders of the cytie, this shall be the princes portiō. This shalbe the holy place & the houte of the sanctuary shal stande in the middes of it. Moreouer from the Lewites, and the cyties possessiō, that lie in the middes of the princes parte, loke what remayneth betwyxt the border of Juda, and the border of Ben Jamin it shalbe the princes. Now of the other trybes, from the east parte vnto the west, shal Ben Jamin haue his portion. Vpō the borders of Ben Jamin, from the east syde vnto the weste, shall Simeon haue his portion. Upon the borders of Simeon, from the east parte vnto the weste, shall Issakar haue his portion. Upon the borders of Issakar, from the east syde vnto the weste, shal Zabulon haue his portion. Upon the borders of Zabulon, from the east parte vnto the weste, shall Gad haue his portion. ¶ The ende of the prophecie of Ezechiel.

The booke of the Pro-phete Daniel.

IN the third yere of the reygne of Ioachim kyng of Juda, came Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon, vnto Ierusalem, and besieged it: * and the Lorde deliuered Ioachim the kyng of Juda into his hande, with certeyn ornamentes of the house of God, whiche he caried away vnto the lād of Senaar, to the house of his God, and there he brought them into his Godes treasury.

And the kyng spake vnto Asphanaz the chefe chamberlayne, that he should bryng hym certeyne of the chyldren of Israell, that were come of the kynges sede & of princes, young spryngaldes without any blemishe, but fayre and welfauoured, instruct in al wisdome, connyng and vnderstandyng, whiche were able to stande in the kynges palace, to reade and to learne for to speake Chaldyche. Vnto these the kyng appoynted a certeyne portion of his owne meate: and of the wyne, whiche he dranke hym selfe, so to norysshe them thre yeare, that afterwarde they myght stande before the kyng. Among these were nowe certeyne of the chyldren of Juda: namely Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Vnto these the chefe chamberleyne gaue other names, and called Daniel Balthasar, Ananias Sidrach, Misael Misach, and Azarias, Abednago. But Daniel was at a pointe with hym selfe, * that he would not be defyled therwe the kynges meate, nor the wyne whiche he droncke. And this he desyred of the chefe chamberleyne, least he should defyle himselfe. So God gaue Daniell fauoure and grace before the chefe chamberleyne, that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayde of my lorde the kyng, whiche hath appoynted you your meate and dricke, least he spye your faces to be worse lyking then the other spryngaldes of your age, & so ye shal make me lose my head vnto the kyng. Then Daniel answered Melsatar, whome the chefe chamberleyne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes, and let vs haue pottage to eate, and water to drincke, then loke vpon our faces, and theirs that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seest, so deale with vs thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in this matter and proued them ten dayes. And after ten dayes, their faces were better lykyng & fatter then al the young spryngaldes, which did eate of the kynges meate. Thus Melsatar toke away their meate and wine, and gaue them pottage therefore. God gaue nowe these foure spryngaldes connyng & learning in al scripture and wisdome, but vnto Daniel specially he gaue vnderstandyng of all visions & dreames. Nowe when the time was expired, that the kyng had appointed to bryng in these young spryngaldes vnto hym, the chefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonozor and the kyng cōmuned with them. But among them al were found none such as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Therfore stode they before the kyng in al wisdome, and matters of vnderstandyng, that he enquired of thē, & he found thē ten tymes better, then all the sothesayers and charmers, that were in all his realme. And Daniel abode styll, vnto the first yeare of kyng Cirus.

IN the second yere of the reygne of Nabuchodonozor, had Nabuchodonozor a dreame * wherby his spirite was vexed, & his slepe brake frō him. Then the kyng commaunded to call togyether all the sothesayers, charmers, witches, & Chaldeis, for to shewe the kyng his dreame. So they came & stode before the kyng. And the kyng sayd vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therwith, that I haue cleane forgotten, what I dreamed. Vpon this the Chaldeis answered the Kynge in the Syriane speche: O kyng, God saue thy life for euer. Shewe thy seruauntes thy dreame, and we shal shew the what it meaneth. Then kyng saue the Chaldeis their answere and sayde: It is gone from me. If ye will not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacion therof, ye shall die, and your houses shal be pyled. But yf ye tell me the dreame and the meanyng therof, ye shall haue of me giftes, rewardes and great honoure: onely shewe me the dreame and the signification of it. They answered againe and sayde: the kyng muste shewe his seruauntes the dreame, and so shal we declare what it meaneth. Then the kyng answered, saiyng: I perceiue of a truth, that ye do but prolonge the tyme, for so muche as ye se that the thyng is gone from me. Therfore if ye will not tell me the dreame, ye shall al haue one iudgement. But ye fayne and dissemble with vaine wordes, whiche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame, & so shall I knowe, if ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Vpō this, the Chaldeis gaue answere before the kyng, & sayd, there is no man vpon earth, that can tell the thyng, which the kyng speaketh of: yea, there is neyther kyng prince nor lorde, that euer asked suche thynges of a sothesayer, charmer or Chaldei: for it is a very harde matter, that the kyng requireth. Neyther is there any, that can certifie the kyng therof, except the goddes whose dwelling is not amog the creatures. For the whiche cause the kyng was wroth with great indignacion, and commanded to destroye all the wise men at Babylon, and the proclamacion went furth, & the wyse men were slayne. They sought also to slen Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquired of Arioch the kynges stewarde, of the iudgement & sentence, that was gone furth already to kill suche as were wyse at Babylon. He answered and saide vnto Arioch, beyng then the kynges deputie. Why hath the kyng proclaymed so cruel a sentence? So Arioch tolde Daniel the matter. Upon this went Daniel vp, & desired the kyng that he might haue layser, to shewe the kyng the interpretacion, and then came he home agayne & shewed the thyng to Ananias, Misael, and Azarias his cōpanions: that they would beseche the God of heauen for grace in this secrette, that Daniel & his fellowes with other suche as were wise in Babylon, perished not. Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyght. And Daniel praysed God of heauen. Daniel also cried loude, and saide: O that the name of God myght be praysed for euer and euer, for wysdome and strength are his owne* he chaungeth the tymes and ages* he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kinges* he geueth wysdome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandyng to those that vnderstande, he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thyng that lieth in darcknesse, for the lyght dwelleth with hym. I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou haste lent me wysdome and strength, and hast shewed me the thyng, that we desyred of the, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me. Upon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whom the kyng had ordeyned to destroye the wyse at Babylon, he wente vnto hym, & sayde: destroye not suche as be wyse in Babylon, but bryng me in vnto the kyng, and I shall shewe the kyng the interpretacion. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kynge in all the haste, and sayd vnto hym: I haue found a man among the prysoners of Juda, that shal shewe the kyng the interpretacion. Then answered the kyng, and sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthazar. Arte thou he that canste shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretacion therof? Daniel answered the kyng to his face, and sayde: As for this secrete, for the which the kynge maketh inquisicion: it is neyther the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer, nor the deuyner, that can certifie the kynge of it. *Onely God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabucho donosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes. Thy dreame, and that whiche thou hast sene in thyne head vpon thy bed, is this O kyng. Thou dyddest calle in thy mynde, what should come hereafter. So he that is the opener of misteries sheweth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secrete is not shewed me, for any wysdome that I haue, more then any other liuyng, but only that I myght shewe the kyng the interpretacion, and that he might knowe the thoughtes of his owne harte.

Thou kyng sawest, and beholde, there stode before the a great ymage whose figure was maruilous greate, and his visage grymme. The ymages head was of fyne golde, his brest and armes of syluer, his body and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, & parte of earth. *This thou sawest tyll the tyme, that without any handes, there was hewen of a stone, whiche smote the ymage vpō the fete, that were both of yron and yearth, and brake them to pouder. Then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the syluer and golde, broken all together in peces, and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the sommer floores, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a great mountayne, whiche fulfylleth the whole yearth. This is the dreame. And nowe wyll we shewe before the kyng what it meaneth. O kyng, thou arte a kyng of kynges. For the God of heauen hath geuen the a kyngdome, ryches, strength, and maiestie: and hath delyuered the all thynges, that are among the chyldren of men: the beastes of the fielde, and the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominion ouer them all. Thou art that golden head. After that there shall aryse another kyngdome, whiche shalbe lesse then thyne. The thyrd kyngdome shalbe lyke copper, and haue dominacion in all landes. The fourth kyngdome shalbe as strong as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh & breaketh al thynges: yea, euen as yron beateth euery thynge downe: so shall it beate downe and destroye. Where as thou sawest the fete & toes, parte of yearth and parte of yron: that is a deuided kyngdom, which neuertheles shal haue some of the yron ground myxt with it, for couruche as thou hast sene the yron myxt with the clay. The toes of the fete that were part of yron and part of clay, signifie: that it shalbe a kyngdome, partely strong and partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxt with clay: they shall myngle themselues with the sede of symple people, and yet not continue one with another lyke as yron will not be couldered with a pot eyrde. In the dayes of these kynges shal the God of heauen set vp an euerlasting kyngdom which shal not perysshe, & his kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to another people: it shall breake, & destroy all thete kyngdomes, but it shal endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that without any handes there was cut out of the * mounte a stone, whiche brake the yron, the copper, the yearth the siluer and golde in peces: by that hath the greate God shewed the kyng, what shall come after this. This is a true dreame, & the interpretatiō of it is sure. Then the kyng Nabuchodonosor * fell downe vpon his face and bowed him selfe vnto Daniell, and commaunded that they should offer meate offeryngs and swete odoures vnto hym. The kyng answered Daniel, and sayde: yea, of a truthe your God is a God aboue all Goddes, a lord aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes: seyng thou canst discouer this mistery. So the kyng made Daniel a great man, and gaue hym many and greate gyftes. * He made hym ruler of all the countries of Babylon, & lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylō. Now Daniel entreated the kyng for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the lande of Babylon: But Daniel hym selfe remayned still in the courte by the kyng.

Nabuchodonosor the kyng caused a golde ymage to be made, whiche was. lx. cubites high, and sixe cubites thicke. This he made to be set vp in the fielde of Dura in the lande of Babylon, and sent out to gather together the dukes, lordes, and nobles, the iudges and officers, the deputes and shreues with all the rulers of the lande, that they myght come to the dedication of the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp. So the dukes, lordes, and nobles, the iudges and officers, deputes and shreues, with al the rulers of the lande gathered them together, and came vnto the dedicatyng of the ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp. Now whē they stode before the ymage whiche Nabuchodonosor set vp, the bedell cryed out with all his myght: O ye people, kyndredes & tongues, to you it is sayd: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, whiche shall be blowen with the Harpes, Sawmes, Psalteries, Symphonies, and all maner of Musicke, ye shall fal down & worshyppe that golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe & boweth hym selfe, shal euen the same houre be cast into an hote burnyng ouen. Therefore when all the folke heard the noyse of the trompettes that were blowen, with the harpes, Sawmes, Psalteries, Simphonies, and all kynde of melodie, then al the people kyndredes and nacions fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng had set vp. Anone there certaine men of the Chaldees, that went euen then and accused the Iewes and sayde vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor: O kyng God saue thy lyfe for euer. Thou boyng kyng hast geuen a commaundement, that all men when they heare the noyse of the trompettes, harpes, Sawmes, Psalteries, symphonies, and all the other melodies, shall fal downe and bowe thē selues toward the golden ymage: whoso then fell not downe and worshipped not, that he should be cast in to an hote burnyng ouen. Nowe are there certeyne Iewes * whome thou hast set ouer the offices of the lande of Babilō: namely, Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. These men (O kyng) regarde not thy commaundement, yea, they will not serue thy goddes, nor bowe thē selues to the golden ymage, that thou hast set vp. Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruel wrath and displeasure, commaunded that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, should be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before the kyng. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, will not you serue my Goddes? nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? Well, be redy hereafter. When ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes, Sawmes, psalteries, symphonies, and all the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worshyp the ymage which I haue made. But if ye worshyppe it not, ye shalbe cast immediatly into an hote burnyng ouen. And see, what God is ther, that may deliuer you out of my hādes? Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, answered the kyng and sayd. O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why: Our God whom we serue * is able to kepe vs frō the hote burnyng ouen (O kyng) & can ryght well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And though he will not, yet shalt thou knowe (O kyng) that we will not serue thy goddes, nor do reuerence to that Image, which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indygnacion, so that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therefore he charged and commaunded that the ouen should be made seuen tymes hotter then it was wonte to be, & spake vnto the strongest worthies that were in his hoost, for to bynd Sidrach, Misach, & Abednago, and to cast them into the hote burnyng ouen. So these men were bound in their coates, hosen, shoes, with their other garmentes, and caste into an hote burnyng ouen. For the kinges cōmaundemēt was straight, and the ouen was exceadyng hote. And for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, the flambe of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre men, Sidrach, and Misach, & Abednago fell downe in the hote burnyng ouen, beyng fast bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng marueyled and stode vp in all hathe spoke vnto his counsaill, and sayde, Dyd not we caste three men bounde into the fyre? They answered and sayde vnto the kyng: Yee, O kyng. He answered and sayde: Lo, I se foure men vnbounde goynge loose in the myddest of the fyre, and nothyng corrupte, and the fourth semyth the sonne of God to be. Vpon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouthe of the hote burnyng ouen, & spake also and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, ye seruauntes of the hyghe God, go forth, and come hether. Then went Sidrach, Misach & Abednago, went out of the fyre. Thenne the dukes, leaders, and nobles, and the kynges counsaill, came together to see these men, * vpon whome the fyre had no maner of power in their bodies. In so muche that the heere of their head was not hurte, & their clothes vnchaunged: yea, there was no smel of fyre come vpon them. Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago * which hath sent his aungel, and defended his seruauntes, that put their truste in hym, that haue altered the kynges cõmaundemẽt and ieoparded their bodies there vpon rather then they would serue or worshyppe any other God except their owne God only. Therfore I will and commaunde, that all people, kyndredes, & tongues, which speake any blasphemy agaynst the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and their houses shalbe prayed: Because * there is no God that may saue as this. So the kyng promoted Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, in the lande of Babylon.

The. iij. Chapiter.

Nabuchodonosor * kyng vnto all people, kyndredes, and tongues that dwell vpon the whole yearth, peace be multiplied amõg you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens, and maruelous workes, that the hyghe God hath wrought vpõ me. O how great are his tokens, and howe myghty are his wonderes * His kyngdome is an euerlastyng kyngdom and his power lasteth for euer, and euer. I Nabuchodonosor, beyng at rest in mine house, and florishyng in my palace, sawe a dreame whiche made me astraye, and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, with the visions of myne head troubled me. Then sente I out a commission, that all they whyche were of wysedome at Babylon should be brought before me to tell me the interpretation of the dreame. Then came the coniectoures, the wyse Chaldees, and enchaunters of Babylon, to whom I tolde the dreame, but they knewe not the interpretation. At the laste there came one Daniel (otherwise called Baltazar, according to the name of my God) in whome he hath the spirite of the holy goddes

O Balthazar, chefe prince of coniectoures: for so muche as I knowe, that thou hast the spirite of the holy goddes, and no secrete is hyd from the: tell me therefore what the vision of my dreame that I haue sene may be, & what I sawe a vision in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stoode a tree vpon the grounde, whiche was very hygh, great and myghty. The heigth reached vnto heauẽ, and the breadth extended to all the endes of the yearth: his leaues were fayre, he had very muche fruite, so that euery man had enough to eate therin. The beastes of the field had shadowes vnder it, & the foules of the ayre dwelt in the boughes therof. Of it al creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a vision vpon my bed: and beholde, a watcher and an holy one came downe from heauen, and cryed myghtely, saiyng: Hewe down the tree, breake of his braunches, shake of his leaues, & scatre his fruite abrode: that all the beastes may get vnder away from vnder hym, and the foules from his braũches. Neuertheles, leaue the groũd of his roote still in the yearth, and bynde hym vpon the playne field, with cheynes of yron and tele. With the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes. That mans heere of his shalbe taken from hym, and a beastes harte shalbe geuen hym, tyll seuen yeares be come and gone ouer hym. This errande of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and sought out in the counsaill of hym, that is moste holy, to learne men for to vnderstande, that the hyghest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and geueth them, to whom he lyketh hym, and bryngeth the very outcastes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therefore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it tygnifieth: for so muche as all the wyse menne of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of the holy goddes is in the. Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) held his peace by the space of one houre and his thoughtes troubled hym. So the kyng spake and sayde: O Balthazar, let neither the dreame nor the interpretacõ therof feare the. Balthazar answered & saiyng: O my Lorde, this dreame happen to thyne enemies, and the interpretation to thyne aduersaries. The tree that thou sawest whiche was so great and myghty, whose heygth reached vnto the heauen, & his breadth into al the worlde, whose leaues were fayre, and the fruite much, vnder the which the beastes of the field had their habitacion, and vpon whose braunches the foules of the ayre dyd syte. Euen the same O kyng art thou, great and strong. Thy greatnesse is encreased, & reacheth vnto the heauen, & thy power to the endes of the worth. That whyle of the kyng sawe a watcher even an holy aungell, that came downe from heauen, and sayde: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it, yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the yearth, and bynde hym vpon the playne fielde with cheynes of yron and steele. He shalbe wet with the deawe of heauen, and his parte shalbe with the beastes of the fielde, vntil seaues be come and gone vpon hym. This is the interpretacion, o kyng, it is the very deuice of hym, that is hyghest of all, and it toucheth my lorde the kyng. Thou shalt be cast out from men, and thy dwellyng shalbe with the beastes of the field, with grasse shalt thou be fed like an oxe. Thou shalt be wet with the deawe of the heauen, yea, seuen seaues shall come, ere vpon the tyll thou knowe, that the hyghest hath power vpon the kyngdome of men, and geueth them to whome he will. Moreouer, where as it was sayde, that the rootes of the tree should be left still in the ground: it betokeneth, that thy kyngdom shal remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power cometh from heauen. Wherfore, O kyng, be content with my counsaill, that thou maiest redeme thy synnes with almesse, and thy wickednes with mercie to poore people: for this shalbe an healyng of thyne errours. All these thynges fortheth the kyng Nabuchodonosor. So after .xii. monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayde: This is the great cytie of Babylon, which I my selfe (with my power & strength) haue made a kynges courte, for the honoure of my maiestie. Whyle these wordes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fell a voice from heauen, saiyng: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdom shal departe fro the, thou shalt be cast out of mennes company, thy dwellyng shalbe with the beastes of the fielde, so that thou shalt eate grasse as an oxe, till seuen yeares be come ouer the euen vntill thou knowest, that the hyghest hath power vpon the kyngdome of men, and that he may geue them, vnto whō it pleaseth hym. The very same houre was there matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor, so that he was cast oute of mennes company, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. His body was wet with the deawe of heauen, til his heres were as greate as fetheres, & his nayles lyke byrdes clawes. When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyft vp mine eyen vnto heauen, and myne vnderstanding was restored vnto me ageane. Then gaue I thankes vnto the hyghest, I magnified & praised hym that liueth for euermore, whose power endureth alway, and his kyngdome from one generacion to another, in the person of whome all they that dwell vpon the yearth are to be counted nothyng: for he doeth what he pleaseth in the handes of the heauenly hoste, among the powers of heauen, and among the inhabitours of the yearth, and there is none that may withstande his hande, or saye vnto hym: Syr, what doest thou? At the same tyme was my vnderstandyng geuen me ageane, & I was restored to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my brightnes and to myne owne shape ageane. My greate estates and princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome ageane, so that I had yet greater worshippe. Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loue, magnifie and praise the kyng of heauen, for all his workes are true, and his wayes right. He can humble those that go on proudly, he is able to bryng them downe.

King Balthasar maketh a great banket. He writeth vnto all peoples, nacions and tonges that dwelle in the worlde, and telleth them what he hath seene. He maketh great cheare, and when he is dronken with wyne, he commaundeth to bryng him the golden and syluer vessels, which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Ierusalem: that he, the kyng, his lordes, with his queue and concubynes, myght drinke therout. So they brought the golden vessel, that was taken out of the temple of the lordes house at Ierusalem. Then the kyng and his lordes, with his queue and concubines, dranke out of the. They dranke wyne and praysed their Idols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wodde and stone. In the selfe same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hand writyng, ouer against the candelsticke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace, and the kyng sawe the palme of the hand that wrote. Then chaunged the kyng his countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of his body shoke, and his knees smote one beginnyng the other. Wherfore the kyng cried mightily, that they shuld bryng him the charmers, Chaldees, and coniurers of deuiles. The kyng spake also to the wysemen of Babylon and sayde: Who so can rede this writyng and shewe me the playne meanyng therof: shalbe clothed with purple hauyng a chein of golde about his necke, and rule the third part of my kyngdome. Vpon this, came all the kynges wisemen: but they could neither rede the writyng, nor shewe the kyng what it betokened. Then was the kyng sore afrayed, so that his colour chaunged, and his lordes were confounded. Many tydynges of this matter, that had happened to the kyng, & his lordes, the queue hard, so she came into the banket house, and spake vnto the kyng, saiyng: O kyng, God saue thy life for euer. Let not thy thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the spirite of the holy Goddes within hym.

...dam that thou hathe taken of thy father's house. He hath vnderstanded wisedome like the goddes. Yet thy harte is not humbled afore the Lorde of heaven, but thou hast exalted thy selfe against the Lorde of heaven, and hast broughte vessels of his house before the, and thou and thy lordes, thy wyues and thy concubines haue dronken wyne therout, and hast praised the Goddes of syluer and golde, copper and yron, of wood & stone, which neyther se, heare, nor vnderstande: and the God in whose hande thy breath is, and all thy wayes, thou hast not honoured. Then was the parte of the hande sent from hym, and this writyng is written. And this is the writyng that is written: MENE, MENE, TECHEL, PHARSIN. This is the interpretation of the thyng: MENE, God hath nombred thy kyngdome, and broughte it to an ende. THECHEL, thou arte weyed in the balaunce, and arte founde to lacke. PHARES, thy kyngdome is deuided, and geuen to the Medes and Persens.

Then commaunded Balthazar, & they clothed Daniel with purple, to hange a cheyne of golde about his necke, and to make a proclamacion concernyng hym: that he should be the ruler of the third parte of the kyngdome.

The very same nyght was Balthazar the kynge of the Chaldeins slayne, and Darius out of Medea toke in the kyngdome, being xxij. yeare of age.

The vi. Chapter.

It pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdome an. C. and xx. lordes, which should be in all his kyngdome about. Ouer these he set three prynces, of whome Daniel was one, that the lordes myght geue accomptes vnto them, and the kyng to be vndefiled. But Daniel excelled all these prynces and lordes, for the spirite of God was plenteously in him, so that the kyng was mynded to sette hym ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the prynces and lordes sought, to pycke out an occasion against Daniell, to come quarell against the kyngdome: yet could they fynde none occasion nor fawte vpon hym. For why, he was so faithfull, that there was no blame nor fawte founde in hym. Then sayde these men: we can get no quarell against this Daniel, except it be in the lawe of his God. Vpon this, went the prynces and lordes together vnto the kyng and sayde thus vnto hym: kyng Darius, God saue thy grace for euer. All the great estates of the realme, as the Princes, Dukes, Senatours, & Iudges, are determined to put out a commaundement of the kyng, and to make a sure statute: namely, that who so desireth any petition either of any God or man within these .xxx. dayes, except it be onely of the kyng: the same person may be cast into the lions denne. Wherfore O kyng, confirme thou this statute, and make a writyng, that the thyng which the Medes and Persens haue ordained, neuer alter nor breake. So Darius made the writyng and confirmed it. Now when Daniel knewe that the writyng was made, he went into his house, and his windowes of his parlour towarde Ierusalem were open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, three tymes a day, & made his petition, and praysed his God, like as his maner was to do afore-tyme. Then these men came togethe, & found

Daniel makyng his petycion, & prayeng vnto his God. Then they came to the kyng, and spake before him, concernyng the commaundement. Quod they, O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute: that within .xxx. dayes whoso requyreth his peticion of any God, or man, but onely of thy selfe O kyng, he shulde caste into the denne of the Lyons? The kyng answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Persies, that may not be broken. Then answered they, & sayde vnto the kyng: Daniel one of the prysoners of Juda O kyng, regardeth neyther the, nor thy statute that thou haste made: but maketh his peticion thre tymes a day. When the kyng harde these wordes, he was sore greved, and would have excused Daniel, to delyuer him, and put of the matter, vntyll the Sonne went downe to the intent that he myght save hym. Then men perceivyng the kynges mynde sayde vnto hym: knowe this (O kyng) that the lawe of the Medes and Persies is, that the commaundement and statute whiche the kyng maketh, may not be altered. Then the kyng bad them bryng Daniell, and they cast him into the Lyons denne. The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alway serueth, he shal delyuer the. And there was brought a stone, & layd vpō the hole of the denne, this the kyng sealed with his own ryng, and with the seignet of his princes: that the kynges commaundement concernyng Daniel should not be broken. So the kyng went vnto his palace, and eate no meate that nyght, neyther was there any instrumentes brought in before hym, neyther could he take any slepe. But betymes in the morowyng at the breake of the daye, the kyng arose, and went in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons. And as he came nie vnto the denne, he cried with a pyteous voyce vnto Daniel, yea, the kyng spake and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the lyuyng God, is not thy God (whome thou alwaye serueth) able to deliuer the from the lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kyng: O kyng, God sende thy lyfe to endure. My God hath sent his aungell whiche hath shut the Lyons mouthes, in that they myght not hurte me. For why? myne innocencye is knowen vnto him. And vnto the, O kyng, I never offended. Then was the kyng exceadyng ly glad, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vpon him, for he had put his trust in his God. And as for those menne whiche had accused Daniel, the kyng commaunded to bryng them and to caste them in the Lyons denne, they, their children and their wyues. And the Lyons had the vpper hande of them, and brake all their bones a sonder, or ever they came at the grounde. After this, wrote kyng Darius vnto all people, kyndreds, and tongues, that dwelle in all the lande, peace be multiplied vnto you. Of me is commaunded (in all my kyngdom and kyngdome) that men feare and dredde in awe of Daniels God. For he is the lyuyng God, whiche abideth ever: his kyngdome shal not fayle, and his power is euerlastyng. He is he that deliuereth and saueth: he doth wonders and meruelous workes in heaven and earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the Lyons. This Daniel prospered in the reigne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

The .vi. Chapter.

In the first yeare of Balthasar kyng of Babylon, (whe Daniel sawe one, & abidon was in his bed vpon his bedde. Which whē he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniell spake and sayde. I behelde my visiō by nyght, and behelde: the foure wyndes of the heaven broke vpon the sea, & foure great beastes came vp from the sea, vnlike another. The first was as a lyon, & yet had he eagles wynges. I sawe that his wynges were pluckte from hym, and he taken away from the ground: that he stode vp vpō his fete as a man, and that there was geuen him a mans herte. Beholde, the second beast was lyke a Beare, and stode vpon the one syde. Among his tieth in his mouthe he had three great long tieth, and it was sayde vnto hym: Aryse, eate vp mucke flesh. Then I loked, & beholde, there was an other like vnto a Leoparde, this had wynges as a foule, & euen foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, and there was power geuen hym. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, the fourth beaste was grymme & horrible, and maruelous strong. It had great yron tieth, it deuoured and destroyed, & stamped the rest vnder his fete. It was farre vnlike the other beastes that were before it: for it had ten hornes, wherof I toke good hede. And beholde, there came vp among them another litle horne, before whom there were thre of the first hornes plucte away. Beholde this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakyng presumptuous thynges. I loked till the seates were prepared, and the old aged set him downe. His clothyng was as white as snowe, and the heere of his heade like the pure wolle. His throne was like the fyre flambe, and his wheles as the burnyng fyre. There issued forth a fyery streame, & went out from him. A thousandtymes a thousand serued him, & ten thousand tymes ten thousand stode before him. The iudgemēt was set, & the bokes opened. Then tooke I hede vnto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes which the horne spake. I beheld till the

Dan.vii.c, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes Mat.i.d. of heauen lyke the sonne of a manne, whiche Apoc.i.a. wente vnto the olde aged, before whom they Apoc.xi.a. brought him. Then gaue he hym * power and

Mat. xxviii. c tongues should serue hym. * His power is an Ioan.xii.d. euerlastyng power, whiche shall neuer be put downe: and his kyngdome endureth vncor-Dan.xiiii.c. rupte. My harte was vexed, * and I Daniel had a troubled spirite within me, and the visions of my head made me afrayed, till I gat Deut.ix.d. me vnto * one of them that stode by, to knowe the truthe, concernyng all these thynges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretacion of these thynges. These foure great beastes, are foure kynges which shal E. aryse out of the earth. These shal take in the kyngdome of the saintes of the moste hyghest, and possesse it tyll, more, and more for a long season. After this I required diligētly to knowe the truthe, cōcernyng the fourth beaste, which was so farre vnlike the other beastes, and so horrible, whose teeth were of Apoc.xiii.a. yron, and his nayles of brasse: which deuou-red and destroyed and stamped the residue vnder his feete: I desyred also to know the tru-the, as touching the * ten hornes that he had Dan.vii.c. vpon his head, and this other which came vp afterward, before whose face there fell downe three, which horne had eyes and a mouthe that spake presumptuous thynges, & loked with a grymmer vysage then his felow-F. es. I beheld, and the same horne made battell against the saintes, yea, and gat the victory of them vntill the tyme that the oldeaged came, that the iudgement was geuen to the chefeste saintes: and till the tyme that the saintes had the kyngdome in possession.
He gaue me this answere. That fourth beast shalbe the fourthe kyngdome vpon yearth: it shalbe more then al other kyngdomes, it shal deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes. * The ten hornes, are ten kynges, G. that shall aryse out of the kyngdome, after Dan.ii.b. whome there shal stande vp an other, whiche shalbe greater then the first. He shall subdue three kynges, and shal speake wordes against the hyghest of al: he shal destroye the sayn-Dan.ii.c. tes of the moste hyghest, * and thynke that Apoc.xii.d. he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They shal be geuen vnder his power, * vntill a time, two tymes and halfe a tyme. But the iudgement shalbe kepte, so that his power shalbe taken from hym, for he shalbe destroyed, and perish at the last. As for the kyngdome, power, and all myght that is vnder the heauen: it shalbe Luke.i.c. geuen to the holy people of the moste hyghest Apoc.xiiii.d. * whose kyngdome is euerlastyng: yea al powers shall serue and obeye him. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuertheles, I Daniel was so vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaunce chaunged * but the wordes I Luke.ii.c. kept styll in my hart.

The.viij. Chapiter.

In the thirde yere of the reigne of kyng Balthazar, there appeared a vision vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the * first I Dan.vii.a. sawe in a vision (and when I sawe it, I was at Suse in the chefe citie, whiche lieth in the land of * Elam) & in the visiō, me thought Jere.xli.g.k. I was by the ryuer of Vlai. Then I loked Eze. xxxii.b. vp, and sawe: and beholde there stode before the ryuer, a rambe, whiche had two hornes: and these two hornes wer hygh, but one was hygher then another, and the hyghest came vp behynde. I sawe that this rambe pushed with his hornes, against the Weste, against the North, and against the Southe: so that no beastes might stande before hym, nor defende them frō his power: but he did as hym lysted, and waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this: then came there an he goate from the west ouer the whole yearth, and touched not B. the grounde. This goate had a marueloꝰ wythen horne betwixte his yyes, and came vnto the rāme that had the two hornes (whō I had sene afore by the ryuer side) and ranne fearcely vpon hym with his myght. I sawe him drawe nyghe vnto the rambe, beyng very fearce vpon hym: yea, he gaue hym suche a stroke, that he brake his two hornes. Nether had the rambe so muche strengthe as to stande before hym, but he caste hym downe, trode him vnder his feete, and no man was able to deliuer the rambe out of his power.
The goate waxed exceedyng great, and when he was at the strōgest, his great horne was broken also. * Then grew there other foure Dan.viii.a. stube like in the steade, towarde the foure and.xi.a.
i. Mach.i.a. wyndes of the heauen. Yea, out of one of the least of these hornes, there came yet vp another, whiche waxed marueloꝰ great toward the south, toward the east, & toward the faire pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoast of heauen, wherof it did cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trode them vnder feete. Yea, it grewe vp vnto the C. prince of the hoast from whom the daily offrynge was taken, and the place of the sanctuary caste downe. And a certayn season was geuen vnto it, against the daily offrynge (because of wickednes) that it myght cast downe the veritie to the ground, and so to prosper in al thynges, that it went about. Vpon this I harde one of the saintes speaking, which saint sayd vnto one that asked this question: Howe long shall this vision of the daily sacrifice and of the wastyng abhominacion endure: that the sanctuary & the power shall so be troden vnder foote? And he answered hym:

vnto the euenyng & the mornyng, euen two M. and thre C. dayes then shall the sanctuary be clensed agayne. Now when I Daniell had sene this vision and sought for the vnderstandyng of it, beholde there stode before me a thyng like vnto a man. And I harde a mans voice in the riuer of Vlai which cried and sayde: O Gabriel, make this manne vnderstande the vision. So he came and stode by me. But I was afrayed at his comyng, and fell downe vpon my face. Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of man marke well, for in the laste tyme shall this vision be fulfilled. Now as he was speakyng vnto me, I waxed sayntt, so that I sanke downe to the ground. But he toke holde vpon me, and set me vp agayn, sayeng: Behold, I will shewe the, what shall happen in the last wrath, for in the tyme appoynted it shalbe fulfilled. The ramme which thou sawest with the two hornes is the kyng of the Medes and Persis. But the goote is the kyng of Grecklande: the greate horn that stode betwixt his eyes, that is the principal kyng. But when as it brake & four other rose vp in the steade, it signifieth, that out of this people shall stande vp four kyngdomes, but not so myghty as it. After these kyngdomes (while vngodlines is a growyng) there shall aryse a kynge of an vnshamefast face, which shalbe wyse in darcke speakynges. He shalbe myghty and strong, but not in his own strength. He shal destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth about shall prospere, he shall slae the stronge and holy people. And thorowe his craftines, falshed shall prospere in his handes, his harte shalbe proude, and many one shall he putte to death in his welthinesse. He shal stande vp against the prince of princes, but he shal be destroyed without handes. And this vision that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenyng and the mornyng. Therfore write thou vp this sight, for it will be longe or it come to passe. Vpon this was I Daniell very sayntt, so that I laye sycke certeyne dayes, but when I rose vp I went about the kynges businesse, and marueiled at the vision, ne vnderstode it not.

The .ix. Chapiter.

In the first yere of Darius the sonne of Assuerus, which was of the sede of the Medes, & was made kyng ouer the realme of the Caldees: yea, euē in the first yere of his reigne, I Daniel desired to know the secrete nōbre out of the bokes, whereof the lord spake vnto Jeremy the Prophete: that Jerusalem shuld lie waste lxx. yeres: and I turned me vnto God the Lorde for to praye & make myne intercession, with fastyng, sackecloth & asshes, I prayed before the Lorde my God, and knowledged, saying. O Lorde, thou greate and feareful God, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy with them, which loue the, and do thy commaundementes. We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene disobedient and gone backe: yea, we haue departed from all thy precepte and iudgementes. We would neuer folowe thy seruauntes the prophetes, that spake in thy name to our kinges and princes, to our forefathers and to al the people of the lande. O Lorde, righteousnes belongeth vnto the, vnto vs pertaineth nothyng but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man of Juda, and to them that dwel at Jerusalem. Yea, vnto all Israell, whether they be farre or nye, thorowe out all the landes: wherin thou hast strowed them, because of the offences, that they had done agaynst the. Yea, O lord, vnto vs, to our kynges, and princes, to our forefathers, euen to vs all, that haue offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lord our God, pertayneth mercy and forgeuenesse. For vs, we are gone backe frō the, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our God, to walke in his lawes, which he layd before vs by his seruantes the prophetes: yea, all Israell haue transgressed and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not hearkened vnto thy voyce. Wherfore the curse and ath that is written in the lawe of Moses the seruaunt of God (agaynst whō we haue offended) is powred vpon vs. And he hath performed his woordes, which he spake against vs, & against our iudges that iudged vs: to bryng vpon vs suche a greate plague as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea, all this plague, as it is written in the lawe of Moses, is come vpō vs. Yet made we not our prayer before the lord our God, that we myght turne againe from our wickednes, and to be learned in thy veritie. Therfore hath the lorde made haste, to bryng this plague vpon vs, for the lorde our God is righteous, in all his woorkes which he doth: for why? we would not herken vnto his voyce. And nowe, O Lord our God, that with a mighty hande hast brought thy people out of Egipt to get the self a name which remaineth this daye, we haue synned O Lord, and done wickedly against al thy righteousnes: yet let thi wrathfull displeasure be turned away (I beseche the) from thy citie of Jerusalem thy holy hyll. And why? for our synnes sake, & for the wickednes of our forefathers, is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred of all them that are about vs: nowe therfore, O our God, heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, and his intercession: O let thy face shyne ouer thy sanctuary, that lyeth waste: for the lordes sake. O my god, enclyne thine eare, and herken: cast the eyes for thyne owne sake) open thyne eyes & beholde howe we be desolated, yea, and the citie stande the vision. lxx. weekes are determined ouer the people and ouer the holy citie: that the wickednes may be consumed, that the sinne

Christ be slayne, and they shal haue no plea with the prince, and destroy the citie and the sanctuary, and his ende shall come as the wa ter floude. But the desolacion shall contynue stronge bonde with many for the space of a weke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meat offeryng.

Mat.xxiiii.b Mar.xiii.a. And in the temple there shalbe an abhominable desolacion, tyll it haue destroyed all.
And it is concluded, that this wastyng shall contynue to the ende.

¶ The.x. Chap.

Exitus A. IN the thirde yeare of Kynge Cyrus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniell (otherwyse called Balthazar) a matter, yea, a true matter, but it is yet a long tyme vnto it.
He vnderstode the matter well and perceiued what the vision was: for the same time I Da niell mourned for the space of thre weekes, so that I had no lust to eate breade, as for flesshe and wyne there came none within my mouth: also I dyd not once anoynte my self, tyll the whole thre weekes were out. Vpon the.xxiii. day of the first moneth, I was by the great floud, called Tigris I lift vp mi- Dan.viii.b Apoca.i.c. ne eyes, & loked, and beholde, a man clothed in lynnen, whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Arabie: his body was lyke the Chrysolite stone, his face (to loke vpon) was like lightening, his eyes as the flambe of fire, his armes and fete were like faire glistryng metal, but the voice of his wordes were like the voice of a multitude. And I Daniel alone saw this vision, for the men that were with me, saw it not: but a great fearfulnes fell vpon them, Dan.viii.e. & x.a. so that they fled away and hyd themselues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this great vision, so long till there remayned no more strength within me. Yea, I lost my coloure cleane, I waxed wan, & my strengthe was gone. Yet harde I the voice of his wor-des, & as sone as I harde it, sayntnesse came vpon me, and I fel downe flat to the ground vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me vp vpon my knies and vpō the palmes of my handes, saiyng vnto me: O Dan.ix.b.
Daniel, thou welbeloued man, take good he-de of the wordes that I shall saye vnto the, and stande vpright vp, for vnto the am I nowe sente. And when he had said these wordes, I stode vp trembling. Then sayde he vnto me: feare not Daniel, for why? sence the first day that thou dydest set thyne hart to vnderstand, and dydest chasten thy selfe before thy god, thy wordes haue bene heard. And I had come vnto the, when thou beganneste to speake, but not the prince ouer the kyngdome of the Per-ses withstande me. xxi. dayes. But lo, Mi- Josu.v.b. chael one of the chefe princes, came to helpe Dan.xii.a. me, & I was left to cōtinue there with the kin ges of Persen, & am come to shewe the what shal happen vnto thy people in the latter da-yes. For it wilbe long yet or the visiō be ful filled. Now when he had spoken these wor- D. des vnto me, I caste downe my heade to the grounde and helde my tongue. Beholde, there touched my lippes one very like vnto a man.
Then opened I my mouthe, and sayde vnto hym that stode before me, O my lord, my ioy-tes are loosed in the vision & there is nomore strength within me. How may my lordes ser-uaunt then talke with my lorde seyng ther is no strength in me, so that I can not take my breath? Vpon this there touched me agayne, one muche like a man, and comforted me, Dan.ix.b. saying: O thou man so well beloued, feare not, be content, take a good hart vnto the, and be strong. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recouered & said: speake on my lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayd he: knowest thou wherefore I am come vnto the? now will I go to fight again with the kyng and the prince of the Persen. As sone as I am forth, lo, the prince of Grekeland shall come. Howbeit lesse I wil shew the that thyng, that is already noted in the scripture of truthe. And as for ponder matters, then is none that helped me in them, but Michael your prince.

The.xi. Chapiter.

The.xi.dayes. Watchinge. A-Also in the first yere of Darius of Me-dia I stode vp hym, to comforte hym, and to strength hym, and nowe will I shewe the the truthe. Beholde, there shall stande vp yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shall be farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the chefest power of his ryches, he shall prouoke euery man agaynste the Realme of Grekeland. * Then shal there aryse yet a mighty kyng, that shall rule with great dominion, and do what hym lyst. * And as sone as hys kyngdome cometh vp, it shalbe destroyed, and deuided toward the foure wyndes of heauen. They that come after hym, shal not haue such power and dominion as he: but his kyngdom shalbe scattered, yea, euen among other then those. And the kyng of the south shalbe mighty, then his other princes. And one shalbe stronger then he, and shal rule his dominion with great power. And in the ende of yeares they shalbe ioyned togyether, and the kinges doughter of the south shall come to the kyng of the North, for to make frendshyp, but she shall not obteyne the power of that arme, neither shall we be able to endure thorowe his myght: but she, and such as brought her (yea and he that beget her, and comforted her for his tyme) shalbe delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her roote, there shall one stande vp in his stede whiche with power of armes shall go thorowe the kynges land of the north, & handle him according to his owne myght. As for their Idols and princes, with their costly Jewels of golde and syluer, he shall cary them away captiues into Egipt, and he shall reigne more yeres then the kyng of the north. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the south, he shalbe cayne to turne agayne into his owne lande. Wherefore his sonnes shalbe displeased, and shall gather to gyether a mighty great hoast of people, and one of them shall come, and go thorowe lyke a water floude, then shall he turne, and goo furth with defying & boasting vnto his own lande. Then the kyng of the south shalbe angry and shall come furth to fight against the kyng of the north: yea, he shall bring a great multitude of people togyether, and a greate heape shalbe geuen into his hande, there shal he cary away myth great pryde, for to much as he hath gotte downe so many thousandes, neuertheleese, he shall not preuayle. For the kyng of the north shall gather (of the newe) a greater heape of people then afore, & come furth after a certayn tyme and yeres, with a mighty hoast, and exceeding great goodes. In the same time there shal many stand vp against the kyng of the south, so that the wicked children of the people also shall exalte them selues, to fulfyll the vision, and then shall the kyng of the north shall come to lay toge, and to take the strong fenced cities: And the power of them of the south shall not be able to abyde hym, and the beste men of the people shal not be so strog, as to resist hym. Shortly when he commeth, he shall handle hym as he lyst, and no man shalbe so hardy as to stand agaynst hym. He shall stande in the pleasaunt countrey, whiche thorowe hym shalbe destroyed: He shal set his face with al his power to obteyne his kyngdome, and so he lyke it. Yea, that shall he do, and geue him vnto the doughters amog women, to destroy him. But he shal fayle, neither shal he optayn his purpose. After this shall he set his face vnto the Iles and take many of them. A prince shall stoppe hym, to do hym a shame, besides the confusion that els shall come vnto hym. Thus shal he turne agayn to his owne lande, stomble and fall, and be nomore founde: so he that came vpon hym and dyd hym violence, shall stande in his place, and haue a pleasaunt kyngdome: and after fewe dayes he shalbe destroyed, and that neither in wrath, nor in battell. In his stede there shall arise a vyle person not holden worthy of a kinges dignitie: this shal come in peceably, and optayne the kyngdome with fayre wourdes, he shall fyght agaynst the armes of the myghtie (and destroy them) yea, and against the prince of the couenaunt. So after that he hath taken truce with hym he shal handle deceitefully, that he may get vp and ouercome hym with a small flocke, and so with craftinesse to get hym to the fattest place of the lande, and to deale otherwyse, then either his fathers or graund fathers dyd. For he shall destroye the thyng that they had robbed and spoyled, yea, and al their substaunce, ymagenyng thoughtes against the strog holdes, and that for a time. His power and hart shalbe styred vp with a great army agaynst the kyng of the south, where thorowe the kyng of the south shalbe moued then vnto battell, with a great & mighty hoast also. Neuertheles he shall not be able to stande, for they shal conspire against hym. Yea, they that eate of hys meate shall hurt hym: so that his hoast shal fall, and many be slayne downe. Then two kinges shall be myded to do mischefe, and talke of deceyte at one table, but they shal not prosspere, for why? the ende shall not come yet, vnto the tyme appoynted, & then shall he go home again into his owne lande with great good, and set his harte against the holy couenaunt he shal doyng against it, & then returne home. At the time appoynted he shall come again, & go toward the south. But shall it happen otherwise then at the first, yet once again. And why? * the shippes with Italians shal come vpon hym, that he may be smytten and turne

K. shall set myghty men to beholde the Sanctuary of strength, to put down the dayly offeryng, and to set vp the abhominable desolacion. And suche as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter with fayre wordes. But the people that will knowe their God, shall haue the ouerhande and prosper. Those also that haue vnderstandyng among the people shal enstourme the multitude, and for a long season, they shalbe persecuted with swearde, with fyre, with captiuitie and with the takyng away of their goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shal be set vp with a litle helpe: but many shall cleaue vnto them faynedly. Yea some of those whiche haue vnderstandyng, shalbe persecuted also, that they may be tried purified and clensed, tyll the tyme be out: for there is yet another time appointed. The king shal

B. And thou O Daniel, shut vp these wordes, and seale the booke till the last tyme. Many shall go about here and there, and then shall knowlege encrease. So I Daniel loked, and beholde, there stode as it were other two, one vpon this side the water, the other vpon yonder syde. And one of them sayde vnto hym, whiche was clothed in linnen, & stode aboue vpō the waters of the floude: How lōg shall it be to the ende of these wōderous workes?* Then hearde I the man with the lin-

The booke of the Prophete Oseas.

The. i. Chapiter.

The. ix. day. M. Mattins. iiii. Reg. xv. xvi. xviii. c.

THis is the worde of the Lorde that came vnto Oseas the soune of Beery* in the dayes of Oseas Joathan, Achas, and Jezekias kynges of Juda, & in the tyme of Jeroboam, the sonne of Joas, vnto Oseas, he said vnto him: Go thy way, take an harlotte to thy wyfe, and gette children by her, for the land hath committed great whordome against the Lorde. So he went and tooke Gomer the doughter of Diblaim, whiche conceiued and brought euen a sonne. And the Lorde said vnto him: Call his name Jezrael, for* I will shortly auenge the bloud of Jezrael vpon the house of Jehu, and will bringe the kyngdome of the house of Israell to an ende. Then will I breake the bowe of Israell in the valley of Jezrael. Theronceiued yet againe, and bare a doughter. And he said vnto hym: Call her name Lorhamah, that is, not obteining mercy* for I will haue no pitie vpon the house of Israell, but forget them, and put them cleane out of rembraunce. Neuertheles, I will haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and will saue them euen thorowe the Lorde their God. But I will not deliuer them thorowe any bowe, sweard, battayle, horses, or horsemen. Nowe when she had weaned Lorhamah, she conceiued againe, and bare a sonne. Then said he: call his name Loami. For why? ye are not my people therfore will I not be your God. And though the nombre of the children of Israell be as the sande of the See, whiche can neither be measured nor tolde: yet in the place where it is said vnto them, * ye be not my people: euen there shall it be thus reported of them, * they be the children of the liuyng GOD.

Then shal the children of Juda, & the children of Israell, be gathered togeither again and chose themselues one head, and then departe out of the land: for great shalbe the day of Jezrael.

The. ij. Chapitre.

Tell your brethren, that they are my people: and your sisters, that they haue ob-teined mercy. As for your mother ye shal de with her, and reproue her, * for she is not my wife, neither am I her husband: onles she put away her whordome out of my syght, and her aduultrie from her brestes. Ie no, I shal strip her naked, and set her* euē as she came into the worlde: yea, I shall lay her waste, & make her like a wildernesse, and slay her for thyrste. I shall haue no pitie also vpon her children: * for they be the children of fornicacion. Their mother hath broke her wedlock and she that bare them* is come to confusion.
For she sayd: I will go after my louers that gene me my meate and my bread, my wol and flaxe, myne oyle and my drynke. Wherfore I will hedge her way with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her fote steppes, and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not gette them: she shal seke them, but not fynde them. * Then shall she saye: will I will go turne againe to my first husbande: for at this would she not knowe where as I yet ga-ue her corne, wyne, oyle, cyluer, and golde, * whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal. Wherfore now will I take my corne and wyne a-gayne in their season, and set again my wolle and my flaxe whiche I gaue her to couer her shame. * And now will I discouer her colydnes euen in the sight of her louers, & no man shal deliuer her out of myne handes. Moreo-uer, I will take away all her mirth* her holy daies, her newe mooned, her Sabbothes, and all her solempne feastes. I will destroye her vynegardes and figtrees, though she saith: lo, here are my rewardes that my louers haue geuen me. I wil make it a wood, & wilde beastes shall eate it vp. I will punyshe her also for the daies of Baal* wherin she resteth him decking him with her earynges and chaines when she followed her louers, and forgat me saith the Lorde. Wherfore beholde, I will alper againe, bryng her into a wildernesse and speake frendly vnto her: there will I geue her her vynegardes againe yea, and the valley * of Achor also, to shewe her hope and comfort. Then shall she syng there* as in the tyme of her youth, and like as in the day when she came out of the lande of Egipte. Then (saith the Lorde, she shall saye vnto me) O my husbande, and shall call me no more Baal: for I will take away the names of Baal from her mouth: yea, she shal neuer remembre their names any more. * Then will I make a cou-enaunt with the, with the wylde beastes with the fowles of the ayre, and with euery thyng that creepeth vpon the earth. * As for bowe swerde and battayle, I will destroye suche out of the lande, and will make them to slepe safely. * Thus will I marye the vnto mine own selfe for euermore: yea, euen to my selfe will I marye the in rygh teousnesse, in equitie in louyng kindnesse and mercie. In faith also will I marye the vnto my selfe, & thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme will I shewe my selfe frendly and gracious vnto the heauen, saieth the Lorde: and the heauen shall helpe the earth, and the earth shal helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, and they shall helpe Jezrael.
* I will sowe them vpon earth, for a sede to myne owne selfe: * and will haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy. And to the whiche were not my people, I will saye: thou art my people, & he shal saye: thou arte my God.

The. iij. Chapitre.

Then sayd the Lorde to me: * Go yet thy way & wowe an aduoutrous woman, whom thy neyghbour loueth, as the Lorde doeth the children of Israell: howbeit, they haue respect to straunge goddes, * and loue the wyne

4 Thus the children of Israell shall sitte a great tyme without kyng and prince, without offrynge and aultar, without priest and instruction. But afterwarde shal the children of Israell conuert, and seke the Lorde their God, and * Dauid their kyng: and in the latter dayes they shall worshyp the Lorde, and his louynge goodnesse.

The iii. Chapitter.

1 Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye children of Israell. For the Lorde must punysh them that dwell in the lande. And why? there is no trouthe, there is no mercy, there is no knowledge of God in the lande, but cursyng, lyeng, manslaughter, theefte and aduoutry haue gotten the vpper hãd, one bloud gilteth Salomeths another. Therfore shall the lande be in a miserable case, and all they that dwel therin shalbe eaten out. The beastes in the fielde, the foules in the ayre, and the fishes in the sea, shall dye: Yet is there none that will chasten nor reproue another. 4 For * thy people rebuketh thy priestes, whiche should reproue me other men. Therfore stombleth thou in the day time, & the prophet with the in the nyght. I wil bring thy mother to silence, and why? * my people perysshe, because they haue no knowledge. Seeyng then that thou hast refused vnderstandyng, therfore will I refuse the also, so that thou shalt nomore be my priest. And for asmuch as thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I will also forget thy children. The more they encreased in the multitude, the more they synned against me, therfore will I chaunge their honoure in to shame. * They eate vp the synnes of my people and coueyte them in their wickednes. * Thus the priest is become like the people. Wherfore I will punysshe them for their wicked waies, and rewarde them accordyng to their owne ymaginacions. * They shal eate, and not haue enough. They haue lefte whoredom, therfore shall they not prospere, and why? they haue forsaken the lord, & not regarded hym. Whoredome, wyne, & drunkennesse taketh the hart away. * My people aske counsayle at their stockes, their staffe must tell them. For a whoorish minde hath deceiued them so that they commit fornication against their God. * They make sacrifices vpon the hie mountaynes, and burne their incense vpon the hilles: yea, among the okes, grones, and buchnes, for there are good shadowes. Therfore your doughters are become harlottes, & your spouses haue broke their wedlocke. I will not punysh your doughters for beyng decieued, & your bryders that became whores. * Seyng the fathers the selues haue medled with harlotes, & offred with vnchaste must be punished. Though thou Israell acte disposed to play the harlot, yet let not Iuda thou haue offended. O Iuda thou shouldest not haue runne vnto Gilgal * nor haue gone vp to Bethauen: nor haue sworne, the Lorde liueth. For Israell is gone backe like a wanton cowe. The Lorde therfore shall make her fede as the labe that goeth astray. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idoles, let him go, their drunkennesse hath put them backe, and brought them to whoredome. Their rulers loue rewardes, bring (say they) to them owne shame. & wynde shal take holde of their feteres, and they shalbe confounded in their offringes.

The. v. Chapiter.

1 Ye priestes, heare this, take hede, O thou houshold of Israell: geue eare, O thou kynglye house, for it were your part to se iudgement done: but you are become a snare vnto Maspha, and a spred nette vnto the mount of Thabor. They kill sacrifices by heapes, and turne farre from the Lorde, and I haue bene a rebuke of them all. * I know Ephraim well enough, and Israell is not hydde fro me, for Ephraim is nowe become an harlot, and Israel is defiled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an whorish hart, so that they can not know the Lorde. * But the pride of Israell wil be rewarded hym in his face: yea bothe Israel and Ephraim shall fal for their wickednesse, and Iuda with them also. * They shall come with their shepe and bullockes * to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde hym, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refused hym, and brought vp bastarde children: wherfore shall deuoure them with their portions. Blowe with the trompe in Gabaa, and with the trompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethauen vpon the poudre of Ben Iamin. In the tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layde waste, therfore dyd I faythfully warne the tribes of Israell. Yet are the princes of Iuda become like the * that remoue the lande markes: Therfore will I powre out my wrath vpon them like water. Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no right of the lawe: for why, they followed the doctrynes of vngodly me. Therfore wil I be vnto Ephraim as a mothe, & to the house of Iuda as a caterpillier. When Ephraim sawe his sickenes & Iuda his sore, * Ephraim went vnto Assur, and sente vnto kyng Iareb, yet could not he helpe you, nor ease you of your sore. For I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a yoge whelpe to the house of Iuda. Euen I, will spoyle them, and go my way. I will take them with me, and no man shall rescue them. I will go, and returne to my place, till they knowledge their trespace.

The vi. Chapiter.

In their aduersitie, they will early seke me, and they come, let vs turne agayne to the Lorde * for he hath smitten vs, & he shal heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynde vs vp again, after two daies shall he quicken vs, in the third daie he shal rayse vs vp, so that we shal liue in his syght. Thē shal we haue vnderstandyng, and endeuer our selues to knowe the Lorde. He shall go forth as the spryng of the daie, and come vnto vs * as the enduryng & mornyng rayne vpō the earth.
O Ephraim, what shal I do vnto the? O Iuda, what shall I entreate the? for your loue is like a mornyng cloude, & like a dewe that goeth early away. Therfore haue I cut downe the prophetes, and let them be slayne for my wordes sake: so that thy punyshmente shall come to syght. * For I haue pleasure in louyng kyndnes * and not in offeryng: yea in the knowlenge of God more then in burnt sacrifice: But euen like as * Adam did, so haue they broken my couenaunt and sette me at nought there. Gilead is a citie of wicked doers, of malicious people, and blood shedders. And as the-ues armed, wayte for men that passeth by the waie: euche is the countaill of the priestes, whiche with one agreed countaill murther cruelly euche as kepe the way: yea, they dare do all vnspeakable mischefe. * Horrible thin-ges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is defiled: yea, and thou Iuda kepest an harlotte for thy selfe, when I returne the captiuitie of my people.

The vii. Chapiter.

When I vnderstande to make Israel hole then the vngratefulnes of Ephraim, and the wickednesse of Samaria commeth to syght: then go they about with lies, therefore the theefe robbeth within, and without the spoyler destroyeth. They consydre not in their hartes, that I remembre all their wickednesse. Now their owne inuencions haue be set them, whiche I se well enough.
They make the kynge and the princes, to haue pleasure in there wickednes and lyes.
All theefe burne in aduiterie, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth when he hathe left kneding, til the dowe be leauened. Euen so goeth it this daye with our kynges and princes, for they begyn to be wood dronken therowe wyne, they vse familiaritie with furye as pecerue them. They with the ymagination of their harte are like an ouen, their anger is all the night like the fyre of a baker in the mornyng it is all one as the flambe of fyre: they are all together as hote as an ouē They haue deuoured their iudges, all their kynges are fallen, yet is there none of them that calleth vpon me. Therefore must it become like a cake that no man turneth, straungers haue deuoured his strength: yet he regardeth it not. He waxeth full of graye heres, yet will he not know it. * And the pryde of Israel is cast downe before their face, yet will they not turne to the Lord their God, nor seke him for all this. Ephraim is like a doue that is beguiled, and hath no hart. * Now cal they vpon the Egiptians, nowe go they to the Assirians: but whyle they be goyng here and there, I will throwe my net ouer the and driue them downe as the foules of the ayre, and according as they haue bene wor-ned, so will I punyshe them. Wo be vnto the for they haue forsaken me. They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at nought. * am he that redemed them, and yet they di-ble with me. * They call not vpon me with their hartes, but lye houlyng vpon their bed des. Where as they come together, it is but for meate and drincke, and me they will not obeye. I haue taught them, and defended their arme, yet do they ymagine mischefe against me. They turne them selues, but not to the moste hyghe, and are become as a broken bowe. Their princes shalbe slayne with the swerde, for the malice of their tongues, such scornes shal they haue in the land of Egipt.

The viii. Chapiter.

Set the horne to thy mouthe, and throwe swiftly (as an Egle) that the enemy come against the house of the Lorde: for they haue broken my * couenaunt, and trangressed my lawe. Israel would haue sayde vnto me: thou art my God, we knowe the, but he hath refused the thyng that is good, therfore shal the enemy folowe vpon him. * They haue ordeyned kynges, but not therowe me: they haue made princes, and I must not knowe of it.
* Of their syluer and golde, haue they made them ymages, to bringe them selues to destruccion. * Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken awaye, for my wrathfull indignacion is gone furth against the. How longe wil it be, or thei can be cleansed? for the calfe came from Israell, the workeman made it, therfore can it be no God, but euen in peces shall the calfe of Samaria be broken. They haue sowed wynde, therfore shal they reape a Cyme their sede shall heare no corne, there shal no meale be made of their encrease: though they reape, yet shal straungers deuour it vp. Israel shall perysshe, the Gentiles shall entreate him as a foule vessell. Sins they are gone vp to the Assyrians, they are become like a wilde Asse in the desert. * Ephraim geueth rewardes to get louers. * though they hire them among the heathen, yet now will I gather them vp. They shall begyn to be wery with the burthen of kynges and princes. Ephraim hath made REioyse not thou o Israel, make no mockyng ouer to prowde thynges as do the Heathen: for thou hast committed aduultery against thy GOD: whom thi rewardes hast thou loued more then all the cornes floores.

* Therfore shal thei nomore enioy the corne floores, and wyne pressis, and their sweete wyne shal faile them. Thei will not dwell in the Lordes lande: but Ephraim shall eate againe into Egypt, and eate vncleane thinges among the Assirians. Thei powre out no wyne for a drynkofferyng vnto the Lorde, neither gene they hym their slaine offeryngs: but thei be vnto the as mourners meates, wherin al thei that eate them are defiled.
For the breade that thei haue eathe shal vnto their soule come into the house of the Lorde.
What shal ye do then in the solempne dayes, and in the feast of the Lorde? Lo thei shal get them away for the destruction. Egipte shall receiue them, and Noph shal bury them. The nettles shal ouergrowe their pleasaunt goodes, and bushes shalbe in their tabernacles.
We ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitation is come, the dayes of recompensyng are at hande. And then shal Israel knowe, that thei were deceiued by a Prophet foleth, mad, and in a traunce, for the multitude of their iniquitie. God shal multiplie enemies against the.
Ephraim hath made hymselfe a watcheman of my God, a Prophete: but is become a snare to do hurt in euery strete, and abhominacion in the house of his god. Thei be gone to far and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as thei did afore tyme * at Gaboa: * therfore their wickednesse shalbe remembred, and their sinnes punished. I found Israel like grapes in the wildernes, and sawe their fathers as the firste * figges in the toppe of the figge tree.
But thei are gone to Baal Peor, and runne away fro me to that shameful idol, and are become as abhominable as their louers. Ephraim is eyth lyke a byrde, so shal their glorie also: Ye so muche that thei shal neither beget, conceiue nor beare children. And though thei bryng vp any, yet will I make them childles among men. Yea, wo shall come to them, when I departe from them. * Ephraim (as me thinketh) is planted in welthinesse, lyke children forth to the murtherer. O Lord thou shalt geue them: what shalt thou geue them?

Geue them an vnfruteful wombe and drie breastes. All their wickednesse is seene at * Gilgal, there do I abhorre them. For the dignitie or counsaile of their own reuenuous, I will driue them out of my house. I will loue them nomore, for al their princes are vncalthfull.
Ephraim is hewed down, their rootes is dried vp, so that thei shal bringe nomore fruite: yea and though thei bringe forth any, yet wil I slay euen the best beloued fruite of their bowe.
My God shall cast them away, for thei haue not bene obedient vnto hym: therfore shall thei go alwaye amonge the Heathen.

¶ The. xi. Chapitre.

ISrael was a goodly * vyne, but he hath brought forthe vnprofitable fruite: yea, the more fruite he had, the more aultares he made. The more good I did to their lande, the more frendship he wed thei to their ymages.
Their harte is deuided, therfore wil thei be destroyed. The Lord shal breake down their ymages, he shal destroie their aultares. Then shal thei saie: we haue no kyng, for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shall then the kyng do to vs? Thei commune together, and sweare false othes: Thei be confederate together, therfore groweth their punishement as the wedes in the furowes of the lande. Thei that dwell in Samaria haue worshipped the calfe of Bethauen: therfore shal the people mourne ouer them. Yea, & the priestes also that in their welthinesse reioyced with them: and why? it shall passe away from them. It shalbe brought to the Assirian, for a present vnto kyng Jareb. Ephraim shal receiue ful punishement. Israel shalbe confounded for his owne imaginacions.
Samaria with her kyng shall vanish away as the froomme in the water. The hie Palaces of Auen where Israel doth synne, shalbe cast downe: thistles and thornes shal growe vpon their aultares. * Then shall thei say to the mountaines: couer vs, and to the hilles fal vpon vs. O Israel thou hast synned as * Gabaa did afore tyme where thei remained: shoulde not the battaile there come vpon the wicked children, euen as vpon the Gabaonites? I will chasten them, euen after myne owne desire: the people shalbe gathered together ouer them, when I punishe them for their great wickednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cowe that is vsed to go to plowe, therfore I yoked hym, and set vpon his fayre neck: I plane Ephraim, Juda shall plowe, and Jacob shall harowe the land vnto me. Sowe vnto righteousnesse, and reape the fruites of well doyng, plowe vp your fre the lande, it is time to seke the Lorde, til he come and raine righteousnesse vpon you. Wo vnto you that Wo, you haue eate the fruite of lies, trusting in your owne strength in the multitude of your warriours: therefore shal there arise a tumult among your people, & all your strong cities shalbe layed waste, as Salmana was destroied with battel: a mother was dashed in pieces vpon her children. Euen so shal it go with you (O Bethell) because of your malicious wickednes. Like as the morning goeth away, so shal the king of Israel passe.

The. xi. Chapiter

When Israell was young I loued him, & called my sonne out of the lande of Egypte. But the more they were called, the more they went backe: offring vnto Baal, & rendring ymages. I learned Ephraim to go, & bare them in mine armes, but they regarded not me that would haue holpen them. I led them with cordes of frendship, & with bandes of loue. I was euen he that laied the yoke vpon their neckes, & I gaue them fode: & my people shal stande in a doubt whether to turne them, for when the Prophetes called them to the most highe, not one yet would geue him the glorie. What shal I do vnto the, o Ephraim? how faithfully haue I defended the? o Israel? how haue I dealt with the as with Adama? Or how haue I ordered the like Seboym? No my loue is otherwise minded. Yee, my mercy is to feruent. Therefore haue I not executed my wrathfull displeasure. For I am God and no man. I am euen the holy one in the middest of the, though I come not within the citie. The Lorde cometh when he will, that they may followe him: for he shal roare like a lion. When he shal roare, then shal the children of the West, that they may be afraied like the children of the East, that they may be scattered away from Egipte, as men scatter birdes: and fraied away as doues, & so to be brought into the Assirians lande, & that because I would haue them stay at home, saith the Lord. But Ephraim goeth about me with lies, & the house of Israell dissembleth. Onely Iuda holdeth him with God, & with the true holy ymages.

The. xii. Chapiter

Ephraim feadeth on the wynde, & followeth after the Eastwinde: he encreaseth lies & destruction. Yea he maketh couenaunt with the Assirians. & beareth oyle into Egipte. The Lorde hath accompte to laye vnto Iudas charge, & will punish Iacob after his owne waies, & according to their owne inuentions. He supplanted his brother in the hele, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: & in his strength he wrestled with God. He* strone with the Aungell, & ouercame him: he wept, & desired him. He founde him at Bethel, & there he talked with him. Yea, the Lorde God of hoastes, euen the Lorde him self remembred him. Then turne to thy God, kepe mercie & equitie, & hope alwaies in thy God. But thou art like the marchaunt, that hath a false waight in his hande, he hath a pleasure to oppresse extortion. Ephraim speaketh thus: * Tushe I am riche, I haue gotte enough in all my workes: shal not one finde in me, that is vnrighteousnes. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as when I brought the out of the lande of Egipte, & sette the in thy tentes, yea as in the dayes of old. I haue spoken vnto the Prophetes, and shewed many visions, and declared my selfe by the ministracion of the prophetes. But at Galaad is abhominacion, therfore are they brought to vanitie. At Gilgal they haue slaine oxen: yea many heapes of stones as there lye in the furowes of the fielde. * Iacob fled into the lande of Syria, & Israell serued for a wife and for a wife he kept shepe. By a Prophete the Lorde brought them out of Egipte, & by a Prophete he preserued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure, therfore shal his bloud be powred vpon him self, and the Lorde his God shal rewarde him his blasphemies.

The. xiii. Chapiter

When Ephraim spake, the Heathen trembled, & he was exalted among the Israelites, but he is gone backe to Baal, therfore must he dye. And now they sinne more & more: of their owne heades they make them molten ymages, after the ymaginacion of their owne braines, that is very vaine, & yet all is nothing but the worke of the craftesmen. Notwithstanding they preache of the same to such as them sacrifice: who so wil kisse the calues, offreth presently. Therefore they shal be as the morning cloude, & as the dewe that early passeth away, & lyke as duste that the whirle wynde taketh away out of the floore, & as the smoke that goeth out of the chymney. * I am the Lorde thy God, which brought the out of the lande of Egypte: that thou shouldest know no God but me only, & that thou shouldest haue* no sauioure but only me. I take diligent heede of the in the wildernesse, that dry lande. But when they were well fed & had enough, then waxed they proude, & forgat me. Therefore wil I be vnto them as a lion, & as a leoparde in the wayes of the Assyrians. I will come vpon them, as a beare that is robbed of her whelpes, and I wil breake the stubburne harte of their

¶ The booke of the Prophete Joel.

¶ The first Chapiter.

The.x.day
M. Mattens.

THis is the worde of the Lorde that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phatuel. Heare, O ye elders, ponder this wel, al ye that dwel in the lande: Vf euer there happened suche a thing in your da-yes, or in the dayes of your fathers. Tell your children of it, and let them shewe it vnto their children, and so they to certifie their posteritie therof. Loke what the caterpiller hath left, that hath the greshopper eaten vp: what the greshopper left, that hath the locust eaten vp: and what the locust hath left, that hath the blastyng consumed. Wake vp ye drunkardes, and wepe: mourne all ye tryne tuppers, because of your sweete wyne: for it walbe taken away from your mouth. Yea a mighty & an innumerable people shall come vp into my lande: these haue tieth lyke the tieth of Lions, and chaudones lyke the lionesses. Thei shal make my vineyardes wast, thei shal pille of the barkes of my figtrees, strip them bare, cast them away, & make the braunches white. Make thy mone as a virgin doeth that girdeth her selfe with sacke, because of her husbegome. For the meat and drynke offeryng walbe taken away from the house of the Lord, & the priestes of the Lor-des ministers shal mourne. The felde walbe wasted, the lande walbe in a miserable case: for the corne walbe destroied, the sweete wine C. shal come to confusion, & the oyle vtterly be decolate. The housbandmen and the vinegardeners shal loke pitiously, & make lamentation for the wheat, wyne, and barly, and because the harueste vpon the felde is so cleane destroied. The reape gatherers shall make great mone, when the vynegarde & figtrees be so vtterly wasted. Yea, al the pomgrana-tes, palmtrees, appletrees, and other trees of the felde shal wither away. Thus the merry there of the children of men shall come to confusiō. Girde you, & make your mone, O ye priestes, mourne ye ministers of the aultar: D. go your way in, & slepe in sackclothe, O ye officers of my God: for the meate and drynk offeryng walbe taken away from the house of your God. Proclaime a fastyng, call the congregacion, gather the elders, and all the inhabitours of the lande together into the house of the Lorde your God, and crie vnto the Lorde: alas, alas for this day. And why? the day of the Lorde is at hande, & commeth as a destruccion from the almighty. Shall not the meate be taken away before our eyes, the mirth also and ioye from the house of our Joel.i.b.

the graners shal lye waste, the floores shalbe broken down, for the corne wolde vtterly be lost. O what a sighing make the kyne? the bullocks are in very euel lykyng, because thei haue no pasture: and the sheepe are famished away. O Lorde vnto the will I crye, for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wildernesse, and the flambe hath burnt vp all the trees of the felde. Yea, the wilde beastes crye also vnto the, for the waters ryuers are dried vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wildernesse.

The .ii. Chapiter.

Quenkong. 1. BLowe out a trompet in Syon, and crye vpon my holy hil, that al suche as dwell in the land, may tremble at it: * for the day of the Lord cõmeth, & is harde at hand: a darke day, a gloomyng day, a cloudy day: yea, and a stormy day, lyke as the morowning spreadeth out vpon the hilles. Namely, a greate and mighty people: suche as haue not beene seene in the beggynnyng, neither shalbe after them for euermore. Before hym shalbe a consumyng fire, and behynde hym a burnyng flambe. The lande shalbe as a garden of pleasure before hym: but behynde hym shall it be a very wast wildernesse, and there is no man that shall escape hym: Thei are to loke vpon lyke barbed horses, and runne lyke horsemen. Thei chippe vp vpõ the hilles as it were the sound of charettes: as the flambe of fyre that consumeth the stawe, and as a mighty people redy to the battaile. The folke shalbe afraied of hym, al faces shalbe as blacke as a potte: Theese shall runne lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles lyke menne of warre. Euery man in his goyng shal kepe his ray, and not go out of his path. There shal not one dryue an other, but eche shall kepe his owne way. Thei shall breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurte. Thei shal come into the citie, & runne vpon the walles. Thei shall climbe vp vpon the houses, and clippe in at the wyndowes lyke a theefe. The yearth shal quake before hym: yea the heuens shalbe moued. * The Sunne and the Moone shalbe darkened, and the starres shal withdrawe their lyght. The Lorde shal geue his voice before his hoast, for his hoste is great, strong and mighty to fulfill his commaundement. This is that great & marueilous fearful day of the Lord. * And who is able to abyde it? Now therefore (saith the Lord) * turne you vnto me with all your hertes, with fastyng, weppyng, and mourning: rende your hartes, and not your clothes: Turne you vnto the Lorde your God, * for he is gracious and mercifull, longe suffryng, and of great compassion: and ready to forgeue mischefe. Who can tell (he wil) he shall turne, and forgeue, and after him leaue a blessyng behynde him: euen a meate offrynge and a drynke offrynge vnto the Lorde your God. * Blowe out with the trompet in Syon, proclaime a fasting, call the congregacion, & gather the people together, warne the congregacion, assemble the elders, bringe the children and sucklynges together. Let the bridegrom go forth of his chambre, and the bryde out of her closet. Let the priestes serue the Lord betwixt the porche and the aulter, weppyng, and saying be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people, let not thine heritage be brought to suche confusion, lest the Heathen be lorde ouer them. * Wherefore should thei saie among the Heathen: Where is now their God? Then shal the Lord be gelouse ouer his lande, and spare his people: yea, the Lorde shal aunswere, and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I wil sende you corne, wyne, & oyle, so that ye shal haue plentie of them: and I wil nomore geue you ouer, to be a reproche among the Heathen. Againe, * for him of the North, I shal driue him farre from you, and shut him out into a drie and waste lande, his face towarde the East sea, and his hynder partes towarde the outtemost Sea: The stynke of him shal go vp, and his filthy corrupcõ shal fal vpon hymselfe, because he hath deale so proudely. Feare not (O land) but be glad, and reioyce for the Lorde wil do great thynges. Be not ye afraid neither (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shalbe grene, and the trees shall beare their fruite: the figtrees and vineyardes shall geue their encreace. Be glad then (O ye children of Syon) and reioyce in the Lorde your God, for he hath geuen you a teacher of righteousnesse: * and he it is that shall sende you downe shoures of rayne, early and late in the first moneth: so that the graners shalbe full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeres that the grashopper, locuste, blastyng, and caterpiller (my great hoast which I sent among you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore them to you againe, so that ye shal haue enough to eate, & be satisfied: and praise the name of the Lord your God that so marueilously hath dealt with you. And my people shall neuer be confounded any more. Ye shal well knowe, that I am in the middest of Israel, & that I am the Lord your God: yea, and that there is none other: and my people shal nomore be brought to confusiõ. * After this wil I poure out my spirite vpon al flesh: and your sonnes & your daughters shal prophecy, your olde men shal dreame dreames, and your yonge men shall se visions: yea in those dayes I wil poure out my spirite vpon my seruauntes and maidens. I will shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens in the yearth beneth: blond and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The Sunne shalbe turned into darkenesse, and the Moone into blonde

FOr take hede: in those dayes and at the same time, when I turne againe the captiuitie of Juda and Jerusalem: I shal gather all people together, and bringe them in the valley of Josaphat: and there will I reason with them because of my people, & heritage of Israel, whom they haue scattered about in the nacions, & parted my lande: yea they haue cast lottes for my people, the yonge men haue they set in the brothel house: & solde the damsels for wine, that they might haue to drinke.

* Then Tyrus and Sydon, and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me? Will ye deale with me? wel if ye will needes deale with me, I will recompence you euen vpon your heade, and that right worthely: for ye haue taken away my siluer & golde, my faire and goodly iewels, & brought them into your goodly houses. The children also of Juda & Jerusalem haue ye solde vnto the Grekes, that ye might bringe them farre fro their borders of their owne countries. Behold therfore, I will raise them out of the place where ye haue solde them, * and will rewarde you euen vpon your heade. Your sonnes, and your daughters will I sel thorowe the handes of the children of Juda, & so they shal geue them forth to sel vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countrie, for the Lorde hymself hath saied it. Crie out these thynges among the Gentiles, proclaime warre, wake vp the gyaunts, let them drawe nye, let them come vp al the lusty warriours of them. * Make you swordes of your plowshares, and speares of your sickles: and tither: Let the weake man say: I am strong. Muster you, and come, al ye Heathen rounde about gather you together: there shall the Lorde laie al thy gyauntes to the grounde. Let the people arise, & get them to the valley of Josaphat, for there wil I sit & iudge al Heathen round about. Lay to your * sythes, for the haruest is ripe: come get you downe: the wynepresse is full: yea, the winepresses runne ouer, for their wickednes is waxe great. In the valley appointed there shalbe many people: for the day of the Lorde is nye, in the valley appointed. * The Sunne and Mone shalbe darkened, & the starres shal withdraw their light. * The Lord shal roare out of Syon, and crie out of Jerusalem, that the heauens and the yearth shal quake withall. But the Lorde shalbe a refuge vnto his owne people, & a refuge for the children of Israel. Thus shal ye knowe that I the Lord your God dwel vpon my holy mount of Sion. Then shal Jerusalem be holy, and there shal no straungers go thorowe her any more.

All the ryuers of Juda shal haue water enough & out of the Lordes house there shal flowe a spryng, to water the brooke of * Sittym, but Egypte shalbe laied wast: & Edom shalbe desolate: because they haue dealte so cruelly with the children of Juda, and shed innocent bloude in their lande. Again, Juda shalbe enhabited for euermore, and Jerusalem from generacion to generacion: for I wil not leaue their bloude vnauenged. And the Lord shal dwel in Syon.

¶ The booke of the Prophete Amos

¶ The first Chapiter.

THese are the sermons that Amos (whiche was one of the shepeheardes of Thecua) vpon Israel in the tyme of * Osiah Kyng of Juda, & in the tyme of * Jeroboam the sonne of Joah, Kyng of Israell, two yeere before the yearth quake. And he said: * The Lorde shall roare out of Syon, and shewe his voice from Jerusalem, so that the pastures of the shepherdes shalbe in a miserable case, and the top of Carmel dried vp. Thus saith the Lorde: for thre & foure wickednesses of * Damascus, I will not spare her: because they haue thrasshed Galaad with yron saithes. But I will sende a fyre into the house of Hazael, the same shal consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus wil I breake the barres of Damascus, and roote out the enhabiter from the felde of Auen: And hym that holdeth the scepter out of the pleasaunt house: so that the people shalbe dryue out of faire Syria: saith the Lorde. Thus saith the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of * Gaza, I wil not spare her: because they make the prisoners yet more captiue, and haue dryuen them into the lande of Edom. Therfore will I sende a fyre into the walles of Gaza, whiche shall deuoure her houses. I wil roote out the that dwel at Asdod, & hym that holdeth the scepter of Ascalon, and stretche out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philistines shal perishe, saith the Lorde. Thus saith the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of the citie of * Tyre, I wil not spare her: because they haue encreased the captiuitie of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the * brotherly couenaunt. Therfore wil I sende a fyre into the walles of Tyre, that shal consume her palaces. Thus saith the Lorde thre & foure wickednesses of * Edom, I wil not spare him, because he persecuted his brother with the swerde, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very longe, and so kepte indignacion alway by him. Therfore wil I sende a fyre into Theman, whiche shall deuoure the palaces of Bozra. Thus saith the Lorde: for thre and foure wickednesses of the children of * Ammon, I wil not spare the: because thei ripte vp the women great with child in Galaad, to make the borders of their landes the wyder. Therfore I wil kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shal consume her palaces: with a greate crye, in the day of battaile, in tempest and in the day of storme. so that their kyng shal go into captiuite, he, & his Princes togeuther, saith the Lorde.

¶ The. v. Chapiter.

Thus saith the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Moab, I wil not spare him: because he burnt the bones of the kyng of Edom to ashes. Therfore will I sende a fyre into Moab, which shal consume the palaces of Carioth, so that Moab shal perishe with noise & the sounde of a trompe. I will roote out the iudge from among them, & slea all his Princes with him, saith the Lorde. Thus saith the Lorde: for thre & foure wickednesses of * Juda I wil not spare him: because he hath cast vnder the lawe of the lorde, & not kept his commandementes: for whyche * their vnrulie nieces be discerued with the lyes that their forefathers folowed, therfore wil I sende a fyre into Juda, which shal consume the palaces of Jerusalem. Thus saith the Lorde: For thre and foure wickednesses of Israel, I will not spare him, because he hath solde the righteous for money, and the poore for shoes. Thei treade vpō poore mēs heades, in the dust of the yearth, & croke the waies of the meke. The son & the father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holy name, thei lye beside euery auitare, vpon clothes taken to pledge, & in the house of their gods thei drynke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Ammonite* before them, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, & as strong as the okes: notwithstāding I destroyed his fruite from aboue, & his rote from vnder. Againe, I brought you out of the lande of Egypt, & let you fourty yeres thorow the wildernes, that ye might haue the Ammonites landes in possession. I raised vp prophetes among your children, & abstinences amōg your young men. Is it not so, ye children of Israel? saith the Lorde. But ye gaue the abstinences wyne to drynke: * yea, ye cōmanded the Prophetes sayyng: Prophecy not. Behold, I will crushe you in vnder, lyke as a wayne crusheth that is full of sheaues, so that the swifte shal not escape, neither the strong be able to do any thyng: no, the valyaūt shal not saue his owne life. The archer shal not abide and the swifte of foote shall not escape. The horseman shall not saue his lyfe, & he that is wyly of stomacke as a geaunt, shal in that day be faine to runne his way naked, saith the Lorde.

¶ The. vi. Chapit.

Heare what the Lorde speaketh vnto you O ye children of Israel, namely vnto al the tribes, whom I brought out of Egypte, & said: * you onely haue I excepted from all the generations of the yearth: therfore will I visit you in all your wickednesses. May twaine walke together, except thei be agreed amōg them selues? * Doeth a Lyon roze in the woode, excepte he haue a praie? Or cryeth a Lyons whelpe out of his den, excepte he haue gotten somethyng? Doeth a byrd fal in a snare vpon the yerth, where no souler is? Taketh a man his snare vp from the ground afore he catche som what? Crie thei out, & arme with the trompet in the Citie, and the people not afrayed? Cōmeth there any plage in a Citie, without it be the Lordes doyng? Now doeth the lord God no maner of thyng but he telleth his secret before vnto his seruauntes the Prophetes. When a Lyon roareth, who wil not be afraid? seyng then that the Lorde God hymselfe speaketh, who will not prophecy. Preache in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the lande of Egypte & say: gather you together vpon the mountaines of Samaria, & behold ye se great murther & violent oppression amonge them, for why? thei regarde not the thing that is right saith the Lorde: thei gather together euell gotten goodes, and lay vp robbery in their houses. Therfore thus saith the Lord God. This lande shalbe troubled & beseged rounde about, thy strength shalbe plucte from the, & thy palaces robbed. Thus saith the Lorde, lyke as an heardman taketh two legges, or a piece of an eare out of the Lions mouth: Euen so the children of Israell (that dwell in Samaria) hauyng their couches in the corner, their beddes at Damascus, shalbe plucte away. * Heare, and beare record in the house of Jacob (saith the Lord God of hostes) that when I begynne to visit the wickednesse of Israel, I will visit the auitares at Bethell also: so that the hornes of the auitare shalbe broken of, and fal to the grounde. And for the wynter house and sommer house, I will smite them downe: and the houses of yuory: yea, & many other houses shall perishe, and be destroyed, saith the Lorde.

¶ The. vii. Chapiter.

Heare this worde ye fat kine, that be vpō the hil of Samaria: ye that do poore men wrong, & oppresse the nedy, ye that say to your lordes: bringe hyther, let us drynke. Therfore, the Lord hath swoorne by his holinesse. The dayes shal come vpon you, that the enemies shall carry you away in hippes, and your posterite shalbe carried away vpon fishers pottes. Ye shal get you out at the gappes one after an other, euen the kynges palace shal you ouerthrowe, to make a way to stoppe, saith the Lorde. Ye came* to Bethel for to worke vngraciousnes, and haue encreased your synnes at* Gilgal: ye brought your sacrifices in the morning, and your tithes vnto the thirde day: Ye made a thanke offering of leuen, ye promised free will offerynges & proclaimed them. Suche lust had ye, O children of Israel, saith the lorde God. Therfore haue I geuen you vnlefull tithe in all your Cities, and scarcenesse of breade in al your palaces, yet will ye not turne vnto me, saith the Lorde. When there ware but thre monethes vnto the haruest, * I withholde the the raine from you, I rained vpon one citie: & not vpon another, one piece of grounde was moistened with raine, & the grounde that I rained not vpon, was dry. Wherfore two or thre cities came vnto one, to drynke water, but thei were not satisfied, yet will ye not turne vnto me, saith the Lord. I haue smitten you with drouth & blastyng & loke how many your yardes, vineyardes, figtrees, and olyue trees ye had: the caterpiller hath eaten thē vp. But yet will ye not turne vnto me saith the Lorde. Pestilence haue I sent among you, as* I dyd in Egypte: your younge men haue I slaine with the swerde, and caused your horses to be taken captiue: I made the stynking sauoure of your tentes, to come vp into your nostrels: yet will ye not turne vnto me, saith the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen* as I ouerthrewe Sodome & Gomorre so that ye ware as a brande plucte out of the fyre. Yet will ye not turne vnto me, saith the Lorde. Therfore thus will I handle the againe. O Israel: yea, euen thus wil I handle the. Make the redy then to mete thy God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaines, he ordeineth the wynd, he sheweth man what he is about to do: he maketh the morning & the darkenesse, he treadeth vpō the hie places of the yerth: the lord God of hoostes is his name.

The.v. Chapiter.

Here this worde, O ye house of Israell, and why? I must make this mone for you. The virgyn Israel shall fal, & neuer ryse vp againe: she shalbe cast downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shall helpe her vp. For this saith the Lorde God: Where as there dwelt a thousand in one Citie, there shalbe left scarce an hundred therin: & where there dwelt an hundred, there shal scarce ten be left in the house of Israell. Neuertheles, thus saieth the Lorde vnto the house of Israell: Seke after me, and ye shal lyue, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Gilgal, and go not to Beersaba: for Gilgall shalbe caried away captiue, & Bethel shal come to nought. Seke the Lorde, that ye may lyue: lest the house of Joseph be brent with fyre, & consumed, & lest there be none to quēche Bethel. Ye turne the law to wormwood, & cast down righteousnes vnto the grounde. * Ye forsake the Lord that maketh the seuen starres, & the Orions, that turneth the night into day, & of the day he maketh darknes. * He calleth the waters of the Sea, and poureth them out vpon the plaine ground: the lord is his name. He raiseth destruction vpon the mighty people, and bringeth down the strong hold. But thei owe hym euil will that reproueth them openly: & who so telleth them the plaine truth, thei abhorre him. For so muche then as ye oppresse the poore & rob him of his best substaunce therfore* where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shal not dwell in them. Marueilous pleasaunt vineyardes shal you plant, but the wyne of them shal ye not drynke: and why? as for the multitude of your wickednesse, and your stoute synnes, I knowe thē right wel. Enemies are ye of the righteous, ye * take rewardes, ye oppresse the poore in iudgement. Therfore the wyse must nowe be faine to holde his tongue, so wicked a tyme is it. Seke after the thyng that is good, and not euel, so shal ye lyue: yea, the Lorde God of Hoostes shalbe with you, accordyng to your owne desyre. * Hate the euell, and loue the good & set vp right againe in the porte: and (no doute) the Lorde God of Hoostes shalbe mercifull vnto the remnaunt of Joseph. If not (saith the Lorde God of Hoostes) there shalbe mournyng in all stretes: yea, thei shal say in euery strete: alas, alas. The Boke of the Prophete Jonas.

The first Chapiter.

THE worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas the sone of Amithay: saying Arise, and get thee to Ninive that greate citee: and preache vnto the how that their wickednes is come vp before me. And Jonas made hym ready to flie vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde, and gatte hym doune to Joppa: where he found a ship redy for to go vnto Tharsis, to be paied his fare, and went aboorde: that he might goo with them vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the lorde. But the lorde hurled a great wynde vnto the sea, and there was a mightie tempest in the sea, so that the ship was in ieopardy of goyng in peces. Then the mariners were afraied, and cried euery man vnto his God: and the goodes that wer in the ship thei cast into the sea, to lighten it of theim. But Jonas gat hym vnder the hatches, where he laied hym doune, and slombred. So the master of the ship came to hym, and said vnto hym, why slōbrest thou? Up, call vpon thy God: if God (happily) will thinke vpon vs, that we perishe not. And thei said one to another, come let vs cast lottes: that we maie knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so thei cast lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas. Then said thei vnto hym: Tell vs, for whose cause are wee thus troubled? What is thyne occupacion? Whēce commest thou? And whether goest thou? What countrie man art thou? and of what nacion? He answered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare the lorde God of heauen, which made bothe the sea and the drie land. Then were the men exceedyngly afraied, and said vnto hym: why diddest thou so? For thei knew, that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had told them) and said moreouer vnto hym, what shall we doo vnto thee, that the sea maie ceasse from troublyng vs? (For the sea wroughte, & was troubious) he answered them: take me, and cast me into the sea, so shall it let you bee in rest, for I wote it is for my sake, that this greate tēpest is come vpō you. Neuertheles, the men assaied with rowyng, to bryng the ship to land, but it would not be, because the sea wrought for and was so troubious against them. Wherefore, thei cried vnto the lorde, and said: O lorde, let vs not perishe for this mannes death, neither laye thou innocent bloud vnto our charge: for thou, o lord hast doen, euen as thy pleasure was. So thei toke Jonas, and cast him into the sea, and the sea left raging. And the men feared the lorde exceedyngly, doyng sacrifices, and makyng vowes vnto the lorde.

Truſte, hold your tōgue (ſaie thei) it ſhal not fall vpon this* people, we ſhall not come to confuſiō, ſaith the houſe of Jacob. Is the ſpirite of the lorde ſo clene awaie? Or is he ſo myndes? Truthe it is, my woordes are freendely vnto theim that liue right: But my people do the contrary, therefore muſt I take part againſt theim, for thei take awaie bothe cote and clothe from the ſimple. Ye haue turned your backes to ſighe, the houſes of my people haue ye put out from their good houſes, & taken awaie myne excellent giftes from their children. Vp, get you hence, for here ſhall ye haue no reſt. Because of their Idolatrie, thei are corrupt, and ſhall miſerably periſhe. If I were a ſlenderly ſelowe, and a preacher of lies, & told theim that thei might ſit bibbyng & bollyng, and be dronken. O that were a prophete for this* people. But I wil gather thee in dede O Jacob, and driue the remnant of Iſrael altogether. I ſhall cary them one with another as a flocke in the fold, & as the cattel in their ſtalles, that thei maie bee diſquieted of other men. Whoſo breaketh vp the gappe, he ſhal go before. Thei ſhal breke vp the port, and go in and out at it. The kyng ſhall go before them, and the lorde ſhalbe vpon the hed of them. W.

AND I ſaid: heare, o ye heddes of the houſe of Jacob, and ye leaders of the houſe of Iſrael: ſhould* not ye knowe, what wer lawfull and right? But* ye hate the good, and loue the euill: ye plucke of menne* ſkinne, and the fleſhe from the bones, ye eate the fleſhe of my people, and flea of their ſkyn, ye breake their bones, ye chop them in peces, as it were into a cauldron, and as fleſhe into a potte. Now the tyme ſhall come, that* when thei call vnto the lorde, he ſhal not heare them, but hide his face from theim, becauſe that thrōugh their awne imaginacions, thei haue delt ſo wickedly. And as cōcernyng the prophetes that diſceiue my people, thus the lorde ſaith againſt thē. When* thei haue any thyng to bite vpon, then thei preache that all ſhalbee well, but if a man put not ſome thyng into their mouthes, thei preach of warre againſt hym. Therfore* your viſion ſhalbe turned to night, and your prophecying to darkneſſe. The Sonne ſhall go doune ouer thoſe prophetes, & the daie ſhalbe darke vnto them. Then ſhall the viſion ſeers be aſhamed, and the ſothſaiers cōfounded: yea, thei ſhalbe fain all the packe of thē, to ſtop their mouthes for thei haue not gods woorde. But* for me I am full of ſtrength, and of the ſpirite of the lorde full of iudgement & boldnes, to ſhew the houſe of Jacob their wickednes, and the houſe of Iſrael their ſinne. O heare this* ye rulers of the houſe of Jacob, and ye Iudges of the houſe of Iſrael, ye that abhorre the thyng that is lawfull, and wreſt alcide the thyng that is streyghte. Ye* that build vp Sion with bloud, and Jeruſalem with boyng wrong. Ye* ye Iudges, ye geue ſentence for gyftes. O ye Prieſtes, ye teache for lucre. O* ye prophetes, ye prophecie for money. Yet will thei be taken as thoſe that hold vpon God, and ſaie: is not the lorde emong vs? Truſte, there can no miſfortune happen vs. Therfore* ſhall Sion for your ſake be plowed like a field, Jeruſalem* ſhal become an heape of ſtones, and the hill of the temple ſhalbe turned to an high wood. Gather that shalt thou be robbed thy self, O thou robbers daughter: thei shal lay siege against vs, & smite the Iudge of Israel with a rodde vpon the cheke. And* thou Bethleem Ephrata, art litle emong the thousandes of Iuda. Out of thee shall come vnto me, whiche shalbe the gouernor of Israell: whose out goyng hath been from the beginnyng, and from euerlastyng. In the meane while he plagueth the? for a season, vntill the tyme that she (whiche shall beare) haue borne: then shall the remnaunt of his brethren, bee conuerted vnto the children of Israel. Thus* shal he deliuer vs from the Assirian, when he cōmeth within our lande, and setteth his foote within our borders. And the remnaunt of Jacob shalbe emong the multitude of people, as the dewe of the lorde, and as the droppes vpon the grasse that tarieth for no man, & waiteth of no body. Thine hand shalbe lift vp vpon thine enemies and all thyne aduersaries shall perishe. The tyme shall come also, saith the lord, that I will take thy horses from thee, & destroy thy charettes. bowe my knee to the high God? shall I come before hym with brente offerynges, & with calues of a yere old? hath the lorde pleasure in many thousandes of rames, or in innumerable stremes of Oyle? Or shall I geue my firste borne for myne offences, and the fruite of my body, for the synne of my soule? I will shewe thee (O man) what is good, and what the lorde requireth of thee, namely, to doo right, to haue pleasure in louyng kyndenes, to be lowly, and to walke with thy God. The Lordes voyce crieth vnto the citee, and the man that shalbee saued, considereth thy name (O lorde.) Marke what is your rod, and heare him that warneth you. Should I not be displeased, for the vnrighteous goo in the houses of the wicked, & because the measure is minished? Or would I iustifie the false balances, and the baggue of detreipfull weightes, emong those that bee full of riches, vnrighteously gotten: whose the citezens beare wild talkede, speake lies, and haue deceipfull tongues in their mouthes? Wherefore I will take in hand to punishe thee and to make thee desolate, because of thy synnes. Thou shalt eate, and not haue enough: yea thou shalte bryng thy self downe. Thou shalte fle but not escape: and those that thou woulddest saue, will I deliuer to the sweard. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalt presse (out oliues) but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoynt thy self withal: thou shalt tread out swete must but shalt drynke no wine. Ye kepe the ordinances of Amri, and all the customes of the house of Ahab: ye folowe their pleasures, therefore will I make thee waste, and cause thy inhabiters to be abhorred. O my people, and thus shalt thou beare thyne owne shame.

The.vj. Chapiter.

Woo is me: I am become as one that goeth a gleanyng in the harueste. There are no no grapes to eate, yet would I fain (with all my harte) haue the best fruite. There is not a godly vpon yearth, there is not one righteous emong men. Thei labour all to shed bloud and euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet thei saie thei do well, when thei doo euill. The prince will, so saith the Judge, that he maie do hym pleasure again. The greate man speaketh, what his hart desireth: and the hearers alowe hym. The best of them is but as a thistle, and the most righteous of thē is but as a brier in the hedge. But when the daie of thy preachers commeth, that thou shalt be visited, then shalt thei be wasted awai. Let no man beleue his frende, nor put his confidence in a brother. Kepe the portes of thy mouthe, fro hī that lieth in thy bosome, for the sonne shall put his father to dishonoure, the daughter shall rise against her mother, the daughter in lawe, against her mother in lawe: and a mānes foes shalbe euē thei of his awne house hold. Therefore (sayeth the lorde) I will loke vpon the lorde. I will patiently abide (O) my sauioure my God shall heare me. O thou enemie of myne, reioyce not at my fall, for I shall get vp again and though I sit in darkenesse, yet the Lorde is my light. I will beare the punishement of the lorde (for why? I haue offended hym) till he sit in iudgement vpon my cause, and se that I haue right. He will bryng me furthe to the light, and I shall se his righteousnesse. She that is myne enemie shall loke vpon it, and be confounded, which (she now) saieth where is thy lorde God? Myne eyes shall behold her, when she shall be troden downe, as the clay in the streetes. The tyme will come, that thy gappes shalbee made vp, and the lawe shall go abroade: and at that tyme shall thei come vnto thee from Assur, vnto the strong cities, & from the strong cities vpon the riuer: from the one sea to the other, from the one mountain to the other. Notwithstandyng, the land must be wasted, because of them that dwell therein, and for the frutes of their awne imaginacions. Therefore fede thy people with thy rod, the flocke of thyne heritage, which dwell desolate in the wood: that thei maie be fedde vpon the mount of Carmell, Bacan, and Galaad, as afore tyme. Marueilous thynges will I shew them, like as when thei came out of Egipte. This shall the heathen se, and be ashamed for all their power, so that thei shall laie their hande vpon their mouthe, and stoppe their eares. Thei shall licke the dust like a serpent, and as the wormes of the yearthe that trēble in their holes. Thei shalbe afraid of the lorde our God, and thei shall feare thee: where is there such a God as thou? That pardonest wickednesse, and forgeuest the offences of the remnant of thyne heritage? He kepeth not his wrathe for euer: and why? His delight is to haue compassion: he shall turne again, and be mercifull to vs: he shall put downe our wickednesse, and cast al our synnes into the botome of the sea. Thou shalt kepe thy truth with Jacob and thy mercie for Abraham, like as thou hast sworne vnto our fathers long ago.

The Mountaines treble before hym, the hilles consume, at the sight of him, the yerth quaketh yea, the whole worlde, and all that dwell therein. Who maie endure before his wrathe? Or who is able to abide his grimme displeasure? His anger taketh on like fire: and the hard rockes are cloven in sonder before him. Iust gracious is the lorde, and a strong hold in the tyme of trouble he knoweth them that put their trust in hym: when the floude runneth ouer, and destroyeth the place, and when the darkenesse followeth vp vpon his enemies. What doue ye imagine then against the lorde on this maner? (Tushe, when he hath once made an ende, there shall come no more trouble.) ¶ The. ij. Chapiter.

Behold, vpon the Mountaines come the feete of hym, that bringeth good tidynges and proclaimeth peace. O Iuda, kepe thy holy daies, performe thy promises: for Belial shall come no more in thee, he is vtterly rooted out. The scatterer shall come vp against thee, and lay siege to the castle. Loke thou well to the streetes, make thy loynes strong, arme thy self with all thy might: for the lorde shall restore again the glorie of Iacob, like as the glorie of Israel. The destroyers haue broken them doune, and marred the fine braunches. The shield of his mightie men glistereth, his men of warre are clothed in Purple. His charettes are as fire, when he maketh hym forward, and his Speare staffes are toted in benime. The charettes roll vpon the streetes, and waiter in the high waies. Thei are to looke vpon, like

B. crefletes of fire, and go swiftly as the lightenyng. When he doth but warne his Captaines, thei fall in their araye, and hastely thei climbe vp the walles: yea, the engines of the warre are prepared direct. The water gates shalbe opened, and the kynges palace shall fal. The queene her self shalbe led awaie captiue, & her gentlewomen shall mourne as the doues, a greue within their hartes. Niniue is like a poole full of water, but then shal thei be fain to flie. Stand, stand, (shall thei crie) and there shall not one turne backe. Take awaie with the siluer, awaie with the gold, for there is no ende of treasure. There shalbe a multitude of al maner of costly ornamentes. Thus must she be spoyled, emptied, and cleane stripped out, that their hartes may be molte awaye, their knees tremble, all their loynes be weake, and their faces blacke as a pot. Where is now the dwellyng of the lions, and the pasture of the liens whelpes? Wher the lion and the lioneesse went with their whelpes, and no man fered the a-maie? But the Lion spoyled enough for his yong ones, & denoured for his lioneesse: he filled his dennes with his praie, and his dwellyng place with that he had rauished. Behold I will vpō thee, saith the lorde of hostes, and will set fire vpon thy charettes, that thei shal smoke withall, and the swearde shall deuoure thy yong lions. I wil make an ende of thy spoylyng from out of the yearth, and the voyces of thy messengers shall no more be heard.

¶ The. iij. Chapiter.

Woe to the bloudthirstie citee, which is all full of lies and robbery, and wil not leaue of from raueyng. There a manne maie heare scourgyng, rushyng, the noyse of the wheles, the tryng of the horses, & the tollyng of the charettes. There the horsmen get vp with naked swordes, & glistryng speres: there lieth a multitude slain, & a greate heape of ded bodies: there is no ende of ded corses: yea men fall vpon their bodies. And that for the great and manifold whoredome, of the faire & beautifull harlot, which is a mistres of witchcraft: yea, & selleth the people through her whoredome, and the nations through her witchcraft. Behold, I will vpon thee (saieth B. the Lorde of hostes) and will put thy clothes ouer thy hed, that I maie shewe thy nakednes emong the Heathen, and thy shame emong the kyngdomes, I will cast duet vpō thee, to make thee be abhorred, and a gasyng stocke: yea, all thei that loke vpon thee, shall start backe, and say, Niniue is destroyed. Who will haue pitie vpon thee? where shall I seke one to comforte thee? Art thou better then the greate citee of Alexandria? That lay in the waters, and had the waters round about it: whereby was strongly fenced, and walled with the sea? Ethiopia and Egipt were her strength, and that exceedyng greate, aboue measure. Aphrica & Libia were her helpers, yet was she driuen awaie, & brought into captiuitie: her yong children were smitten doune at the hed of euery streete, C. the lottes were cast for the moste auncient men in her, and all her mightie men were bound in chaines. THis is the heuy burthen, which the Prophete Habacuc did se. O Lorde, how long shall I crye, and thou wilt not heare? How long shall I complain vnto thee, suffering wrong, & thou wilt not helpe? Why letteste thou me se wickednesse and labour? Tiranny and violence are before me, power ouer goeth right: For the lawe is torne in peces, and there cannot right iudgement go furth. And why? The vngodly is more set by, then the righteous: This is the cause, that wrong iudgement proceedeth. Behold, among the Heathen, and looke well, wonder at it, and bee abashed: for I will doo a thyng in your tyme, whiche though it bee told you, ye shall not beleue. For lo, I will raise vp the Caldees, that bitter and swift people: which shall go as wide as the lande is, to take possession of dwelling places, that bee not their awne. A grimme and boisterous people is it, there shall fit in iudgement and punishe. Their Horses are swifter then the Tartes of the mountaines, and bite surer then the wolues in the euening. Their horsemen come by great pompe, yea from farre, thei flie hastily to deuoure as the Eagle. Thei come all to spoyle, out of them commeth an Eastwynd, whiche bloweth and gathereth their captiuitie, like as the sand. Thei shall mocke the Kynges, and laugh the Princes to scorne. Thei shall not set by any strong hold, for thei shal lay ordinance against it, & take it. A Prayer of Habacuc the prophete vpon Sigionoth.

O Lorde, when I heurde speake of the, I was afrayde. The worke that thou hast taken in hande, make thou perfourme in his tyme, O Lorde, and when thy tyme commeth, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath, thou thynckest vpon mercy. GOD commeth from Theman, and the holy one from the mounte of Pharan. Selah. Hys glory couereth the heauens, and the earthe is ful of hys prayse. Hys bryghtnes is as the lyght, & beames of lyght go out of hys handes, there powers is hydde. Before hym goeth the destruction, and a pestilent sickenes goeth from hys feete. He standeth and measureth the earthe, he loketh, and the people runneth awaye, the mountains of the worlde are broken to pouder, the hilles are lain to bowe themselues, for hys goinges are euerlasting and euer. I saw that the pauilions of the Morians & the tentes of the land of Madian were vexed for wrongues. Was thou not angry O Lorde in thy waters? was not thy wrathe in the floodes & thy displesure in the sea? yea when thou rattest vpon thy horse, & when thy charlottes had the victory. Thou bendedst thy bowe, openly, lyke as thou hadst promised with an othe vnto the tribes. Thou diddest deuide the water of the earthe, & made ryuers. The waterflouddes went away, the deep made a noyse at the lyfting vp of thyne hand. The sonne and mone remayned styll in their habitacion. Thyne arrowes went out glittering and thy speares as the shyne of the lightning. Thou troddest downe the lande in thyne angre and dydst threshe the heithen in thy displesures. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people to helpe thyne annoynted. Thou smotest downe the heed of the house of the vngodly & discouerdst hys foundacions, euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah. Thou diddst strike thorow with his septre the heades of his plaine people, whiche came as a stormy wynd to scatre me abrode, & are glad when they may eate vp the poore secretly. Thou makest a way for thy horses in the sea, euen in the midst of the great waters. When I heare this, my body is vexed, my lippes tremble at the voice therof, my bones corupt, I am afraide where I stande. O that I myght rest in the day of trouble, that I might go vp vnto our people, whiche are already prepared. For the figgetree shal not bee greene, & the vynes shal beare no fruit. The labour of the Olyue shalbe but lost, and the lande shalbe brynge no corne, the sheepe shalbe taken out of the folde, & there shalbe no cattel in the stalle. But as for me I wil be glad in the lorde & wyl reioyce in god my sauioure. The lorde god is my strength, he shal make my feete, as the feete of harttes, & he whiche geueth victory shal bring me to my hie places, singing vpō my psalmes.

The ende of the prophete Habacuc.

The boke of the prophete Sophony.

The i. Chapitre.

THys is the worde of the Lord which came vnto Sophony the sonne of Chusi, the sonne of Godolia, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Hezekiah, in the tyme of Josiah, the sonne of Amon kyng of Juda. I wil gather vp al thynges in the lande, saith the lorde. I wyl gather vp man and beast: I wil gather vp the foules in the ayre, & the fish in the sea, to the great decay of the wicked, & wil vtterlye destroie the men out of the land, saith the lord. I wil stretch my hand vpō Juda, & vpō al such as dwelle at Jerusalem. Thus wil I rote out the remaunte of Baalkram this place, & the names of the Memuims & preestes, yea, & such as vpō their house toppes, worship a bow before the host of heauen, whiche sweare by the lord, & by their Malchon also, which start aback frō the lord, & neither seke after the lord nor regard him. Be stil at the presence of the Lord god, for the day of the lord is at hād, yea, the lord hath prepared a feaine of kyng & called his guestes thereto. & thus it shall happen in the day of the lordes feaine offering. I wil visite the princes the kinges children & al such as weare

I wil vicite al thefe, that clime ouer the thref hold, fo proudly, which fil their lordes houfe with robbery & falfhod. At the fame time fayth the lord, there fhalbe heard a greate cry from the fifthe porte, and an howling frō the other porte, and a greate murther from the hylles.
Howle, ye that dwell in the mill, for al the mar chaunt people are gone, and al they that were laden with fyluer, are rooted out. At the fame time wyl I feke Jerufalem with lanternes, & vifit thē that continue in their dregges, and fay in their partes: Euil, the Lord wil do neither good nor euel. Their goodes fhalbe fpoiled, and their houfes layde waft: they fhal buylde houfes, and not dwel in them they fhal plante vineyardes, but not drynche the wyne thereof. For the great day of the lorde is at hand, it is harde by & commeth on apace. Howthilke is the cry nge of the lordes day, the fhal the ſtraunge cry out: for that dage is a dai of wrath, a dai of trouble & heuines, a dai of vtter deſtruction, & mifery, a darke, and glomyng dai, a cloudy, & ſtormy day, a day of the noyſe of trōpettes, & fhalmes, againſt the ſtrōg cities & hie towres. I wil bryng the in to ſuch diſtreſſe, that thei fhal go about like blynde men, becauſe they haue ſynned a-gainſt the lorde. Their blood fhalbe ſhedde as the duſte, & their bodies as the myre. Neyther their ſylver, nor their golde fhal be able to delyuer them in that wratheful dai of the lord, but the whole land fhalbe conſumed tho row the fyre of his gelouſy, for he ſhall cōe make cleane ryddaunce of al them that dwelle in the lande.

The. ij. Chapiter.

Examine youre ſelues and ſearche O thou nacion, that hath no deſyre to the lawe, or the thyng go forth, that god hath cōcluded, and or the tyme come in percein as chaffe paſſe away as the duſt, or the fearful wrathe of the Lorde come vpon you. Yea, or the day of the Lordes fore diſpleaſure come vpon you.
Seke the Lorde, all ye meke parted vpon the erth, ye that worke after his iudgement, ſeke vprightneſſe, ſeke lawlines: that ye may be defended in the wratheful day of the lorde. For Gaza fhalbe deſtroyed, and Aſcalō fhalbe laid waſt. They that caſt out Iſrael at the none day, and Accaron fhalbe plucte vp by the rotes.
Wo vnto you that dwell vpon the ſea coſt, ye murtherous people: the worde of the Lorde fhal come vpon you. O Canaan thou lande of the philiſtines, I wil deſtroi the ſo that ther ſhal no man dwel in the any more, and as for the ſea coſt, it fhalbe herdmens cotages, and ſhepefoldes. yea, it fhalbe a yielō for ſuch as remayne in the houſe of Iuda to feede their in. In the houſes of Aſcalō fhal they couered at nyght: for the lord their god fhal viſite them, and turne away their captiuite. I haue herd the reuilinge of Moab, & the blaſphemies of the children of Ammon, how they haue thretned my people, and magnified themſelues within their borders: of their lande therefore as truly as I liue ſayth the lord of hoſtes the god of Iſrael: Moab ſhalbe as Sodoma, and Ammon as Gomorra, euē the heapyng vp of nettles and a perpetual wyldernes. The reſidue of my people ſhal ſpoile them, the remnant of my people ſhal poſſeſſe them. Iacha. ij. b.
This ſhall happen vnto them for they haue becauſe they haue defied thēſelues with the lorde of hoſtes people, and magnified themſelues vpon them. The Lorde ſhalbe terrible vpon them, and deſtroy all the goddes in the lande. And al the Iſles of the heathē ſhal worſhip him euery man in his place. Ye moreouer alſo ſhal perceiue with my Swearde. Yea, he ſhal ſtretche his hand ouer the north and de- Zo. xiiij. c. ſtroy Aſſur: and ſet Nineue, yee ſhal make it deſolate, dry and waſt. The flockes and al the beaſtes of the people ſhal lie in the myddeſte of it: pellicanes and Otzes ſhal abyde in the vpper pōles of it, foules ſhalle ſyng in the wyndowes, and rauens ſhal ſit vpon the balkes, for the boordes of Cedrus trees ſhalbe rowen downe. This is the proude cariē cie-tie, that ſaid in her hart: I am, & there is cy none. O how is ſhee made ſo waſte, that ma- iiij. Me. iij. a ſter lie therin? who ſo goeth by, mocketh her Eſa. xlvj. and pointeth at her with his finger.

The. iij. Chapiter.

Euenſong. I

Wo vnto that abhominable, filthy, & cruel citie, which wil not heare, nor be reformed. Her truſt is not in the Lorde, neither wil ſhe hold her to her god. Her rulers with Ez. xxij. c. in her, are as roryng lions: her iudges are as Aba. i. c. wolues to the euening, which leaue nothing vnbyden them til the morowe. Her prophetes are lyght perſones and vnfaithfulle men, her prieſtes vnhallow the ſanctuary, and do wrong vnder the preſence of the law. But the iuſt lord that dwelt no barr by, was among them euery morowing dewyng them his lawe clerely, and ceaſſed not. But the vngodly will not learne to be aſhamed. Therefore wil I rote out this people, and deſtroy their towres, yea, I make their ſtreates ſo voide, that no man ſhall go therin. Their cities ſhalbe layde ſo rome, ſo that no body ſhalbe left, nor dwel there any more. I ſayde vnto them, a feare me, and be content to be reformed. That their dwellynge ſhulde not be deſtroyed, and that there ſhulde happen vnto them none of theſe thynges wher with I ſhal vicite them. But neuertheles, they ſtande vp early, to folow the cluthynes of their owne ymaginations. Therfore, ye ſhal waite vpon me ſayth the lorde vntil the tyme that I ſtand vpp: for I am determined, to gather the people, and to bryng the kingdomes together Ma. i. a. that I may powre out myne anger, yea all my Sop. i. c. wrathfull diſpleaſure vpon them. For al the ȝ doute, when will I cleanse the lippes of the people, that they may every one call vpon the name of the lorde, & serue hym with one lorder. Furthermore I haue subdued, and my children also whome I haue scatered abrode, shall bring me presentes beyonde the waters of Ethiopia. In that tyme thou shalt no more be confounded, because of all thyne ymaginations, where thorowe thou hast offended me: for I will take away the proude boastes of thyne honor from the, so that thou shalt no more triumphe because of my holy hyl. In the also will I leaue a small poore simple people which shall trust in the name of the lorde. The remnaunt of Israel shal doe no wyckednes, nor speake lyes: neyther shal there any deceitful tong be found in theyr mouthes. For they shall be feade, and take their rest, and no man shal make them afrayde. Geue thankes O daughter Syon, be ioyful, O Israel, reioyce and be glad de from the whole hart, o daughter Jerusalem, for the lorde hathe taken away thy punishmente, and turned backe thyne enemies. The kyng of Israell, euen the lorde him selfe is with the, so that thou needest nomore to feare any misfortune. In that tyme it shalbe saide to Jerusalem, feare not, & to Syon let not thyne handes be slacke, for the lorde thy God is with the, it is he that hath power to saue: he hath a special pleasure in the, and meruelous ioye toward the: Yea, he reioyseth ouer the with gladnes. Suche as haue ben in heauines will I gather together, & take out of thy congregation: as for the shame and reproche that hath bene layd vpon the, it shal bee farre from the. And lo, in that tyme wil I destroye all those that vexe the: I wil helpe the lame, and gather vp the cast away: yea, I wyl get them praise and honour in all landes, where they haue ben put to shame. Euen the same tyme wyll I bryng you in, and at the same tyme wyl I gather you. I will get you a name, and a good reporte among all people of the earthe, when I turne backe your captiuitie before your eies, saith the Lorde.

The. i. Chapiter.

In the seconde yere of kyng Darius, in the sixth moneth the first day of the moneth came the worde of the lorde by the prophete Aggeus, vnto Zorobabel, the Sonne of Salathiel the prince of Juda, & to Jesua the sonne of Josedech the hie priest saieng. Thus saith the Lorde of hostes, and saith: This people doth say. The tyme is not yet come to buylde vp the lordes house. Then spake the lorde by the prophete Aggeus, and sayde. Is your selues can ȝou tyme to dwell saith the Lorde of Hostes. The syluer is myne, and the golde is myne saith the Lorde of Hostes. Thus the glory of this last house, shalbe greatter then the first, saith the lorde of Hostes, and in this place will I geue thee peace, saith the Lorde of Hostes. The fyue and twentie day of the .ix. moneth, in the .ij. yere of kyng Darius, came the worde of the lorde vnto the Prophet Aggeus, saieng. Thus saith the lord God of hostes. Aske the priestes concernyng the lawe, and say * yf one beare holy flesshe in his cote lappe, and with his lappe do touche the breade, potage, wine, oyle, or any other meate, shall he be also holy? The priestes answered and saide: Nay. Then saide Aggeus: Now, yf one beyng defiled with a deadde carkase touche any of these: shalle it not be vncleane? The priestes gaue answere, and said, yea, it shalbe vncleane. Then Aggeus answered and said, euen so is this people and nation before me saith the Lorde: and so are all the workes of their handes, yea, and all that they offre is vncleane. And now I pray you consider from this day forthe, and howe it hathe gone with you afore, or euer there was layde one stone vpon an other in the temple of the lorde: that when ye came to a corne hepe of .xx. bushels there were scarce ten: * and that when ye came vnto the wyne presse, for to powre .l. pots of wyne, there were scarce .xx. For I smote you with heate, blasting and haylestones, in all the labours of your handes, yeat was ther none of you, that would turne vnto me saythe the lorde. Consider then from this day forth and afore, namely from the .xxiiij. day of the .ix. month, vnto the day that the foundacion of the Lordes Temple was layde, marke it welle, * is not the seede yet in thy barne? haue not the vynes, the figgetrees, the pomegranates, and olyne trees, hetherto yet vntrutefull, but fro this day forth, I shal make them to prosper. Moreouer the .xxiiij. day of September, came the worde of the lorde vnto Aggeus againe saieng. Speake to Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and say, I wil make bothe heauen and earth and ouer throwe the seate of the kyngdomes, Yea, and destroye the myghtye kyngdome, of the Heythen. I wyl ouerthrowe the Charioters, and those that sit vpon the, so that both horse & man shal downe, euery man thorow hys neighbours sweard, and as for the o Zorobabel saith the lord of hostes, thou sonne of Salathiel my seruant. I wil take the saith the lord, at the same time, & make the as a seale, for I haue chosen the, saith the lord of hostes.

The ende of the prophecy of Aggeus.

The boke of the prophete Zachary. The .i. Chap.

In the viij. moneth, in the .ij. yere of kyng Darius came the lorde of the lord vnto the sonne of Addo the prophete, saieng: The lord hath bene sore displeased, at your forefathers. And say thou vnto them: Thus saith the lord of Hostes: * Turne ye vnto me saith the lorde of hostes, and I wyl turne me vnto you, saith the lord of hostes: * Be ye not lyke your forefathers, vnto whome the prophetes cried afore time, saieng: Thus saith the lord god of hostes: * Turne you from your euelle wayes and wycked ymaginations. * But they would not heare nor regard me, saith the lord: what is now become of your forefathers? and the prophetes: are they yet lyue? But did not my wordes and statutes, which I commaunded by my seruaunts the prophetes vnto your forefathers: vppon this, there gane answer and said, lyke as the lorde of hostes deuised to do vnto vs, according to our wicked wayes and ymaginations, euen so hath he delt with vs. Vpon the foure and twentye daye of the eleuenth moneth, which is the moneth Sebah, in the seconde yeare of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Zachary the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophet saying, I saw by nyght, & lo there sate one vpon a * reede horse, and rode stylle among the Myrte trees, that were benethe vppon the grounde. And behinde hym were there reedde speckled, and whyte Horses. Then sayde I, O my Lorde, what are these. And the angel that talked with me, sayde vnto me. I wylle shewe thee what these bee. And the man that rode amonge the Myrte trees, answered and said. These are they whome the lord hath sent to go through the world. And they answered the angel of the lorde, that rode among the myrte trees, & said. We haue gone through the whole worlde: behold all the worlde dwelleth at ease & are quiete. Then the Lordes angel gaue answere and said, o lorde of hostes how long wylt thou be vnmercifull to Jerusalem, and to these Cities of Juda? * with whome thou hast bene displeased now these .lxx. yeres. So the lord gaue a louyng & comfortable answer vnto the angell that talked with me. And the angel that commoned with me, sayd vnto me. Cry thou and speake. Thus saith the lorde of hostes. I am exceedyng zelous ouer Jerusalem and Syon, and am sore displeased at the careles Heathen, for where I was but a lytle angry, they bidde their will that I myght destroy them. Therefore, thus sayth the Lorde, I wille turne mee againe in mercye towardes Jerusalem, so that my house shalbe builded in it sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, yea, and the plummette shalbe layde aboue in Jerusalem. Yet also, saye speake. Thus sayeth the LORDE of Hostes: My Cities shalbe in good prosperitie agayne, the LORDE shalle yet comforte Syon, and

And the Lorde shewed me foure carpenters. Then sayde I: what will these do? He answered & said. Those are the hornes which haue so scrawed Juda abrode, that no manne durst lift vp his head. But these are come to fraie them away, and to cast oute the hornes of the Gentiles, whiche lifte vppe their horne ouer the Lande of Juda, too scattre it abrode.

SO I turned me, lyftyng vp myne eies, and looked, and beholde a flyeng booke, and hee sayde vnto mee, what seeste thou? I answered, I see a flieng booke of twentye cubites long and tenne cubites broade. Then sayde hee vnto mee: This is the curse that goeth furthe ouer the whoole yearthe, for all theues shalbe iudged after this booke, and all sweaters shalbee iudged according too the same, and I wyl bryng it furth (saith the lord of hoostes) so that it shall come to the house of hym that falsely sweareth by my name, and shal remaine in hys house, & consume it, with the tymber and stones therof. Then the aungel that talked with me went furth, and sayde vnto mee, lyft vppe thyne eies, and see what is this that goeth forth? and I sayde what is it. He answered: this is a measure goyng out. He saide moreouer, Euen thus are theye that dwel vpon the whole yearth, to loke vpon and beholde there was lyft vp a talent of lede & lo a wom̃ sate in the middest of the measure and he sayde, this is vngodlines. So he cast her into the middest of the measure, and throw the lompe of leade into the mouth of the measure. Then I lift vp myne eies, and loked: and beholde there came out two weomen, and the wynde was in theire wynges, for they hadde wynges lyke the wynges of a storke, and they lift vp the measure betwixte earth and heauen. Thenne spake I to the aungelle that talked with me, whither wil these beare the measure and he sayd vnto mee, into the lande of Synear to buylde theym an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shalbe set there in his place. The.vi. Chapitre.

AGAIN I turned mee lyftyng vppe myne eies, and looked, and beholde, there came foure Charriottes, oute from betwyxte twoo Hylles, whyche Hylles, were of Brasse. In the fyrste Charriotte were redde * Horses. In the seconde Charriotte were blacke Horses. In the thyrde Chariotte, were whyte Horses. In the foure the Charyotte, were Horses, of dyuerse colours, and strong. Thenne spake I and sayd vnto the Aungelle that talked with mee: O Lorde what are these? The Aungelle answered and sayde vnto mee. * These are the foure wyndes of the heauen, whyche bee come forth to stande before the Ruler of all the earthe. That with the blacke Horse, went into the land of the northe, and the white followed them, and the speckled horses went furth toward the south. These horses were very strange, and went out, and sought to go and take their iourney ouer the whole earth. And he sayde get you hence and go thorowe the worlde, for they went thorowe the worlde. Then cried he vpon mee, and spake vnto mee, saying: beholde these that go toward the north land (let my wrathe in the north country. And the woorde of the Lorde came vnto mee, saying: Take of the prisoners, that are come from Babilon: namely Heldai, Tobiah, and Idaia, and come thou the same day, and go vnto the house of Iosiah, the sonne of Sophony. Then take golde and siluer, and make crounes therof, and set them vpon the headde of Iesua, the sonne of Iosedech, the high priest and speake vnto hym. Thus saith the lorde of hoostes, Beholde, the man whose name is * the braunche, and hee that shal spryng vppe a. Esa. ix. d. pſ. cxxvij. a

And the crounes shalbe in the temple of the Lorde, for a remembraunce vnto Helem, Tobiah, Idaiah, and Hen, the sonne of Sophony and suche as be farre of, shal come & build the temple of the lorde, that ye may know how that the Lorde of hoastes hath sent mee vnto you. And this shal come to passe, yf ye wil herken diligentlye, vnto the voyce of the Lorde, your God. ¶ The.vij. Chapitre.

IT happened also in the.iiij. yere of kyng Darius, that the woorde of the Lord came vnto Zacharye, in the fourth day of the.ix. moneth, whiche is called, Casleu: what time Sarasar and Rogomelech, and the men that were with them sent vnto Bethel to pray before the lorde, and that they shoulde saye vnto the priestes whiche were in the house of the lorde of hostes, and to the prophetes. Shulde I wepe in the * fifth moneth, and abstaine as I haue done now in certaine yeres? Then came the woorde of the lorde of hostes vnto me saying: speake vnto al the people of the land, and to the priestes, & saye, when ye fasted & mourned in the fifth * and seuenth month (now this lxx. yeares) didde ye fast vnto me? when ye did eate also & drynke, did you not eate and drynke for your owne selues? Are not these the woordes whiche the lorde spake by hys prophets afore tyme when Ierusalem was yet enhabited and welthy, & the cities rounde about her? when there dwelt men, both towarde the Southe, and in the plaine countries? And the woorde of the lorde came vnto mee saying: Thus saith the lorde of hostes. * Execute true Iudgement: shew mercy and louyng kindnesse: euerye manne to hys brother. Oppresse the Widowe, the Fatherlesse, the Straunger and poore no wronge, and lette no manne imagine euel against his brother in his hart. * Neuertheles, they wold not take hede, but turned their backes, & stopped their eares, that they shulde not heare: Yea, their mawe their

SO the woorde of Lorde the came vnto me saieng: Thus saith the Lord of Hoastes I was in a great zelouse ouer Syon: Yea I haue bene very zelous ouer her in a great displeasure. Thus saithe the Lorde of Hoastes. Exa.i.d. I wyll turne mee agayne vnto Syon, and wyll dwelle in the middeste of Jerusalem: * so that Jerusalem shalbee called a faithfull and true citie, the Hylle of the Lorde of Hoastes. Yea, an holy Hylle. Thus saithe the Lorde of Hoastes. There shalle olde menne, and wemen dwelle agayne, in the Streates of Jerusalem, yea, suche as goo with Staues in their handes for very age. The streates of the Citie also shalbe ful of yongue boyes and B Zach. xiii.d. damoselles, playeng vpon the stretes. Thus saithe the Lorde of Hoastes, if the residue of this people thinke it impossible in these daies * thoulde it therefore bee impossible in my syghte, saythe the Lorde of Hoastes? Thus saythe the Lorde of Hoastes. Lette youre handes bee strong, ye that nowe heare these woordes by the mouthe of the Prophetes, whiche bee in these dayes, that the foundacion is layed vpon the Lorde of Hoastes house, that the temple may be builded. For why before these dayes, Agge.i.a. * neyther menne, nor cattalle coulde wynne any thynge, neither might any manne come in, and oute, in resse for trouble, but I lette euery manne go against hys neighbour. For thus saithe the Lorde of Hoastes: Like as I deuised too punnishe you, what tyme you fathers prouoked mee vnto wrathe, saith the Lorde of Hoastes, and thereof not. Euen so am I determined nowe in these dayes, for to doue well vnto the house of Juda and Jerusalem, therefore, feare yee not. Nowe the not thynges that ye shal do are these:* Speake Ephe.iiii.c. euery man the truthe vnto his neighboure, ex- Zachar.viii.a ecute iudgement truely and peaceably wythin Malo.i.b. your portes, none of you imagine euell in his heartte agaynste hys neighboure, and loue no false othes: for al these are the thynges that I hate saith the Lorde. And the woorde of the Lorde of Hoastes came vnto me, saiyng: thus sayeth the Lorde of Hoastes. The fast of the fourth moneth, the fast of the fifth, the fast of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shalbe ioy and gladnes, and prosperous high feastes vnto the house of Juda: only loue the truthe & peace. For the king of Gaza shal perysshe, and at Ascalon Note.yn. shal no man dwel. Strangers shal dwel at Asdod, and as for the pryde of the philistines, I shal rote it out. Their blouddy wil I take away from their mouth, & ther abhominations from emong ther tethe. Thus shal they be left for our god, yea, they shalbe as a prince in Juda, & Accaron like as a Jebusite. And so wil I compas my hous round about with men of war goyng to & fro, that no oppressour come vpon them any more. For that haue I sen now with mine eies. Reioyce thou greatly o daughter of

I will roote out the charettes from Ephraym, and the horse from Jerusalem, the battaile bowes shalbe destroied. He shal geue the doctrine of peace vnto the Heathen, * & his dominion shalbe from the one Sea to the other, and from the flouds to the ende of the worlde. Thou also thorow the bloude of thy couenaunt, shalt let * the prisoners out of the pitte, wherin is no water. Tourne ye nowe to the stronge holde ye that be in prison, and long sore to be deliuered. And this daye I bringe the woorde, that I will rewarde the double againe. For Juda haue I bente as a bowe for me, and Ephraym haue I filled. Thy sonnes, O Syon will I raise vp against the Grekes, and make the as a Gyauntes swerde. The Lord God shalbe seene aboue the, & his darte shal go forth as the lightenyng.

The Lorde God shal blowe the trompet, and shal come forth as a storme out of the South.

D. The Lorde of hostes shal defende them, thei shal consume & deuoure, & subdue them with * lynge stones. Thei shal drynke & rage as it were thorow wyne. Thei shalbe filled lyke bassins & as the hornes of the alter. The lord their God shal deliuer them in the day as the flocke of his people. For as precious stoones of a diademe thei shalbe set vp ouer his lande. O how prosperous & goodly a thyng shal that be? The corne shal make the young men cheerfull, & the newe wyne the maidens.

The. x. Chapitter

Pray the Lord then by times for to geue the latter raine, * so shall the Lorde make bright cloudes, and geue you raine enough for al the encrease of the felde. For vaine is the answere of idolles. The soothsayers se lyes, and tel but vaine dreames, the comforte that thei geue is nothyng worth. Therfore go thei astraie lyke a flocke of shepe, and are troubled, because thei haue no * shepeherde. My wrathful displeasure is moued at the shepeherdes, and I will visite the goates. For the Lorde of hostes will graciously visite his flocke the house of Juda, and holde them as a goodly faire horse in the battaile. Out of Juda shall come the helmet * the nayle, the battail bowe, and al the Princes togethre. Thei shalbe as the Gyauntes, which in the battaile treade downe the myre vpon the stretes. Thei shall fighte, for the Lorde shalbe with them, so that the horsemen shalbe confounded. I will comforte the house of Juda, and preserue the house of Joseph. I will bringe them also, for I pitie them, and thei shalbe lyke as thei were, when I had not caste them of. For I the Lorde am their

I wil blow for them, & gather them together, for I wil redeme them. They shalle encreace, as they encreased afore. I wil sow them among the people, that they may think vppon mee in farre countries: they shall lyue with their children, and turne againe. I wyll bryng them agayne also out of the land of egipt, and gather theym out of Assiria. I wyll carye theym into the lande of Gilead, and to libanus, & there shal want nothing. He shall go vpon the sea of trouble, and smyte the sea wawes, so that all the floudes shalbee dried vp. The proude boastyng of Assur, shalbe cast downe, and the scepter of Egipt shalbee taken away. I will comforte theym in the lorde, that thei may walke in his name, saith the Lorde.

THe heuy burthen whiche the Lorde hath deuised for Israel. Thus saith the Lord * which spreade the heauens abrode, laide the foundation of the yerth, ‡ and geueth man the breath of lyfe. Beholde, I will make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfette, vnto all the people that are rounde about her. * Yea Juda hym selfe also shalbe in the siege against Jerusalem. At the same tyme will I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for al people, so that al suche as lifte it vp, shalbe torne and rent: and al the people of the yearth shalbe gathered together against it. * In that day saith the Lord I wil make al horses abashed, and those that ryde vpon them to be out of their wittes, I wil open myne yes vpon the house of Juda, and smite all the horses of the people with blyndnesse. And the Rulers of Juda shall say in their hartes: The enhabiters of Jerusalem shal geue me consolacion in the Lord of hoostes their God. In that tyme will I make the Rulers of Juda lyke an hote burnyng ouen with wood, and lyke a trestet of fire among the strawe, so that thei shal consume al the people rounde about them, both vpon the right hande and the lefte. Jerusalem also shalbe enhabited againe: namely in the same place where Jerusalem standeth.

C. The Lorde shal preserue the tentes of Juda lyke as afore tyme, so that the glorie of the house of Dauid, and the glorie of the citezyns of Jerusalem shalbe but litle regarded, in comparison of the glory of Juda. In that day shal the Lorde defende the citezyns of Jerusalem, so that the weakest then among them shalbe as ‡ Dauid: & the house of Dauid shalbe lyke as Gods house, and as the Aungel of the Lord before them. At the same tyme will I go about to destroie all suche people as come against Jerusalem. Moreouer vpon the house of Dauid, and vpon the citezyns of Jerusalem * will I powre out the spirite of grace and compassion, so that thei shal lo-mal be wepe hym as mennis mourne for their only begotten sonne: yea, and be sory for hym as men are sory for their first childe. * Then shall there be a great mournyng at Jerusalem: ‡ lyke as the lamentacion at Adremmon in the felde of Waggadon. And the lande shal bewaile euery kynred by them selues alone and their wyues by them selues. The kynred of the house of ‡ Nathan by themselues. The kynred of the house of Dauid them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues. The kynred of the house of Leui them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues. The kynred of the house of Semei themselues alone, and their wyues by themselues. In lyke maner all the other generacions euery one by them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues.

The .xij. Chapiter.

IN that tyme shal the house of Dauid and the citezyns of Jerusalem haue an open * wel, to wash of synne and vncleannesse. And then (saith the Lorde of hoostes.) ‡ I wil destroye the names of the ydolles out of the lande: so that thei shal nomore be put in remembraunce. * As for the false Prophetes also, and the vncleane spirite, I shal take them out of the lande. So that if any of them prophecy any more, * his owne father and mother that begat hym, shal say vnto hym: thou shalt dye, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of the Lorde: yea, his owne father and mother that begat hym shall wounde hym, when he prophecieth. And then shall those Prophetes be confounded, euery one of his vision when he prophecieth: neither shall they weare sackclothes any more, to deceiue men withall. But he shalbe faine to say: * I am no Prophete: I am an househande man, for so I am taught by * Adam fro my youth vp. And if it be said vnto him: how came these woundes then in thyne handes? He shal answere. Thus am I wounded in the house of myne owne frendes. Aryse, O thou sweorde vpon my shepeherde, and vpon the Prynce of my people, saith the Lorde of hoostes. Smyte * the shepeherde, & the shepe shalbe scattered abrode: and so I will turne myne hande to the litle ones. And it shall come to passe (saith the Lorde:) that in all the lande two partes shalbe rooted out, * but the thirde parte shall remaine therin. ‡ And the same thirde parte will I bryage therowe the fyre, and will clense them as the siluer is clensed: yea, and trie them lyke as golde is tried. * Then shal thei cal vpon my name, and I wil heare them: I wil say: it is my people. And thei shal say: Lorde my God.

way into captiuitie, and the residue of the people shal not be caried out of the citie. Af-from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the kynplage, where with the lord wil smite al people, that haue fought against Jerusalem. Ramely, their flesshe shal consume away, though they stande vpon their feete, their eyes shalbe corrupt in their holes, and their tongue shal consume in their mouth. In that day shall the Lord make a greate sedicion among them, so that one man shal take another by the hande, and laie his handes vpon the handes of his neighboure. Juda shall fight also against Jerusalem, and the goodes of al the Heathen shalbe gathered together round about: golde and siluer, and a very great multitude of clothes. And so shal this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and al the beastes that shalbe in the host, like as vonder plage was.

Euery one that remaineth then of al the people, which he came against Jerusalem, shal go vp easly, to worship the kyng (euen the lord of hostes) & kepe the feast of tabernacles.
And who that generacion vpon the yearth goeth not to Jerusalem for to worship the kyng (euen the Lorde of hostes) vpon the same shal come no raine. Yf the kynred of Egypte go not vp, & rome not, it shal not raine vpon them neither. This shalbe the plage where with the Lorde wil smite al the Heathen, that come not vp to kepe the feaste of tabernacles. yea, this shalbe the same plage of Egypte and the same plage of al people that go not vp to kepe the feaste of tabernacles. At that tyme shall the rydyng gere of the hostes be holy vnto the Lorde, and the kettles in the Lordes house shalbe lyke the bacens before the aulter: yea, all the kettles in Jerusalem and Juda, shalbe holy vnto the Lorde of hostes, and al they that sea offryn-

And ye shal know that I haue sent this commaundement vnto you: that my* couenaunt which I made with Leui, might stande (sayeth the Lorde of hoastes). I made a couenaunt of lyfe and peace with hym: this I gaue hym, that he might stande in awe of me: and so he did feare me, and had my name in reuerence. The lawe of veruthe was in his mouthe, and there was no wickednesse found in his lippes. He walked with me in peace and equitie, and did turne many one away from their synnes. For in the priestes lippes shulde be sure knowlege, that men may seke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messenger of the Lord of hoastes. But as for you ye are gone clene out of the way, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the law: * ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the Lorde of hoastes. Therefore will I also make you to be despised, and to be of no reputacion among all the people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but haue bene partial in the Lawe. * Haue we not all one father? Hath not one GOD made vs? * why doeth every one of vs then despise his owne brother, and so breake the couenaunt of our fathers? Howe hath Juda offended: yea, the abhominacion is doen in Israell, and in Jerusalem, * for Juda hath defiled the Sanctuary of the Lord, which he loued, and hath kepte the daughter of a straunge God. * The Lorde shall destroie the man that doeth this: yea, both the Maister and the Scholer out of the Tabernacle of Jacob, with hym that offered vp meateofferyng vnto the Lord of hoastes. Howe haue ye brought it to this? ye haue again, that the aultar of the Lorde is couered with teares, weping, and mourning: so that I wil nomore regard the meate offeryng, neither will I receiue, or accept any thyng at your handes. And yet ye say: wherefore? Euen because that where as the Lorde made a couenaunt, betwixt thee and thy wyfe of thy youth, thou hast despysed her, * yet is she thine owne companion, and maried wyfe.

So did not the one, and yet had he an excellent spirite. What did then the one? He sought the Seede promised of God. Therefore loke wel to your spirite, and let no man despise the wyfe of his youthe. * If thou hatest her, * put her away, saith the Lorde God of Israel, and geue her clothyng for the seasone saith the Lorde of hoastes. Loke wel then to your spirite, and despise her not. * Ye greue the Lorde with your woordes, and yet ye saie: Where with haue we grieued hym? In this that ye say: All that do euel are good in the sight of God, and such he pleaseth him. Or els where is the God that punisheth.

To the Reader.

A consideracion that the Bookes before are founde in the Hebrue tongue: receyued of al men and that the other folowyng, whiche are called Hagiographa (because thei ware wont to be redde, not openly and in common, but as it ware in secrete and apaarte) are neither founde in the Hebrue, nor in the Caldy: in whiche tongues thei haue not of longe bene written (onelesse that it ware happely the booke of Sapience) where vpon it wer nowe very paede to repaire and amende them: And that also thei are not receiued nor taken as legitimate & lawful, aswell of the Hebrues as of the whole Churche, as S. Hierome sheweth: we haue separated them, and set them aside, that thei may the better be knowen: to thentent that men may knowe of whiche bookes wrytten ought to be receiued, and of whiche not. For the saide S. Hierome speakyng of the booke of Iudith (whiche is Hagiographe) saith, that the auctorite therof is not esteemed, wrytten thy, and sufficient to confirme and stablishe the thynges that light in disputacion. And generally of al the bookes called Hagiographa, he saith that men may reade them to the edifyng of the people: but not to confirme and strenghten the doctrine of the Churche. I leaue out here the lawe (as thei cal it of Canon. c. Sancta Romana. xix. Distinc. where he sheweth his iudgement. Likewyse the Glose of. c. Canones. xxi. distinc. whiche saith, that men reade them, but not in general: as though he shoulde say, that generally, and thoroughly thei are not allowed. And not without a cause: For that thei haue bene corrupted and falsified in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by Eusebius in his booke called Historia Ecclesiastica: Whiche thyng is eny to be knowen euen now a daies in certein pointes, namely in the bookes of the Machabies, whose seconde booke S. Hierome confesseth that he founde not in the Hebrue, by the meanes wherof it is become vnto vs the more suspecte, and the lesse receyued. In lyke maner is it of the thirde and fourth booke of Esdras, whiche S. Hierome protesteth that he wolde not haue translated, esteemyng them for dreames: where as Iosephus yet in his booke of his Antiquities declareth the summe of the matter after the maner of a storie, aswel of the booke of Machabies as of the. iii. booke of Esdras: although he esteeme the bookes compiled from the reigne of kyng Artaxerxes vnto his tyme, to be Hagiographa. Wherfore then, when thou wilt maintein any thyng for certein, rendryng a reason of thy faith, take hede to proceede therin by the lyuyng and pitthie Scriptures, folowyng S. Peter, whiche saith: Me that speaketh, let hym speake as though he spake the wordes of God. Me saith the wordes of God, as a thyng most true and certein, opened by the Prophetes and Apostles, inspired with the holy Ghost: of whome we haue witnesse more cleare then the day. Lawers hauyng great desire to confirme and stablishe their opinions by the lawe of Erudelissimus man, say, that thei shame to speake without lawe: Howe muche more feare and dreade sine lege lothen ought he to haue, saith he that is a Christia, the whiche holdeth not pynckell, qui. or reseth not in the lawes of the lyuyng God: but in mennes inuencions, iudgyng of al thynges accordyng to them, & leanyng to an vncertein ymaginacion and phantasie? Let vs therfore that are builded on the foundacion of the holy Prophetes and Apostles, and on the heade corner stone (on whiche thei them selues ware founded, and whiche thei preached, that is Iesus Christ, the sure stone) leane thynges that are vncertein to folowe the certein: holdyng vs and restyng vs in them, and fastenyng our ancre there, as in a sure place. For our Christen faith consisteth not in doubteful thynges, but in the plaine and most certein assurance, and in most true persuasion, taken and confirmed by infallible verite. In whiche God graunt vs to walke perpetually, to thentent that accordyng to it (fulfillyng his holy wil in vs, and settyng aside al inuencions contrary vnto hym) we may lyue to his honour, and to the edifyeng of his Churche.

So be it.

Yet set the Priestes also in order (accordyng to their dayly courses) beyng arayed in long garmentes in the temple of the Lord. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holy ministers of Israel, that they shoulde hallowe them selues vnto the Lorde, to set the holy Arke of the Lord, in the house that Kyng Salomon the sonne of Dauid had builded, & said: Ye shal nomore beare the arke vpō your shoulders. Nowe serue your Lord & take the charge of his people of Israell, after your dillages & your tribes: accordyng as Kyng Dauid the Kyng of Israel, hath ordeined, & accordyng as Salomon his sonne hath honorably prepared: yea, loke that ye al do seruice in the holie accordyng to the ordeyng & distribution of the principal men, whiche are appointed out of the tribes to do seruice for the children of Israel. Kill the Paaseouer & * prepare offerynges for your brethren, and do accordyng to the commaundement of the Lorde, whiche was geuen vnto Moses. And vnto the people that was found, Josias gaue .xxx. And after the ordring of the principall men in the tribes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the sight of the people accordyng as it is written in the booke of Moses, & they roosted the Easter lambe as accordyng was. As for the thanke offerynges and the other, they dighte them in kettelles and pottes, & set them before the people with good will, and afterwarde before them selues & the Priestes. For the Priestes offered the fat vntil the tyme was expyred, but the Leuites prepared for them selues, & for their brethren the children of Aaron. that diligently, to that none went out of his standyng and seruice to their brethren (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thynges performed, that belonged to the offeryng of the Lord. In that day they helde the Paaseouer and offred thanke offerynges beside the sacrifice of the Lorde accordyng to the commaundement of kyng Josias. So the children of Israell, whiche were then present helde an honourable Paaseouer, and the feast of swete breade seuen dayes long. Yea, suche a Paaseouer was not kepte in Israell from the tyme of the Prophet Samuel. And al the Kynges of Israel, helde not suche an Easter as this, whiche kyng Josias helde, & the Priestes, the Leuites, the Jewes, and al Israel, of al them that were at Jerusalem. And in the eightene yeare of the raigne of Josias was this Paaseouer kept. And with a perfect harte did kyng Josias order al his workes before the Lord, & the thynges that were written of hym in tymes paste, concernyng those that synned and were vngodly against the Lorde before all people: and that sought not the worde of the Lorde vpon Israel. * After al these actes of kyng Josias, Pharao the Kyng of Egypte went vp, and came toward Carmis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete hym. Then sent the Kyng of Egypt to Josias, saying: What have I to do with the, O Kyng of Juda? I am not sent of the Lord to fight against the, for my warre is vpō Euphrates, go then thy way home againe in al the hast. And Josias would not turne againe vpon his charet, but vndertoke to fight against hym, and herkened not vnto the worde of the Prophete, whiche he tolde hym out of the mouthe of God, but pitched battaile against hym in the felde of Mageddy. And the princes preased to kyng Josias. Then saide the Kyng vnto his seruauntes: Cary me away out of the battaile, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes tooke hym away out of the fronte of the battaile. Then sat he vp vpon the seconde charet, came to Jerusalem, died, & was buried in his fathers sepulchre. And in all Jury they mourned for Josias, yea the rulers also with their wiues made lamentacion for hym vnto this day. And this was doen euer til in Israel. These thynges are written in the booke of the stories of the Kinges of Juda, namely al the actes & workes of kyng Josias, his kingly power & maiestie, his vnderstādyng in the lawe of God, & what he did: yea, thynges whiche are not written in the booke of the kynges of Israel & Juda. * And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, and made hym Kyng in stede of Josias his father, when he was .xxiii. yeare olde. And he raigned ouer Israel .iii. monethes. And the kyng of Egypt put hym down, that he should

As for theim of the Kynges councell with the Kyng hym selfe and Zaracles his brother, he toke them and caried them away prisoners into Egipte. Fyue and twenty yeare olde was Joachym when he was made Kyng in the land of Juda and Jerusalem, and he did euill before the Lorde. After this * Nabuchodonozor the Kyng of Babilon came vp, and bounde hym with bandes of yron, & caried hym vnto Babilon. Nabuchodonozor also toke al the vesselles that wer halowed in the temple of the Lord, & al the iewels, & caried thē vnto Babilon, & brought them into his owne temple at Babilon. Of his vnclennes and vngodlines, it is written in the booke of the actes of the Kynges. And Joachym his sonne raigned in his stead. He was made Kyng, beyng xviii. yere olde, & raigned but iii. monethes & x. daies in Jerusalem, and did euill before the Lorde. So after a yere Nabuchodonozor sent & caused him to be brought vnto Babilon with the holy vessels of the Lorde, and made Sedechias his brother Kyng of Juda & Jerusalem, when he was. xxi. yeare olde, & he raigned xi yere. And he did euil also in the sight of the Lorde, & cared not for the wordes that ware spoken vnto hym * by the Prophete Jeremy at the mouthe of the Lorde. And where he had made an othe vnto Kyng Nabuchodonozor, he forswore hymselfe, & fell from hym hauyng a stif necke and harte, & transgressed al the statutes & ordinaunces of the Lorde God of Israell. The rulers also & the heades of the people of the Lord did muche euil, & became vngodly, more then the Heathen, beyng defyled in all maner of abhominations: Yea, and defiled the holy temple of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And the God of their fathers sent his messengers vnto them, to turne them backe: & to cal them againe from their synnes: for he would faine haue spared them for his holy Tabernacles sake. Neuertheles, thei had his messengers in derision, & loke what God spake vnto thē by his Prophetes, thei made but a sporte of it. This dreme dured so long til the Lord was wroth with his people for their vngodlines, til he caused the Kynges of the Chaldees to come vp, whiche slewe their younge men with the swerde yea, euen in the compasse of their holy Temple, & spared nobody neither young nor olde, neither maiden nor young mā but thei ware all deliuered into the powre of the Kynges of the Chaldees, & al the holy vessels of the Lorde, & the Kynges treasures toke thei & caried them vnto Babilon. As for the houses of the Lorde thei went into it, & brake it, & brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fyre vpon her towers, destroied al her noble buildynges, and brought them to naught, and the people that ware not slain with the swerd, thei caried vnto Babill. Thus became thei prisoners and bondmē of the Kyng of Babilon, til thei ware deliuered and raigned for themselues, * when the wordes of the Lorde ware fulfilled, whiche he promised them by the mouthe of the Prophet Jeremy, and til the lande had her rest: namely all the tyme that it laye waste, had it rest and quietnes. lxxvii. yeres.

NOwe * when Kyng Cyrus raigned ouer the Persians, & when the Lorde would performe the worde that he had promised by the mouth of the Prophet Jeremy: the Lord raised vp the spirite of Cyrus, the Kyng of the Persians: so that he caused this writyng to be proclaimed throughout his wholerealm saying: Thus saith the Kyng of Persians: The Lord of Israel the hye lorde hath made me Kyng of the lande, and commaunded me to builde hym an house at Jerusalem in Jewry. Ye there be any now of your people: the lorde be with hym, & go vp with hym to Jerusalē. And al thei that dwel round about that place shal helpe thē, whether it be with gold, with siluer, with gittes, with horses, & necessarie cattel, al other thynges that are brought with a frewil to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem. And thei that wer about them helped them with al maner of golde, & siluer, & catel also, & with many liberall gittes, and this did many one, whose mynde was stirred vp therto. * Kyng Cyrus also brought forth the vessels, & ornamentes, that wer halowed vnto the Lorde whiche Nabuchodonozor the Kyng of Babilon had caried away from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to his Idol, & ymage (and deliuered them to Methridatus, his treasurer & by hym thei ware deliuered to Salmanasar the debitie in Jewry. whiche they complayned vnto the kynge of them in Iewry & Ierusalem. The letter was made after this maner. Vnto thy seruauntes Rathimus the story writer, Sabellius the scribe, and other iudges of the courte in Celosiria, and Phenices. Be it knowen and manifest to our lorde the kyng, that the Iewes whiche are come vp frō you vnto vs, into the rebellious & wicked citie, begynne to buylde it agayne, and the walles about it, and to set vp the temple a newe. Nowe if this citie & the walles therof be set vp agayne: they shal not only refuse to geue tributes and taxes, but also rebell vtterly against the kyng And for so muche as they take this in hande nowe about the temple, we thought it reason, to thincke no leasse of it but to shew it vnto our Lorde the kyng, and to certifie hym therof, to the intent that if it please the kyng, he may cause it to be sought in the bookes of olde, & thou shalt fynde suche warnyng written, and shalt vnderstande that this citie hath alwaye bene rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subdued kynges & rulers and that the Iewes whiche dwell therin, haue euer bene a rebellious, obstinate, vnfaythfull, and fyghtynge people, for the whiche cause this citie is wasted. Wherfore nowe we certifie our lorde the kyng, that if this citie be buylded and occupied agayne, and the walles therof set vp a newe, thou canst haue no passage into Celosiria and Phenices. Then wrote the kyng to Rathimus, the story writer, to Balthemus, to Sabellius the scribe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Siria, & Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the epistle whiche thou sentest vnto me, and haue cōmaunded to make diligent searche, and haue founde, that the citie hath euer resisted kynges, that the same people are disobedient, and haue caused muche warre, and that myghty kynges haue reygned in Ierusalem, whiche also haue raysed vp taxes of Siria, & Phenices. Wherfore I haue commaunded those people, that they shall not buylde the citie, that they make no more in it, and that they proceade no further with the buyldyng, for so muche as it myght be the cause of warre and displeasure vnto kynges. Nowe when Rathimus and Sabellius the scribe and the rulers in the lande had red the writyng of kyng Artharerses, they gat them togeather, and came in all the haste to Ierusalem with an hoaste of horsemen, and with muche people of fote, and forbade them to buylde. And so they lefte of from buyldyng of the temple, vnto the seconde yeare of kyng Darius.

1. KYng Darius made a great feaste vnto his seruauntes, vnto all his courte, and to all the officers of Medea and Persia, yea, to all from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred and xxvii. countreis. So when they had eaten & dronken beyng satisfyed, & were gone home agayne Darius the kyng went into hys chābre, layde hym downe to slepe, and so awaked. Then the thre yonge men, that kept the kynges persone, and watched his body, commoned among them selues, and spake one to another: let euery one of vs say some thynge and loke whose sentences wyser and more excellent then the other, vnto hym shall Kynge Darius geue great gyftes, and clothe hym with purple, he shal geue him bedsteds of golde to dryncke in, clothes of golde and coueryngers, he shall make hym a costly charet & a bridle of gold, he shall geue hym a bonet of white sylke, and a chayne of gold about his necke: yea, he shalbe the seconde and paynycpall nexte vnto kynge Darius, and that because of his wisdome, and shalbe called the kynges kynsman. So euery one wrote his meanyng, sealed it and layde it vnder the kynges pillowe, and sayde: when the kyng ariseth, we will geue hym our writynges, and loke whose worde the kyng and his lordes iudge to be the moste wysely spoken, the same shall haue the victory. One wrote: Wyne is a strōg thyng. The second wrote: The kyng is stronger. The thirde wrote: Women haue yet more strength, but aboue all thynges the truthe beareth away the victory. Now when the kyng was ryssen vp, they toke their writynges and deliuered them vnto hym, and so he red them. Then sent he furth to cal all his chefe lordes and all the deputes and rulers of the countreis of Media & Persia. And when they were set downe in the counsail, the writynges was red before them. And he cōmaunded to call for the yonge men that they might declare their meanynges themselues by mouth. So when they were sent for, & came in, the kyng sayde vnto them: Shewe vs and make vs vnderstand what the thynges are that ye haue written. Then began the first (which had spoken of the strength of wyne) and sayde: O ye men* wyne is maruelous strong, and ouer commeth them that drynke it: it deceyueth the mynde and bryngeth both the poore man and the kyng to dotage & vanitie. Thus doth it also with the bond man and with the free, with the poore & ryche: it taketh away their vnderstandyng, and maketh them careles & merry, so that none of them remembreth any heynesse, debte, or dute. It causeth a man to thyncke also that the thyng that he doth is honest and good: and remembreth not that he is a kyng, nor that he is in authorite, and that he ought not to do suche thynges. they are layde downe from the wyne, and so eyther vp agayne, they can not tell what they bid: iudge ye nowe, is not wyne the strongest? For who would els take in hand to do such thynges? And when he had spoken this, he helde his tongue. ¶ The iiij. Chap.

II. Then the seconde (whiche had sayde: that the kyng was strongest) began to speake saying: O ye men, are not they the strongest and moste excellent, that conquere the lande and the sea, and all that is in the sea, and in the yearth? Nowe is the kyng Lorde of all these thynges and hath dominion of them all and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he sende his men furth a warfare, they go and breake downe hille, walles, and towers. They are slayne, and (lyke other men) them selues, and ouerpasse not the kynges worde. If they get the victory, they bryng the kyng all the spoyle. Likewise the other that medle not with warres & fyghtyng, but tille the grounde, when they reape they bryng tribute vnto the kyng. And if the kyng alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll: If he cõmaunde to forgeue, they forgeue. If he commaunde to smyte, they smyte: yf he bydde bynde away, they bynde away. If he commãde to buylde, they buylde. If he commaunde to breake downe, they breake downe. If he commaunde to plant, they plante. The commen people and the rulers are obedient vnto hym. And the kyng in the meane season eateth hym downe, eateth and drynketh and taketh his reste, then kepe they watche round about the kyng, and not one of them dare get hym out of the waye, to do his owne busynes but muste be obediente vnto the kynge at a worde. Iudge ye nowe, O ye menne howe should not he go farre aboue vnto whom men are thus obedyent? And when he had spoken thus, he helde his tongue. Then thyrde whose name was Zorobabel, which had spoken of women, and of truthe began to saye after this maner. O ye men it is not the greate kynge, it is not the multitude of men, neyther is it wyne that excelleth: who is it then that hath the Lordshyppe ouer them? Haue not women borne them, and brought them vp, that plante the vynes, wherout the wyne commeth? They make garmentes for all men, they geue honoure vnto all men, and without women can not men lyue. If they gather gold and syluer, and all precious thynges, & se a wel fauored woman, they loue al to gether and turne their eyes only vnto the woman, & gape vpon her, and haue more desire vnto her, then vnto the syluer and golde, or any maner of precious thyng. A man leaueth his father that brought hym vp, leaueth his owne natural countrey, and cleaueth vnto the woman, yea he iopardeth his lyfe with the woman, and remembreth neyther father nor mother, nor countrey. By this then ye muste nedes knowe that women haue dominion ouer you. Doth it not greue you? A man taketh his swearde, and goeth his waye to seeke, to kyll, to murther, to sayle vpon the sea, and seeth a Lion and goeth in the darckenesse, and when he hathe stolen, discerned and robbed, he bryngeth it vnto his loue. Agayn, a man loueth his wife better then father or mother: yea, many one there be, that reuse out of their wittes, and become bond men for their wyues sakes, many one also hath perished haue done sayne, and haue sinned because of women. And now D. beleue me I knowe a kyng, whiche is great in his power, and all landes stande in awe of hym, and no man dare laye hande vpon hym: yet dyd Ice, that Apamea, (the doughter of the great kyng Bartacus) the kynges concubyne, sat beside the kynge vpon the ryghte hand, and toke of his croune from his head, and sette it vpon her owne heade and smote the kyng with her lefte hande. Moreouer, the kyng loked vpon her with open mouthe if she laughed vpon hym, he laughed also, but if she toke any displeasure with hym: the kyng was fayne to flatter her, and geue her good wordes, tyll he had gotten her fauoure agayne. O ye men are not women then stronger? Great is the yearth, and hye is the heauen. Who doth these thynges? The the kyng and the gyrles loked one vpon another. So he began to speake of the truthe: O ye men, are not women stronger? Great is the earth, hye is the heauen, swifte is the course of the sonne, * he compasseth the heauen rounde a- Eccle.i.a. boute, and fetcheth his course agayne to his owne place in one daye. Is he not excellent that doth this? Yea, greate is the truthe, and stronger then all thynges. All the yearth calleth vpon the truthe, the heauen prayseth it, all workes quake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnryghteous thyng. Wyne is vnryghteous, the kyng is vnryghteous, women are vnryghteous, al the children of men are vnryghteous: yea, all their workes are vnryghteous, and there is no truthe in them, in their vnryghteousnesse also shall they be destroied and perysshe. As for the truthe it endureth, & is alway strong, it liueth and cõquereth for Esa.xl.a. euermore: worlde without ende. The truthe 2.Esd.cxvii.a. accepteth no persones, it putteth no dif- C. rence betwyxte ryche or poore, betwyxte myghtie or symple, but doth ryghte vnto euery man, whether they be euell or good, and all menne are louingly dealt withall in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it, there is no vnryghteous thyng but it hath kingdome and power and maiestie for euermore. Blessed be the God of truthe. And with that he helde his tongue, and all the people cryed and sayde: Great is the truthe, and above al.

* The kyng & all the people that rule those thynges, haue not Women borne.

lyke, more then is appointed in the writyng, and I shall geue it the, for thou arte founde wyser then thy companions, thou shalt sytte next me, and be my kynesman. Then sayde he vnto the kyng: remember thy promise & vowe which thou hast vowed and promised (in the daye when thou camest to the kyngdome) to buylde vp Jerusalem, and to sende agayne all the vessels, and Jewels that were taken away out of Jerusalem, whiche Cyrus separated, when he offred in Babilon, & would sende them agayne. And thy vowde was to buylde vp the temple, whiche the Edomites brent when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Chaldees. This only (O kyng) is the thyng that I require, this is the maiestie which I desire and aske of the, that thou performe the vowe whiche thou with thyne owne mouthe hast made vnto the kyng of heauē. Then Darius the kyng rose vp, and kyssed hym, * and wrote a letter vnto al the deputes and Shreues, to all the lordes and nobles, that they should conuey hym forth, & all the that wold go vp with hym. He wrote a letter also vnto all the Shreues that were in Celosyria, and Phenices, & vnto Lydanus, that they should driue Cedre trees from Lydanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the cytie withal. Moreouer, he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme into Jewry because of the fredome, that no officer nor ruler, nor Shreue, should come to their dores, and that all their lande whiche they had conquered, should be fre and not tributary: And that the Edomites should geue ouer the cities & vyllages of the Jewes, whiche they had taken in, yea, and that they should yearly geue twenty talentes to the buylding of the temple, vntyll the tyme that it were finished, and to the dayly halowyng of the brent offerynges (as this cōmaunded) ten talentes yearly also. And that all they whiche came from Babylon to buylde the cytie, should haue fre libertie, they and their chyldren, and all the priestes. He wrote the greatnes also and cōmaunded that the holy garment should be geuen them wherin they ministred, and wrote that commaundementes should be geuen to the Leuites, vntil the day, that the house were finished, and Jerusalem buylded vp, & cōmaunded that al they that watched the cytie should haue their porcions and wages. He gaue ouer also all the vessels that Cirus had separated frō Babylō and al that Cirus had geuen in commaundement, the same charged he also that it should be done, and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when this yong man was gone forth, he turned his face toward Jerusalem, and prayed the kyng of heauen, and sayde: * Of the commeth the victory, of the commeth wisdome and clearenes, and I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou O lord thou God of our fathers. And so he toke the letters, and went vnto Babylō. And when he came there, he tolde this vnto al his brethren that were at Babylō, & they praysed the God of their fathers, that he had geuen thē tetremias & libertie to go vp & to buylde Jerusalem & the temple (wherin the name of the lord is called vpon) & they resorted with instrumentes & gladnes seuen daies long.

sonne of Salathiel, & Jesua the sonne of Josedeck stode vp and began to buylde the house of the lorde at Jerusalem, when the prophetes of the lorde helped them. At the same tyme came Sisennes the vnder Shireue in Siria, and Phenices, with the landlordes & his companions, and sayde vnto them: Who hath bidden and cōmaunded you to buylde the house, to make the roofe and al other thynges agayn? And who are the workemē, that buylde them? Neuertheles, the elders of the Jewes had such grace of the lord, that they would not be let (though thei were prouoked therto (but buylded on styll, vntill the tyme that kyng Darius wer certified therof, and an aunswere receiued from him. The letter that these men sente vnto kyng Darius was after this maner. Sisennes the vnder Shireue in Siria, and Phenice, and the landlordes with their companions, which are vnderrulers in Siria, and Phenices, sende their salutacion vnto Darius the kyng. We certifie the lorde the kyng, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem, where we V.

Then asked we the elders who had commaunded them to make vp the house and the buyldyng? and this we dyd to the entent that we myght certifie the perfourmely, and wryte vnto the, the names of those that were the rulers of the worke. So they gaue vs this aunswere: we are the seruaun-

But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrathe, and synned agaynst the God of Israell, * he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonozor kyng of Babylon, the kyng of the Chaldeis, whiche brake downe the house and brent it, and carred away the people prysoners vnto Babylon. * Neuertheles, in the first yeare that kyng Cyrus reygned at Babylon, Cyrus the kyng wrote and cõmaunded to builde vp this house agayne and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodonozor caried away from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, and appropriated vnto his owne temple, these brought Cyrus forth agayne, and deliuered them to Zorobabell and to Salmanasar, the vnder tirene, cõmaundyng them, that they should bryng those same ornamentes agayne to Jerusalem, into the temple, and begynne from that time forth to buylde the temple agayne in his owne place. Then Salmanasar layde the foundacion of the Lordes house at Jerusalē, & euer sens they haue buylded, & yet it is not ended. And therfore, O kyng, if thou thinke it good, let it be sought in the Lybraries and rolles of kyng Cirus. Jf it be founde then, that it is done with the counsayll and consent of kyng Cyrus, and if our Lorde the kyng be so mynded, let hym write vnto vs therof. * Then cõmaunded kyng Darius to seke in the Lybraries, and so at Ebathanis in a lytle Cytie in Medea, there was found suche a writyng. Sisennes also the vnderstreue in Syria, and Phenices, the prynces & their companiõs, and the other that be head rulers in Syria and Phenices, shal not medle nor haue any thyng to do with that place. Cirus haue cõmaunded also, that they shal buylde the house of the Lorde hole vp, and haue ordeined the to helpe those that become out of captiuite, till the house of the lorde be finyshed, and out of the tribute and tayenge that is yerely rayed ouer in Syria and Phenices, diligently to geue the a certain summe for the offeryng of the Lord, and the same to be deliuered vnto Zorobabel the officer, that

Then Sisennes the vnderstreuer in Celosiria, & Phenices, & the other landlordes with their companions, obeyed the thynges, that kyng Darius had ordeined, & were diligent in the holy workes, and were felowe helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the worke of the sanctuary went forth and prospered, when Aggeus, and Zacharye prophecied. And thei performed al thynges throwe the commaundemẽt of the lord God of Israell, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius, and Artharzerses kynges of Persia. And thus was our house fynyshed vnto the. xxiij. day of the moneth Adder in the. vj. yeare of kyng Darius. And the children of Israell, the priestes and Leuites, and the other that were come out of captiuitie, & such as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordyng as it is written in the booke of Moses. And in the dedication of the temple, they offered an hundred oxen, two hundred rambes, foure hundred lambes, and twelue goates, for the synnes of all the people of Jsraell, after the nõbre of the tribes of Jsrael. The priestes also and the Leuites stode arayed in their priestly garmentes after the tribes, ouer all the workes of the Lorde God of Israel, accordyng to the booke of Moses, and the porters by all the dores. And the children of Jsraell (with those that were come out of captiuitie) helde the passeouer the fourteenth day of the firste mouth, when the priestes & the Leuites were sanctyfied. They that came out of captiuitie were not all sanctyfied together But the Leuites were sanctified together, and to all they that came out of captiuitie, kylled the Easter lambe for them selues, for the priestes and for themselues. And the children of Jsrael, that came out of captiuitie and escaped from all the abhominakept the feaste of the vnleuened bread seuen dayes long, eatyng and drynckyng, and were merry before the lord, that the Lord had turned the deuice of the kyng of Assiria, and cō fyrmed their handes to the workes of the lord God of Israel. ¶ The. viij. Chap.

AND after hym when Artharxerses the kyng of the Persians reigned, then went vnto hym Esdras the sonne of Sarayas, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Helchiach, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadduch, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abiu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, the cheif priest. This Esdras went vp frō Babylon (for he had good vnderstandyng in the lawe of Moses, that was geuen of the Lorde God of Israell, to be taught and done in dede.) And the kyng honoured hym, and dyd him great worshyp and honoure, after al his desyres. There went vp with hym also certayne of the chyldren of Israel, of the priestes, of the Leuites, of the syngers, porters, and mynisters of the temple at Jerusalem.

In the seuenth yeare of the reygne of kyng Artharxerses, in the eyghth moneth, that is in the seuenth yeare of the reigne, they wente from Babylon in the newe moone of the. v. moneth, and came the hyghe waye to Jerusalem after his commaundement, lykeas the Lorde had prospered their iourney. For in these Esdras gat great instruction, that he shulde leaue none of the thynges behynd, whiche are in the lawe and commaundementes of God. And he taughte hole Israell all ryghteousnesse and iudgements. Then came the Secretaries of kyng Artharxerses, and deliuered the wrytynges (that were come from Artharxerses the kyng) to Esdras the priest and reader of the lawe of the lord. And this is the copie of the letter. Kyng Artharxerses sendeth his greetyng vnto Esdras the Priest and Reader of the lawe of the Lorde. Of trendshyppe and good will I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be any of the Iewes, of the priestes and Leuites in my Realme, whiche desyre and is content to go with the vnto Jerusalem, that he maye do it. Therefore, yf any be myuded to beare the company, let them come togyether, and go with the (lyke as I am contente and my seuen frendes, my councellers) to se what they doe at Jerusalem and in Jewry, and kepe the thynges accordyng as thou haste in the lawe of the Lorde, and to bryngе the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israell, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Jerusalem, and all the syluer and golde that is in the countrey of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Jerusalem with the thyng that is geuen for the

yea that the same syluer and golde may be gathered, and oxen, rambes, Wepe, and goates, and other that belonge to their thynges, and that they maye offre Sacrifices vnto the Lorde vppon the aultar of the Lorde whiche is at Jerusalem. And whatsoeuer thou and thy brethren wyll doo with the syluer and golde, that doo after thy mynde, accordyng to the commaundement of the Lorde thy GOD, and lykewyse with the holy vessels that are geuē the, for the seruice of the house of the Lorde thy God, and other thynges whatsoeuer is necessary for the woorke of the temple that shalbe geuen the of the kinges treasure, and looke what thou with thy brethren wilt do with the golde and syluer, that do after the wyll of the Lorde. And I kynge Artharxerses haue commaunded the keepers of the treasures in Syria & Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras the priest and reader of the lawe of the lord doth write, it shalbe geuen hym, vyll an. C. talentes of syluer, and of golde in like maner. Of corne also an. C. measures and till an. C. vessels of wyne, and other pleteous thynges without nōbre. Let all thynges be done after the lawe of the hyghest God, that the wrath of God arise not in the realme of the kyng and of his sonnes. I commaūde also that ye require no taxe nor tribute of the priestes, Leuites, syngers, and ministers of the temple, nor of the writers, & that no mā haue autorite to medle any thing agayne the. And for the (O Esdras) ches thou iudges and arbiterers in the hole land of Syria and Phenices, after the wisdome of God and learne all suche as are ignorannte in the lawe of God thy Lorde, and let all them that offende against the lawe, be punyshed, whether it be with death, with payne, to be condempned in money, or to be banyshed. Then sayd Esdras the writer: Blessed be the god of our fathers, that hathe geuen so good a mynde and wyll into the harte of the kyng to magnifie his house that is at Jerusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kyng, of his counsayll, of his frendes, & of his nobles. And so I was bolde in my mynde, accordyng as the Lord my God helped me, and chose men out of Israell to go with me. And these are the heades (after their kyndredes and houses of their fathers) that wente vp with me from Babylon out of the kyngdome of Artharxerses. Of the sonnes of Phares, Gersomius. led I together by the water Thia, where we pitched our tente thze daies, and there I mu-

I vnto Eleazar, and Ezrelom, and Asmam and Baldam, and Eananthan, and Samea, and Ioryb mathan, Eunagam, Zachary, Mo that they should speake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren, and to thoſe that were in the treasurye, to sende vs suche men, as myght execute the prieſtes office in the house of the of our Lorde God, they brought vnto vs mē

* Then commaunded I a fastyng vnto the yong men before the Lorde, that I myght desire of hym a prosperous iourney, & a good way for vs: yea, for vs, for our chyldren and for the cattell, because of the layengers awayte. And I durste not require of the kyng men of warre and on foote, to conuey vs safely agaynst our enemyes, for we had sayd vnto the kyng, that the power of the Lorde our God should be with them that seke him with their whole hart. And therfore, we besought God our Lorde earnestly because of these thynges, and he was mercifull vnto vs, and hearde our prayer. And I separated from among the rulers of the people, and from the prieſtes of the temple. xii. men, in Sebeia and Asania, & ten men of their brethren with them.
And I wayed them the golde and the syluer, and all the prieſtly ornamentes of the house of our God, which the kyng, his counsayle, his lordes, and all Israell had geuen. And when I had weyed it, I gaue thē an C. & l. talentes in syluer, & an. C. tables of syluer vessell an. C talentes of golde, & of vnto the Lord, and the vessels are holy, & the God of our fathers. Be diligent nowe, and kepe it, vntyl the time that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the prieſtes, to the Leuites, and to the principall men of the cy-ties of Israel in Ierusalem, and in the cham ber of the house of our God. So the prie- i. Esd. viii. d. stes and the Leuites whiche receyued of me the golde, the syluer, and the vessell, brought it vnto Ierusalē into the temple of the lord.

And from the riuer of Thia, we brake vp the twelueth day of the first moneth, tyl we came to Ierusalem. And when the third daye was past, the weyed golde and syluer was deliuered in the house of the Lorde the fourthe daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Iosr the prieſte, and with him was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, and with them were Iosabdus, the sonnes of Iasnet, Merias, and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuites, to the nombre and to the weight, and the weight of them was wrytten vp the same tyme. All for those that were come out of captiuitie, they offred sacrifice vnto the Lord the God of Israell: euen twelue oxen for all Israell.

ges commission deliuered they vnto the ste-wardes and deputies of the kyng, and to the vnderwrytenes in Celosyria, and Phenices.
Now, when these thynges were done the i. Esd. ix. a. rulers came vnto me, and sayd: The generacion of Israel, the princes, the prieſte, & Le-uites, the straunge people and inhabiters of the lande, haue not put away their vncleanes from the Chananites Methites Pherezites, from the Moabites, Egiptians, and Edomingled them selues with the doughters of them, and the holye sede is myxte with the thorow the worde of the god of Israel, came

I am confounded and ashamed before thy face for oure synnes are become many vpon oure heddes: and our wickednesse are exalted vnto the heauen: for synce the time of our fathers, we are in great synne vnto this daie. And for the sinnes of vs and our fathers, we with our brethren and with our priestes, haue been deliuered vnto the kynges of the yerth: into the sweard and into captiuitie: & became a spoyle with confusion and shame vnto this daie. And now O lorde God: how greate is the mercie that we haue gotte of thee? In that thou hast left vs a name and a roote, in the place of thy Sanctuarie, to discouer our light in the house of the lorde our God, and hast geuen vs meate of all tymes of our ministracion. And whē we were in captiuitie, we were not forsaken of the lorde our god: but he made the kynges of Persia gracious and fauourable vnto vs, so that thei gaue vs victualles and meate: yea, & leaue to buylde vp the Temple of our Lorde God again, to repaire the wasted places of Sion: and to dwell in Iurie and Ierusalē. And now O lorde what shall we saie: hauyng all these thynges in memorie? For we haue broken thy commaundementes, whiche thou gauest vnto vs, by the handes of thy seruauntes the prophetes, saiyng: the land that ye go vnto, & that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possessiō, is defiled with the vncleannesse of the peoples, and with their abhominacion haue thei polluted it altogether. Therefore, shall ye not ioyne youre daughters vnto their sōnes, nor mary your sonnes vnto their daughters. Moreouer, ye shal not seke to make peace with them, that ye maie encrease & eate the best in the land, and that ye may deuide the enheritaunce of the lande, vnto your children for euermore. As for the thing that now happeneth vnto vs, it commeth al for our wicked workes and greate synnes, yet hast thou geuen vs such a roote, that we are come again into our lande, and we are so wicked, that wee haue broken thy statutes and commaundmentes again: and mingled our selues with the vncleannesse of the outlandishe Heathen, o lorde, art thou angrie with vs? Wilt thou roote vs cleane out, that our roote and name remain no more? O lorde God of Israell thou art true: for our roote endureth yet vnto this present daie. And beholde, now are we before thee in our synnes, now can we not stand before thee Esdras. 9.a in them. And* when Esdras with his prayer, had knowleged the sinne, weepyng & lying flat vpon the ground before the temple, there gathered vnto him from Ierusalem, a great multitude of men and women, of yong men, & maidens: for there was a very great weepyng, and mournyng in the congregatiō. So when Iechonias the sonne of Iehely, one of the children of Israell cried, he spred vnto Esdras: we haue synned against the lorde because we haue maried outlandish women of the Heathē Now art thou euer al Israel. We will sweare an othe therefore vnto the lorde, that we shall put awaie all our wiues, whiche we haue taken of the Heathen, with their children: like as it is appoynted thee by our fore elders. Stand vp then, open thou it, & declare it plainly vnto vs, according vnto the lawe of the lord: for the matter belongeth vnto thee, and wee will helpe thee, quite thy self manfully. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers, of the priestes, and of the Leuites, and of Israel, to do after these thynges: & thei sware.

The .x. Chapiter.

Then Esdras rose vp from the courte of the temple without, & went into the chamber of Ionathas the sonne of Nasabus, and remained there, & did eate no meat, nor dronke drinke: for the multitude of the wickednesse of the people. And there was made a proclamacion in all Iurie, & at Ierusalem, for al suche as were gathered at Ierusalem out of captiuitie, that whosoeuer came not to Ierusalem, within .5. or .10. daies (according vnto the iudgment of the olde Lordes of the counsaill) his goodes should be taken from him, and he excluded frō the congregatiō of the captiuitie. And in .10. daies were al thei of the tribe of Iuda and Beniamin, gathered together at Ierusalem, the .xx. day of the .ix. moneth. And the whole multitude satte quaykyng in the courte of the temple, for it was winter. So Esdras rose vp, and said vnto them: ye haue done vnrighteously, in that ye haue taken outlandishe wiues to mariage, and so to encrease the synne of Israell. And now knowlege the same, and geue praise vnto the lorde God of our fathers, and performe his will, departyng from the Heathen of the land, and from the outlandishe wiues. Then cried the whole multitude with loude voyce, and said: like as thou hast spoken, so will we do, but for so muche as the people are many, and the winter here, we may not stand without the house: again, this worke is not a thing that can be finished in a day or two, for we be many, that haue synned in these thynges. Ordain therfore, that the rulers of the multitude, and thei that dwel with vs, and as many as haue outlandishe wiues, the priestes also & Iudges of euery place, maie stand in the tyme appoynted, till thei swage the wrathe of the Lorde in this businesse. Then Ionathas the sōne of Ezely, and Ozias and Thecam receiued the charge of this matter, & Mosollamus, and Leuis, and Sabatheus helpeth them therto. After this, all thei of the whole multitude that were come out of captiuitie. And Esdras the priestle, chose vnto him the principall men from among the fathers, according to their names, and in the newe Moone of the .x. moneth thei sat together, to examine this matter And so the matter was

Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, Zebeda, Zercmi, Jelleus, and Baneas. All these had taken outlandish women to mariage, and thei put the awaie with their children. The priestes and E. Leuites, and al thei that were of Israel, dwelt at Jerusalem, and throughout all the lande, in the newe Moone of the.vij. moneth, & the children of Israell were in their dwellynges. And the whole multitude came together, vpon the flooze at the Eastside of the holy porte of the temple. And thei spake vnto Esdras the high priest, and reder, that he would bryng the law of Moses, whiche was geuen of the lord god of Israell. So Esdras the highe priestе h.Esd.ix.d. brought the law vnto the whole multitude, to man, and woman, to all the priestes, that thei might heare the lawe, in the newe Moone of the.vij. monethe. And he red in the flooze that is before the holy porte of the temple, frō the morynyng early vnto the euenyng, before men and women. And thei applied their mynde all vnto the Lawe. And Esdras the priestе, and wood, whiche was made therefore, and vpon F. his right hand there stode by hym Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Urias, Ezecchias, and Balsamus. Vpon his left hand stode Faltеus, Misael, Malachias, Asubchas, Zaburs, Nabadias, and Zacharye. Then toke Esdras the boke, before the whole multitude, for he was the principall, and had in moste hono of them all. And when he had red out the law then stode all straight vpon their fete. So Esdras praised the Lorde, the moste high God, the almightie God of hostes. And al the people answered, Amen: and held vp their handes fell downe flat vpon the yerth, and praised the lorde. And Jesus, Beneas, Sarebias, Jaddimus, Accubus, Sabbathеus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozadus, Ananias, and Philias, the Le-uites lifte their handes vpwarde, and bowed their faces to the ground, & praised the lorde.

G. Those were thei whiche taught the lawe of the lorde, and red the lawe of the lorde, in the congregacion: and euery man set them before that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Atha-rates vnto Esdras the high priest, and reder and to the Leuites that taught the multitude, saying: this daie is holy vnto the Lorde, and all thei that had heard the Lawe, wepte. So h.Esd.viij.a Esdras said: depart* your waie then, and eate the best, and drynke the sweetest, & send giftes vnto them that haue nothyng: for this daie is holy vnto the lorde, and be ye not sory, for the lorde wil bryng you to honor. Then went thei their waie euerichone, and did eate and drinke and wer merry, & sent rewardes vnto them that had nothyng, that thei also might eate with gladnesse, for thei were exceedyng reioyced, throughe the wordes that were red vnto them in the law. And so thei wer al gathered together at Jerusalē to holy the feast, accordyng to the couenaunt of the lorde god of Israel.

THE seconde boke of the Prophete Esdras the sonne of Saarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Melchia, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Achia, the sonne of Phinees, the sone of Heli, Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Marimoth, the sonne of Sarnias, the sonne of Uzi, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phinees, the sone of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron (of the Tribe of Leui) whiche was prisoner in the lande of Medes, in the reigne of Arthaxerxes kyng of Persia. And the wordes of the lorde came vnto me, saying: go thy waie, and shewe my people their sinfull dedes, and their children their wickednesse, whiche thei haue doen against therame, for the synnes of their fathers are encreased in them. And why? They have forgotten me, and have offred vnto straunge god-des. Am not I euen he that brought them out of the land of Egipt, from the house of bondage? But they have prouoked me vnto wrath, and despised my counsailes. Put thou out then the here of thy hed, and cast al euill ouer them for they have not been obedient vnto my law.

It is a people without learnyng and nought.
How long shall I forbeare them, vnto whom I have doen so muche good? Many kynges have I destroyed for their sakes.
Pharao with his seruauntes, and al his power have I smitten doune and slain: all the nacions have I destroyed, and rooted out before them, and in the East have I brought two landes and people to naught, euen Tire and Sidon, and have slain all their enemies.
Speake thou therfore vnto them, saying: thus saith the Lorde: I led you through the sea, and have geuen you sure stretes, sence the beginnyng. I gaue you Moses to be your capitain, and Aaron to be your Priest: I gaue you light in a piller of fire, and great wonders have I doen emong you: yet have ye forgotten me, saieth the Lorde. Thus saieth the almightie lorde: I gaue you Quailes to eate, and tentes for your sure rest. Neuer-thelesse ye murmured, and ascribed not the victory of your enemies vnto my name: yea, the same day do ye yet murmure. Where are the benefi-tes, that I have doen for you? When ye were hongerie in the wildernesse, did ye not crye vnto me. Why hast thou brought vs into this wildernesse to kill vs? It had been better for vs to have serued the Egipcians, then to dye in this wildernes. Then had I pitie vpō your mourninges. And gaue you māna to eate. Ye did eate angelles foode. When ye were thirstie, did not I hewe the hard stone, and saused water to flowe thereout? For the peace, I couered you with the leaues of the Trees. A good pleasaunt fatte lande gaue I you: I cast out the Cananites, the Pherezites, and Philistines before you. What shal I do more for you saith the lorde? Thus saith the almigh-tie Lorde, when ye were in the wildernesse, in the water of the Amonites, bering a thirst, and blaspheming my name, I gaue you not fire for your blasphemies, but cast a tree into the water, & made the riuer swete. What shal I do vnto thee, O Jacob? Thou Juda wouldest not obey me. I will turne me to another people, & vnto those will I geue my name, that they may repe my Eatmes: seyng ye have forsaken me, I will forsake you also. When ye desire me to be gracious vnto you, I shall have mercie vpō you. When ye call vpon me, I will not heare you. For ye have defiled youre handes with bloud, and your fete are swift to commit manslaughter. Ye have not forsaken me (in a maner) but your awne selues, saieth the Lorde.
Thus saieth the almighty Lorde: have I not passed you, as a father his sonnes, as a mother her daughters, and as a nurse her yong babes, that ye would be my people, & I would be your god: that ye would be my children, and I would be your awne father? I gathred you together, as an Henne gathereth her chekens vnder her wynges. But now what shall I do vnto you? I shall cast you out from my face?
When you offer vnto me, I shal turne my face from you: for your solempne feastdaies, youre newe Moones, and your Circumcisions have I forsaken. I set vnto you my seruauntes the Prophetes, whō ye have taken and slain, and torne their bodies in peces, whose bloude I will requyre of your handes saieth the lorde.
Thus saieth the almightie lorde: your house shalbe desolate. I will cast you out as the wind doth the Strawe, your children shall not be fruitful, for they have despised my cōmaundement, and doen the thyng that is euil before me. Your houses will I geue vnto a people that shall come, and* they that neuer heard me shall beleue in me: and they vnto whō I neuer shewed token, shall do the thyng that I commaund thē. They have seen no prophetes, yet shall they call their synnes to remembraunce, and knowlege thē. I repent me vnto the grace that I will do for the people, whiche is come whose children reioyce in gladnes: & though they have not seen me with bodily eyes, yet in spirite they beleue the thyng that I say. And now brother, behold: what greate worshippe, and se the people that commeth from the east, vnto whom I wil geue the Dukedome of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, of Ozeas, Amos, and Micheas, of Joel, Abdi, Jonas, Nahum, and Habacuc, of Sophony, Aggeus, Zacharye, and Malachi, whiche is called also an angel for messenger of the lorde.

¶ The. 4. Chapiter.

Thus saith the lorde: I brought this people out of bondage, I gaue them my com maundementes, by my seruauntes the Prophetes, whiche they would not heare, but despised my counsailes. The mother that bare them, saith vnto thē: go your waie ye children for I am a widdowe and forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnes, but with sorowe & heuinesse have I lost you: for ye have synned before the lorde your God, and doen the thyng that is euill before hym. But what shal I now do vnto you? I am a widdowe & forsaken: go your waie, O my children, and aske mercie of the lorde. As for me, O father, I cal vpō thee for a witnes, ouer the mother of these childre which would not kepe my couenant, that thou bring them to confusiō, and their mother to a cyple, that she beare no more. Let their names be scatred abrode emong the Heathen. Let thē be put out of the yearth, for they have thought thought to come of my couenaunt. Wo be vnto thee Assur, thou that plaiest thy vnrighteousnes by thee. Thou wicked people remembre what I did vnto Sodome, & Gomorre, whose lande is turned to pitche and ashes. Euen so will I do vnto all the, that beare me not, saith the almightie lorde. Thus saith the lorde vnto Ezechias: Tell my people, that I will geue them the kyngdome of Jerusalem, whiche I would haue geuen vnto Israell. Their glorie also will I take vnto me, and geue them the euerlastyng tabernacles, whiche I had prepared for those. The tree of life shalbe vnto the a swete smellyng oyntment: thei shall neither labour nor be wery. Go ye your waie, and ye shall receiue it. Praie for your selues a fewe daies, that thei maie dwel therin. Now is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watch.

Take heauen & yearth to witnes, for I haue broken the euil in peces, and created the good for I liue saieth the lorde. Mother, embrace thy children, and bryng them vp with glad-nes: make their fete as fast as a pillar, for I haue chosen thee saieth the lorde. And those that be ded will I raise vp again from their places, and bryng the out of the graues, for I haue knowen myne name in Israell. Feare not thou mother of the children, for I haue chosen thee, saith the lorde. And for thy help I shall send thee my seruauntes, Esay, & Jeremie, after whose counsaill I haue sanctified and prepared for the. xij. Trees with diuerse frutes, and as many welles, flowyng with milke and hony, and .vij. mountaines, whereupō there growe roses and lilies, wherein I will fill my children with ioye. Execute Justice for the widowe, be Judge for the fatherles: geue to the poore, defende the comfortlesse, clothe the naked, heale the wounded and sicke laugh not a lame manne to scorne, defende the crepell, and let the blynde come into the light of my clerenes: whē so euer thou findest the ded, take them and bury them, and I shall geue thee, the first place in my resurrection. Wolde God (O my people) and take thy rest, for thy quietnes is come. Fede thy children, O thou good nurse, stablishe their fete. As for the seruauntes whom I haue geuen thee, there shall not one of them perishe, for I will take them from thy nomber, beyre not thy self. For whē the daie of trouble & heinues commeth, other shall wepe and be sorowfull, but thou shalt be mery and plenteous. The Heathen shalbe gelous, but thei shalbe able to do nothyng against thee, saith the lorde. My handes shall couer thee, so that thy children shall not se the fire euerlastyng. Bee ioyefull O thou mother with thy childre, for I will deliuer thee saith the Lorde. Remembre thy ded children, for I shall bryng them out of the yearth, and shewe mercy vnto them, for I am merciefull, saith the lorde almightie. Embrace thy children, vntil I come and shew mercy vnto thy, for my welles run ouer, & my greace shall not faile. Je- 104 remy receiued a charge of the lorde vpon the mount Oreb, that I should go vnto Israel. But whē I came vnto Israel, thei set me at naught and despised the commaundement of the lorde.
And therefore I saie vnto you, O ye Heathen that heare & vnderstande. Loke for your shepherd, he shall geue you euerlastyng rest, for he is nigh at hande, that shall come in thende of the worlde redy to the reward of the kyngdome, for the euerlastyng light shal shine vpō you for euermore. Flie the shadowe of this worlde, receiue the ioyefulnes of your glorie, I testifie my saiyng openly: O receiue the gift that is geuen you, and be glad, geuyng thank-es vnto him, that hath called you to the hea-uenly kyngdome. Arise vp, and stande & be- W. hold, the nombre of those that be sealed in the ark of the lorde, whiche are departed frō the shadowe of the worlde, and haue receiued glorious garmentes of the lorde. Take thy nombre, O Sion, and shut vp the purified, which haue fulfilled the law of the lorde. The nombre of thy children, whom thou longest for, is fulfilled, beseche the powre of the lorde, that the people, whiche haue been called from the beginnyng, maie be hallowed. I Esdras saw Apoca.vij.c. vpon the mount Sion a greate people, whom I could not nombre, and thei all praised the lord, with songes and thankes geuyng. And in the middest of them, there was a yong man of an high stature, more excellent then all thei, and vpon euery one of their heddes, he sette a croune, and was euer higher & higher, which I marueiled at greatly. So I asked the angel and said: sir, what are these? He answered and said vnto me: these bee thei, that haue put of the mortall clothyng, and put on the immortal and haue testified and knowleged the name of God. Now are thei crowned, and receiue the reward. Then said I vnto the Angell: what yong persone is it, that crowneth the, and gieueth them the Palmes in their handes? So he answered, and said vnto me: it is the sonne of God, whō thei haue knowleged in the world.
Then began I greatly to commende the, that stode so stiffe for the name of the lorde. And to the angell said I vnto me: go thy waie, & tell my people, what maner of thynges: and how greate wonders of the Lorde thy God, thou hast seen.

¶ The.xj. Chapiter.

IN the .xxx. yere of the fall of the citee, I A. was at Babilon, and laie troubled vpō my bed, and my thoughtes came vp ouer my hart: for I saw the desolation of Syon, and the plenteous wealthe of them that dwelt at Ba-bilon, and my spirite was sore moued, so that I began to speake fearful wordes to the moste highest, and said: O Lorde, thou spakest at the beginnyng, whē thou plantedst the yearth (and that thy self alone) and gauest comaundment vnto the people, and a body vnto Adam, which was a creature of thy handes, and hast breathed in him the breath of life: and so he lyued before thee, and thou leddest him into Paradise, whiche the garden of pleasure, thy righte hand had planted, ere euer the yearth was made and vnto hym thou gauest commaundement to loue thy way, whiche he transgressed, and immediatly thou appoyntedest death in hym, and in his generations. Of him came nacions, tribes, people, and kinredes, out of nomber. * And Gene.vi.b. every people walked after their awne wil, and B. did vice thynges before thee: and as for thy Gene.vj.b. commaundementes thei despised them. But * in processe of tyme thou broughtest the water floud, vpon those that dwelt in the world, and destroyedest them. And like as the death was in Adam, so was the water floud also in these. Neuertheles, one of them thou lettest, namely Noe, with his housholde, of whō came al righteous men. And it happened, that when thei that dwelt vpō the yearth, began to multiply, and had gotten many children, and were a great people, thei began to bee more vngodly then the first. Now when thei allmed so wickedly before thee, thou * diddest chose thee a man from Gene.xj.xv. emong them, whose name was Abraham. Hym thou louedest, and vnto him onely thou shewedest thy will, and madest an euerlastyng couenaunt with hym, promisyng hym that thou Gene.xxi.a. wouldest neuer forsake his sede. And * vnto him *Gene.xxvc. thou gauest Isaac, vnto * Isaac also thou ganot uest Jacob, and Esau. As for Jacob, thou did-Gen.xxxv.e. dest chose hym, and put backe Esau. * And so C. Jacob became a great multitude. And it happened, that when thou leddest his seede out of Exod.xix.a. Egipt, thou * broughtest thē vp to the mount Deut.iij.b. Syon, bowyng downe the heauens, settyng fast the yearth, mouyng the grounde, makyng the depthes to shake, & troublyng the worlde. And thy glory went through foure gates of fire, and yearth quakes, and wyndes, and cold: that thou mightest geue the law vnto the sede of Jacob, and diligence vnto the generation of Israell. And yet tookest thou not away frō them that wicked harte, that thy lawe might bryng furthe fruit in theim. For the first Adam bare a wicked hart, trāsgressed: and was ouercome, and so be all thei that are borne of Rom.v.a. hym. * Thus remained weakenesse with the law: in the hartes of the people, with the wickednesse of the rote: so that the good departed away, and the euill abode still. So the times passed away, and the yeres were brought i.Reg.xvi.c. to an ende. Then * diddest thou raise thee vp a ij.Reg.v.a. seruaunt called Dauid, whom * thou commaundedde to buylde a citee vnto thy name: and to offer vp Encense and Sacrifice vnto thee therein. This was dooen nowe many yeres. Then the enhabiters of the citee forsoke thee and in all thynges did euen as Adam, and all his generations had done: for thei also had a wicked harte. And so thou gauest thy citee o-D. uer into the handes of thyne enemies. Are thei of Babilon then better and more righteous, then thy people, that thei shall therefore haue the dominiō of Sion? For when I came there and saw their vngodlinesse, and so great wickednesse, that it could not bee nombred: yea, when my soule sawe so many euill doers (in the xxx. yere) my harte failed me, for I sawe, how thou sufferedest theim in suche vngodlynesse, & sparedest the wicked doers: but thine awne people hast thou rooted out, and preserued thyne enemies, and this hast thou not shewed me. I cannot perceiue how this happeneth. Do thei of Babilō then better, then thei of Sion? Or is there any other people, that knoweth thee, saueng the people of Israell? Or what generation hath so beleued thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet their rewarde appereth not, and their labour path no fruite. For I haue goen heare and there through the Heathen, and I se that thei be riche and welthy, and thynke not vpon thy commaundementes. Weigh thou therefore oure wickednesse now in the balance, and theirs also that dwell in the world, and so shal thy name be no where founde but in Israell. Or where is there a people vpon yearth, that hath not synned before thee? Or what people hath so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalt find that Israel by name, hath kept thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heathen.

¶ The.iiij. Chapiter.

Then the Angell that was sent vnto me, E. (whose name was Uriell) gaue me an answere, and said: thy harte hath taken to muche vponit in this world, and thou thinkest to cōprehende the waie of the highest. Then said I: yea, my lorde. And he answered me, and said I am sent to shewe thee three waies, and to set furthe thre similitudes, before thee: whereof if thou canst declare me one, I will shew thee also the waie, that thou desirest to see: and I shall shewe thee from whence the wicked hart commeth. And I said: tell on my lorde. Then said he vnto me: Go thy waie, weigh me the weight of the fire, or measure me the blaste of the wynde, or call me again the daie that is paste. Then answered I and said: what man borne, is able to do that? Why requirest thou suche of me? And he said vnto me: if I would aske thee how depe dwellynges are in the sea? Or how greate watersprynges are vpon the firmament? Or howe greate watersprynges are in the beginnyng of the depe? Or whithe are the out goynges of Paradise? Paraduenture thou wouldest saie vnto me: I neuer yet doune yet into the depe, or hell, neither did I euer climbe vp to heauen. Neuertheles, now haue I asked thee but onely of fire, and wynd and of the daie, where through thou hast trauailed, and from the whiche thou canst not be separated, and yet canst thou geue me none answere of theim. He saied moze ouer vnto me: thyne awne thynges, and suche as are growē vp with thee, canst thou not know: how should thy vessell then bee able to comprehende the waie of the highest, and now outwardly in the corrupt world, to vnderstande the corruption that is euident in my sight. Then said I vnto him: it were better that we were not at al, then that we should liue in wickednes, and to suffer, and not to knowe wherefore. He answered

D. me and saied: I went in a wood, and the trees Iudi.ix.b. toke suche a deuice, and saied: come let vs go,
.2par.xxv.c. and fight against the sea, that it maie departe awaie before vs, & that we maie make vs yet moze woodes. The floudes of the sea also in like maner toke this deuice, and saied: Come let vs go vp, and fight against the Trees of the wood that we maie make our land the wider. The thought and deuice of the wood was but vain and nothyng worth, for the fire came and consumed the woode: the thought of the floudes of the sea, came likewise to naughte also, for the sande stode vp and stopped them. If thou wert iudge now betwixt these twoo, whom wouldest thou iustifie, or who wouldest thou condempne? I answered and saied: verely it is a foolishe thoughte, that thei bothe haue deuised. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and the sea also hath his place to beare his floudes. Then answered he me, and saied: thou hast geuen a right Iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy self also? For like as the Ecclay.xlv.c. grounde is geuen vnto the wood, and the sea to Ihon.iij.c. his floodes, euen so, thei * that dwell vpon 1.Cori.j.b. yearthe, maie vnderstande nothyng, but that, whiche is vpon yearth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauens, maie onely vnderstand the thinges that are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and saied: I beseche thee, O Lorde let me haue vnderstandyng: for it was not my mynd, to be curious of thy high thynges, but of suche as we daiely medle withall, namely, wherefore that Israell is blaspheined of the Heathen, and for what cause the people (who thou hast euer loued) is geuen ouer, to be punished of vngodly nations: and why the law of our fathers is brought to naught, & the written couenantes come to none effect, & we passe awaie out of the worlde, as the grashoppers, and our life is a very fearce, & we are not worthy to obtain mercie. What will he dooe then vnto his name, whiche is called vpō ouer vs? of these thynges I haue asked questiō. Then
C. answered he me, and saied: the moze thou searchest, the moze thou shalt marueill, for the world hasteth fast to passe awaie, and cannot comprehende the thynges, that are promised for the righteous in tyme to come, for * this worlde is full of vnrighteousnesse and wickednes. But as concernyng the thinges wherof thou askest me, I will tell thee. The euill is comen, but the destruccion thereof is not yet come. If the euill that is now comen, be not turned vpside downe, and if the place where the euill is comen, passe not awaie, then cannot the thyng come, that is comen with good. For the corne of euill sede, hath been comen in the harte of man from the beginnyng, and how muche vngodlinesse hath be brought vp vnto this tyme? And howe muche shall he yet bring further, vntill he come into the barne. Wonder nowe by thy self, when the corne of euill sede is cutte downe, how greate a barne shall it fill? I answered and saied: howe and whe shall these thinges come to passe? wherfore are our yeres fewe and euill? And he answered me, saiyng: haste not thou to muche vpon the highest, for thy hastines to be above hym, is but vain, thou makest to muche a doo. Did not the soules also of the righteous aske question of these thynges in their holinesse, saiyng: how * long shall I hope of this fashion? when commeth the fruite of my barne, and my reward? And vpon this Jeremiell the Archangell gaue theim answere, and saied: euen when the nomber of the seedes is fulfilled in you, for he hath weighed the worlde in the balance: in measure and nomber hath he measured the tyme, & moueth it not vntill the same measure be fulfilled. Then answered I, & said: Epca.bi.b.
O Lorde, lorde, now are we all full of synne & for our sake, parauenture it is not, that the barne of the righteous shall not be fulfilled, because of the synne of the that dwell vpon yearth. So he answered me and said: go thy way to a woman with child, and aske of her, when she hath fulfilled her ix. monethes, if her childeed may kepe the birthe any longer within her. Then D. said I: no lorde, that can she not. And he saied vnto me: in hel the secret places of soules, are like the priuy chamber of a woman. For like as a woman that trauaileth, maketh haste when the time and necessitie of the birth is at hand euen so doth the hast to deliuer it, that is committed vnto her. Loke what thou desirest to se, it shalbe shewed thee fro the beginnyng. Then answered I, and said: if I haue found grace in thy sight, and if it be possible, and if I be mete therfore, shew me then whether there be moze to come, then is past, or moze past then is for to come. What is passe, I knowe, but what is for to come, I know not. And he said vnto me: stand vp vpon the right side, & I shall expound the similitude vnto thee. So I rose, & beheld an hotte burnyng Ouen went ouer before me and it happened, that when the flambe was goen by, the smoke had the vpper hande. After this there went ouer before me a watry cloud and sent downe muche raine with a tempest: and when the tempest raine was passe, the droppes remained still. Then said he vnto me: like as the Raine is moze then the droppes, and as the fire exceedeth the smoke: Euen so the measure of the thinges that are past, haue the vpper hande. Then went the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I praied and saied, maie I liue? thinkest thou, vntill that tyme? Or what shall happen in those daies? He answered me and said: as for the tokens whereof thou askest me, I may tell thee of them in part, but as touchyng thy life I maie not shew thee, for I am not set therfore.

The. v. Chapiter.

8. Nowe therefore, as concernyng the tokens marke this: behold, the daies shall come, that they whiche dwell vpon yearthe, shalbee taken in a greate nomber, and the waie of the truthe shalbe hid, and the lande shalbe barren from faith: but iniquitie shall haue the vpper hand, like as thou hast seen now, and as thou hast heard long ago. And the lande that thou seest now to haue rule, shalte thou shortly see wast. But if god graunt thee to liue, thou shalte after the third trompet, that the sonne shall sodainly shine again in the night, & the Mone iij. tymes in the daie, and blood shall drop out of woodde, and the stone shall geue his voyce and the people shalbe vnquiet: and euen he that rule, whether hope not, that dwell vpon yearth and the soules shall sit, and the Sodomitishe sea shall cast out his fishe, and make a noyce in the nighte, whiche many shall not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyce therof. There shalbe a cõfusion also in many places, and the fire shalbe oft set again, and the wild beastes shal go their waie, & menstruous women shal beare monstres, and salt waters shalbe found in the swete: one frende shall fight against another. Then shal al wit & vnderstãdyng be hid and put aside in their secrete places, & shalbe sought of many, and yet not be found: then shal vnrighteousnes and voluptuousnes haue the vpper hande vpon yearth. One land also shall aske another, and saie: is righteousnes goen through thee? And it shall saie: no, at the same tyme shall men hope, but nothyng obtain: they shall labor, but their waies shall not prosper. To shewe thee suche tokens I haue lent, and if thou wilt praie again, and wepe as now, & fast seuen daies, thou shalt heare yet greater thynges. Then I awoke, and a fearfulnesse went through all my body, and my mynde was
10. feble and carefull, so that I almoste swouned withall. So thangell that was come to talke with me, held me, comforted me, and set me vpon my fete. And in the second night it happened, that Salathiel the capitain of the people came vnto me, saiyng: Where hast thou been? And why is thy countinaunce so heuie? Knowest thou not that Israell is committed vnto thee, in the lande of their captiuitie? Vp then and eate, and forsake vs not, as the shepherd that leaueth his flocke, in the handes of wicked wolues. Then saied I vnto him: Go thy waies from me, and come not nighe me; and he heard it, and as I saied: so went he his waie fro me. And I fasted .vij. daies, mourning and wepyng, like as Uriell the Angell commaunded me. And after seuen daies it happened that the thoughtes of my harte were very greuous vnto me again, and my soule receiued the spirite of vnderstandyng, and I began to talke with the moste high again, and saied: O lorde, lorde, of euery woode of the yearth and of all the trees thereof, thou hast chosen thee one onely Vineyarde: and of all landes of the whole worlde, thou hast chosen thee one pitte: and of all floures of the grounde, thou hast chosen thee one lilye: and of al the depthes of the sea, thou hast filled thee one riuer: and of all buylded cities, thou hast hallowed vpon vnto thy self: and of all the soules that are created, thou hast named thee one Doue: and of al the cattell that are made, thou hast promised thee one Shepe: and emong all the multitude of folkes, thou hast gotten thee one people: and vnto this people whom thou louedest, thou gauest a Lawe, that is proued of all. And now, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto many? and vpon the one roote, thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scattered the one onely people emong many, whiche treade theim doune, yea, whiche haue euer withstand thy promises, & neuer beleued thy couenauntes. And thoughe thou wart enemie vnto thy people, yet wouldest thou punishe them with thyne awne handes? Now when I had spoken these wordes the Angell that came to me the nighte afore, was sent vnto me, and saied vnto me: heare me and harken to the thyng that I saie, and I shall tell thee more. And I saied: Speake on my lorde. Then said he vnto me: thou art sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then hym that made them? And I saied: no lorde, but of very griefe and compassion haue I spoken. For my reines paine me euery houre, because I would haue experience of the waie of the moste high and to seke out part of his iudgement. And he said vnto me: that thou maiest not. And I said wherefore Lorde? Where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers childebedde then my graue? So had I not seen the misery and trouble of Iacob, and the tramaile of my people of Israell. And he saied vnto me nomber the thinges that are not yet come: gather me together the droppes, that are scatted abrode, make me the floures grene again that are withered, open me the thyng that is closed: and bring me further the wyndes, that are shut vp, shew me the Image of a voyce, & then shal I declare thee the thyng, that thou labourest to knowe. And I saied: O lorde, lorde who maie knowe these thynges, but he that hath not his dwellyng with menne. If so be me, I am vnwise: howe maie I then speake of these thynges, wherein thou askest me.

Then saied he vnto me: like as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of: euē so canst thou not find out my iudgement or in thende, the loue that I haue promised vnto my people. And I said: behold, O lorde, yet art thou nighe vnto them that haue so ende: and what shall thei do, that haue been before me, or we that be now, or thei that shall come after vs? And he saied vnto me: I will liken my Iudgement vnto a ryng. Like as there is no tarkenes of the last, euen so is there no swiftnesse of the firste. So I answered and saied:
10. couldest thou not make those (that haue been made, and bee now, and that are for to come) in one, that thou mightest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me, and said: the creature maie not haste aboue the maker, neither maie the worlde hold theim at once, that shalbe created. And I said: how hast thou said then vnto thy seruaunt, that thou liuyng maker, hast made the creature liuyng at once, and the creature bare it? Euen so might it nowe also beare them that be present, at once. And he saied vnto me: Aske the childred of a woman, and saie vnto her: thou bryngest furth children, why broughtest thou it not together, but one after another? Praie her therefore to bryng furthe ten children at once. And I said she cannot, but must doo it one after another. Then saied he vnto me: euen so haue I geuen a childbed vnto the yearth: for those that be sowen vpō it by processe of tyme. For like as a young child maie not bryng furth the thynges, that belong to the aged: euen so haue I ordeined the worlde, whiche I made. And I asked and saied: seyng thou haste now geuen me awaie, I will speake before thee, for our mother, of whom thou haste told me, is yet young, and nowe she draweth nigh vnto age. He answered me and saied: aske a woman that beareth children, and she shall tell thee. Saie vnto her: wherefore are not thei (whom thou hast now brought furthe) like those that were before thee, but lesse of stature? And she shall answere thee: thei that be borne in the youth of strengthe, are of one fashion, and thei that are borne in the tyme of age, (when the childbed faileth) are otherwise. Cōsider now thy self, howe that ye are lesse of nature, then those that were before you, & so are thei that come after you, lesse then ye: as the creatures, whiche now begin to bee olde, and haue passed ouer the strength of youth. Then said I: lord I beseche thee, if I haue found fauor in thy sight, shewe thy seruaunt, by whō doest thou visite thy creatures?

The.v. Chapitter.

11. AND he saied vnto me: in the beginnyng, when the grounde was made, before the worlde couered ouer the wyders, dieweshefore it thondered, and lightened, for euer the foundacions of paradise were laied before the fastē stones were setted, ouer the mouable places were stablished, before the innumerable multitude of angels were gathered together, for euer the highnesse of the aire were lifted vp, before the measures of the firmament were named, for euer the chimnays of Syon were pitched, and the perfect yeres were sought out, and for euer the inuencions of them that now synne, were put aside, before thei were sealed, that now gather faithe for a treasure: then did I consider and ponder all these thynges, and all thei were made throughe me, and throughe none other: by me also thei be ended, & by none other. Then answered I and said: whiche shalbe the partyng asonder of the tymes? or whē shalbe the ende of the firste, and the beginnyng of it that foloweth? And he said vnto me: from Abraham vnto Isaac, whē Iacob and Esau, were borne of hym, Iacobs hande held firste the hele of Esaus for Esau is the ende of the worlde, and Iacob is the beginnyng of it that foloweth. The hande of man, betwixte the hele and the hand. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not. I answered then and said: O lorde, lorde, if I haue founde fauour in thy sight, I beseche thee shewe thy seruaunt thende of thy tokens wherof thou shewedest me part the last nyght. So he answered and said vnto me: stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfect voyce and sound. There shall come a greate motion, but the place wherethou standest, shal not be moued. And therefore, whē thou hearest the wordes, be not afraied, for of them shal the worde and foundacion of the yearth be vnderstande. And why? The worde thereof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must be chaūged at the ende. And it happened, that when I heard it, I stode vp vpon my fete: and harkened, and behold, there was a voyce, that spake and the sound of it, was like the sound of many waters, and it said: behold, the daies come that I will begin to drawe nigh, and to visite theim that dwell vpon yearth, and will begin to make enquisicō of them, what thei be that haue burnt equitie with vnrighteousnes, and when the lowe estate of Syon shalbe fulfilled and when the world, that shall vanishe awaie shalbe ouersealed, then will I do these tokēs. The bookes shalbe opened before the firmament, and thei shal se altogether, and the children of a yere old shal speake with their voyces: the women with child, shall bryng furthe vntimely children, of iij. or iiij. monethes old, and thei shall liue, and bee raised vp and sodainly shall the sowen places appere, as the vnsowen, the ful store houses shal sodainly be found emptie, and the tropet shall geue a sound whiche when euery man heareth, thei shalbee hastily afraied/at that tyme shall frendes fight one against another like enemies, & the yerth shall stande in feare with theim. The springes of the welles shall stand still, and in three yeares they shal not rene. Wherefore remaineth yͤ all these thynges that I haue tolde the, shal escape, & se my salnacio, & the ende of your worlde. And the men that haue receyued shal se it, they that haue not tasted death from their birthe: the hart of the inowellers shalbe changed, & turned into another mening, for euel shalbe put out, & discrete shalbe quenched. As for layth, it shal florish, corrupcio shalbe ouer comen: the truth, which hath bene so lōg without frute, shalbe declared, and it happened whē he talked with me, that I loked demurely vpon him before whō I stode, & these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe the, the tyme of the night for to come. Yf thou wylte praye yet more, & fast seuen dayes agayne, I shall tel the more thinges, & greater them before: for thy voice is heard before the Highest for why? the mightie hath sene thy righteous dealing, he hath sene also thy chastitie, which thou hast had euer sence thy youth, & therfore hath he sente me to shewe the al these thinges & to say vnto the. Be of good cōforte, & feare not, & hast not with the tymes that are past to thincke vaine thinges, & make not hast of the latter tymes. And yt happened after this, that I wepte agayn, & fasted seuendates in like maner, that I might fulfil the three weekes: whiche he told me. In the viii. night was my hart vexed with in me agayn. And I began to speke before the Hyeste: for my spirite was greatly set on fire, & my soule was in distresse, and I sayd: O Lord, thou spakest vnto thy creature frō the beginning (euē the first daye) & saidst: * Let heauen & earth be made, and thy worde was a perfect worcke. And then was there the spirite, & the darcknesse was yet on euery syde, and stilnesse, there was no mans voice as yet from the. Thē commaundedst thou a fayre light to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worcke might appeare and be seen. Vpon the second day thou madest the spirite of the firmament, & commaundest it to part a sunder, and to make a diuision betwyxt the waters, that the one parte might remayne aboue, & the other parte vpon the. iii. day thou broughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the. vii. part of the earthe, vi. partes hast thou dried vp and kepte thē, to thyntente that men might sow & occupy husbādry therin. As sone as thy word went forth, the worcke was made. For immediatly there was great innumerable frute and many diuerse pleasures and desires of temptacion, flowres of chaungeable colowre and smell, and thys was done the. iii. daye. Vpon the. iiii. daye thou commaundest that the sunne shulde geue hys shyne, and the moone her lyght: the starres dyddest thou set in order, and gauest them a charge, to do seruice euen vnto man that was for to be made. Vpon the. v. daye thou sayedst vnto the. v. parte (where that waters were gathered) that they shulde bring forth diuers beastes, foules and fishes. And so it came to passe, that the wylde waters: and without soule brought forth liuyng beastes, at the commaundemente of God: that all people might prayse thy wonderous worckes. Thē diddest thou preserue two soules, the one thou caldest Enoch: & the other Leuiathan, and didst separate the one frō the other for the vi. parte (namelye where the water was gathered together) might not hold them both. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one part, which was dried vp the. xi. daye, that he shuld dwel in the same parte, wherin are a. M. yles. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the. vi. parte, namely the moyst and hast kepte hym to deuour what thou wilt & whē & vpō the. vi. day thou gauest cōmaundemēt vnto the earth, that before the, it shuld bring forth beastes, cattel and all that crepe, and (beside thys) ādā also, whome thou madest lord of all thy creatures. Of him come we al, & the people also, whome thou hast chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All this haue I sayd nowe and spoken before the, that I might shewe howe that the worlde is made for our sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adam thou hast sayd that they are nothing, but be lyke a spytle, & hast lykened the abūdance of thē vnto a drop (that falleth) frō the roote of the houte. And now, o Lorde: the Heathen which haue euer bene reputed as nothinge, haue begon to be Lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure vs: but we thy people (whome thou hast called the first borne, thy onely begotten, & thy seruent louer) are geuen into theyr handes and power. Yf the worlde now be made for our sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possessiō with the worlde. Howe longe shall thys endure?

The. vi. Chapitre.

AND it happened after that I had spoken these wordes there was sente vnto me an Aungell, whiche had bene by me also the nyghtes afore and he sayde vnto me: Vp Esdras, and heare the wordes that I am come to tel the. And I sayd speake o my Lorde God. Then sayde he vnto me. The see is set in a wide place that it might be deape and greate but the entraunce is narowe and small lyke a ryuer. For who wolde go into the see, to looke vpon it, and to rule it? Yf he went not thorowe the narowe, howe might he come into the brode? Ite an other: A citie is builded and set vpon a brode felde, and is ful of all goodes: the entraunce is narrowe and sodayne, like a fyre there ware a fyre at the right hande and a depe water at the lefte, and al it ware onely one strayt pathe betwixte them both so smalle that there could but one man go there. Yf thys citie nowe ware geuen vnto an heyre and he neuer wēte thorow the perilous ware, howe wolde he receyue hys inheritaunce? And I sayde: I wil so. Then sayde he

Quen to his Israel also a portion. And why? for they haue taken haue I made the worlde, and when Adā transgressed my statutes, the was the thyng Judged that was done. The ware the entraunces of the worlde made narowe, full of sorowe & trauaile. They are but fewe and euell, full of perelles and labour. For the entraunces of the forē worlde ware wyde and sure, and brought immortall fruite. Yf they nowe whiche are entred into this woꝛld, waye not comprehend these straye and vayne thynges, muche lesse may they cōprehend and vnderstande the secrete thynges: Why disquieteth thou thy selfe then seyng thou arte but a corruptible man? And what wouldest thou knowe wher as thou art but mortal, & why past thou not receyued into thine harte the thyng that is for to come, but that is present. The sayd Jeremy: O Lorde Lorde, * thou haste ordeined in thy lawe, that the righteous shoulde inherite these thynges, but that the vnfaythfull & vngodly shuld perishe. Neuertheles, the righteous shall suffer straye thynges, and hope for wyde for they that haue lyued vngodly & suffered straye thynges, shal not se the wide. And he said vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstanding aboue the Myghest. For there be many that perishe, because they dispise the lawe of God that is set before them. For God hath geuen strayt commaundement to suche as come, that they know what they do, and howe they shulde lyue: and if they kepte thys, they shulde not be punyshed. Neuertheles, they ware not obedyent vnto hym, but spake agaynste hym: ymagined vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, & sayd moreouer, that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. Hys wayes haue they knowne, hys lawe haue they dispised, and denyed hys promises in hys statutes and ordynaunces haue they not bene faythfull & stedfast, and haue not performed hys workes. And therefore Esdras: vnto the full: plenty and to the empty, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shall come, that these tokens whyche I haue tolde the, shal come to passe, and the bride shal apere and the earthe that nowe passeth away, shall be shewed: and whosoeuer is deliuered from the euels, shal se my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openly declared, with those that be with him and they that remaine: shalbe merye fourre hundred yeares. After these same yeares shall my sonne Christ dye, and all men that haue lyfe, and the worlde shalbe tuened into the olde silence seuen dayes, lyke as in the forē Judgementes: so that noman shal remaine. And after seuen dayes, the worlde that yet awaken not, shalbe rayled vp, and shal dye corrupte. And the earthe shall restoore those that haue slepte in her: and so shall the dust those that dwell in silence, and the secret places shal deliuer those that be committed vnto them. And the moste Myghest shalbe openly declared vpon the seate of Judgemente, and all misserie shall vanyth awaye and longe sufferyng shalbe gathered togethere. Yf the Judgemente shall continue, the truth shall remaine, and fayth shall waxe strong, the worcke shall folowe, and the rewarde shalbe shewed, the ryghteousnes shall watche, and the vnrighteousnes shall beare no rule. Then sayde I: Abraham prayed fyrste for the Sodomites, and Moses for the fathers that synned in the wylderneste, and he that came after hym for Israel, in the tyme of Achas, and Samuell, and * Dauid for the destruccion * and Salomon for them that came into the sanctuary, and Helias for those that receyued rayne, * and for the dead that he might lyue, & Ezechias, for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib, and diuerse other in like maner, whiche haue prayed for many. Euen so nowe, seing the corrupti is growen vp, and wickednes increased, and the righteous haue prayed for the vngodlye, wherfore shall it not be so nowe also? He answered me, and sayd: This present worlde is not the ende, there remayneth muche honoure in it, therefore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome shall be the ende of thys tyme, and the begynnyng of the immortalyte for to come, wherin al corrupcion is vanished al bolupteousnes is lowsed all mischeue taken away righteousnes growen, and the verite sprong vp. Then shall no man be able to saue hym that is destroyed, nor oppresse him that hath gotte the victory. I aunswered then, and sayde: This is my fyrst and last sayeng: that it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earthe vnto Adam: or els when it was geuen hym to kepe hym that he shulde not synne. For what profite is it for men nowe in thys presente tyme to lyue in heynesse, and after deathe to loke for punishemente? O thou Adam, what haste thou done? For though it was thou that synned, thou art not fallen alone but we all that come of the. For what profit is it vnto vs, yf there be promised vs an immortal time, where as we meddle with deadly worckes? And that there is promised vs an euerlastynge hope, where as our selues are euell & vayne & that there are layde vp for vs dwellinges of helthe and freedome, where as we haue lyued euel, & that the worshippe of the Myghest is kepte to defende the which haue led a pacyfyte life, where as we haue walcked in the moste wicked wayes of all? And that there shalbe shewed a paradise, whose fruite indureth for euer, wherin is freedome & medicine, where as we shall not go in? for we haue walcked in vnpleasaunte places: And that the faces of them whiche haue abstayned, shall shyne aboue the starres, where as our faces shall be blacke & darcker. For while we lyued & dyd vnrighteously, we counsoyed not, that we should suffre therefore after deathe? Then answered he me, & sayde:

D. This is the consideracion and thoughte of the batayle, whiche man hathe vpon earthe: that ye he be ouercome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But ye he get the victorie, he shall receyue the thynge that I saye. For thys is the lyfe, whereof Moses spake vnto the people, while he lyued, sayenge: * Chuse the lyfe that thou maiest liue: Neuertheles, they beleued hym not, neither the Prophetes after him. Also, nor me which haue spoken vnto the, that heuinesse shoulde not reache vnto the, to theyr destruction, lyke as coye is for to come ouer those that haue suffered them selues to be informed in calumnion? I answered then & sayde: I knowe Lorde, that the Highest is mercifull, in that he hath mercie vpon them, whiche are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walke in hys lawe: and that * he is paciente and longe suffryenge towarde those that haue sinned in theyr workes, and that he is ledeuall to gene where as it requireth, and that he is of greate merry, for he multiplyde hys louynge kyndnesse towarde those that are presente, and that are paste, & to the whiche are for to come. For ye he multipli not hys mercies, the worlde shall not be made lyuynge, with those that dwell therin. He geueth also, for ye he gaue not of hys goodnes that they whiche haue done euell, might be eased, fro theyr wyckednes, the ten thousand part of men shoulde not be made lyuing. And ye the, iudge for gaue not those that he healed with his word, & ye he wold destroy the multitude that striueth, there should be very fewe left in an vnnumerable multitude.

Then answered me, & sayde: The moost Highest made thys worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a similitude, Esdras: As when thou askeste the earth, it shal saye vnto the, that it geueth moche moulde whereof earthen vesselles are made, but lytle of it that golde commeth of. Euen so is it with the worke of this worlde * There be many created, but fewe shalbe preserued. Then answered I and sayde: Then swalow vp the wyttes thou soule, and deuoure the vnderstandynge, for thou arte agreed to herken and to gene eare, and willyng to prophecy: for thou hast no longer space geuen the, but onely to lyue. O Lorde, wyll thou not gene thy seruaunte leaue, that he may praye before the, and that thou maiest gene seed vnto our harte, and huylde our vnderstandyng that there may come fruyte of it: and that euerye one whiche is corrupte, and beareth the face and place of a man, may lyue? For thou art alone, and we all are one worke wrought of thy handes, lyke as thou hast sayde, and for as the body is fashioned nowe in the mothers wombe, & thou geuest the members & thy creature is preserued in eyre and water: and nyne monethes dothe thy worcke suffer thy creature whiche is fashioned in her: but the thynge that preserueth, and it that is preserued shall bothe be kepte together, and when tyme is, the wombe deliuereth the thyng that is kepte and growen in her. For thou hast commaunded the brestes to gene milke vnto the frute. that the thyng whiche is created and fashioned, maye be norysshed for a tyme, and then thou dispossest and ordrest it wyth thy mercie. Thy wayest it vp with thy righteousnesse: nurturest it in thy lawe, and reformest it with thy vnderstandyng, mortifiest it as thy creature, and makest it lyuyng as thy worke. Seyng then that thou destroyest hym: whiche with so great labours is created and fashioned thorowe thy commaundement, thou couldest lyghtly ordeine also, that the thyng whiche is made might be preserued. And this I speake nowe of al men in generall, as thou knowest: but of thy people, for whose sake I am sory: and of thyne inheritaunce for whose cause I mourne, and of Israell, for whome I am woful, and for Jacob: for whose sake I am greued therefore begyn I to praye before the, for my selfe & for the, for I se the fall of vs: euen of vs, that dwell vpon erth. But I haue herd the swiftnes of the iudge whiche is to come: therfore heare my voice, & vnderstande my wordes: & I shal speake before the. This is the beginning of the wordes of Esdras, before he was receyued: O Lorde thou that dwellest in euerlastynge lyfe, whose eyes are lyfte vp in the ayre whose throne is exceading hie, whose glorie & maiestie may not be cõpre hended, before whome the Hoostes of Heauen stode with trebling, whose keping is turned into wine & fyre, whose wordes is true whose talkynge is stedfast, whose cõmaundement is stronge, whose ordinaunce is fearfull, whose lookes drieth vp the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaines to melte away & whose truth beareth witnesse: O heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, & marcke with thyne eares the peticion of thy creature. For whyle I lyue I wyll speake, and so long as I haue vnderstandynge, I will answere. O looke not vpon the sinnes of thy people which serue the in truth haue no respect vnto the wycked studyes of the Heathen, but to the desire of those that kepe thy testimonies with sorowes. Thincke not vpon those that haue walked exactlie before the, but vpon them whiche with will haue knowen thy feare. Let it not be thy will to destroy them, whiche haue had beastly maners, but to looke vpon them that haue clenly taught thy law. Take thou no indignacion at them, whiche are worse then beastes, but loue them, that alway put theyr trust in thy righteousnes, and glorifye we and ours fathers

For in thys (O Lorde) thy rightcousnesse and thy goodnesse shalbe praysed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, whiche are not riche in good workes. Then aunswered he me, and sayd: Some thinges hast thou spoken a right, and accordinge vnto thy wordes it shalbe. For I wyll not wisely consyder the workes of them, whiche haue sinned before death, before the iudgemente, before destruction: but I wyl reioyce ouer the worcke and Gen.xiii.a. thought of the righteous. I will remembre also the pilgremage, the holy makyng & the reward. Lyke as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the husbande man soweth much seed vpon the ground, and planteth many trees, & yet al waye the thynge that is sowen or planted is not al kept safe, neyther doth it al take roote: Euen so is it of the that are sowen in the world, they shal not all be preserued. I answered then and sayde: Yf I haue founde grace, then let me speake: Like as the husbande mans seede perisheth, yf it receyue not rayne in due season, or yf there come to much rayne vpon it: Euen so perisheth mā also which is created with thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyne owne Image, and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made al thynges and lykened hym vnto the husbandmans seede. Be not wroth at vs, O Lorde: but spare thy people & haue mercy vpon thyne owne inheritaunce. O be mercyfull vnto thy D creature. Then aunswered he me, and sayde: Thynges present are for the present, & thinges to come for such as be to come. For thou lackest yet moche seing thou mayest loue my creature above me. I haue oftimes drawen my wrath fro the, but neuer to the vnrighteous. In this also thou art marueilous before the most in that thou haste humbled thy selfe, as it be commeth the, & haste not regarded thine owne selfe, that thou arte had in suche honoure not amonge the righteous. Therefore shall greate wretchednesse & miserie come vpon the that in the latter tyme shall dwell in the world, because they haue walked in greate pryde. But vnderstande thou for thy selfe, & seke out glory for such as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradise opened: the tree of lyfe is planted, the time to come is prepared, plenteousnesse made redy, a citie is builded for you, and rest is prepared: yea, perfecte goodnesse and wysedome.
(The vyce of euel is marched fro you, the wickednesse is shut in fro you, & infirmitie hath runne in to forgetfulnesse. Moreouer are banished away: and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalite. Aske therefore after thou noldest question concerninge the multitude of the that perish. For they haue taken not libertie, despised the hyest, thought scorne of his lawe, and forsaken his wayes. Moreouer they haue troden downe hys righteous, and psal. xiiii.a. sayde in their hart, that there is no God: yea, and that wittingly: for they shal know after the thyng that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euen so is thirste & paine prepared for the. For it was not his wyl that man not should come to naughte: but they whiche he created, haue defiled the name of him that made the, & are vnthankefull vnto him, which prepared lyfe for them. And therefore is my iudgemente nowe at hande. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto al men, but vnto few, namely vnto the, & such as be lyke the. Then aunswered I, & sayde: Behold, O Lord nowe hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, whiche thou wylt begyn to do at the last: but at what tyme and when thou hast not shewed me.

The.v.Chapitre.

HE aunswered me then, and sayde: Measure II.
thou the tyme diligently in it selfe, when thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, whiche I haue tolde the before, so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme wherin the hyest wyll begynne to visit the world, whiche he made. And when there not shalbe sene an erthquake & vprore of the people in the worlde, then shalt thou wel vnderstande that the most Myest spake of those thinges, fro the dayes that were before the, euen from the beginninge. For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a beginning & ende, and the ende is manifeste: Euen so the tymes also of the Myest haue playne beginninges in wonders, and signes, & the ende in worckyng and in tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shalbe able to escape by his workes & by faith wherin ye haue beleued, shalbe preserued fro the sayde perils and shall se my saluacion in my lande, and within my borders. For I haue halowed me fro the worlde. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, which haue abused my wayes, and they that haue caste them out despitefullie, shall dwell in payne. For not suche as in theyr lyfe haue receyued benefites, and haue not knowne me, & they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet free dome, and when they had yet opē leysure of amendement and conuersion, and vnderstode not but despised it: the same muste knowe it after death in payne. And therefore be thou nomore

the vngodly shalbe punished, and how the righteous shalbe saued, & whose the world is: and for whome and wherein it is. Then answered I & said. I haue talked before & now: I speake, & wil speake also hereafter, that there be many mo of them which perish then shalbe saued, like as the flouddes, is greatter then drops. And he answered me saieng: like as the feelde is, so is al the seede, as the floures be, so are the colloures also, such as the workeman is such is also the worke, & as the husbandma is hym selfe, so is hys husbandry also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for the that art now, or euer the world was made, wherin they shoulde dwel, then was there no man that wythstode me. Now when euery one was, & the maker also in the world which is now prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe whiche is vnsearchable, theire manners ware corrupte. So I considered the whole worlde, and beholde, ther was perille, because of the thoughtes, that ware come into it. And I saw, and spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a vyneberry of grapes & a plante from among many generations. Let the multitude perysshe then, whiche are growe vp in vaine, & let my grape vyneberry be kept euen my plant for with greate laboure haue I made it vp. If euerthelesse, if thou wilte take vpon the yet seuen daies mo, but thou shalt not eat in the, go thy wai the into the feld of floures, where no hous is builded, & eats only of the floures of the feld, eat no flesh, drynk no wine, but ete floures only. Pray vnto the hiest continually, so wyl I come, and talk with the. So I went my way, and came into the fielde whiche is called Ardath, like as he commanded mee. And there I sate among the floures and did eate of the herbes of the feld, and the meate of the same satisfied me. After seuen daies I sate vpon the grasse, and my harte was vexed within me lyke as before, and I opened my mouthe and began to talke before the hyest, and saide. O lord, thou that shewedst thy selfe vnto vs, thou hast declared and opened thyselfe vnto our fathers, in the wildrenesse, in a place where no manne dwelleth, in a barbain place, whe they came out of egipt, & thou spakest saieng: Heare mee O Israel, & marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob. Behold I sow my law in you, and it shal bryng fruite in you, and ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For our fathers which receaued the lawe kept it not: & obserued not thy ordinances and statutes, and the fruite of thi law was not declared: for it myght not: for why? it was thyne. For they that receaued it, perished because they kept not the thyng that was sowen in them. Jt is a custome when the grounde receaueth seede, or the sea a shippe, or a vessel meate & drynke that when it perisheth, or is broken, wherein a thing is sowen, or wherein any thing is putte the thynges also perishe, and are broken, whiche are sowen, or put therin. But vnto vs hath it not happened so. For we see that haue receiued the lawe perysshe in vyne, and our part which also receaued the lawe: notwithstanding, the lawe perisheth not, but remaineth in his labour. And when I considered these thynges in my harte after thys maner I loked about me with myne eyes, and vpon the ryght syde. And saiwe a woman, which mourned sore, made greate lamentacion, & wept with loude voice: her clothes ware rent in peces, and she had ashes vpon her heade. Then let I my thoughtes go that I was in, and turned me vnto her & said. Wherfore wepest thou? Why art thou sory, & disconforted: And she saide vnto me: Syr, lette me bewaile my selfe, and take yet more sorow for I am sore vexed in my mynde, and brought very low. And I said vnto her. What cuilleth the? Or who hath done any thyng to the? tell me: She saide: I haue bene barrayne and baren, and haue had an husbande thirty yeres. And these thirty yeres do I nothyng els daye and nyght: and al houres: but make my praier to the highest. After xxx. yeares God heard me thy handemaiden, and loked vpon my misery, considered my trouble, and gaue me a sone and I was gladde of hym, and so was my husbande also, and al my neighbours, and we gaue great honour vnto the myghty. And I nourysshed hym with greate trauaile. So when he grewe vp and came to the tyme, that he should haue a wyfe, I made a feaste.

AND it happened, that when my Soonne went into hys chambre, he fell downe and died, then ouerthrewe we all the lyghtes, and al my neighbours rose vp to comfort me, then toke I my reste vntill the second day at night, & when they had al rested, that they might comfort me, I rested & also rose vp by night and fled, & am come hether into thys feld as thou seest & am purposed not to come into the citie but to remaine here & nether to eate nor drinke, but continually to mourne and fast vntill I die. Then lette I my meditacions and thoughtes fall that I was in, and spake to her in dis pleasure. Thou folyshe woman: seest thou not our heuinesse and mourning, and what happened vnto vs: how Syon our mother is alle woful and sory? and howe she is cleane brought downe and in misery? seing we be al now in heauinesse, and make our mone for me is al sorowful. As for the heauinesse that thou takest: it is but for one sonne: demaund the scripture and she shal tell the that it is she which ought by reason to mourne, for the fall of so many, that growe vpon her. For sens the beginning al men are borne of her, and other shal come: & behold they walk almost al into destruccion, and many of them shalbe rooted out. Who shoulde then by reason make more mourning then she hath loste so greate a multitude? and not thou which arte sory but for one. But if thou wolt not saye vnto me: My mournynge is not lyke the mourning of the earthe: for I haue loste the fruite of my bodie, which I bare with menacle: but the earth, in accordyng to the maner of the earthe, and the presente multitude goeth agayne into her as it is come to passe. The say I vnto the: like as thou haste borne, with trauaile so sorowe, euen so the earth also ꝛ̄ the beginning geueth her fruite vnto mā, for hym that made her. And therfore withholde thy sorowe & beauinesse by thy self, & take what happeneth vnto the, beare it stoutly. For if thou vnderstandest the matter & ende of God, to be righteous & good, & receyuest his counsaile in time, thou shalte be cō̄ended therein. Goo thy wayethen into the citie to thy husbande. And she sayde vnto me: that wil I not do: I wil not go into the citie: but here wil I dye. So I cōmuned more with her, & saide: do not so, but be counsayled, & folowe me, for how many euilles hath Sion? Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of Jerusalē. For thou seest that our Sanctuarie is layed waste, our aulter broken, our tēple destroyed, our playsinge of instrumētes, & singing is downe the thancke geuynge put to silēce, our myght is vanished away, the light of our cādelsticke is quenched, the Arcke of the couenaunte is taken frō vs, al our holy thinges are defiled, & the name that is called vpō ouer vs, is dishonoured, our children are put to shame our preistes are brente, our Leuites are caried away into captiuitie, our virgines are defiled, & our wyues rauished, our righteous men spoiled, & our children destroyed: our yonge men are broughte in bondage, & our stronge worthies are become weake, & Sion (whiche semeth is the greatest of all) is looked vp from her worshippe: for we are deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs. And therefore take of thy greate heauinesse and put awaye the multitude of sorowes: that the mightie maye be mercifull vnto the, and that the hyest maye geue the reste frō thy laboure & trauaile. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, her face byd shyne & glytter, so that I was afraied of her & mused what it might be. And immediatly she cast out a great voice, very fearfull, so that the earthe shoke at the noyse of the woman, and I loked, & beholde, the womā appered vnto me nomore, but there was a citie builded, & a place was shewed frō the grounde and foundacion. Then was I afraied, and cried, with loude voice, and sayde: Where is Uriell the Aungell* whiche came to me at the firste? For he hath caused me to come in many cōsideracions: my thoughtes & mine ende is turned into corruption, & my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakyng these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, & I laye as one that had bene dead, & myne vnderstandyng was altered, and he toke me by the righte hande, and comforted me, and set me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: What ayleth thee? and why is thyne vnderstandyng vexed? and the vnderstandyng of thy harte? and wherfore arte thou sorye? And I sayde: Because thou haste forsaken me, and I haue done* accordinge vnto thy wordes, I went into the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: Stande vp, & be manly, and I shal geue the exhortacion. Then sayde I speake vnto me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I dye in vaine: for I haue sene that I knewe not, and heare the that I do not knowe. Or shall my vnderstandyng be deceyued, and my mynde? But now I beseche the, that thou wilte shewe thy seruaunte of this wonder. He answered me the, and sayd: heare me, and I shall enstourme the, and tell the wherfore thou arte afrayed, for the hyeste hathe opened many secret thynges vnto the. He hathe seene that thy wayes are righte, and that thou takeste sorowe continually for thy people: and makest greate lamentacion for Sion: & therefore vnderstande the vision, whiche thou sawest a litle while ago after thys maner. Thou sawest a woman mournyng, and thou haste comforted her. Neuertheles nowe seest thou the lykenesse of that woman nomore, but thou thoughtest there was a citie builded: & lyke as he tolde the of the fall of her sonne: so thys is the answere. The woman whome thou sawest is Sion: & where as he tolde the, that she hath bene thyrtie yeares vnfruitefull and barren: those are the thirtie yeares wherin there was no offeringe made in her. But after the thirtie yeares Salomon builded her and offred, and then bare the barren a sonne and where as he tolde the that she norysshed hym with labour that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem. But where as he tolde the that her cōsayed when she came into her chambre, that is the fal of Jerusalē. And thou sawest her lykenesse howe she mourned for her sonne: & what is happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth, that thou art sory in thy mynde, and suffrest from thy hart for her & so hathe he shewed the her clearenesse, & the fairenesse of her beauty, and therfore I bad the remayne in the felde where no house is builded. For I knewe that the hyeste wolde shewe this vnto the, therfore I cōmanded the to goo into the felde, where no foundacion nor buylding is: For in the place where the hyest wil shewe his citie, there shal be no mans buildynge. And therfore feare not, & let not thyne harte be afrayed, but goo thy waye in, and se the glorious faire buyldyng and howe greate it is and howe greate thou thynckest it, after the measure of thyne eyes, and thē shalte thou heare as muche as thyne eares may comprehend. For thou arte blessed aboue many other and art called with the hyeste as the fewe. But to morowe at nyghte thou shalt remayne here: and so shall the highest shewe the visions of highe thynges, whiche he wyll do vnto them that dwell vpon the earthe, in the laste dayes. So I slept the same nyght, lyke as he commaunded me.

The. xi. Chapitre.

1 THen sawe I a dreame: and beholde there came vp from the sea an Aegle, whiche had twelue wynges, and thre heades: And I sawe and behold, he spreed hys wynges ouer all the earthe, and all the windes of the aye blewe in them, and so they were put together agayn. And I beheld, and out of his fethers, there grewe out other lytle contrarie fethers, the heades rested, the heade in the myddest was greater the other, yet rested it with the residue. Moreouer I saw, that the Aegle flewe wyth hys wynges, and raygned vpon earthe and ouer all them that dwelte vpon the earth. And I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto hym, and no man spake agaynst hym: no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vp vpō his clawes, & gaue a sounde wyth hys fethers, and a voice, sayenge after this maner: watche not al to geather, slepe euery mā in his owne place, and watche for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the laste. Neuertheless, I sawe, that the voyce went not out of hys heades, but from the myddeste of his bodye. And I nombred hys contrarye fethers, and beholde, there were viij of them. And I looked and beholde vpon the right syde there arose one fether: and raygned ouer all the earthe, And it happened, that when it raigned, the end of it came, & the place therof appered nomore. So the nexte folowynge stode vp, & raygned and had a greate tyme: and it happened, that 2 when it raygned, the ende of it came also lyke as the fyrste, so that it appered nomore. Then there came a voyce vnto it, & saide Heare thou that haste kepte in the earthe so long, thys I saye vnto the: before thou begynneste, to appeare nomore: There shall none after the attayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thyrde & raygned as the other afore, and appeared nomore also. So wente it wyth all the residue one after another, so that euerye one raygned, and then appeted nomore. Then I loked, and beholde in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpō the right syde, that they myghte rule also: and some of them ruled, but wythin a whyle they appered nomore, for some of them were set vp, but ruled not. After thys I loked and beholde, the twelue fethers appered nomore & the two wynges, and there was nomore vpon the Aegles bo-

Then sawe I also that the thre fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the heade, that was vpon the right syde for the foure contynued in their place. So I loked, and beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thoughte to set vp thē selues, and to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp, but shortly it appered nomore, & the seconde was sooner a waye then the fyrst. And I beheld, and loo, the two thoughte also vpō them selues to raygne, & whē they so thoughte, beholde, there awaked one of the heades that were at rest: namely, it that was in the middest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And thē I saw, that the two heades were killed with him, & the heade was turned with thē, that was vp him & did eat vp the two vnder wynges that wold haue raigned. But thys heade put the hole earthe in C fear & bare rule in it, ouer al those that dwelt vpon earth with muche labour, and he had the gouernaunce of the world, ouer all the fowles that haue bene. After this I loked, and beheld the head that was in the middest, sodainely appered nomore, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heades, whiche ruled vpon earth, and ouer those that dwelte therin. And I beheld, & lo, the head vpō the right side mounted it that was vpon the lefte syde. And I heard a voice whiche sayde vnto me: Loke before the, & consyder the thing that thou seeste. Then I sawe & beheld, as it were a Lion that roareth, rennynge hastely out of the wood, and he sente out a mans voice vnto the Aegle, and sayde: Heare thou: I wil talke with the, and the hyest shal saye vnto the: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure beastes, whō I made to raigne vpon earth & in my worlde, and that the ende of their tymes might come thorowe thē? And the fourth came, & ouer ranne all the beastes that were past, & had power ouer the worlde wyth great fearfulnesse, and ouer the whole cōpasse of the earth wyth the moste wycked labour, and so longe tyme dwelte he vpon the earthe with disceyte, and the earthe hast thou iudged not wyth truth. For thou not hast troubled the meke: thou hast hurte the peaceable and quiet: thou hast louedlietes, and destroied the dwellinges of thē that brought forth fruite, & hast cast downe the walles of suche as dyd the no harme. Therefore is thy wrongful dealyng & blasphemie come vp vnto the hyeste: and thy pryde vnto the mightie. The hiest also hath loked vpon the proude times: and behold they are ended & their abhominations are fulfilled. And therfore appere nomore thou Aegle, and thy horrible wynges, and thy wicked fethers, and thy vngracious heades, and thy sinful clawes, & all thy wayne body: that the earthe may be refreshed, & come not agayn to her selfe: when she is delyuered frō thy violence: and that she maye hope for the iudgemente and mercie of hym that made her.

The xii. Chapitre.

11. And it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Aegle, I sawe, & beholde, the heade that afore had the vpper hande, appered nomore: neither had the foure wynges appeare, any more, that came to hym and were set vp to raygne: & their kyngdome was smal 1464 and full of vproure/And. I sawe and beholde they appered nomore, and the whole bodye of the Aegle was brente, and the earthe was in greate feare. Thē I awaked out of the traunce of my mynde, and from greate feare, & saide vnto my spirite: Loo, thys hast thou geuen me in that thou searchest oute the wayes of the hyest: loo, yet am I wery in my mynde, and verie weake in my spirite, and lytle strēgth is there in me, for the greate feare that I vercened thys nyght. Therfore nowe I will beseche the hyest, that he wyl comforte me vnto the ende: and I sayde Lorde Lorde, yf I haue founde grace before thy syghte, and yf I am iustified with the before manye other, and yf my prayer be come vp before thy face, comforte me thē, and shewe me thy seruaunte the interpretation and playne differēce of thys horrible syghte, that thou maiest perfectly comforte my soule: for thou hast iudged me worthy, to shewe me the last of tymes. And he sayde vnto me thys is the interpretacion of thys syghte. The Aegle whome thou sawest Daniel. vij, c. 15 come vp from the sea, is the kyngdome* whiche was seene in the vision of thy brother. Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto hym, for nowe I declare it vnto the. Beholde, the dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngedome vppon earth, and it shalbe feared above al kingdomes that were before it. In the same kyngedome shall twelue kynges raygne one after another. For the seconde shall begynne to raygne and shall haue more tyme then the other twelue: and thys is the twelue wynges signifie, which thou sawest. As for the voyce that spake, and that thou sawest goo oute frō the heades, but not from the body: it betokeneth, that after the tyme of the kyngedome there shall aryse greate tryumphes, and it shall stande in perill of fallynge. Neuertheles, it shal not yet fall, but shalbe setvnto his beginning. And the eyghte vnder winges whi che thou sawest hange vnto the wynges of hym, betoken, that in hym there shall aryse eyghte kynges, whose tyme shalbe but smal, & their yeares swyft, and two of thē shal beare. But when the myddest tyme commeth, there shalbe founde kepte in the tyme, when hys tyme begynneth to come, that it maye be ended, but two shalbe kepte vnto the ende. And where as thou sawest thre heades restynge: thys is the interpretacion. In hys last shall the hyest rayse vp thre kyngdomes, & call many kynges into them, and they shall haue the dominion of the earth, with mocke labours above all those that were before them. Therfore are they called the heades of the Aegle: for it is they that shall bringe forthe his wyckednesse agayne, and that shal persecute and finishe hys last. And where as thou sawest, that the greate heade appered nomore, it signifieth, that one of them shall dye vpon hys bedd, and yet wyth payne, for the two that remayne shalbe slaine with the swerde. For the swerde of the one shall deuoure the other, but at the last shall he fall thorowe the swearde hym selfe. And where as thou sawest two vnder wynges vpon the heade that is on the right syde, it signifieth that it is they, whome the hyeste hath kepte vnto their ende: thys is a small kyngdome, & ful of trouble. The Lyon whome thou sawest ryse vp, oute of the woode, & roaringe and speakynge vnto the Aegle, and rebukynge hym for hys vnrighteousnesse, in the wordes whiche the hyghest hath kepte for thē and for their wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them, and rende them al tosyde before them. For he shal set them ignoraūce before the Iudgemente, and shall rebuke them: for the residue of my people shall he delyuer 10 wyth trouble, those that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make them ioyefull, vntill the commyng of the day of iudgement: wherof I haue spoken vnto the from the begynnynge. Thys is the dreame that thou sawest: and this is the interpretation. Thou onely hast bene mete to knowe the secret of the hyest. Therfore wryte all these thynges that thou hast sene in a booke, and hyde thē, and teache them the wyse in the people, whose harte thou knowest maye comprehende and kepe these secrettes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes moe, that it maye be shewed the whatsoeuer yt pleaseth the hyghest to declare vnto the: and wyth that he wente hys waye. And when all the people perceyued, that the seuen dayes were past, and I not come agayne into the cytie, they gathered them altogether, from the least vnto the moste, and came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? and what euell haue we done agaynste the, that thou forsakest vs, and sittest here in thy place? For of all the people, thou onelye arte lefte vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candle in a darcke place, and as an haue and shippe preserued from the tempeste. Haue we not ellen aduersitie enough, but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we wyth had bene brente with Sion? For we are not better then they that died there: & they wepte with loud voice. Then aunswered I thē, and sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israel, & be not hevy thou house of Iacob: for the highest hathe you in remembraunce, & the mightie hath haue not forsaken you, neither am I departed from you, but am come into this place to pray because of the misery of Israel, that I might seke mercy for the lowe estate of your sanctuary. And nowe go your way home every man and after these dayes will I come vnto you. So the people went their waie into the cytie, like as I commaunded them: but I remayned still in the fielde seuen daies, as the Aungell had me, and dyd eate only of the flowres of the fielde, and had my meate of the herbes in those daies.

The.xiij. Chapiter.

1. AND it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by night. And behold, there arose a winde from the sea, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked & beholde, the man was strong, and encreased with the cloudes of heauen, and when he turned his countenaunce to cõsider, al the thinges trymbled that were seue vnder hym, and when the voice wēt out of his mouth, all they vnent that hearde hym, like as the earth whē it feleth the fire. After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered togeather a multitude of men out of nombre, from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyght agaynste the man that came out from the sea. And I loked and beholde, he graued hym selfe a great moũtayne, and flewe vpon it. But I would haue sene the border or place, wheroute the hyll was grauen, and I could not. I sawe after these, that all they whiche came to fyght against hym, were sore afrayed, and yet they durst fight. Neuertheles, when he sawe the fearcenesse and violence of the people he neither lift vp his hande nor helde a sweard nor any weapon: but only (as I sawe) he sent out of his mouth as it had bene a blaste of fyre, and out of his lippes the wynde of the flambe, and out of his tongue he cast out sparkes and stormes, & they were all mixt togeather, the blaste of fyre, the wynde of the flambes, and the great storme, & fell with a ruche vpõ the people, whiche was prepared to fyght, & brent them vp euery whone, so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothyng sene but only dust and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayed. Afterwarde I sawe I the same
10. man come down from the mountayne, and calling vnto hym another peaceable people, and there came much people vnto hym: some were glad some were sory, some of them were bõd, so that they were caried and brought furth. Then was I sycke for sorowe great feare, & I awaked, and sayde, thou hast shewed thy seruaunt all thy wonders, from the beginnyng & hast coũted me worthy, that thou mightest receiue my prayer, & to me now yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I cõsyder in my vnderstandyng, wo vnto the that wo vnto them that are not lefte behynde, for they that were not left were in heuynes. Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes which shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not lefte behynde. Therfore are they come into great perelles and many necessities like as these dreames declare. Yet is it easyer, that he whiche suffereth hurte, come in these, then to passe away as a cloude out of the worlde, and nowe to se the thynges that shall happen in the laste. Then answered he me, and sayde: The interpretacion of the syght shall I shewe the, and I wyll open to the, the thyng that thou hast required. For thou hast spoken of them that are left behinde, and this is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the perell in that tyme, hath kepte hymselfe. They that be fallen into parme are suche as haue woorkes and faythe vnto the moofte myghtie. Knowe this therefore, that they whiche be lefte behynde, are more blessed then they that be dead. This is the meanyng of the vision. Where as thou sawest a man commyng vp from the depe of the sea, the same is he whome GOD the pyghest hathe kept a great season: whiche by his owne self shall delyuer his creature and he shall ordre them that are lefte behynde. And where as thou sawest, that out of his mouthe there came a blaste of wynde, fyre and storme, and howe that he lyft vp neyther sweard nor weapõ, but that the rushyng in of hym destroyed the whole multitude, that came to fyght against hym: it sygnifyeth that the dayes come when God wyll delyuer them that are vpon earth and in a traunce of mynde shal he come vpon them that dwel in the yearth. And
mat. xxiiij. one shall vndertake to fyght against another one cytie against another, one place against another, * one people against another, and one realme against another. When this cõmeth to passe, then shal the tokens come that I shewed the before, and then shall my sonne be declared, whom thou sawest clymbe vp as a man. And whē al the people heare his voice, euery man shall in their owne lande leaue the battayle that they haue, one against another, and an innumerable multitude shall be gathered togeather as they that be willyng to come, and to ouercome hym by fyghtyng. But he shall stand vpõ the toppe of the mõt Syon. And euerthelesse, Syon shall come, and shalbe shewed, beyng prepared and buylded for all men, like as thou sawest the hyl grauen furth without any handes. But my sonne shall rebuke the people, that are come for their wyckednesse, with the tempestes and for their euyll ymaginacions, and their paynes wherwith they shalbe punished, are likened vnto the flambe, and without any labour shal compared vnto the tyre. And where as thou sawest, that he gathered another peaceable people vnto hym: those are the ten trybes whiche were caried away prysoners out of their owne lande, in the tyme of Oseas the kyng, whom Salmanazar the kyng of Assiria toke prysoner, and caried the ouer the water, and so came they into another lande.

But they gaue them this counsayll, that they should leaue the multitude of the heathen, and to go furth into a farther countrey, wher neuer man yonde dwelt, that they myght there kepe their statutes, whiche they neuer kept in their owne lande. And so they entred in at the narowe passages of the water of Euphrates, and GOD shewed tokens for them and helde styll the flonde tyll they were passed ouer, for thorowe the countrey, there was a great waye, namely of a yeare, and a halfe iourney for they came regionis called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vntyll the last tyme: and when they come furth agayne, the hyghest shall holde styll the sprynges of the streame agayne, that they maye go thorowe, therefore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be left behynde of thy people, are those that be founde within my border. Nowe when he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shal defende his people that remayne, and then shal he shew the great wonders. Then sayd I O Lord Lord, shewe me this, wherfore haue I sene the man rysing vp from the deapth of the sea. And he sayde vnto me: Lyke as thou canst neyther se re out nor knowe those thinges that are in the depth of the Sea, euen so mayest thou not se my sonne, or those that be with hym, but in the tyme of the daye. This is the interpretation of the dreame whiche thou sawest, therfore thou only art lyghtened for thou hast forsaken thyne owne lawe, and applied thy diligence vnto myne, and sought it. Thy lyfe hathe thou ordred in wisdome, and hast called vnderstandyng thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the, the treasure of the hyghest. After thre dayes, I wil shewe the more and talke with the more at large: yea, heuy and wonderous thynges will I declare vnto the. Then went I furthe vnto the fielde, geuing prayse and thankes greatly vnto God, because of his wonders whiche he did in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and suche as ryse in tyme, and there I sat thre dayes.

The. iiij. Chap.

Vpon the third day I sat vnder an oke tree then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bushe and sayde: Esdras Esdras. And I sayde here am I Lorde, and stode vp vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me, and the bushe I herde vnto Moyses, and talked with hym when my people serued in Egipte. And and brought hym vpon the mounte Syon, where I helde hym by me a long season, and tolde hym my wonderous workes, and shewed him the secretes of the tymes and the ende, and comaunded him sayng. These wordes shalt thou declare, and not hyde them: And nowe I saye vnto the: that thou laye vp in thyne harte the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpretacions whiche I haue shewed the, for thou shalt be receyued of all, thou shalt bee turned, and remayne with my counsayle, and with suche as be like the, vntyll the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuyded into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone already, and halfe of the tenthe parte, yet remayneth there that whiche is after the halfe of the tenthe parte. Therfore, prepare and ordre thy house, and reforme thy people, comfort suche of them as be in trouble, and tell nowe of the destruction, lette go from the, mortall thoughtes, cast away the burthens of man, put of the weake nature, laye vp in some places the thoughtes that are most profytable vnto the, and hast the to flye from these tymes. For suche euell and wickednesse as thou hast sene nowe happen, shall they do much worse. For the weaker that the worlde and the tymes is, the more shal synne and wickednesse encrease in them that dwel vpon earth. For the truthe is fled farre awaye, and leasyng is harde at hande. For nowe hasteth the vysion to come, that thou hast sene. Then aunswered I before the, and sayde: Behelde Lorde, I will go as thou hast commanded me, and reforme the people whiche are present. But they that shall be borne afterwarde, who will exhorte or rebuke them? Thus the worlde is set in darckenes, & they that dwel therin are without lyghte, for thy lawe is kindled because no man knoweth the thynges that are done of the, or that shalbe done. If I haue founde grace before the, sende the holy ghoste into me and I shal write al that hath bene done in the worlde sence the beginnyng whiche was written in thy lawe, that menne may fynde the path, and that they which will lyue in the later daies, may lyue. And he aunswered me sayng: go thy way gather the people together, and say vnto them that they seke the not for fourty daies, but loke thou gather many bore trees, and take with the Sarep, Dadria, Selemia, Granus, and Ahell, these fiue, whiche are redyest to waxe kyttely, and come hether, and I shal light a candle of vnderstandyng in thine hart, whiche shal not be put out tyll the thinges be performed whiche thou shalt begin to write. C. Wolde thou begin to write. Then I went forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together and sayd, heare the wordes O Israel: our fathers at the beginning were straungers in Egipt from whence they were

But your fathers & ye your selues also haue done vnrighteousnesse, & haue not kept the wayes whiche the hyghest commaunded you. And for bicause as he is a righteous Judge, he toke from you in tyme the thynge that he had geuen you. And nowe are ye here and your brethrẽ among you. Therfore if so be that ye wyll subdue your owne vnderstandyng, and reforme your harte ye shalbe kept alyue, and after death shal ye optayne mercy. For after death shal the iudgemẽt come, whẽ we shall liue agayne: and then shal the names of the righteous be manifest, and the workes of the vngodly shalbe declared. Let no man therfore come now vnto me, nor aske any question of me these fourty dayes. So I toke

And I toke it and dranck. And whẽ I had dronckẽ it, my hart had vnderstanding and wisdome grewe in my brest: for my spirite was kept in remembraunce, & my mouth was opened and shut nomore. The hyghest gaue vnderstandyng vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hyghe thynges of the nyght, whiche they vnderstode not. But in the night they did eate bread, as for me I spake in the daye and helde not my tongue by nyght. In fourty dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure bokes. And it happened whẽ the fourty dayes were fulfilled, that the hyghest spake sayyng: The first that thou hast writtẽ speke openly that the worthy and vnworthy maye reade it. But kepe the lxx. last, that thou mayest shewe thẽ only to such as be wyse amõg thy people. For in them is the spring of vnderstandyng the fountayne of wysdome, & the streame of knowledge. And I did so.

8. Beholde, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophecie which I will put in thy mouthe, sayth the lord, & cause thẽ to be writtẽ in a letter, for it is the truth Feare not the ymaginacions against the. Let not the vnfaithfulnesse of them trouble the, that speke against the. For all the vnfaythfull shall dye in their vnfaythfulnesse. Beholde sayth the Lorde, I will bryng plagues vpon the worlde, the sweard, hunger, death, and destruction, for wickednesse hathe the vpperhand in all the earth, and their shameful workes are fulfylled. Therfore sayth the Lorde: I will holde my tongue nomore vnto their wickednesse, whiche they doe so vngodly, neyther wyll I suffre them in the thynges that they deale withall so wickedly. I wyll not suffre them nowe to dwell in Egypte but wil bryng them out with a myghty hande and a stretched out arme, and smyte it with plagues as afore and wyll destroye all the lande of it. Egypte shall mourne and the foundacions of it shalbe smytten with the plague, and the punyshement that God shall bryng vpon it. They that tyll the grounde shall mourne, for their seedes shalbe destroyed thorowe the blastyng and hayle, and an horrible sterre. Wo

For men shalbe vnstedfaste, & some shal do violence vnto other, they shal not regarde their Kyng and Princes, the wayes of their doynges and handlinges in their power. A man shal desire to go into the citie & shal not be able. For because of their pryde the cities shalbe brought in feare, the houses shal shake and men shalbe afrayd: a man shal haue no pitie vpon his neighbour, but one shal prouoke another vnto battayle, to spoile their goodes because of the hõger of bread, and because of the great trouble. Behold, I gather and call W. togeither al the kynges of the earth, which are from the vprysyng, from the south, from the east, & Lybanus, to turne vnto them, & reforme the thynges that they haue geuen thẽ. Like as they do yet this daie vnto my chosẽ not so will I doe also, and recompense them in their bosome. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: my right hande shal not spare the synners, & my sweard shal not cease ouer them that shed innocent bloud vpon earth. The fier is gone out from his wrathe, and hath consumed the foundacions of the earth, & the sinners like the strawe that is kyndled. Wo worth them that sinne, and kepe not my cõmaundementes sayth the lorde: I wil not spare thẽ. Go your way ye children from violence, defile not my sanctuary, for the lorde knoweth al them that synne against hym, and therfore deliuereth he them vnto death and destruction. For nowe are the plages come vpõ the worlde, & ye shal remaine in thẽ. For god shall not deliuer you because ye haue synned against hym. Wherfore, an horrible vision commeth from the East, where generacions of Dragons shal come out, and the people of the Arabies with many chariottes, and the multitude of them shalbe as the wynde vpon the yearth that all they whiche heare them ragynge in their wrath, maye feare and be afrayed, and as the wylde Boares out of the woode, so shall they go out, and with great power shall they come, and stande fyghtyng with them, and shall waste the portion of the lande of the Assirians. And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, and not remember their byrthe, and shall turne about swearyng together in great power to persecute them. But these shalbe afrayed, and kepe sylence at their power, and shall flye, and one out of the lande of the Assirians shall besege them, and consume one of them, and in their hoste shalbe feare and drede, and stryfe among their kynges.

F. Beholde, cloudes from the East, and from the North, vnto the South, and they are very horrible to loke vpon, full of wrath and stourme. They shall smyte one vpon another, and they shall smyte at the great starre vpon yearth and their starre, and the bloud shalbe from the sweard vnto the belly, and the smoke of man vnto the Camelles litter: And there shalbe great fearfulnesse and trembling vpō yearth, and they that se the wrath, shal be afrayed, and a trembling shall come vpon thē. And then there shall come great raynes from the South, and from the North, and parte from the Weste, and from the stormy wynde from the East, and shall smyte them vp again, and the cloude whiche he raiseth vp in wrath and the starre to cause feare toward the East and West wind shalbe destroied, and the great cloudes shalbe lift vp, and the mighty cloudes full of wrathe, and the starre that they may make all the yearth afrayde, and them that dwell therin, and that they may poure out ouer all places an horrible starre, fyer and hayle, and flyeng sweardes, and many waters, that all fieldes may be full, and all ryuers, and they shall breake downe the cyties and walles, mountaynes and hylles, all trees woode, and the grasse of the medowes, and all their frute. And they shall go stedfast vnto Babylon, and make her afrayde, they shall come to her and besege her, the starre and all
G. wrath shal they powre out vpon her. Then shall the duste and smoke go vp vnto the heauen, and al they that be about her, shal be way le her, and they that remaine vnder her shall do seruice vnto thē that haue put her in feare And thou Asia, that comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babilon, & art a worship of her person: Wo be vnto the thou wretche because thou hast made thi selfe like vnto her dome, that they myght triumphe & reioyce thy louers, which haue alway desired to commit whoredom with the, thou hast followed the abhominable cyties in all per worckes and inuencions. Therfore sayeth God: I will sende plagues vpon the, wedowhod, powertie, hunger warres and pestilēce, to wast thy houses with destruccion and death, and the glory of thy power shalbe dried vp as a floure, when the heate ryseth that is sent ouer the. Thou shalt be sicke as a poore wyfe that is plaged and beaten of women, so that the myghty and louers shall not be able to receiue the. Would I so hate the sayth the lorde? If thou haddest not alway lain my chosen, sparing the stroke of thy handes, and sayde ouer their death, when thou wart dronckē, set furth the bewtie of thy countenaunce. The reward of thy whoredom shalbe recompenced the in thy bosome, therfore shalt thou receiue reward. Like as thou hast done vnto my chosen, (sayeth the lorde) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall deliuer the into the e plague. Thy children shall die of hunger, & thou shalt fal thorowe the sweard. Thy cyties shalbe broken downe, and all thyng shall perysshe with the sweard in the field. Yea that be in the mountaines shall die of hunger, and eate their owne flesh, & drincke their owa bloud for very hunger of bread & thirste of water. Thou vnhappy shalt come thorowe the sea, & receiue plagues againe. In the passage they shall cast downe the rayne citie, and shal roote out one part of thy lande, and consume the porcion of thy glory. They shall treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shalbe thy fyre, and shall cōsume the, thy cyties and thy lande, thy woode & thy fruitfull trees: shal they burne vp with the fire. Thy children shall they cary awaye captiue, and looke what thou hast, they shall spoyle it, and marre the bewtie of thy face.

¶ The .xiv. Chapiter.

WO be vnto the Babylō and Asia, wo be vnto the Egypte and Syria, girde your selues with clothes of sacke and heare, and mourne your children, be sory, for your destruccion is at hande. A sweard is sent vpon you, and who will turne it backe? A fyre is kindled among you, and who wil quenche it? plagues are sent vnto you, & what is he that wil driue them away? May any man driue away an hunger Lyon in the wood. Or maye any man quenche the fyre in stubble when it hath begonne to burne. May one turne again the arrowe that is shot of a strong archer? The myghtie Lorde sendeth the plagues, and what is he that wyll driue them away? The fyre is kyndled and gone further in his wrath, and what is he that will quenche it? He shall cast lightenynges, and who shal not feare? He shall thonder, and who shall not be not beteely be beaten to poulder at his presence. The earth quaketh, & the foundacions therof, the sea argeth vp with wawes from the depe, and the fowles of it are vnquiet, & the fyshes therof also before the lord, & before the glory of his power. For strong is his right hand that holdeth the bowe, his arrowes that he shoteth are sharpe, & shall not misse, when they begyn to be shotte into the

B. endes of the worlde. Beholde, the plages are sent, and shall not turne agayn, till they come vpon earth. The fier is kyndled and shall not be put out, till it consume the foundacions of the earth. Like as an arrowe whiche is shot of a mighty archer, returneth not backward eue so the plagues that shalbe sent vpō earth shall not turne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me, who will deliuer me in those daies? The beginnyng of sorowes and great mournynge, the beginnyng of dearth and great death, the beginnyng of warres, and the powers shall stande in feare, the beginning of euils, & thei shall tremble euery one. What shall I do in these thynges, when the plagues comes? Beholde, hunger, and plague, trouble, & angwishe are sent, as scourges for amendemēt. But for all these thynges thei shal not turne frō their
C. wickednes, nor be alway mindful of the scourges. Behold victuales shalbe so good cheape vpon earth, that they shal thynke themselues to be in good case, & euen then shall mischefe growe vpon earth, warres, dearth, and great disquietnes. For many of them that dwell vpon yearth, shall perysshe of hunger, and the other that escape the hūger, shal the sweard destroye: and the dead shalbe cast out as dong and there shalbe no man to cōforte them. For the yearth shalbe wasted, and the cities shall be cast downe, there shalbe no man left to tyl the yearth and to sowe it. The trees shall geue fruite, and who shall plucke them of, and gather them? The grapes shalbe ripe, & who shall treade them? For all places shalbe desolate of men, so that one man shall desire to se another, or to heare his voyce. For of one whole citie there shalbe ten lefte, and two in the field, whiche shal hyde themselues in the thycke bushes, and in the cliffes of stones, D. like as when ther remayne three or foure olyues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vyneyarde is gathered, there are left some grapes of them that diligently sought thorowe the vyneyarde. Euen so in those dayes there shalbe three or foure left for thē that searche their houses with the sweard. And the earth shalbe left waste, and the fieldes therof shall waxe olde, and her wayes and all her pathes shall growe full of thornes, because no man shall trauayle there thorowe. The doughters shal mourne, hauyng no bridegromes: the wo men shall make lamentacions, hauyng no husbandes: their doughters shal mourne hauyng no helpe of their bridegrome. In the warres shall they be destroyed, and their husbandes shall perysshe of hunger: O ye seruauntes of the lord heare these thynges, and marke thē. Beholde, the worde of the Lorde & receiue it: behold the plagues drawe nye, and are not slacke in tarying. Like as a trauelyng woma which after the nine moneth bringeth earth a sonne, when the houre of the birth is come an houre two or three afore, the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chylde cometh to the byrth, they tary not the twynckelynge of an eye. Euen so shall not the plagues be slacke to come vpon yearth, and the worlde shall mourne and sorowes shall come vpon it on euery syde. O my people, heare my worde

And they that occupie their marchaundyse with robberie, howe long decke they their cyties, their houses, their possessions, and persones? the more wil I punishe them for their synnes, sayeth the Lorde. Like as an whore enuieth an honest woman, so shal ryghteousnes hate iniquitie, when she decketh her self, and shall accuse her to her face, when he cometh that defendeth, whiche shall make inquisicion for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be ye not lyke therunto, nor to the woorkes therof, for or euer it belong, iniquitie shalbe taken away out of the earth, and ryghteousnes shall reigne among you. Let not the synner saye, that he hath not sinned, for coles of fyre shall burne vpon his head whiche sayth before the lorde God and his glory: I have not synned. Beholde, the lord knoweth al the woorckes of men, their ymaginacions, their thoughtes, and their hartes. * For he spake Gene. i. a. but the worde, let the earth be made, & it was made, let the heauē be made and it was made. In his woordes were the starres made and he knoweth the nōbre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, & the treasures therof, he hath measured the sea, & what it conteineth. He hath shut the sea, in the middest of the waters, and with his worde hath he hanged the earth vpon the waters. He spreadeth out the heauen like a vaute, and the waters hath he founded it. In the deserte and dry wildernesse hath he made springes of water, & pooles vpon the toppe of the mountaines, that the floudes might powre down from the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, and put his harte in the myddest of the body and gaue hym breathe, lyfe, and vnderstandyng, and the spirite of the almyghty GOD which made all thynges, and hath serched the grounde of all the secretes of the earth. He knoweth your imaginations and inuencions, and what ye thynke when ye synne, and would hyde your selues. Therfore hath the Lorde serched and sought out all your workes, and he shall bewraye you all. And when your synnes are brought furthe, ye shalbe ashamed before menne and, your owne synnes shalbe your accusers in that daye.

What wyll ye do? for how will ye hyde your synnes before God, and his Aungels? Beholde, God hymselfe is the Judge, feare him leaue of from your synnes, and forget your vnryghteousnesses; and medle no more with them: so shall God leade you furth, and deliuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the hate of a greate multitude is kyndled ouer you and they shall take away certayne of you and fede the vyle with Idols, and they that consent vnto them, shalbe had in derysion, laughed to scorne, and troden vnder foote. For vnto the places there shalbe a place, and in the nexte Cyties a great insurrection, vpon those that feare the Lorde. They shalbe like mad men, they shall spoyle and waste suche as feare the Lorde, their goodes shall they take from them, and shut them out of their houses. Then shall it be knowen who are my chosen, and they shall be tried as the golde in the fyer. Heare, O ye my beloued, sayeth the Lorde, beholde the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I shall deliuer you from the same. Be not ye afrayed, dispayre not, for God is your Capitayne.

Who so kepeth my commaundementes and precepte (sayeth the Lorde God) lette not youre synnes haue you downe, and lette not your vnryghteousnesse be lyft vp. Woo be vnto them that are subdued vnto their synnes, and tangled in their wickednesse: lyke as a fielde is hedged in with bushes, and the path therof couered with thornes, that no man may trauayle thorowe, and lest he taken, and caught in the fyer and brent.

The booke of Tobyas.

The first Chapiter.

TObias was of the tribe & cytie of Nepthali, which lieth in the high countrey of Galile aboue Naasson the cytie of Saephet vpon the lefte hande. Though he was taken prysoner in the daies of Salmanasar kynge of the Assirians, nauertheles he ceased not the waye of trueth: In so much that whatsoeuer he myght get, he parted it daily with his fellowe prysoners and brethren, that were of his kynsred. And though he were younger then all in the tribe of Nepthali, yet did not he behaue hym selfe childesshly in hys workes. And when all the other went to the golden calues, whiche Jeroboam the kynge of Israell had made, he hymselfe alone fled all their companies, and gat hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lorde, and there worshypped the Lorde God of Israell, carefully offrynge of all his first frutes and tythes, so that in the thirde yeare he mynistred al the tythes vnto the straungers and commers. There and suche like thynges dyd he obserue accordyng to the lawes of GOD, when he was yet but younge. But when he was a man, he toke out of his owne tribe a wyfe called Anna, of her he begat a sone, who he called after his owne name, and taught hym from his youth vp, to feare God, and to beware from all synne. Also when he with his wife, his sonne and with all his kinred was come in captiuite vnto the cyty of Ninine, what tyme as they all dyd eate of the meates of the Heathen, he kept his soule, and was neuer defyled in their meates. And for so much as he was myndefull of the Lorde in all his harte, God gaue hym fauour in the syghte of Salmanasar the kyng, whiche gaue hym power to go where he would, and so had he libertie to do whatsoeuer hym lyste. So went Tobyas vnto all them that were in prysion, & comforted them, and gaue them wholsome exhortations. And when he came to Rages, a cytie of the Medes, hauyng ten talentes of syluer (of the thinges wherwith the kyng had honoured hym) and saue among a great company of people of his kynsred, one Gabelus (whiche was of his owne tribe) beyng in necessitie, he gaue hym the hole weyghte of syluer vnder an hande wrytyng. After a long seasō when Salmanasar the kyng was dead, and Sennacherib his sonne reigned in his steade, whiche hated the children of Israell: Tobias went daily thorowout all his kynsred, and cōforted them, and gaue of his goodes to euery one of them, as muche as he myght, he fed the hungry, clothed the naked, and buried the deade and slayne, and that diligently. And when Sennacherib the kyng came agayne and fled out of Jewry (what time as God punished him for his blasphemy and in his wrath) many of the children of Israell. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was told the kyng, he commaunded Neuertheleſſe, Tobias with his ſonne and with his wyfe fled his way and was hyd in hed, for there were many that loued hym. But after tyme and fourty dayes the kyng was ſlayne of his owne ſonnes. Then came Tobias againe to his houſe, and all his goodes were reſtored vnto hym.

¶ The .x. Chapiter.

Outlong. A. AFter thoſe thynges vpon a ſolempne day of the Lorde, Tobias made a good feaſte in his houſe, and ſayde vnto his ſonne: Go thy way and bryng hether ſome of our tryde kynde as feare God, that they may make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came a-gayne, and tolde his father, that one of the children of Iſrael lay ſlayne vpon the ſtrete And immediatly he lepte from his table lefte the feaſte, came fatyng to the dead coarſe, toke hym and bare hym priuily into his houſe, that when the ſunne was down, he myght ſafely bury hym. And when he had hyd the coarſe, he did eate his meate with mourning and feare, remembryng the woordes, that the Lorde ſayde by the Prophete Amos, your hygh feaſtes ſhalbe turned to ſorowe and he vyneſſe. But when the Sunne was downe, he went his way and buried hym. Then all his neyghbours reproued hym, ſayng: It is not long ſence it was commaunded to ſlea the, because of this matter, and haſte fearſe eſcaped the daunger of death, & buryeſt thou the dead agayne? Neuertheleſſe, Tobyas featyng God more then the kyng, toke the bodies of the ſlayn, and hyd them in his houſe and buried them at mydnyght. It happened vpon a daye, that he had buried the dead, and was mery, came home, & layde hym down by the wall and ſlepte. And whyle he was a ſlepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes warme dunge out of the ſwalowes nette, ſo that he was blynde. This temptacion dyd God ſuffer to happen vnto hym, that they which came after myght haue an example of his pacience lyke as of holy Job. For in ſo muche as he euer feared God from his youthe vp, and kept his commaundementes, he grudged not agaynſt God, that the plague of blyndneſſe chaunced vnto hym, but remayned ſtedfaſte in the feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his lyfe. For lyke as the C. bleſſed Job was had in deryſion of kynges, euen ſo was he laughed to ſcorne of his elders and kyndeſfolkes, whiche ſayde vnto hym: where is thy hope, for the which thou haſte done almes, and buried the dead? But Tobyas rebuked them, and ſpake: Saye not ſo, for we are the children of holy menne, and loke for the lyfe, whiche God ſhall geue vnto them that neuer turne their beleue from hym. And his wyfe went dayly to the mennes worke, and loke what liuyng ſhe could gette with the labours of her handes, & brought it. And it happened that ſhe toke a hyd and brought it home. And when her huſbande hearde it crye, he ſayde, loke that it be not ſtolen, reſtore it agayne to the owners, for it is not lawfull for vs to ete or ſo much as touche any thyng of theefte. Then was his wife angry and ſayde: Nowe is thy hope become vayne openly, and thy almeſſe deedes are manyfeſte. With theſe and ſuche lyke woordes dyd ſhe caſt hym in the tethe.

¶ The .xi. Chapiter.

THe .vi. daye A. Matins. TObias toke it heuily, and with teares, began to make his prayer, ſaying: O Lorde, thou arte ryghteous, and all thy iudgementes are true: yea, all thy wayes are mercy, faythfulneſſe and iudgement. And nowe O Lorde: be myndefull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my ſynnes, neyther remember my myſdeades, neyther the myſdeades of my elders. For we haue not bene obedient vnto thy commaundementes, therfore are we ſpoyled, brought into captyuitie, into death, into derycion, and ſhame vnto all nacions, among whome thou haſte ſcatered vs. And nowe O Lorde, thy iudgementes are greate, for we haue not done accordyng to thy commaundementes, neyther haue we walked innocently before the. And nowe O Lorde, deale with me accordyng to thy will and cõmaunde my ſpirite to be receyued in peace, for more expedient were it for me to dye, thē to lyue. At the ſame tyme it happened that Sara the doughte of Raguell at Rages a cytie of the Medes was ſclaundered of one of her fathers handmaydens: namely, that ſhe ſhould haue had ſeuen huſbands, whiche as ſone as they were gone in vnto her, were ſlayne of the deuell called Aſmodeus. Therfore when ſhe reproued the mayden for her faulte, ſhe anſwered her ſaiyng: God lette vs neuer ſe ſonne nor doughter of the more vpon earth, thou kyller of thy huſbandes. Wilt thou ſlea me alſo, as thou haſt ſlayne ſeuen men? At this worde went Sara into an hygh chamber of her houſe, and thre dayes and thre nyghtes ete neyther eate nor dranke, but continued in prayer and beſought God with teares that he would deliuer her from this reproche. Vpon the thyrde daye it chaunced, that when ſhe had made an ende of prayer, ſhe prayſed the Lorde ſaiyng: Bleſſed be thy name, O God of oure fathers, whiche when thou art wroth: ſheweſt mercy, and in tyme of trouble thou forgeueſt the ſynnes of them, that call vpon the. Vnto the O Lorde turne I my face, vnto the lyfte I vp myne eyes, I beſeche the O Lorde, loſe me oute of the bondes of this reproche, or els take me vtterly away from of the earth. Thou knoweſt lorde that I neuer had deſire vnto man, & that I haue kepte my ſoule cleane from all vncleanly luſt. I haue not kept cõpany with thoſe that make their time in feare, neither haue I made my selfe partaker with them that walke in light behauour. Neuertheles an husbande haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare. Howe peraduenture either haue I bene vnworthy of them, or els were they not mete for me, for thou happily hast kept me to an other husbande. For why? thy counsell is not in the power of man But whosoeuer loueth the and serueth the aryght, is sure of this, that if his life be tempted and proued, it standeth in the tryng, and if he endure in pacience, he shall haue a rewarde and be highly crowned and if he be in trouble, that God (no doubte) shall deliuer him and if his life be in thaketyng, that he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy. For thou hast no pleasure in our dampnacion: and why? after a tempe thou makest the wether fayre and stylle, after weping & heuines thou geuest great ioye. Thy name O God of Israel be prayed for euer. At the same tyme were both their prayers heard in the syght of the maiestie of the hyghest god. And Raphael the holy Angell of the Lorde was sent to helpe them both, whose prayers came at one tyme togyether before God.

The.iii. Chapiter.

Eyclong A. SO when Tobias thought his prayer to be heard, that he myght dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and sayde vnto hym: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouthe, and laye them in thyne harte as a foundacio. When God taketh away my soule, bury thou my body and holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of her lyfe. For thou oughtest to remembre what and howe great perels she suffred for the in her wombe. And when she hath also fulfylled the tyme of her lyfe, bury her beside me. Haue GOD in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and beware leest at any tyme thou consent vnto synne, & leest thou let slyppe the commaundementes of the Lorde our God. Geue almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore, and so shall it come to passe that the face of the Lorde shall not be turned away from the. B. Be mercifull after thy power. If thou haue muche, geue plenteously: if thou haue lytle, do thy diligence, gladly to geue of that litle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good reward in the daye of necessite. For mercy deliuereth for all sinne & from death, and suffereth not the soule to come in darckenes. A great comforte is mercy before the hygh God vnto all them that doeue it. My sonne kepe thy selfe from all whoredome and (before thy wyfe) see that no faute be knowen of the. Lette neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde for in pride began all destruccio. Whosoeuer worketh any thyng for the, immediatly geue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hired seruauntes wages remayne not by the ouer nyght.

* Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng that thou woldest not another man shuld do vnto the. Gyue thy bread with the hungry & poore, & couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bread & wine vpō the burial of the ryghteous, and do not thou eate & drinke therof with the synners. Aske euer counsail of the wyse. Be alway thanckeful vnto God, and beseche hym that he will order thy wayes, and that whatsoeuer thou deuisest or takest in hande, it may remayne in hym. I certifie the also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a babe) I delyuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a Cytie of the Medes, and his hande wryting haue I by me. And therfore seke some meanes, howe thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of him the sayde weyght of syluer, and geue hym his handewrityng agayne. My sonne be not afrayed: truthe it is, we leade heare a poore lyfe: but great good shall we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne, and do wel.

The.vii.day. A. Mattins

THen answered Tobias hys father, and sayde: father, all that thou hast commaunded me wyl I doo, and that dyligently. But howe I shall require this money I can not tell. Neyther doth he knowe me, nor I hym. What token shall I geue hym? And as for the waye thether, I neuer knewe it. Then hys father answered hym, and sayde: I haue his hande wryting by me, whyche when thou shewest hym immediatly he shall paye the. But go thy waye nowe, and get the some faythfull man to goo with the for an hyre, that thou mayest receyue the money, whyle I am yet lyuyng. Then went Tobias out, and vppon the strete he founde a fayre young man standyng, gyrded vp, and as if were one ready to take hys iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Aungell of God, but saluted hym and sayde: From whence arte thou, thou good young man. He answered: Of the chyldren of Israell. And Tobias sayde vnto hym: knowest thou the waye that leadeth vnto the Countrey of the Medes? He answered I knowe it well, and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with our brother Gabelus, that B. dwelleth in Rages a Citie of the Medes, whiche lyeth vpon the mounte Ecbathanis: Tobyas sayde vnto hym: I praye the tary for me, til I haue tolde my father these thynges. Then went Tobias in & tolde his father al. At the which his father maruelled & prayed, that he would come in vnto hym. Nowe when the Aungell came in, he saluted hym, & sayd: Ioy be with the for euer more. And old Tobias sayde: what ioye can I haue that yet here in darckenes, & se not the light of heuē? The young man sayde vnto hym: Be of good chere, GOD shall helpe the shortly. And

C. Tobias sayde vnto hym: Canst thou bringe my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the citie of Rages in Medea: And when thou comest againe, I shal paye the thy hyre. And the Aungell said vnto hym: I shal lede thy sonne, and bringe hym to the againe. Then Tobias answered hym: tell me, I pray the, of what house of what tribe art thou? The Aungell Raphael said vnto him: Askest thou after the kynred of an hyrelyng, or seekest thou a guide for thy sonne for to goo with hym. But that I make the not careful, I am Azarias the sonne of great Ananias. And Tobias answered: thou art come of a great kynrede: but I pray the be not displeased, that I desyre to know thy kynred. The Aungell said vnto hym: thy sonne shal I lede furthe sauely, and bringe hym hole to the again. Then answered To-
W. bias and said: wel go on your way, and God be in your iourney, and his Aungel beare you company. So when they hadde prepared all thynges, that they woulde take with them in their iourney, Tobias bad his father & his mother farewel, and they went on their waye both together. Nowe when they ware gone, his mother beganne to wepe, and said: The staffe of our age hast thou taken away, & sent hym from vs. Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the whiche thou hast sent hym away. Ye we had bene content with our pouertie, this had bene great ryches vnto vs, that we sawe our sonne here. Then said Tobias vnto her: wepe not, our sonne shal come to vs again saufe and sounde, and thyne yes shal se hym. For I trust, that the good Aungel of God shal beare hym company, and order wel al the thynges that he doeth: so that he shal come to vs againe with ioye. At these woordes his mother lefte of from wepyng, and helde her tongue.

Euensong. M. SO Tobias went on his way, & a dogge followed him, & the first night they abode by the water of Tygris. Then went he out to washe his fete, & behold there came forth an horrible fisshe to deuoure hym. Of whome Tobias was afraid: & cried with a lowde voice saiyng: Lord, he cōmeth vpon me. And the Aungel said vnto hym: Take hym by the gil, and drawe hym to the. And he did so, & drewe hym vpon the lande. And the fisshe beganne to leape at his fete. Then said the Aungel vnto hym: Take out the bowels of this fisshe, B. and as for the harte, the galle, and the lyuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessarie and good for medicine. Tobias did so, and roosted the fish, and they toke hym with them in their iourney: the residue they salted, as muche as was sufficient for them, til they came to Rages a citie of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the Aungel, and said vnto hym [illegible] brother Azarias tel me wherto are these thynges good of the fish, that thou hast bidden me kepe. The Aungel answered hym and said: Yf thou laiest a piece of the harte vpon the coales, the smoke therof dryueth away al maner of euel spirites, whether it be from man, or from woman, so that fro thence forth the same shal come nomore vnto them. The galle is good to annoint, or to stryke the yes withal, where as there is any blemishe in them, so that they shalbe whole. And To- C.
bias said vnto hym, where wilt thou that we remaine? The Aungell answered and said: Here is a nye kynsman of thine, one Raguel by name, whiche hath a daughter called Sara, and hath neither sonne nor daughter, but her. Al this good belongeth vnto the, & thou must mary her, and therfore desire her of her father, and he shal geue her the to wife. The W. aunswered Tobias, and said: As I vnderstand the hath bene maried vnto .vij. housbandes, & they al are dead: and I haue heard say, that the Deuil slewe them, I am afraid therfore, lest suche thynges happen vnto me also: whiche if it came to passe (seyng I am the onely sonne of my father, and my mother) I shoulde bring them in their age with sorowe to their graues. Then said the Aungell
W. Raphel vnto hym: Heare me, and I will tell the what they be, of whome the Deuill hath power. Namely, they that receiue mariage of suche a fashion, that they shutte God out from them, and from their harte & gene themselues to their owne lust, euen as it were an horse, and mule, whiche haue no vnderstanding: vpon suche hath the Deuill power. But when thou takest her, and art come into the chambre withholde thy selfe from her thre dayes, and gene thy diligence vnto nothyng, but vnto prayer with her. And in the first night, roste the lyuer of the fisshe, and the Deuill shalbe dryuen away. The seconde nyght shalt thou be receiued into the cōpany of the holy Patriarkes. The .iij. night shalt thou obtaine the blessyng of God, so that fortunate children shalbe borne of you. After the third night take the maiden in the feare of God: and more for the desire of children, then for any fleshly lust: that in the seed of Abraham thou maiest obtaine the blessyng in children.

¶ The. vij. Chapiter.

Then went they into Raguel, whiche re- The. vij. day ceiued them ioyfully. And when Raguel S. Mattyas. loked vpon Tobias he saide vnto Anna his wyfe. How lyke is this young man vnto my cosyns sonne. And when he had spoken this, he said, whence be ye good brethren? They saide. Of the tribe of Nephtaly, out of the captiuitie of Ninene. Then said Raguel vnto them: know ye my brother Tobias? They said: yea, we know hym wel. And when they had spoken muche good of hym, the Aungell said vnto Raguel: Tobias of whom thou acket is this younge mans father. Then Raguell hoved hym selfe downe: and wept, tokē hym about the neck, and kissed hym, and said: Gods blessyng haue thou my sonne, for thou art the sonne of a good vertuous manne. And Anna his wyfe, & Sara his daughter wepte also. Nowe when thei had talked together, Raguell had kyll a wether, & to make a feast: And when he prayed them to sitte downe to dinner. Tobias saide: I will neither eate nor drynke here this day, except thou first graūt me my peticion, & promise me to geue me thy daughter Sara. When Raguell herde this, he was astonied: for he knew what had happened vnto the other .vij. menne, that went in vnto her, and he began to feare, that it should chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner. And while he stode to in doubte, & gaue the young man no aunswere, the Aungel said vnto hym: Feare not to geue him thy daughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belongeth thy daughter to wyfe, therfore might none other haue her. Then said Raguel: I doubt not but God hath accepted my prayers, and teares in his sight: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same entent, that this daughter of myne, might be maried in her owne kynded, accordyng to the Lawe of Moses. And now doubt thou not, but I will geue her vnto thee: So he toke the right hande of his daughter, and gaue her into the right hande of Tobyas, and said: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfill his blessyng in you. And thei toke a letter, & made a writyng of the mariage: And then made thei merry, and praised God. And Raguell called Anna his wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare an other chambre, and thether he brought Sara his daughter, & she wepte. Then said he vnto her: Be of good chere my daughter, the Lorde of Heauen geue the ioye, for thy heauinesse that thou hast suffred.

Genelong.ij. AND SO, after that thei had supped, thei brought the young man into her. Then thought Tobyas vpon the woordes of the Aungel: and toke out of his bagge, a piece of the lyuer of the Fishe, and layed it vpon the hote coles. So the Aungell Raphaell toke holde of the Deuill, and sent hym away, and bound him in the wildernesse of the hyghest Egipt. Then spake Tobias vnto the wyfe and said: Up Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God to day, to morow, and ouermorow: for these thre nightes wil we reconcile our selues with God, and when the thirde holy night is paste, we shall ioyne together in the duty of mariage. For we are the children of holy men, and we may not come together, as the Heathen, that know not God. Then rose thei vp both together, and beseeched GOD earnestly, that he would preserue them. And Tobias said: O Lorde God of our fathers, praised be thou of heauen, and yearth, of the Sea, welles, and floudes, and of all thy creatures that be therein. Thou madest Adam of the * moulde of the yearthe, and gauest hym Gen.ij.a. Eua for an helper. And nowe Lorde, thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnesse that I take this sister of myne to wife but onely for the loue of children, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara said, Haue mercie vpon vs (O Lorde) haue mercie vpon vs: and let vs both come hole & sounde together to a good age. And about the cocke crowyng it happened, that Raguell called his seruauntes, and thei went with hym to make a graue. For he saide, It is chaunced no lesse vnto hym peraduenture, as it did vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her. &c. Nowe when thei had made the graue, Raguel came againe to his wyfe, and said vnto her: Sende one of thy maidens, to loke if he be dead, that I may bury hym afore the light daie: So we sent a maiden to see, whiche when she came into the chambre, founde them hole and sounde, slepyng together. And so she came againe, and brought good tidynges. Then Raguell and Anna his wyfe praised the Lord, and said: Praised be thou, O Lord God of Israell, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast dealt mercifully with vs, and put away from vs the enemie that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercie vnto vs. vnto yonder two beloued. O Lorde, Ps. cause them to magnifie the more perfectly, & to offer the sacrifice of thy praise, and of their health: that all people may knowe that thou onely art God in al the yearth. And immediatly Raguell commaunded his seruauntes to fil the graue that thei had made with yearth before it was light, and bad his wyfe prepare a feast, and to make ready al thynges that were necessarie for meate, to suche as went by the way. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slaine and meates to be prepared for all his neighbours and frēdes. And Raguel charged Tobias to remaine with hym twoo weekes. For for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias the half of it, & made this writyng, that the half which remained, should fal vnto Tobias after their death.

¶ The .ix. Chapiter.

The.ix.day of Wittyng. THEN Tobias called vnto hym the Aungel whom he thought to haue bene a man and said vnto hym: Brother Azarias, I pray the herken vnto my woordes: Yf I shoulde geue my selfe to be thy seruaunt, I shall not deserue thy prouidence: Neuertheles, I beseche the that thou wilt take the beastes, and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in Rages the citie of Medes, and deliuer hym his

10. hande wayenge, and receiue the money of him and praie hym to come to my mariage. For thou knowest thy selfe, that my father doeth nombre the daies: and yf I tary one day to long, he wilbe sory in his mynde. Now seest thou howe earnestly Raguell hath required me, so that I cannot say hym nay. Then toke Raphael foure of Raguels seruauntes, and two camels, and went vnto Rages the citie of the Medes: and when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue hym his hande writyng, and receiued al the money. He tolde hym also of Tobias the sonne of Tobye, how al thynges had happened, and caused hym to come with hym to the mariage. Now whe he came into the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sittyng at the table: and he leaped vp, and they kyssed one another, and Gabelus wepte, and praised God, and said: The blessyng of the GOD of Israel, haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a right vertuous and iuste man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth greate almes. And blessyng haue thy wyfe, and your elders, that ye may se your children, and your children children, vnto the thirde and fourth generation, and your seade be blessed of the GOD of Israell, whyche reigneth worlde without ende. And when they all had said Amen: they went to the feaste, but with the feare of the Lorde helde they the feaste of the mariage.

Euenyng. 11. NOw while young Tobyas made longe tarieng by reason of the mariage, his father was full of care and heauinesse, and thought what moulde be the cause, that my sonne tarieth so longe? Or why moulde he be kepte so longe there? Paraduenture Gabelus is dead, & noman wil geue hym the money. Thus began he to be very sorowfull, he and Anna his wyfe with hym, and began to wepe bothe together, because their sonne was not come againe vnto them at the day appointed. As for his mother, she wept with discomfortable teares, and said: Wo is me my sonne: Oh what euilled vs to sende the away into a straunge countrie, thou light of our eyes, thou staffe of our age, thou comfort of our lyfe, thou hope of our generacion? Seyng all the thynges that we haue sent only in the, we moulde not haue sente the away from vs. Then Tobias comforted her, and said: Holde thy tongue, and be not discomforted, our sonne is hole and sounde: the man that we sent hym withall is faithfull enough. Neuertheles, she might in no wyse be comforted, but dayly went out, loked about and went about all the streetes, whereby she thought he moulde come again: that (yf it were possible) she might se hym commyng a farre off. Now Raguell said vnto his sonne in ger vnto thy father Tobias to let hym wete thou art in good healthe. Tobias said vnto hym: I am sure, that my father, and my mother compt every date, and that their hartes are sory. So when Raguel prayed Tobias with many wordes, and moulde in no wyse heare hym, he deliuered Sara vnto hym, and the half parte of al his good, in seruauntes, and hande maidens, in siluer, in camels, and kyne, and muche money, and so sente hym away from hym with peace and ioy, and said: The holy Aungell of the Lorde be with you in your iourney, and bryng you further saufe, and sounde, that ye may fynde all thynges in good case with your elders, and that myne eyes may see your children afore I dye. So the elders embraced their daughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortyng her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to loue her housbande, to rule wel her houshold, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe sawleste.

¶ The. 10. Chapiter.

The. 5. day A. Wattynt.

SO they were nowe goyng home warde a-gaine, vpon the eleuenth day, they came to Charra, whiche lieth in the halfe way toward Ninine. And the Aungel said: Brother Tobias thou knowest how thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the, we two wil go before, and lette thy houshold with thy wyfe, and the cattel come softe and fayre after vs. And when Tobias was content that they moulde go before: Raphael said vnto hym: Take of the galle of the fishe with the, for it shalbe necessarie. So Tobias toke of the galle, and they went their way. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayely by the way side vpon the toppe of an hil, from whence she might se farre about her. And while she was waityng there, for his commyng, she loked a farre, & anone she perceyued her sonne commyng, and ranne and tolde her housbande, saiyng: Beholde thy sonne commeth. And Raphael said vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commeste into the house, immediately worshippe the Lord thy God, and geue thankes vnto hym: then goo to thy father, and kisse hym, and fraye his eyes ouer with the galle of the fish, that thou hast brought with the. For be sure that his eyes shall straight waies be opened, and thy father shall see the light of heauen, and shall reioyce at the sight of the. Then the dogge that had bene with them in their iourney, ranne before, and came as a messenger, and wagged his taile for gladnesse. So the blinde father arose, and began to ronne, and stombled with his feete, and gaue a seruaunt his hande, ranne to mete his sonne, receyued hym, and kyssed hym, he and his wyfe, and they began to wepe for ioye. Now when they had worshipped, and thanked God, thei said owne. Then toke Tobias of the fishes gal, & anointed his fathers yes: and taried halfe an houre, & then began the blemishe to go out of his yes, lyke as it had bene the white skyn of an egge, whiche Tobias toke & drewe from his yes: & immediatly he receiued his sight. Then thei praised God, he & his wyfe, & al thei that knewe hym. And Tobias said: O Lord God of Israel, I geue the praise and thankes, for thou hast chastened me, and made me hole. And lo, now I do se my sonne Tobias. After seuen daies came Sara his sonnes wyfe also hole and sounde with al the household and cattel, with Camels and muche money of his wynes, and with the money that he had receiued of Gabelus, and he tolde his father and his mother al the benefites, whiche GOD had doen for hym, by the man that led hym. Achior also and Nabath, Tobias sisters sonnes came, and were glad, and reioyced with hym, by reason of al the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen daies thei made merry, and were right ioyful euerychone.

The. xi. Chapiter.

Euensong. A. Then Tobias called his sonne vnto hym and saide: What may we geue this holy man that went with the? Tobias answered his father and saide: Father, what rewarde shal we geue him? Or what thing can deserue his benefites? He hath bene my guide, and brought me saufe again: he receiued the monie frō Gabelus, he caused me to get my wife he droue the euil spirite frō her, he hath ben an occasion of gladnesse to her father & mother: he deliuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fish, he hath made the to se the light of heauen. Yea, we all haue receiued greate good of hym. Howe shoulde we worthely deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I pray the my father, that thou wilt desyre hym, ye haply he wil vouchesafe, to take with him the halfe of al that we haue brought. So the father and the sonne called hym, toke hym aside, and began to pray hym, that he wouldbe content to take in good worth the halfe parte of al that thei had brought. Thē said he secretly vnto them: Praise ye the God of heauen, & geue thankes vnto hym before all men liuyng, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde the kynges secrete, but to shewe and praise the workes of God, it is an honourable thyng. Prayer is good with fastyng, & mercy is better then to hourde vp treasures of golde. For mercy deliuereth frō death, clenseth synne, and causeth to synde euerlastyng lyfe. But thei that do synne & vnrighteousnesse, are the enemies of their own soule. Wherfore I tel you the truthe, and wil hyde nothyng from you. When thou praiedst with teares, and buriedest the dead, and left thy dynner, & hiddest the dead in thy house vpon the day tyme, that thou mightest bury them in the night: I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And because thou wast accepted & beloued of God, it was necessarie, that temptacion should trie the. And now hath the lord sent me to heale the, and to deliuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the euel spirite. For I am Raphael an Angel, one of the seuen that stād before God. When thei heard this, thei were sore afrayed, & trembled, and fel downe vpon their faces vnto the grounde. Then said the Angel. Peace be with you, feare not. Where as I haue bene with you, it is the will of God: geue praises & thankes vnto hym. You thought that I did eate & drynke with you, but I vse meate that is inuisible, and drynke that cannot be sene of men. Now therfore is the tyme that I must turne againe vnto hym, that sent me: but be ye thanckful vnto God, & tell out all his wonderous workes. And when he had spoken those wordes, he was taken away out of their sight, so that thei sawe hym nomore. Then fell thei downe flat vpon their faces, by the space of thre houres and praised God, when thei arose vp thei told al his wonderous workes.

Then olde Tobias opened his mouth, and praised the Lorde, and said: Greate art thou O Lord for euermore, and thy kyngdom worlde without ende: for thou scourgest, and healest, thou leadest vnto hell, & bringest out again: & there is none that may escape thyne hand. O geue thankes vnto the lord, ye children of Israell, & praise hym in the sight of the Heathen. For among the Heathen which know him not hath he scattered you, to the intent that ye should shew furth his marueilous workes, & cause them for to know, that there is none other God Almighty but he. He hath chastened vs for our misdedes, & for his own mercie sake shal he saue vs. Consider then, how he hath dealt with you, and praise hym with feare and drede, and magnifie the euerlastyng kyng in your workes. I wil praise hym euen in the lande of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiestie vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore, O ye synners, and do righteousnesse before God, & be ye sure, that he will shewe his mercie vpon you. As for me, and my soule we wil reioyce in God. O praise the Lorde all ye his chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, and be thanckful vnto hym, O Jerusalem thou citie of God, the Lorde hath punished the for the workes of thyne owne handes. O praise the Lord in the good thynges, and geue thankes to the euerlastyng God, that he may builde vp his Tabernacle again in the, that he may cal again vnto the, al suche as be in captiuitie, and that thou mayest haue ioye for euermore. tapte light shalt thou shyne, and all the endes of the worlde shal honoure the. The people shal come vnto the from farre, thei shal bryng giftes, and worshippe the Lorde in the, and thy lande shall thei haue for a Sanctuarie, for thei shal cal vpon the great name in the.

C. Cursed shal thei be that despyse the, and all that blaspheme the shalbe condempned: but blessed shal thei be that builde the vp. As for the thou shalt reioyce in thy childre, for thei al shalbe blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lorde. Blessed are thei al that loue the & that be glad of thy peace. Praise thou the Lorde, O my soule, for the Lorde our God hath deliuered his citie Jerusalem from all her troubles. I wil compt my selfe happy, yf my seade remaine to see the clearnesse of Jerusalem. The gates of Jerusalē shalbe builded with Sapphyre, and Smaragde, and all the compasse of her walles with precious stones. All her streetes shalbe paued with white marble stone, and in al the stretes shall Alleluya be song. Praised be the Lorde, whiche hath exalted her, that his kyngdome may be vpon her for euermore, Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his tal kyng.

But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and. vij. young springalds his sonnes children, and said vnto them: The destruction of Niniue is at hand, for the worde of the lord cannot faile: and our brethren that are scatered out of the lande of Israell, shall come thether again. And the whole lande of it that hath bene wast, shalbe filled: and the house of God that was brent in it, shalbe builded againe: and al suche as feare God, shal returne not thether: the Heathen also shal forsake their ydolles, & come to Jerusalem, & dwel there, and all the Kynges of the yerth shalbe glad of her, and worshippe the Lorde God of Israel.

C. And therfore my children, heare your father: serue the Lorde in the truth, take after his will, and do the thynge that pleaseth hym. Commaunde thy children that thei do right, geue almes: be myndful of God, & euer to be thanckful vnto hym in truthe, and with all their power: Heare me nowe therfore my childre, and abyde not heare: but in what day soeuer ye haue buried your mother beside me get you from hence. For I see that the wickednesse of it shal bryng it to destruction and ende. After the death of his mother, Tobias departed away from Niniue, with his wife and children, and with his childers children came againe to his father & mother in lawe, and found them hole, & in good age, and toke the care of them. And he closed their yes, & was heire vnto Raguels goodes, and saw the fifth generacio of his childers children. And when he was. xcij. yeres of age, he died in the feare of the Lord, and his kynsfolkes buried hym. And all his posteritie continued in a good lyfe, and holy conuersacion so that thei were loued and accepted both of God and man and of al the people of the lande.

NAphaxat the Kyng of the Medes subdued many people vnto his dominion, and builded a noble strong citie, whiche he called Ecbathanis: The walles of it made he of fre stone, foure squared, fourty cubites hyghe, & thirty cubites brode. He made towers there vpon an hundred cubites hye. But vpon the foure corners euery syde was twenty foote brode. He made the portes in the heigth, lyke as the towers. This Kyng

W. trusted in his mighty host, and in his glorious charettes. So in the tweluth yeare of his reigne, it happened that Nabuchodonozor the Kyng of the Assyrians (which reigned in the greate citie of Niniue) fought against Naphaxat, and ouercame hym in the great felde called Ragau, beside Euphrates and Tygris, and Jadasan in the felde of Arioth the Kyng of the Elymes. Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonozor exalted, and his hart was lift vp: and he sent vnto all them that dwelt in Celicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vnto the Heathen that dwelt in Carmell and Cedar, and to suche as dwelt in Galile, in the great felde of Esdrelon, to al them that dwelt in Samaria, and beyond the water of Jordane vnto Jerusalē, and the hole lande of Jesse, vnto the mountaines of Ethiopia. Vnto all these did Nabuchodonozor the Kyng of the Assyrians sende messengers. But thei al with one consent wolde not agree vnto hym, and sent the messengers againe emptie, & put them away without honoure. Then Nabuchodonozor the Kyng toke indignacion at al those landes, and swore by his trone, and by his kyngdome that he wolde be auenged of all those countries.

In the thirteenth yeare of Kyng Nabuchodonozor, vpō the twelueth day of the first moneth, it was demaūded in the Courte of Nabuchodonozor the Kyng of the Assyrias that he woulde defende hym selfe. So he called vnto hym al the Elders, al his captaines and men of warre, and shewed theim his secrete counsaill, and tolde them that his purpose was, to bringe the whole yearth vnder his dominion. Now when thei were al content with this thing, Nabuchodonozor the Kyng called Holofernes, the cheefe captaine of his warres, & said vnto hym: Go thy way forth against al the Kyngdomes of the West and specially against those that haue despised my commaundement. Thou shalt spare no Realme, al stronge cities shalt thou bringe
15. in subiection vnto me. Then Holofernes called togither al the captaines, and rulers of all the powers of Assyria, and mustred the souldiers vnto the bonde syze as the Kyng commaunded hym, namely an hundred & twenty thousand fightyng menne vpon foote, and twelue thousand archers vpon horsebacke. Al his ordinaunces sent he afore with an innumerable multitude of Camels, so that the host was wel prouided for with oxen, & shal cattel. And that without nombre. He caused corne to be prepared out of al Syria for his hoc. Muche golde and siluer also toke he out of the Kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and al his host with charettes, horsemen, and archers, of whom there wer so many, that they couered the grounde of the lande
C. lyke the grashoppers, & when he was gone past the borders of the Assyrias, he came towarde the great mountaines of Auge, which lye vpon the left syde of Celicia: and so he went vp into al their castels, and wanne euery strong holde. As for the welthie Citie of Melothus, he brake it downe, and spoiled al the children of Tharsis, and the Ismaelites which lay towarde the wildernesse, and vpon the South syde of the lande of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came to Mesopotamia, and brake down all the highe cities that wer there, from the broke of Mābre, till a man come to the Sea: and he toke the borders in from Celicia, vnto the costes of Japhet towarde the South. He caried away al the Madianites, and spoiled al their goodes, & whosoeuer withstode him, he slewe them with the swearde. After this he went downe into the felde of Damascus in the time of harueste, and brent vp all the corne, and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cutte downe. And the feare of hym fel vpon al them that dwelt vpon the yearth.

The. ij. Chapiter.

So the Kynges and Kyngues of all cities and landes sent their embassadours namely thei of Syria, and Mesopotamia, Syria Sobal, and Libie, & Celicia, which came to Holofernes, and said: Let thy wrath cesse toward vs. It is better for vs to serue the greate Kyng Nabuchodonozor without lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then that we shulde dye, and be slayne: and receiue great hurte. All our cities and possessions, all mountaines and hilles, feldes, great and smal cattel, sheep, goates, horses, and camels, all our goodes, and housholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection be it altogether. We our selues also, and our children wilbe thyne owne, come vnto vs a peceable Lorde, and vse our seruice at thy pleasure.

Then came Holofernes, downe from the 15.
mountaines, with horsemen, and greate power, and conquered al strong defenced cities and al that dwelt in the lande, and out of all cities he toke strong men, and suche as were mete for the warre to helpe hym. There came suche a feare also vpon those countries, that the inhabitaūts of all the cities, the rulers and rulers, & the people together went forth to mete hym as he came, & receiued hym honourably with garlandes and torches, with daunces, tabrettes, and pypes. NeuertheC.
lesse, though thei did this, yet might thei not swage his rigorous fomacke: but he destroyed their cities, and hewed downe their woodes. For Nabuchodonozor the Kyng had commaunded hym that he shulde roote out all the goddes of the lande: to the entent that he onely might be called and taken for the God of the nations: whiche Holofernes with his power brought vnder hym. So went he thorowe Syria, Sobali, and thorowe al Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, and came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa, and Septopoly, and toke their cities, and remained there thirty dayes, wherin he caused al the whole multitude of his host to be gathered togither.

The. iij. Chapiter.

When the children of Israel that dwelt A. Euesong. in Iewry hearde this, thei were sore afraid of hym. There came suche trembling also and feare vpon them that thy sored he shulde do vnto the Citie of Ierusalem, and the temple of the Lord, as he had done to other cities, & their temples. So thei sent in to al Samaria rounde about vnto Iericho, tooke in, & occupied al the toppes of the mountaines, and made faste the townes with walles, and prepared corne for them against the battaile. Eliachym also the priest, wrote vnto al them that dwelt towarde Esdrelon (which lieth ouer against the great felde by Bothaym) and vnto all those by whome men might haue passage vnto them, that thei would take in the wayes of the mountaines, whereby thei might be any way and passage to Ierusalem, and that thei shulde holde diligent watche where any treaste was betwixt the mountaines. And the children of Israel did as Eliachym the Priest of the Lorde had commaunded them/and all the people cried earnestly, and humbled their soules with fastynges and prayers, thei and their wyues. The Priestes put on hery clothes, & layde the younge babes before the temple of the Lord, and couered the aultare of the Lorde with an here clothe. And with one accorde thei cried vnto the Lorde God of Israel, that their children moulde not be geuen into a pray, & their wyues into a spoile, that their cities moulde not be layed wast, and that their Sanctuarie moulde not be vnhalowed, and so thei to be a name & rebuke vnto the Heathen. Then Eliachym the highe Priest of the Lorde went raunde about al Israel: and spake vnto them saiyng: We ye sure, that the Lorde wil heare your petitions, yf ye continue stedfast in fastynges and prayers in the sight of the Lord. Remembre Moses the seruaunt of the Lord which ouerthrewe the Amelechytes (that trusted in their mights and power, in their hoste, in their shildes, in their charettes, & horsemen not with weapons, but with holy prayers. Euen so shal al the enemies of Israel be, yf ye continue in this worke that ye haue begonne. So vpon this exhortacion, thei continued in prayer before the Lorde. In so muche that thei which offered burnte sacrifices vnto the Lorde, offered the offeringes vnto the Lorde, beyng arayed in hery clothes, and had ashes vpon their heddes. And thei all besought God from their hole harte, that he moulde visit his people of Israel.

The xiij. day Nittyus.

HOlofernes wroothe came to Holofernes the Prince of the warre of the Assyrians, that the children of Israell prepared themselues to make resistaunce, and how thei had stopped the wayes betwixt the mountaines. Then was he exceding wroth, and called al the Princes of Moab, and the captaines of Ammon, and saide vnto them: Tell me, what people is this that kepeth in the mountaines? Or what maner of cities are they? What is their power? Or what maner of hoste haue they? who is their captaine? and why do thei despise vs more then all those that dwell in the East, and come not forth to mete vs, that they might receiue vs with peace? Then Achior the captaine of al the Ammonites answered, and saide: Syr, yf it please the to heare, I wil tel the truth before the, concernyng this people that dwell in the mountaines, and there shal no lye go out of my mouth. This people is of the generacion of the Chaldeis, that dwelt first in Mesopotamia, for thei moulde not folowe the goddes of

not

Caldeis, and to forsake thei the customs of their forefathers (which had many goddes) and worshippe one GOD, that made heauen and yearth: which also commaunded them that they moulde go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Nowe, when there came a dearth into the whole lande, they went downe to Egypte, and there they dwelt * foure hundred yeres, in the which they multiplied greatly, that their host might not be nombred. And when the Kyng of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued them in buildyng of his cities with makyng of clay and bricke, they cried vnto God their Lorde, which punished the whole lande of Egypt with diuers plagues. Now when the Kyng of Egipte let them go their waye, and the plague ceassed, and then folowed after them, to take them, and to bryngе them againe into his seruice, whyle they were flyeng away, the God of heauen opened the Sea, so that the waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wal, and there went thorowe the botome of the Sea drye shod. In the which place when an innumerable people of the Egyptians folowed vpo them they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters: that there remained not one to tell them that came after, how it happened. So when this people was passed throughe the redde Sea, they came into the wildernesse of mount Sinay, where neuer man might dwell at ease, and where the Sunne of man had neuer rested. There wer the bitter waters made swete for them, that they might drynke, & fourtie yeres had they meat from heauen. Wherseuer they went (without bowe, and arowe, without buckler, or sweard, their God fought for them, & caused them to haue the victory. Yet no man was able to hurte this people, except it were that they departed vnfaithfully from the worshippyng of the Lorde their God. But as oft as they worshipped any other beside their God, he gaue them ouer to be spoiled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusion. Neuertheles, as oft as they were sory for their departyng from the worshippe of their God, the same God of heauen gaue them power and strengthe to withstande their enemies. Moreouer, they slue the Kyng of the Cananites, Jebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Hewites, and Amorites, and al the mighty in Hesebon, and toke their landes and cities in possession: and so longe as they synned not in the sight of their God, it went wel with them, for their God hateth vnrighteousnesse. For in tymes past when they went out of the way, which GOD had geuen them that they moulde walke in, they were destroyed in diuers battailes of many nacions, and many of them were caried awaye prysoners vnto a straunge countrie. But now lately they haue turned them selues

againe vnto the Lorde their God, & are come together againe out of the countries, where thei were scattered abroade: and thus haue thei conquered those mountaines, and dwel therin: & as for Jerusalem where their Sanctuarie is, thei haue it again in possession. And therfore my lorde, make diligent inquisition, yf this people haue doen wickednesse in the sight of their God, then let vs go vp against them, for doubtlesse their God shall deliuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power: But yf this people haue not displeased their GOD, we shall not be able to withstande them, for their God shall defende them: so that we be a shame to all the worlde.

E. Nowe when Achior had spoken out these wordes, al the great men of Holofernes wer wroth, and thought to slea hym, and said one to another: What is he this, that dare say, that the children of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonozor the kyng, and his hoste: where as thei are an vnweaponed people, without strengthe, or vnderstanding of the feates of warre? That Achior therfore may know that he hath deceiued vs, we wil go vp to the mountaines: & when the mighty menne of them are taken, he also shalbe tickt with the swearde, that all people may know, that Nabuchodonozor is the God of the earthe, and that there is none other without hym.

¶ The vi. Chapiter.

Euenseng. N. SO when thei had left of speakyng, Holofernes toke sore indignation, and said vnto Achior: For so much as thou hast prophecied vnto vs saiyng: that the people of Israel shalbe defended of their God, I will shewe the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonozor. Yea, whi we slea them al as one man, thou also shalt perishe with them therowe the swerde of the Assyrians, and al Israel shalbe destroyed with the, and then thou shalt fele that Nabuchodonozor is the lorde of the whole yearth. Then shall thy swearde of my knyghtehode go therowe thy sydes, and thou shalt fal downe tickt among the woundes of Israel, and shalt not come to thy selfe againe, but be vtterly destroyed with them.

18. But if thou thynkest thy prophecy to be true why dost thou then chaunge thy colour, why art thou afraide? Thynkest thou that my wordes are not able to be performed? But that thou maiest knowe, that thou shalt fele these thynges with them, beholde, from this houre further wil I sende the to yonder people, that when the punishement of my swerde (which thei haue worthely deserued) falleth vpon the, thou mayest be punished with them. So Holofernes commaunded his seruauntes to take Achior, and lay hym in Bethulya, and to deliuer hym into the handes of the children of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke hym, and went therowe the plaine felde. But when thei drewe nigh vnto the mountaines, the kyng rasters came out against them. Nenertheles, thei gat them away by the syde of the mountaine, and bounde Achiors handes and fonte to a tree, and so lefte hym bounde with withes, and turned again vnto their lorde. Forthwith Sandyng, the children of Israell went downe from Bethulia, came vnto hym, loked hym, brought hym into Bethulia, set hym in the middest of the people, and asked hym what the matter was that the Assyrians had left hym bounde. Ozias the sonne of Micha, of the tribe of Symeon, & Charmym (whiche is also called Gothoniel) were the principal rulers at the same tyme. Then when Achior rose in the middest of the Senatoures, and before them all, he tolde them, what answere he gaue Holofernes to the thyng that he asked hym, and howe Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so saiyng: and how Holofernes hym selfe was wroth, and commaunded hym for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the children of Israel, he might commaunde Achior also to be put to death with diuers tormentes, because he said the God of heauen is their defender. And when Achior had plainely tolde out all these thynges, al the people fel downe vpon their faces, praising the Lorde, and powred out their prayers together vnto the Lorde, with a general complainte, and weppyng, and said: O Lorde God of heauen, & of yerth, beholde their prayde: and loke vpon our lowlynesse, and consider howeit standeth with thy sainctes, and make it to be knowne, that thou forsakest not those, whiche holde them fast by the, and how that thou bryngest them lowe that presume of them selues, and make their host in their owne strengthe. So when the wepyng and prayer of the people (which thei had made the whole day longe) was ended, thei comforted Achior: saiyng: The God of our fathers, whose power and strengthe thou hast praised, shall so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather see their destruction. When the Lorde our God then shall geue his seruauntes their liberte: God be also with the among vs: so that yf it please the, thou with al thyne may dwel with vs. Nowe when Ozias had ended the counsaill, he toke hym into his house, and made a great supper, called the Elders to it: and so thei refreshed themselues after the fastyng. And afterwarde was all the people called together, whiche made their prayers al the night longe in the congregation, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

¶ The vii. Chapiter.

The. xv. day THe next day Holofernes commaunded his hoste to go vpe against Bethulia. There ber an. C. and. xx. M. fightyng men on foote, and. xxv. M. horsmen, beside the preparyng of them that were wont and came to them on euery side, out of the countreis and cities, which he had taken. All these prepared theimselues vnto the battail against the Israelites, & came on by the hill side, vnto the top that loketh ouer against Dothaim, from the place, which is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lieth toward Esdrelon. Now, when the children of Israel, sawe so greate a multitude of the Assirians, they fell doune flat vpon the ground, & strawed ashes vpon their heddes, and prayed with one accord, that the god of Israel would shewe his mercie vpō his people. And so they toke their weapons, & sat betwene the mountaines, in the narowe place, and kept the waie daie & night. But while Holofernes was goyng about, he found the water spryng which from the South side, was conueighed into the citee, by a conduite: this commaunded he to diuert another waie, and to cut their conduite in sonder. There wer welles also, not far from the walles, which they vsed secretly, more for pleasure, then for necessitie. Then went the Ammonites, & the Moabites vnto Holofernes and said: the children of Israel trust neither in spere nor arowe, but haue taken in, & kepte the mountaines and hilles. That thou maiest ouercome thē therfore, without the stikyng of any battail, set men to kepe the welles, that they draw no water out of them: so shalt thou destroye them without sweard, or at the least they shalbe so feble, that they muste be fain to geue ouer the citee, which they thinke not able to be won: for so muche as it lieth in the mountaines. These wordes pleased Holofernes well, and all his men of warre, and he set an. C. at euery well round about. And whē this watche had endured. xx. daies, the cesternes and all that had water, failed them that dwelt in the citee of Bethulia, so that in the whole citee, they had not drinke enough for one daie, for the people had water geuen them daily in a measure. Then came the men & women, yong persones, and children, all vnto Ozias, & said all with one voyce: God be iudge betwixt vs and thee, for thou hast delt euil with vs: thou wouldest not speake peaceably with the kyng of the Assirians, therfore hath god sold vs in to their handes, and there is no mā to help vs where as we are brought doune before their eyes, in thirst and greate destruccion. Therfore gather now together all the people that be in the citee, that we maie al yeld our selues willyngly, vnto the people of Holofernes, for better it is that we be captiue, and praise the lorde with our liues, then to be slain and pecishe, and to be laughed to scorne, and shamed of euery man, when we se our wiues and children die before our eyes. We take heauen and yearth this daie to record: and the god of our fathers (which punisheth vs according to the deserues of our synnes) and geue you warnyng, that ye geue vp the citee now into the power of Holoternes hoste, that our ende may be wort with the sweard, whiche els shal endure long, for want of water & for thirst. Whē they had spoken out these wordes, there was a great wepyng & howlyng in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man: they cried an whole houre long vnto god with one voyce, saying: we haue synned with our fathers, we haue wen amisse, we haue delt wickedly. Thou that art gracious, haue mercie vpon vs, punishe our vnrighteousnesse with thyne owne scourge, and geue not those ouer that knowlege thee vnto a people, which knowe thee not, lest they say emong the Heathen: where is their God? And when they wer so wery with this cryng and wepyng that they held their tongues, Ozias rose vp with watrie eyes, & said: O take good hartes vnto you, (dere bretheren) and bee of good chere, and let vs waite yet these fiue daies for mercie of the Lorde, paraduenture he shall put awaie his indignacion, and geue glory vnto his name. But if he helpe vs not when these fiue daies are past, we shall do as ye haue said.

¶ The. viii. Chapiter.

And it happened when these wordes came vnto the eares of Judith, a widowe, which was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, the sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Ozia, the sonne of Elai, the sonne of Jammor, the sonne of Jedeon, the sonne of Raphoim, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchia, the sōne of Enan, the sōne of Nathania, the sōne of Salathiel, the sonne of Simeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Manasses, which died in the daies of the Barly haruest. For while he was binding the sheues together in the field, the heate came vpō his hed, and he died at Bethulia, his citee, & there was he buried beside his fathers. Now was Judith his desolate widowe. iij. yeres and. viij. monethes. And in the higher partes of her house, he made her selfe a priuie chāber, where she dwelt, beyng closed in with her maidens. She ware a smocke of here, and fasted all the daies of her life, except the Sabbothes, and newe Moones: and the solempne daies that the people of Israell kept. She was a very faire and beautifull persone. Her husband also had lefte her greate riches, a plenteous houshold, greate vnmoueable possessions, and many cattel. This Judith was a woman of a very good report with euery one, for she feared the lorde greatly, and there was no body that spake an euill worde of her. When this Judith heard, how Ozias had promised the people, that after the .v. daie he would geue vp the citee vnto the Assirians, he sēt for the aldest, Chabri, and Charmi, and when they came to her. & said: what thyng is this, what is Ozias hath consented, that if God helpe not within .v. daies, he will geue ouer the citee to the Assirians? what are ye, that ye tept the lorde? This deuice obtaineth no mercy of God, but prouoketh hym to wrath & displeasure. Will ye set the mercy of the lord a time

C. and appoynt him a daie after your will? Neuertheles, for so muche as the lorde is patient, let vs rather repēt, powring out teares and beseechyng him of grace. For god threateneth not as a manne, neither will he be prouoked vnto wrath, as the children of men. And therfore let vs hartily fall doune before hym, and serue hym with a meke spirit, & with weping eyes say vnto the lord, that he deale with vs, accordyng to his awne will and mercie: that like as our hart is now vexed, & brought lowe through the pride of them, it maie be so comforted through his grace: in so muche as we folow not the sinnes of our fathers, which forsoke their God, and worshipped other Goddes, for the which cause, they perished with the sweard, were spoyled, and brought to shame of all their enemies. As for vs we know none other God, but only hym, for whose comfort let vs tary with meke hert. He shall require and make inquisicion for our bloude, from the vexacions of our enemies. He shall bryng doune all the heathen, that rise vp against vs, and put them to dishonour, euen the
D. lord our God. Therfore dere brethren, seyng ye are the honorable and elders of the people of god, vnto whom al the people haue respect, and vpon whom the life of al the people stadeth, lift vp their hartes with your exhortacion, that thei maie call to remembraunce, how our fathers in tymes past wer tempted, that thei might be proued, if thei worshipped their God a right. Thei ought to remember, Gen. xxi. a. how Abraham beyng tempted, and tried through many tribulacions, was found a louer and frend of God. So was Isaac, so was Iacob, so was Moses, and all thei that pleased God, beyng tried through many troubles, wer found stedfast in faithe. Again, thei that receiued not their temptacions, with the feare of God, but put themselues further with impacience and murmuryng against God, perished of the destroyer, and wer slain of serpentes. And therfore should not we vndertake to be auenged, for euerything that is doen vnto vs, but consider that all these punishementes are farre lesse then our synnes and misdeedes deseruyng also that this correccion commeth vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of God) for amendement, and not for our destruccion. Then E. cried Ozias, and the elders vnto Iudith: all that thou spekest is true, and no man can reprooue thy wordes. Praie thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy wo-them: seyng, ye knowe that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsail and deuice, yf it be of God: and beseche god that he wil bring my counsail to good ende. Thus haue I reuiced: ye shall stand this night before the porte, and I will go further with Abra my maiden. Pray ye therfore vnto God, that he wil graciously remember his people of Israel within .v. daies, as ye haue said. As for the thing that I go in hand withall, aske no questions of it, til I open it vnto you my self. Do ye nothyng els but pray vnto the lorde your God for me. Then Ozias, the prince of the people of Iuda, said vnto her: Go thy waie in peace, the Lorde be with thee, that we maie be auenged of our enemies. And so thei went frō her again.

Thou that gauest their wiues into a pray, and their daughters into captiuitie, and all their praie for a spoyle vnto thy seruauntes, which bare a zele vnto thee: helpe me widowe, O Lorde my God, I beseche thee. For thou hast doen all thynges from the beginnyng: & loke what thou hast taken in hand and deuised, it came euer to passe. For al thy waies are prepared, and thy iudgementes are doen, in thy euerlastyng foreknowlege. O loke now vpō the armies of the Assirians, like as it was thy pleasure sometime to loke vpō the hoste of the Egiptians, whē thei beyng weaponed, persecuted thy seruauntes, & put their truste in their charettes, & horsemen, & in the multitude of their men of warre. C. ¶ The. x. Chapiter.

Sunlong. N. AND when he had left of cryyng vnto the Lorde, he rose vp from the place, where he had line flatte before the lorde, and called her maiden, went doune into her house, laied the herie clothe from her, put of the garmentes of her widowhode, washed her body, annoynted her self with precious thynges of swete sauor, broyded and platted her here, set an houe vpon her herde, and put on suche apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slippers vpon her fete, armeletes, spanges, eare rynges, fingerringes, & decked her self with al her best aray The lorde gaue her also a speciall beautie & faiernesse (for all this deckyng of her self, was not doen for any voluptuousnes, and pleasure of the flesshe, but of a right discrecion and vertue, therefore did the Lorde encrease her beautie) so that she was exceedyng amiable, and welfauored in all mennes iyes. She gaue her maide also a bottell of wine, a potte with oyle pottage, cakebread and Chese, and went her waie. Now when she came to the porte of the citee, she founde Ozias, and the elders of the citee waityng there. Which he, when thei sawe her, thei were astonied, and maruelled greatly at her beautie. Neuertheless, thei asked no question at her, but let her go, saiyng: the god of our fathers geue thee his grace, and with his power performe al the deuise of thy hart, that Jerusalem maie reioyce ouer thee, and that thy name may be in the nombre of the holy and righteous. And all thei that wer there, saied with one voyce: So bee it, so bee it. Judith made her prayer vnto the lorde, and went out at the porte, she and her maide. And as she was goyng doune the mountain, it happened that aboute the spryng of the daie, the spies of the Assirians met with her, and toke her, saiyng: whence commest thou? Or whether goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of the Hebrues, and am fled from them, for I knowe that thei shalbe geuen vnto you, to bee spoyled: because thei thought scorne to yelde themselues vnto you, that thei might finde mercie in your sighte. Therefore, hauing ben ruised by my self after this maner: I will go before the Prince Holofernes, and tell hym all their secretes, and will shewe hym how he maie come by them, and winne them, so that not one manne of his hoste shall perishe. And when these menne had heard her wordes, and considered her faire face, thei were astonied (for thei wondered at her excellent beautie) and saied vnto her: thou hast saued thy life by findyng out this deuise, that thou wouldest come doune to our Lorde: and be thou sure, that when thou commest vnto hym, he shal entreate thee well, and thou shalt please hym at the hart. So thei brought her into Holofernes pauilion, and told hym of her. Now whē she came in before hym, immediatly he was ouercome, & taken with her beautie. Then saied his seruauntes: who would despise the people of the Iues, that haue so faire women? should we not by reason fight against the for these? So when Judith sawe Holofernes, sitting in a Canapie, that was wrought of purple silke, gold, smaragde, and precious stones, she loked fast vpon hym, and fell doune vpon the yearth. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp again, at their lordes commaundement.

C. ¶ The xi. Chapiter.

THen saied Holofernes vnto her: bee of good chere, and feare not in thyne harte, for I neuer hurte man that would serue Nabuchodonozor the King. As for thy people, if thei had not despised me, I should not haue lift vp my speare against theim. But tell me now, what is the cause that thou art departed from theim, and wherefore art thou come vnto vs? and Judith saied vnto hym: sir, vnderstande the wordes of thy handmaiden, for if thou wilt do after the wordes of thy handmaiden, the Lorde shall bryng thy matter to a prosperous effect. As truly as Nabuchodonozor a lorde of the land liueth, and as truly as his power liueth, which hei is in thee, to the punishment of all men that go wrong, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto hym through thee, but all the beastes also of the field. For all people speake of thy prudent actiuitie: and it hath euer been reported, how thou only art good and mightie in all his kyngdome, & thy discrecion is commended in all landes. The thyng is manifest also, that Achior spake, and it is wel knowē, what thou commaundest to do vnto hym. For this is plain and of a certeintie, that our God is so wroth with vs (by the reason of our synnes) that he hath shewed by his prophetes vnto the people, that for their synnes he will deliuer theim ouer vnto the enemie. And for so muche as the children of Israel, know that thei haue so despised their God, thei are sore afrayed of the. Thei suffer greate hunger also, and for want of water, thei are bed now in a manner. Moreouer, thei are appoynted to slea al their cattel that thei maie drinke the bloud of theim, & are purposed to spend all the holy ornamentes of their God (which he hath forbidden them to touche) for corne, wine, and oyle. Seyng now that thei do these thynges, it is a plain case, that thei muste nedes be destroyed. Whiche whē I, thy handmaiden perceiued, I fled from them and the lorde hath sent me vnto thee, to shewe thee these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshippe God, euen now here beside thee, and thy handmaiden shal go furth, and I wil make my prayer vnto God, and he shal tell me when he will reward theim their synne: then shall I come and shewe thee, and bryng thee throughe the middest of Ierusalem, so that thou shalte haue al the people of Israel, as the shepe with out a shepherde: there shal not so muche as one dogge barke against thee, for these thynges are shewed me, by the prouidence of God: and for so muche as God is displeased with them he hath sēt me to tel thee the same. These wordes pleased Holofernes, & all his seruauntes, which marueiled at the wisedome of her, and said one to another: there is not suche a woman vpon yearth, in beautie and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes said vnto her: God hath doen well, that he hath sent thee hether before thy people, that thou maiest geue thē in to our hādes. And for so muche as thy promise is good, sit thy God perfourme it vnto me, he shalbe my God also, and thou shalt be excellēt and greate, in the courte of Nabuchodonosor and thy name shalbe spoken of in al the land.

Euentong. ii. THen commaunded he her to go in, where his treasure lay, & charged that she should haue her dwellyng there, and appoynted what should be geuen her from his table. Judith answered him and said: as for the meat that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maie not eate of it as now (lest I displease my God) but wil eate of suche, as I haue brought with me. Then said Holofernes vnto her: if these thynges that thou hast brought with thee faile, what shall we do vnto thee? And Judith said: as truly as thou liuest my lorde, thy handmaiden shall not spende all this, till GOD haue brought to passe in my hand, the thynges that I haue deuised. So his seruauntes brought her into the tent, where he had appoynted. And as she was goyng in, she desired that she might haue leaue to go furthe by nyght, and before daie to her prayer, & to make intercession vnto the lorde. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaines, that she should go out and in, at her pleasure, to praie vnto God those thre daies. And so in the nyghte season, she went furthe into the valley of Bethulia, and washed her self in the water. Then went she vp, and besought the lorde God of Israell. That he would prospere her waie, for the deliuerance of his people. And so she went in, and remained cleane in her tent, till she toke her meate in the euenyng. Vpō the .iij. day it happened, that Holofernes made a Supper vnto his seruauntes, & said vnto Vagao his chamberlain: goo thy waie, and counsaill this Hebrueue, that he maie ber well willyng to consent to kepe companie with me. For it wer a shame vnto all the Assirians, that a woman should so laugh a man to scorne, that he were come from hym vnmedeled withall. Then went Vagao vnto Judith, and said: let not the good daughter bee afraied to come into my Lorde, that he maie bee honored before hym, that he maie eate and drynke wine, and be merie with hym. Vnto whom Judith answered: who am I that I should caie my lorde naie? Whatsoeuer is good before his eyes, I shal do: and loke what is his pleasure, that shall I thinke well doen, as long as I liue. So she rose vp, and decked her self with her apparel, and went in, and stoode before hym. And Holofernes harte was whole moued, so that he bente in desire toward her. And Holofernes said vnto her: drinke now and sit downe, and be merry, for thou hast found fauor before me. Then said Judith Sir, I will drynke, for my myndes is merier to day, then euer it was in al my life. And she toke and did eate and drinke before him, the thynges that her maide had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and dranke more wine then euer he did afore in all his life.

¶ The. xij. Chapiter.

Matins ii. NOw when it was late in the nyghte, his seruauntes made haste, euery man to his lodgyng. And Vagao shut his chamber doores, and went his waie, for thei were all ouerladen with wine. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he laie vpon the bed all dronken, and of very dronkennesse fell a slepe. Then commaunded Judith her maiden to stande without before the doore, & to waite. And Judith stode before the bed, makyng her prayer with teares, and moued her lippes secretly, and said: strengthen me, O lorde God, of Israell, and haue respect vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, that thou maiest set vp the citee of Ierusalē, like as thou hast promised: O graunt, that by thee I may performe the thyng, which I haue deuised, to owe the beleue that I haue in thee. And when she had spoken this, she went to the bedsteade and losed the swearde that hanged vpon it, and drewe it out. Then tooke she holde of the herie lockes of his hed, and said, strengthen me, O lorde God in this houre, and with that she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of his hedde. Then toke she the canapis away, and rolled the dedde body aside. Immediately she gotte her furthe, and deliuered the hedde of Holofernes, vnto her maiden, and bad her put it in her wallet. And so there .v. went furthe together, after their custome, as though thei would praie, and so passed the hoste, and came throughe the valley, vnto the port of the citie. And Judith cried a far vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: open the gates (said she) for God is with vs, whiche hath shewed his power vpon Israell. And when thei heard her voyce, thei called the elders of the citie together. And thei came all to mete her: litle and great, yong and old, for thei thought not that she should haue come so sone. So thei lighted cantels, and gathered aboute her euerichone: but she went vp into an high place, and caused silence to be proclaimed. When euery man now held his tongue, Judith said: O praise the Lorde our God, for he hath not despised, nor forsaken them, that put their trust in him and in me his handmaiden, he hath performed his mercy, which he promised vnto the house of Israell: yea, in my hande this same nyghte hath he slain the enemie of his people. And with that she toke furth the hed of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, saiyng: behold the hed of Holofernes, the capitain of the Assirians, and this is the canapie wherin he laie in his dronkennesse: where the Lorde our God hath slain hym, by the hand of a woman. But as truely as the Lorde liueth, his Angell hath kepte me goyng thether, remaiyng there, and comyng hether again from thence. And the Lorde hath not suffered me his handmaiden to be defiled, but without any filthinesse of synne, hath he brought me again vnto you: and that with greate victory, so that I am escaped, & ye deliuered. O geue thankes vnto hym euerichone, for he is gracious, and his mercie endureth for euer. So thei praised the Lorde altogether, and gaue thankes vnto hym. And to her thei said. The Lorde hath blessed thee in his power, for throwe thee: he hath brought our enemies to naught. And Ozias the chief ruler of the people of Israell, said vnto her: blessed art thou of the Lorde the high God, aboue all women vpon yearth. Blessed be the Lorde, the maker of heauen and yearth, whiche hath guided thee a right, to wound and smite of the hed of the capitain of our enemies. For this day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy praise shall neuer bee out of the mouthe of menne, whiche shall alwaie remember the power of the Lorde, seyng thou hast not spared thyne awne self, but put thee in ieopardie, considering the anguishe and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped their fall before God our Lorde. And all the people said: Amen, Amen.

Achior also was called, and he came. Then said Judith vnto hym: The God of Israell, vnto whom thou hast geuen witnesse, that he would bee auenged of his enemies, euen he hath this nyghte throughe my handes smitten of the hedde of all the battaill. And that thou maiest se that it is so, behold, this is the hed of Holofernes, whiche in his presumptuous pride, despised the God of the people of Israell, and threatened thee with destruction, saiyng: when the people of Israell is taken, I shall cause thee also to be slaine with the swearde. When Achior saw Holofernes hed, he fell downe vpon his face to the ground for verie anguishe and feare, so that he swouned withal. But after that he was come again to himself, he fell downe before her, and praised her, saiyng: Blessed art thou of thy God, in all the Tabernacles of Jacob: for all the people that heare of thy name, shall praise the God of Israell, because of thee.

The. xiij. Chapiter.

A. Euensong

Judith said vnto all the people: brethren, heare me. Sticke vp this hede vpon our walles, and when the Sonne ariseth, take euery man his weapon, and fall out violently: not as though ye would go beside them, but to runne vpon theim with violence. When the spies in the tentes se this, thei shall of necessitie be compelled to flie backward, & raise vp their capitain to the battaill. So when their capitaines come into Holofernes pauilion, and finde the hedde body wrapped in the bloude; fearefulnesse shall fall vpon theim, and when ye perceiue that thei flie, folowe theim without all care, for God shall deliuer theim vnto you to be destroyed. Then Achior seyng the power of God, whiche he had shewed vnto the people of Israell, fell of from his Heathenishe beleefe, and put his truste in God, and let hymself bee Circumcised: and so was he nombred emong the people of Israell, he and all his posteritie vnto this daie. Now assone as it was daie, thei tickt vp Holofernes hed vpon the walles, and euery man toke his weapon, & so thei went out with an horrible crie. When the spies sawe that, thei ran vnto Holofernes Tent. And thei that were within the Tente, came before his Chamber, and made a greate rushyng to wake hym vp, because thei thoughte with the noyse to haue raised hym. For there durste not one of the Assirians knocke, goin, or open. But when the capitaines and Princes and al the chief in the kyng of the Assirians hoste came together, thei said vnto the chamberlaines: go your waie in, and wake hym vp, for the Mise are crepte out of their holes, and dare prouoke vs vnto battail. Then went Bagao into his chamber, stoode before the bed, and clapped with his handes, for he thought he had been sleping with Judith. But why he had harkened perfectly with his eares, and could perceiue no stirryng, he went nigher to the bed, and lifte it vp, and then sawe he the hedde body of Holofernes lyng there without a hedde, welteryng in his bloud vpon the yearthe. Then cried he with loude voyce, and with weping rent his clothes, and went into Judithes tent, and founde her not: and so he lept out into the people, & saide one woman of the Iewes, hath brought al Nabuchodonosors people vnto shame. For lo, Holofernes lieth vpon the grounde, and hath no hedde. When the chief of the Assirians hoste heard that, they rent their clothes, and there fell an intolerable feare and trembling vpon them, so that their myndes were sore afraied. And there was an exceding greate crie in the whole hoste.

When all the hoste heard that Holofernes was hedded, their mynd & counsaill fell from them, and suche a feare came vpon them, that they vndertoke to defende them selues by flying awaie: One spake not to another, but hanged doune their heddes, lefte all behynd them: and made hast to escape from the Hebrues: for they heard, that they were hasting to come after with their weapons, and so they fledde by the waies of the fieldes, and throughe al the foote pathes of the dales. And when the children of Israell sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and went doune with trōpettes, blowyng, and making a great crie after them. As for the Assirians, they had no order, and kepte not themselues together, but fled their waie. Neuerthelesse, the childre of Israell fell vpon them with one companie and order, and discomfited as many as they might gette. And Ozias sende messengers vnto all the cities and countries of Israell. So all the regions and euery citie, sent out their best men after them in harneis, and smote the with the sweard, till the same came to the out moste parte of their borders. And the other that were in Bethulia, came into the tentes of the Assirians, and tooke all, that they where wer fled, had left behynd them, & so they found greate good. And they that came again to Bethulia from the battaill, toke with them suche thinges as had been theirs, there was no nōber of the cattell, and the costly Jewelles, so that fro the lowest vnto the highest, they wer all mate riche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the high priest at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they might se Judith. Now when she came out vnto them they began all to praise her with one voyce, saiyng: thou worship of the citee of Jerusalem, thou ioye of Israell, thou honour of our people, thou hast doen manly, and thy hart is comforted, because thou hast loued clenlines and chastitie, and hast knowen no manne but thyne awne husbande: therfore hath the hande of the lorde comforted thee: and blessed shalte thou be for euer. And all people saied: so be it, so be it. Iu. xxx. daies could the people of Israell, feares gather vp the spoyles of the Assirians. But al that belonged vnto Holofernes, o how ioyes specially (whether it were of golde, of siluer, precious stones, clothyng, & all ornamentes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And al the people reioyced, bothe women maidens, & yong people, with pipes & harpes victorie, all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue praise and thankes vnto the Lorde. And when thei were purified, thei offered all their burnt sacrifices, and their promised offrynges. And Judith offered all Holofernes weapons, and al the iewelles that the people had geuen her, and the canapie that she toke from his bed, and hanged them vp vnto the Lorde. The people was ioyfull, as the vse is: & this ioy by reason of the victorie, with Judith endured thre monethes. So after these daies, euery man went home again, and Judithe was in greate reputacion at Bethulia, and right honourably taken in all the lande of Israell. Vnto her vertue also was chastitie ioyned, so that after her husbande Manasses, she neuer knewe man all the daies of her life. Vpon the high solempne daies, she went out with great worship. She dwelt in her husbandes house an. c. and. b. yere, and left her handmaiden free and died: and was buried beside her husbande in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her seuen daies. So long as she liued, there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeres also after her death. The daie wherein this victorie was gotten, was solempnly holden, and reken'd of the Iewes in the nomber of the holy daies, and it is yet greatly holden of the Iewes euer sence, vnto this daie.

(Neuertheles, he was one of the prisoners, whom Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon, had caried awaie from Jerusalem vnto Babilon, with Jechonias the kyng of Juda.) In the seconde yere of the reigne of great Artaxerses, in the first daie of the monethe Nican had this Mardocheus suche a dreame: He thought he heard a greate tempest, horrible thonder clappes, yearthquakes, and greate vproure in the land and that he sawe twoo greate Dragons redy not all the lande. The righteous wer amased, for thei feared the plague and euill, that was deuised ouer them, and were at appoynte with theimselfes to dye. So thei cried vnto God and while thei wer cryng: the litle wel grew into a great riuer, and into many waters. And with that it was daie, and the Sonne rose vp again: and the lowly wer exalted, and deuoured the glorious & proude. Now when Mardocheus had seen this dreame, he awoke, and mused secretly in his hart, what god would do, and to be desirous to knowe all the matter, and his mynd was therupon vntill the night.

¶ The. xii. Chapiter.

1. AT the same tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Tares, in the kynges court, the kynges chamberlaines and porters of the palaice. But when he heard their deuice, and had diligently considered their imaginations he perceiued that thei went about to laie their cruel handes vpon the kyng Artaxerses: and so he certified the kyng therof. Then caused the kyng to examine the twoo geloes with tormentes. And when thei had graunted it, thei wer put to death. This the kyng caused to be put in the Chronicles, for an euerlastyng remembraunce, and Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. So the kyng commaunded that Mardocheus should remain in the court, and for his faithfulnesse of his, he gaue him a reward. But Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, whiche was holden in greate honour and reputacion in the kynges courte vndertoke to hurte Mardocheus and his people, because of the twoo chamberlaines, that were put to death.

shalbe no mercy shewed, and no mā spared. And this shalbe doen the. xiij. daie of the monethe (called Adar) of this yere, that thei whiche of olde (and now also) haue been rebellious, maie in one daie with violence be thurst doune in-D. to the hell, to the entent that after this maner our Empire maie haue peace and tranquilitie.
But Mardocheus thought vpon all the mokes and noble actes of the lorde, and made his praier vnto hym, saiyng: O lorde, lorde, thou valeaunt and almightie kyng (for all thynges are in thy power) and if thou wilte helpe and deliuer Israell, there is no man that can with stande or let thee: For thou hast made heauen and yerth, and what wonderous thyng so euer is vnder the heauen: thou art lorde of al thin-ges, and there is no manne that can resist thy maiestie (O lorde). Thou knowest all thynges thou wotest lorde, that it was neither of malice, nor presumptiō, nor for any desire of glory, that I would not bowe doune my self, nor worshipp yonder proude presumpteous Aman (for I would haue been content, and that with good will, if it might haue dooen I sraell any good, to haue kissed his footesteppes) but that I did it, because I would not set the honor of a man, in the stede of the glory of God: and because I would worshippe none but onely thee E. my Lorde, and this haue I dooen in no pride nor presumption. And therfore, O lorde thou God and Kyng, haue mercie vpon thy people, for thei imagine howe thei maie bryng vs to naught: yea, their mynd & desire is to destroy, and to ouerthrowe thy people, that hath been euer thyne enheritaunce of old. O despise not the portion, whiche thou hast deliuered and broughte out of Egipte for thyne awne self.
Heare my praier, & be mercifull vnto thy people, whō thou hast chosen for an heritage vnto thy self. Turne our complainte and sorowe into ioye, that we maie liue, O lorde, & praise thy name. O lorde, suffer not the mouthes of them that praise thee to bee destroyed. All the people of Israell in like maner, cried as earnestly as thei could vnto the Lorde: for their death and destruction stode before their iyes.

The. xiij. Chapiter.

Quene Esther also beyng in the battaill of death, resorted vnto the lorde, laied awaie her gorgeous apparell, and putte on the garmentes that serued for sighyng and mour nyng. In stede of precious ointement, she scattered ashes and doung vpon her hedde: and as for her body, she humbled it with fastyng, and broughte it very low. All the places where she was wont to haue ioye afore, those filled she with the here that the pluck of her self. She praied also vnto the lorde god of Israel, with these wordes. O my lorde, thou onely art our kyng, help me desolate woman, whiche haue no helper but thee, for my misery and destruction is hard at hand. From my youth vp haue I hard out of the kynred of my father, that thou to-kest Israell frō emong all people (and so haue our fathers & their forfathers) that thei should be thy perpetuall enheritaunce, and loke what thou didest promise theim, thou hast made it good vnto theim. Now lorde, we haue synned before thee, therfore hast thou geuen vs into the handes of our enemies, because we worshipped their gods. Lorde, thou art righteous Neuertheles, it satisfied them not, that we are in bitter and heuy captiuitie, and oppressed emong them, but thou hast laied their handes vp pon the handes of their gods: so that thei begin to take away the thing, that thou with thy mouth hast ordeined & apointed, to destroye thine enheritaunce, to shut and stop the mou-thes of them that praise ther, to quenche the glory and worshipp of thy house, and thine altar, and to open the mouthes of the heathen, that thei maie praise the power and vertue of the gods, & to magnifie the fleshly kyng for e-uer. O lord geue not thy sceptre vnto thē that be nothyng, lest thei laugh vs to scorne in our misery & fall: but turne their deuise vpon them selues, and punishe hym, that hath begon the same ouer vs, & set him to an example. Thinke vpon vs O lorde, and shewe thy self vnto vs in the tyme of our distresse, and of our trouble.
Strength me o thou kyng of gods, thou lorde of all power, geue me an eloquent and a pleasaunt speache in my mouthe before the Lion.
Turne his hart in the hate of our enemies, to destroye hym, & al suche as consent vnto him.
But deliuer vs with thine hand, & help me thy handmaide, whiche haue no defence nor helper but onely the lorde, thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest that I loue not the glory & worship of the vnrighteous, & that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircūcised, & of al stragers. Thou knowest my necessitie, that I hate the token of preeminence & worshipp, whiche I beare vpon my hed, what tyme as I must shewe my self and be seen, & that I abhorre it as an vncleane clothe, and that I weare it not when I am quiet & alone by my self. Thou knowest also, that I thy handmaiden haue not eaten at Amans table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor delyte in the kynges feaste, that I haue not droncke the wyne of the drynche offeringes and that I thy handemayde haue no ioye sence the daye that I was brought hether, vntill thys daye, but onely in the Lorde O thou God of Abraham, O thou mightie God aboue all, heare the voice of them, that haue none other hope, & deliuer vs out of the hãde of the wicked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

¶ The. xv. Chapitre.

Mardocheus also bad Esther goo in vnto the kynge, and praye for her people, and for her countrie. Remember (sayth he) the dayes of thy low estate, how thou wart norished vnder my hande: For Aman whiche is nexte vnto the kynge, hath geuen sentence of death agaynste vs. Call thou therefore vpon the Lorde, and speake for vs vnto the kynge, and deliuer vs frõ death. And vpon the thirde day it happened, that Esther layde awaye the mourning garmentes, & put on her glorious apparell, and deese her selfe goodly (after that she had called vpon God, which is the beholder and sauiour of all thynges) toke two handemaides with her: vpõ the one she leaned her selfe, as one that was tender: & the other followed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The lyne of her bewtie made her face rose coloured. The similitude of her face was cheartfull and amiable, but her harte was sorowfull for greate feare. She wente in thorowe all the doores, and stoode before the kynge. The kyng sat vpon the throne of hys kyngedome, and was clothed in his goodlye araye, all of gold, and set with precious stones, and he was verie terrible. He lyfte vp hys face, that shone in the clearnesse, and looked grymlye vpõ her. Then fel the Quene downe, was pale and saynte and leaned her selfe vpon the heade of the mayde, that wente with her. Neuertheles, God turned the kynges mynde that he was gentle, that he leaped oute of hys seate for feare, and gat her in hys armes, and helde her vp tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He gaue her louynge wordes also, and sayde vnto her: Esther, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalte not dye: for our commaundemente toucheth the comons and not the Comenye. And wyth that he helde vp hys golden rod, and layd it vpon her necke, and embraced her frendelye, and sayde talke with me. Then sayde she: I sawe the (O Lorde) as an Aungell of God, and my harte was troubled, for feare of thy maiestie and clearnesse. For excellente and wonderfull arte thou (O Lorde) and thy face is full of Amyte. But as she was thus speakyng vnto hym, she fell downe agayne for sayntnesse for the whiche cause the kyng was afrayde, and all his seruaunte comforted her.

¶ The. xvi. Chapitre.

The greate kynge Assuerus, whiche raygneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, sendeth vnto the Princes and rulers of the same landes, suche as lone hym, hys frendly salutacio. Wher be many that for the condry frendshippes and benefites whiche are diuerse done vnto thẽ for theyr worshippe be euer the more proude and hye minded, & vndertake not onely to hurte theyr subiectes (for plenteous benefites may they not suffer, and begynne to ymagine some thing against those that do thẽ good, & take not onelye all vnthanckefulnesse awaye frõ men) but in pryde and presumpcion (as they that be vnmyndeful & vnthanckful for the good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgemente of God, that seeth all thynges, whiche iudgemente hateth and punyshe the all wickednesse: It happeneth ofte also that they whiche be set in office by the hyer power, & vnto whome the businesse & causes of the subiectes are cõmitted to be handled, waxe proude and defile thẽ selues with the adynge of innocente bloude, whiche bringeth thẽ to intollerable hurt. Whiche also with falce & deceptfull wordes and with lyenge tales, discreue & betray the innocẽte goodnesse of Princes.

Nowe is it profitable and good, that we take hede, make search thereafter, and consider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of old: but the shamefull, vnhoneft, and noysome thynges, that the debiles haue now taken in hande before our eyes, and thereby to beware in tyme to come, that we maye make the kyngedome quiet and peaceable for all men, and that we myght sometyme drawe it to a chaunge, and as for the thyng that nowe is presente before our eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe after the moste frendely maner. What tyme nowe as Aman, the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger verely of the Persyans bloude, and farre from our goodnesse) was come in amonge vs as an aleant and had optained the frendelyppe that we beare towarde all the people, so that he was called oure father, and had in highe honoure of euery man, as the nexte and principal vnto the kynge, he coulde not forbeare hym selfe from hys pryde, hath vndertaken, not onelye to robbe vs of the kyngedome but of oure lyfe. Wyth manyfolde disceyte also hath he desired to destroye Mardocheus our helper and preserver, whiche hathe done vs good in all thynges, and innocente Esther the lyke partaker of our kyngedome, wyth all her people. For hys mynde was (when he had taken them out of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by thys meanes to translate the kyngedome of the Persians vnto them of Macedonia, but we fynde that the Jewes (whiche ware accused of the wicked, that they mighte be destroyed) are no cruell doers, but vse reasonable and right lawes, and that they be the children of the moste hyghe liuing God by whome the kyngdome of vs and our progenitoures haue hene wel ordred hetherto. Wherefore, as for the letters and commaundementes that were put for the by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shal do wel, yf ye holde the of none effecte, for he that set them vp and inuited them, hangeth at Suris before the porte, with all his kynred: and God, (whiche hath al thynges in his power) hath rewarded hym after his deseruinge. And vpon this ye shall publishe and set vp the copie of this letter in all places, that the Iewes maye freely and without hyndraunce holde them selues after theyr owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, & that vpon the thirtenthe daye of the twelueth moneth Adar, they maye be auenged of them, whiche in the tyme of theyr anguishe & trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turned to ioye the day, wherin the chosen people should haue perished. Moreouer, amonge the hyghe solempne dayes that ye shal haue, ye shal holde this also with all gladenesse, that nowe and in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembraunce to good for all suche as loue the prosperitie of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruction to those that be seditious vnto vs. All cities and landes that do not this, shall horrible perysshe and be destroyed with the swearde and fyre, and shall not onelye be nomore inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes & foules.

The fyrste Chapitre.

The .xx. daye. Mattyns.

Set youre affection vpon righteousnesse, ye that be Iudges, of the earthe. Haue a good opinion of the Lord, & seke hym in the singlenesse of hert. For he wil be found of them that tempte him not, & appereth vnto suche as put their trust in him. As for frowarde thoughtes, they re seperat fro god: but vertuous, if it be allowed) reproueth the bawdy: and wyse wisedome shall not enter into a frowarde soule, nor dwel in the body that is subdued vnto sin. For the holye Ghoost abhorreth fayned nurture, and wyth drayeth hym selfe from the thoughtes that are without vnderstanding, & where wickednesse hath the vpperhãde, he flyeth fro there, for the spirite of wisdome is louing, gentle & gracious, & will haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euel with his lippes. For God is a witnes of his reyne, a true searcher out of his hert, & an hearer of hys tong. For the spirite of the Lorde filleth the rounde compasse of the worlde, & the same that vpholdeth al thynges, hath knowlege also of the voyce. Therfore, he that speketh vnrighteous thynges, can not be hyd: neither may he escape the iudgement of reproue. And why? inquisicion shalbe made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, & the reporte of his wordes shal come vnto God, for that this wyckednesse shalbe punyshed. For the eare of gelousie heareth all thynges, and the noise of the grudgynges shal not be hyd. Therfore beware of murmuryng, whiche is nothyng worth: and refrayne youre tunge from slaunder. For there is no worde so darcke & secrete, that it shal go for nought and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule. Seke not your owne death in the errour of your lyfe: destroye not youre selues thorowe the workes of youre owne handes. For God hath not made death, neyther hathe he pleasure in the destruction of the lyuyng. For he created all thynges, that they might haue theyr beyng: yea, all the people of the earthe hath he made that they shoulde haue health, that there should be no destruction in them, & that the kyngdome of hell should not be vpõ earth, for righteousnes is euerlasting and immortal, but vnrighteousnesse bringeth deathe. Neuertheles, the vngodlye call her vnto them both wyth wordes and workes, and whyle they thyncke to haue a frende of her they come to nought: for the vngodlye that are confederate wyth her and take her parte, are worthye of deathe.

The .ii. Chapitre.

For the vngodlye talke and ymagyne thus amonge them selues (but not right:) The tyme of oure lyfe is but worte and tedious and when a man is once gone, he hath nomore ioye nor pleasure, neither know we any mã that turneth agayn from death: for we are borne of nought, and we shalbe hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breath is as a smoke in our nostrels, and the wordes as a sparke to moue our hert. As for our body, it shalbe ry ashes that are quenched, and our soule shal vanyshe as the soft ayre. Our lyfe shall passe away as the trace of a cloud & come to naught as the myst that is driuen away with the beames of the Sunne, & put down with the heate thereof. Oure name also shalbe forgotten by lytle & lytle, & no man shal haue our workes in remembraunce. For our tyme is a very shadowe that passeth awaye, and after our ende there is no returnynge, for it is faste sealed: so that no man cõmeth agayn. Come on therfore let vs enioye the pleasures that there are, and let vs conuerte the creature like as in youth. Let vs fill our selues wyth good wine and oyntmente, and let there no floure of the tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne our selues with roses afore they be withered. Let there be no fayre medowe, but our lustie go thorowe it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure bolupteouſneſſe. Let vs leue ſame token of oure pleaſure in euery place, for that is oure portyon, els get we nothynge. Let vs oppreſſe the poore righteous let vs not ſpare the widdowe nor oldeman let vs not regarde the heades that are gray for age. Let the law of unrighteouſneſſe be oure aumpoite, for thynge that is feble is nothynge worth. Therefore let vs deſtraude the righteous: and why? he is not for oure profyte: yea, he is cleane contrarie to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offendynge agaynſte the lawe, and ſlaundreth vs as tranſgreſſoures of all nurture. He maketh hys boaſte to haue the knowlege of God: yea he calleth hym ſelfe gods ſonne. He is the bewraier of our thoughtes: It greueth vs alſo to looke vpon hym, for his life is not like other mēes, his waies are of another fa[illegible]yon. He counteth vs but vayne perſones, he wythdraweth hym ſelfe from oure wayes as from filthines: he commendeth greatlye the latter ende of the iuſte, and maketh hys boaſt that God is hys father let vs ſe then if hys woordes be true let vs proue what ſhall come vpon hym, ſo ſhall we knowe what ende he ſhall haue. For yf he be the true ſonne of God, he will receaue hym, and deliuer hym from the handes of hys enemies. Let vs examine him with diſpiteful rebuke and tormentynge, that we maye knowe hys dignitie and proue hys patience. Let vs condempne hym wyth moſte ſhamfull deathe: for lyke as he hathe ſpoken, ſo ſhall he be rewarded. Suche thynges do the vngodlye ymagine and goo aſtray, for theyr owne wickedneſſe hath blynded them. As for the miſteries of God they vnderſtande them not: they neyther hoope for the reward of ryghteouſneſſe, nor regarde the worſhip that holy ſoules ſhal haue. For God created man to be vndeſtroyed: yea, after the* ymage of hys owne lykeneſſe made he him. Neuertheleſſe, throwe enuy of the deuel, came deathe into the worlde & they that holde of hys ſyde do as he dothe.

¶ The iii. Chapitre.

But the ſoules of the righteous are in the hande of God, and the payne of deathe ſhall not touche them. In the ſyghte of the vnwyſe they appeared to dye, and theyr ende is taken for very deſtruction. The waye of the righteous is iudged to be vtter deſtruction, but they are in reſte. And though they ſuffer payne before men, yet is theyr hoope full of immortalitie. They are punyſhed but in fewe thynges, neuertheleſſe, in many thynges ſhall they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and findeth them mete for hym ſelfe: yea, as the golde in the fornace, dothe he tryſe them, and receyueth them as a burnt offeringe, and when the tyme commeth, they ſhalbe loked vpon. The righteous ſhall ſhyne as the ſparkes that runne thorowe the ſtubbe bushe. They ſhal iudge the nacions, and haue dominion ouer the people, and theyr Lorde ſhall raygne for euer. They that put theyr truſte in hym, ſhall vnderſtande the truth, and ſuche as be faythfull, will agree vnto hym in loue: for hys choſen ſhall haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodlye ſhalbe punyſhed accordyng to theyr ymaginations, for they haue diſpiſed the righteous, and for ſaken the Lorde. Whoſo diſpiſeth wyſedome and nurture he is vnhappie, and as for the hoope of ſuche, it is but vayne: theyr laboures vnfrutefull, and theyr workes vnprofytable. Theyr wiues are vnſtedfaſt, and chyldren wicked vngodlye. Theyr creature is curſed. Bleſſed is rather the barren and vndefiled, whiche hath not knowne the ſynfull bed: ſhe ſhall haue fruyte in the reward of the holy ſoules. And bleſſed is the gelted, which wyth hys handes hathe wrought no vnrighteouſneſſe, nor ymagined wicked thynges agaynſt God. For vnto hym ſhal be geuen the ſpeciall gyfte of faith, and the moſte acceptable portion in the temple of God. For glorious is the fruite of good labour, and the roote of wyſedome ſhall neuer fade awaye. As for the childrē of aduoutrers, they ſhal come to an ende, & the ſede of an vnrighteous bedde ſhalbe rooted out. And though they liue long, yet ſhall they be nothyng regarded, and theyr laſte age ſhalbe without honoure. Yf they dye haſtely, they haue no hope, neither ſhal they be ſpoken to in the day of knowlege. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnrighteous.

¶ The iv. Chapitre.

A Frenſhe ſong

Howe fayre is a chaſte generation with vertue? The memoriall there of is immortall, for it is knowen wyth God & wyth men. When it is preſente, men take example therat, and yet go away yet they deſire it. It is alway crowned and holden in honoure, and winneth the reward of the vndefiled battaile. But the multitude of vngodlye children is vnprofitable, and the thynges that are planted wyth whoredome ſhall take no depe roote nor laye any faſte foundacion. Though they be greene in the braunches for a tyme, yet they ſhall be ſhaken wyth the wynde: for they ſtande not faſte, and thorowe the vehemency of the wynde they ſhalbe roted oute. For the vnperfect braunches ſhalbe broken, theyr fruite ſhalbe vnprofitable and ſower to eate: yea, mete for nothynge. And why? all the chyldren that are borne of the wycked, muſte beare teſtymonye of the wyckednes agaynſt theyr fathers and mothers when they be aſked. But though the righteous be ouertaken with deathe, yet ſhall he be in reſte. For an honourable thynge is neuertheleſſe ſtandeth not onelye in the length of tyme nor in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wyſedome is the graye heare, and an vnſpotted lyfe is the olde age. We pleased God, & was beloued of hym, so that where as he lyued among synners, he translated hym. * Yea, sodenly was he taken awaye, to the intente that wickednesse should not alter his vnderstandinge and that hypocrisie should not begyle hys soule. For the crafty bewitchynge of lies make good thynges darke, the vnstedfastnesse also and wyckednesse of volupteous desire, turne aside the vnderstandinge of the symple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfilled he muche tyme. For his soule pleased God: therfore hasted he to take him away from among the wicked. This the people se, & vnderstande it not: they lay not vp suche thynges in their hartes: howe that the louyng fauour and mercye of God is vpon hys saynctes, and that he hath respecte vnto his chosen. Thus the righteous that is deade, condempneth the vngodly whyche are lyuyng, and the youth that is soone broughte to an ende the longe lyfe of the vnrighteous. For they se the ende of the wyse, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuised for hym, and wherefore the Lorde hath taken him away. And why they se hym and dispise hym, therefore shal God also laugh them to scorne So that they them selues shall dye hereafter (but wythoute honoure) yea, in shame amonge the deade for euermore. For without any voice shall he bustle those that be puffe vp, and remoue them from the foundacions, so that they shalbe layde waste vnto the bygheste. They shall mourne, and their memorial shall perysshe. So they beynge afrayde, shall remember their synnes, & their owne wickednesse wall bewraye them.

¶ The. v. Chapitre.

Then shall the righteous stand in greate stedfastnesse agaynste suche as haue dealt extremely with the, & haue taken away their laboures. When they se it, they shalbe vexed with horrible feare, & shal wõder at the suddaynesse of the sodayne health: groaning for very distresse of mynde, and shall saye within them selues, hauyng inwarde sorow, & mourning for verye anguishe of minde. These are they, whome we somtyme had in derision, and scoffed vpõ. We fooles thought their life very madnesse: & their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are coũted among the children of God, & their porcion is amõg the saincts. Therfore we haue erred frõ the way of truth, the light of righteousnesse hath not shined vnto vs, & the Sunne of vnderstãding rose not vpõ vs. We haue vexed our selues in the waye of wickednesse & destruccion. Tedious wayes haue we gone, but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowne it. What good hath our pride done vnto vs? Or what profite hath the pompe of richesse brought vs. All those thynges are passed awaye lyke a shadowe, and as a messenger runnyng before in a shyppe that passeth ouer the waues of the water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace therof cannot be founde, nether the path of it in the floudes. Or as a birde that flieth thorow in the ayre, and no man can se any token where she is flowen, but onely heare the noise of her wynges, beating the lighe winde, partynge the ayre thorowe the vehemency of her goynge, and flieth on wauynge her wynges, where as afterward no token of her way can be founde. Or lyke as when an arowe is shot at a marke it parteth the ayer, whiche immediatly commeth together agayn, so that a man can not knowe where it went thorowe. Euen so we in like maner as soone as we were borne, begane immediatly to drawe to our ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wyckednesse. Suche wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hoope of the vngodlye is lyke a drie thystle floure (or dust) that is blowne awaye wyth the wynde: lyke a thynne scomme that is scattered abrode wyth the storme, lyke as the smooke whyche is dispersed here and there wyth the winde, & as the remembraunce of a straunger, that tarieth for a daye, & then departeth. But the righteous shall lyue for euermore: their rewarde also is wyth the Lorde, and their remembraunce with the Hyghest. Therfore shall they receyue a glorious kyngdome, and a beutifull crowne of the Lordes hande: for with his righte hande shall he couer them, and with hys owne holye arme, shall he defende them, hys geloucie also shall take awaye the harnesse, & he shal weapõ the creature to be auẽged of the enemies. He shall put on righteousnesse for a brestplate & take sure Judgemente in stede of an helmete. The sauncible shilde of equite shal he take, hys cruell wrathe shall he harpen for a speare, and the whole cõpasse of the worlde, shall fyghte wyth hym agaynste the vnwyse. Then shall the thonderbolttes go out of the lyghtynges, and come out of the rayne bowe of the cloudes to the place appointed: out of the harde stony indignacion, there shall fall thycke haples, and the water of the sea shalbe wroth agaynst the, and the floudes shall runne roughlye together. Yea a mighty wynde shal stande vp agaynst them, and a storme shal scater them a brode. Thus the vnrighteous dealyng of them shall dayng al the land to a wildernesse, and wyckednesse shall ouerthrowe the dwellynges of the mightye.

¶ The. vi. Chapitre.

Wysedome is better the strength, & a man of vnderstãding is more worth the one that is strong. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) & vnderstande. O learne ye that be Iudges of the endes of the earth. that ye beyng officers of hys kyngdome have not executed true Judgemente, have not kepte Mercie is graunted vnto the simple, but they that be in auctorite shalbe sore punished. For God whiche is Lorde ouer all, shall accepte

But the mightye shall have the sorer punish-as seke her, she preuenteth them that desire her, that she maye first shewe her selfe vnto them. Whoso awaketh vnto her by tymes, shal have no greate trauaile, for he shal fynde her sytynge readye at hys doores. To thyncke vp-on her, is perfecte vnderstandynge, and who so watcheth for her, shalbe sure: & that sone.

For she goeth about, seekynge suche as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cheerefully vnto them in theyr goynges, and meteth them with all diligence. For the vnfayned desire of reformacion is her begynnyng: to care for nurture is love, and love is the keping of her lawes. Now the keepyng of the lawe is perfection, and an vncorrupt lyfe, and an vncorrupt lyfe maketh a man familier with God.
And so the desire of wysedome leadeth to the kyngdome euerlastyng. Ye your delite be then in royal seates and sceptres (O ye kinges of the people) set your lust vpon wysedome, that ye may rayne for euermore. O love the lighte of wysedome, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wisdome, what she is, & howe she came vp, I will tel you, & wil not hyde the misteries of God fro you: but will seeke her out fro the beginning of the nativitie & bring the knowlege of her into lighte, and wyll not kepe backe the truth. Neyther wyll I have to do with consumyng envie, for such a man shal not be partaker of wysedome. But the multitude of the wise, is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kynge is the vpholdynge of the people. O receyue nurture then therefore, my wordes and it shall do you good.

¶ The.vi. Chapitre.

I My selfe am also a mortall man, lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacio of hym that was first made, & in my mothers wombe was I fashioned to be flesh: In the tyme of ti monethes was I brought together in bloude thorow the sede of man, and the co-modious appetite of slepe. Whe I was borne I receyued lyke ayre as other men, and fell vp-on the earthe (whiche is my nature) cryenge and wepinge at the first as all other do. I was wrapped in swadling clothes & brought vp with greate cares. For there is no kynge that hath any other beginnyng of byrth. All men then have one entrauce vnto lyfe, & one goynge out in lyke maner. Wherefore I desired, and vnderstandyng was geuen me: I called and the spirite of wysedome came vnto me.

I set more by her then by kyngedomes and royall seates, and compted richesse nothynge in comparyson of her. As for precyous stone, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauel vnto her, and syluer shal-be compted but clay before her sight. I loued her aboue well fare and beawte, & purposed to take her for my lyght, for her lyght can not be quenched. Al good thinges come to me with her, & innumerable richesse thorow her handes.
I was glad in them all, for thys wysedome went before me, and I knew not that she is the mother of al good thinges. Now as I my selfe learned vnfainedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, & hyde her richesse fro noman: for she is an infinite treasure vnto mē whiche who so vse, become partakers of the loue & frendshyppe of God, and are accepted vnto hym for the giftes of wisedome. God hath graunted me to talke wiselye, & conuenientlye to handle the thynges that he hathe graciously lent me. For it is he, that leadeth vnto wisdome, & teacheth to vse wisdome ary-ghte. In his hande are bothe we & our wor-des, yea, al our wisedome, our vnderstandynge & knowlege of all our workes. For he hath geuen me the true science of these thynges, so that I knowe, howe the worlde was made, & the powers of the elementes: the beginning, endynge, and middelle of the tymes: howe the tymes altre, howe one goeth after another, & howe they are fulfilled. The course of the yeare, the ordinaunces of the starres, the nature & kyndes of beastes, the furiousnesse of beastes, the power of the windes, the ymaginacions of men, the diuersities of yong plant-es, the vertues of rootes, & al suche thinges as are secrete & not loked for, have I learned.
For the workemaster of all thinges hathe taught me wisedome. In her is the spirite of vnderstanding which is holye, manifolde, one onely, subtil, curious, discrete, quycke, vnde-filed, plaine, swete, louing that is good, sharp whiche forbiddeth not thy do well, gentle, kynde, stedfast, sure, sekyr, haunge all vertues, circumspecte in al thynges, receyuing al spi-rites of vnderstanding, beyng cleane & sharpe.

Sapientia. ¶ Scientia.

For wisdome is nymbler then all nymble thinges, she goeth thorowe and attaineth to all thynges, because of her cleanesse. For she is the breath of the power of God, & a pure cleane expressynge of the clearnesse of almightie God, wherefore can no defiled thynge come vnto her: for she is the brightenesse of the euerlastyng light, the vndefiled mirroure of the maiestie of God, and the ymage of hys goodnesse. And for so muche as she is one, she maye do all thynges, and beynge stedfast her selfe, she renneth al, & among the people conueyeth she her selfe, into the holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes & Prophetes, for God loueth noman, but hym in whome wysedome dwelleth. For she is more beautyful then the Sonne, and geueth more light then the starres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the daye commeth night. But wickednesse can not ouercome wysdome, and euyl shalbe vnsene maye not be wyth her.

¶ The.vii. Chapitre.

WYsedome searcheth from one ende to another mightely, and louyngly doth she order all thynges. I haue loued her, & laboured for her, euen from my youth vp. I dyd my diligence to mary my selfe with her, suche loue had I vnto her hewtie. Who so hath the cõpany of God, commendeth her nobilitie: yea, the Lorde of al thinges hym selfe loueth her. For she is the scholemaistresse of the nurtoure of God, and the chosen out of his worckes. Yf a man wolde desire richesse in thys lyfe, what is richer then wysedome, that worcketh all thynges? Thou wylt say vnderstandynge worcketh What is it among all thinges, that worcketh more then wisedome? Yf a man loue vertue and righteousnesse, let hym labour for wisedome, for she hath greate vertues. And why? she teacheth soberuesse & prudence, righteousnesse & strength, whyche are suche thinges as men can haue nothing more profitable in their lyfe. Yf a mã desire muche knowlege, she can tell the thynges that are past, and discerne thynges for to come: she knowethe the subtilties of wordes, and can expounde darcke sentences. She can tell of tokens, and wonderous thynges or euer they come to passe, & the endes of all tymes: and ages. So I purposed after this maner. I wil take her vnto my company, and comune louingely with her: no doubte she shall geue me good counsayle, & speke comfortably vnto me in my carefulnesse and griefe. For her sake shal I be well & honestly taken among the commens & lordes of the counsayle. Though I be yong, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstandyng, so that I shall be merueilous in the sight of great men, & the faces of princes shal wonder at me. whē I holde my tonge, they shal abide my layesure, when I speake, they shall loke vpon me, and if I talke muche they shall laye their handes vpõ their mouth. Moreouer, by the meanes of her I shal obteine immortalitie & leaue behind me an euerlastyng memorial among them that come after me. I shall set the people in order, & the nacions shalbe subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrauntes shalbe afrayde, when they doe but heare of me, among the multitude I shalbe counted good, & mightie in batayle. When I come home, I shal reste me with her: for her cõpany hath no bitternesse, and her felowshippe hath no tediousnesse, but mirthe and ioye. C

Nowe when I considred these thinges by my selfe, and pondred them in my harte, howe that to be ioyned vnto wysedome is immortalitie, and great pleasure to haue her frendeshyppe, howe that in the worckes of her handes are infinite richesse: howe that who so kepeth company with her shalbe wyse, and that he whyche talketh wyth her shall come to honoure: I went about seekyng, to gather her vnto me. For I was a lad of a type witte, and had a good vnderstanding. But when I grew to more vnderstandynge, I came to an vndefiled bodye. Neuertheless, when I perceyued that I coulde not kepe my selfe chaste, excepte God gaue it me, (and that was a poynte of wysdome also, to know whose gyfte it was) I stepped vnto the Lorde & besought hym & with my whole hart I sayd after this maner. D

GOD of my fathers, and lorde of mercies (thou that hast made all thynges wyth thy worde, and ordeined man thorowe thy wysedome: that he shoulde haue dominion ouer the creature which thou hast made: that he shoulde order the worlde accordynge to equitie and righteousnesse, and execute iudgmente (with a true harte) geue me wysedome, which is euer about thy seate, and put me not out from among thy children: for I thy seruaunte and sonne of thy handemayden am a feble person, of a shorte tyme, and to yong to the vnderstanding of iudgement and the lawes And though a man be neuer so perfecte among the children of men, yet yf thy wisdome be not with hym, he shalbe nothynge regarded. ¶ The.xviii. of Mattyas. Thou hast chosen me to be a kynge vnto thy people, and the iudge of thy sonnes and daughters. Thou hast commaunded me to buyld a temple vpon thy holy mounte, and an alter in the citie wherin thou dwellest: a likenesse of thy holy tabernacle which thou hast prepared from the beggynyng, and thy wysedome with the, whyche knoweth thy worckes whyche also was with the when thou madest the worlde, and knew what was acceptable in thy sight, and right in thy commaundementes. O sende her out of thy holy heauens, and from the throne of thy maiestie, that she may be wyth me, and labour with me: that I may knowe what is acceptable in thy sight. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thinges, B and he shal leade me soberlye in my workes, and preserue me in her power. So shall my workes be acceptable, and then shall I gouerne thy people righteously, and be worthie to sytt in my fathers seate. For what man is he that may knowe the counsayle of God? Or who can thyncke what the wyll of God is? For the thoughtes of mortal men are miserable, & our forecastes are but uncertaine. And why? a mortall and corruptible bodye is heuie unto the soule, and the earthly mansion keepeth downe that understanding that museth upon many thynges. Verye hardly cannc we discerne the thynges that are upon earthe, & greate labour have we, or we can fynde the thynges which are before our eyes: who wil then seke out the grounde of the thinges that are done in heauen? Oh Lorde who can haue knowlege of thy understandyng and meanyng except thou geue hym wysdome, & sende thy holy ghoste fro aboue? that the wayes of the which are upo earth, may be reformed, that me may learne the thinges that are pleasaunt unto the, & be preserued thorowe wysedome.

was a lyke. For their griefe was double namely, mourning, and the remembraunce of thinpunishmentes dyd them good, they thought vp-on the Lorde, and wondered at the ende. For at the last they helde muche of hym, of whome in the outcastyng they thought scorne, as of an abiect. Neuertheleste, the ryghteous dyd not so when they were thrysty: but euen lyke as the thoughtes of the folyshe were, so was also their wyckednes. * Where as certayne men nowe (thorow erroure) dyd worship dombe serpentes, & vayne beastes, thou sendest a multitude of dombe beastes vpon them for a vengeaunce, that they might knowe, that looke where withall a man sinneth, by the same also shall he be punished. For vnto thy Almigh-tie hande, that made the worlde of nought, it was not impossible to send amonge them an heape of beares, or wood lyons, or cruel beastes of a straunge kynd, such as are vnknowē, or spoute eyre, or cast out a smoking breth, or stote horrible sparkes out of their eyes, whiche might not onely destroy the with hurting but also kyll them with their horrible sight.

Yea, without these beastes might they haue bene slayne with one wynde, being persecuted of their owne workes, and scattered abrode thorow the brethe of thy power. Neuertheleste thou hast ordred all thynges in measure, nombre and weyght. For thou hast euer had greate strength and myghte, and who maye withstand the power of thine arme? And why lyke as the smal thyng that the balaunce wey eth, so is the worlde before thee: yea, as a drop pe of the morning dewe, that falleth downe vp-on the earth. Thou hast mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynges: * and makest as though thou sawest not the sinnes of men, because they shoulde amende. For thou louest all the thynges that are, & hatest none of the whome thou hast made: neither diddest thou ordeyne or make any thynge, of euell will.
Howe might anye thynge endure yf it were not thy will? Or howe coulde anye thynge be preserued, excepte it were called of the?
But thou sparest all, for all are thine (O Lorde) thou louer of soules.

¶ The. xij. Chapitre.

O Lorde, howe gracious and swetely thy spirite in al thynges? Therefore chas-nest thou them measurably that go wronge, & warnest the concerning the thinges wherin they offende: thou speakest vnto them (O Lorde) to exhortest them to leaue their wickednesse, & to put their trust in the. * As for those olde inhabiters of the holye land thou mis-test not alwaye with them, for they committed abhominable workes, ageaynste the as wittcraftes, sorcerie, and Idolatrie, they slewe their owne children without mercie: they dyd eate mans bowels, & deuoured the bloude: yea, because of suche abhominations, misrule rers, and offringes, thou sowest the fathers of the desolate soules by the hande of oure fathers: that the lande whiche thou louest aboue all other, might be a dwellynge for the childre of God. Nuertheles thou sparedest them also (as men) and sentest the forerunners of thyne hoost, euen hornettes to de-stroye them out by litle & litle. Not that thou mart vnable to subdue the vngodly vnto the righteous in bataile: or with cruell beastes, or with one rough worde to destroye the together: * But thy mynde was to dryue them out by litle and litle, geuinge them tyme and place to amende: knowynge well, that it was an vnrighteous nacion, & wycked of nature & that their thought might neuer be altered.
For it was a cursed sede from the beginninge & feared no man. Yet hast thou pardoned their sinnes. For who will saye vnto the: why hast thou done that? Or who shall stande agaynste thy iudgement? Or who will come before thy face, an auenger of vnrighteous men? Or who will blame the, yf the people perishe, whome thou hast made? For there is none other God but thou * that carest for all thin-ges: that thou mayest declare howe that thy iudgement is not vnright. There dare neither kyng, nor tiraunt in thy sight require accop-tes of them whome thou hast destroyed. For so muche the as thou arte righteous thy self, thou ordrest all thynges righteously * & punyshest euen him that hath not deserued to be punished, and takest hym for a straunger and an alcaunt in the lande of thy power. For thy power is the beginnunge of righteousnesse: and because thou arte Lorde of all thynges, therefore arte thou gracious vnto all. When men thynke the not to be of a full strengthe thou declarest thy power, & boldye deliuerest thou them ouer that knowe the not. But thou Lorde of power iudgest quietly, and ordrest vs with great worshippe: for thou mayest do as thou wylt. By suche workes nowe hast thou taught thy people, that a man also should be iuste and louyng, and hast made thy childre to be of good hope. For euen when thou iudgest, thou geuest vnto me to amende for sy-nnes. For in so muche as thou hast punished, and with suche diligence deliuered the enēmies of thy seruauntes, whiche were worthie to dye, (where vnto thou gauest the tyme & place of amendement that they might turne from their wyckednes) with howe greate diligence then punishest thou thyne owne children vnto whose fathers thou hast swoone, & made couenauntes of good promises? So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punyshest our enemies diuerse waies, to the intent that whē we punish we should remember thy goodnes, and when we our selues are punished to put our truste in thy mercy. Where-

Vaine are al men, whiche haue not knowelege of God: * as were thei that out of the good thinges whiche are seen, knew not him, that of him self is euerlasting. Neither tooke thei so moche regarde of the woorkes that are made, as to know, who was the craftesman of them, but some toke the fire, some the winde or aire, some the course of the starres, some the water, some toke sunne & mone, or the lightes of heuen, whiche rule the earth, for Goddes. But though thei had soche pleasure in their beautie that thei thought thē to haue been gods, yet would thei haue knowē how moche more fairer is he that made them.

For the maker of beautie hath ordeined al these thinges. * If the merualled at the power and woorkes of them, thei should haue perceiued thereby, that he which made these thinges, is mightier then thei. For by the greatnes and beautie of the creature, the maker therof maie plainlie bee knowen. Notwithstanding thei are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, and would finde him, and yet misse. And why? for so moche as thei goe about in his woorkes, and seke after them, it is a token, that thei regarde and holde moche of his woorkes, that are seen, howbeit thei are not wholie to be excused. The seking out of Idoles is the beginning of whoredom, and the bringing vp of them, is the destruccio of life. For thei were not from the beginning, neither shal thei continue for euer. The welthie ydelnesse of men hath found them out vpon earth, therefore shal thei come shortely to an ende. When a father mourned for his sonne that was taken awaie from him, he made him an Image (in all the hast) of his dead sonne: and so beganne to worshippe him as GOD, whiche was but a dead man, & ordeined his seruauntes to offer vnto him. Thus by processe of time & through an vngracious custome, this errour was kepte as a lawe, & tyrauntes compelled menne by violence to honoure images. As for those that were so farre of, that menne mighte not worshippe them presentlie, their picture was brought from farre (like the Image of a King, whom thei would honoure) to the intente that with greate diligence thei might worship him, whiche was farre of, as though he had been presente. Again the singular cunning of the craftesman gaue the ignorannte also a greate occasion to worshippe Images. For the workeman willing to doo him a pleasure that set him a worke, laboured with all his conning to make the Image of the best fashion. And so (through the beautie of the worke) the commune people was deceiued, in so moche that thei toke him now for a GOD, whiche a litle afore was but honoured as a manne. And this was the errour of mannes life, when menne (either for to serue their owne affection, or to doo some pleasure vnto Kinges) ascribed vnto stones & stockes the name of God, whiche ought to bee geuen vnto no manne. Moreouer, this was not enough for the, that thei erred in the knowelege of God: but wheras thei lined in the great warres of ignorannce, those manyes greate plages called thei peace. For either thei slue their owne childzen, & offered them, or did sacrifice in the night season, or elles helde vnreasonable watches: so that thei kept neither life, nor marriage cleane: but either one slue another to death maliciouslie, or elles greued his neighboure with adultrie. And thus were al thinges mixte together, bloude, manslaughter, theefte, dissimulacion, corruption, vnfaithfulnesse, sedicion, periurie, disquieting of good menne, vnthankefulnesse, defiling of soulles, chaunging of birth, vnstedfastnesse of marriage, misordre of adultrie and vncleanesse. And why? the honouring of abominable Images is the cause, the beginning and ende of al euil. For thei that worshippe Idoles, either thei are madde when thei be merie, or prophesie lies, or liue vngodlie, or elles lightlie forsweare them selues: For in so morhe as their trust is in the Idoles, (whiche haue neither soulle, nor vnderstanding) though thei sware falselie, yet then think it shall not hurte theim. Therefore cometh a great plague vpon them, and that worthelie, for thei haue an euil opinion of God, geuing hede vnto Idoles, swearing vniustlie to deceiue, & despising righteousnesse. For their swearing is no vertue, but a plage of theim that sinne, and goeth euer with the offence of the vngodlie.

BVT thou (O our God) art swete, long suffering, and true, and in mercie ordrest thou al thinges. Though we sinne, yet are we thine, for we knowe thy strength. If we sinne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe the is perfect righteousnesse: Yea, to knowe thy righteousnesse and power, is the roote of immortalitie. As for the thing that menne haue found out through their euil science, it hath not deceiued vs: as the painting of the picture (an vnprofitable labour) is carued Image, with diuerse colowres, whose sight enticeth the ignorannte so that he honoureth and loueth the picture of a deade Image that hath no soulle. Neuertheless, thei that loue suche euil thinges, are worthie of death, thei that truste in them, thei that make them, thei that loue them, and thei that honoure them. The Potter also taketh and tempereth softe earth, laboureth it, and geueth it the fashion of a vessell, what soeuer serueth for our vse: and so of one piece of claie he maketh some cleane vessel for seruice, and some contrarie, but where to euery vessell serueth, that knoweth the potter himselfe. So with his vaine labour he maketh a GOD of the same claie: this dooeth euen he, whiche a litle afore was made of earth himselfe, and within a litle while after (when he dieth) turneth to earth again. Notwithstanding, he careth not the more because he shall labour, nor because his life is shorter but striueth to excel Goldesmithes, the siluersmithes and coppersmithes, and taketh it for an honoure to make vaine thinges. For his harte is ashes, his hope is but vaine earth, and his life is more vile then claie, for so morhe as he knoweth not his owne maker, that gaue him his soulle to worke, and breathed in him the breath of life. Thei counte our life but a pastime, & our conuersacion to be but a Market, and that menne should euer be getting, & that by euil meanes. Now he that of earth maketh fraile vesselles and Images, knoweth himselfe to offende aboue al other. Al the enemies of thy people, and that holde them in subiection, are vnwise, vnhappie, and exceading proude vnto their owne soulles: for thei iudge all the Idoles of the Heathen to be Godes, whiche neither

D. haue plentie to see, nor notes to smell, nor eares to heare, nor fingers or handes to grope: and as for their feete, they are to slowe to goe. For man made them, and he that hath but a borowed spirite, fashioned them. But no manne can make a God like vnto him, for seeing he is but mortal himselfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnrighteous handes. He him selfe is better then they, whom he worshippeth, for he liued though he was mortal, and did neuer they. Yea, they worshipped beastes also, whiche are moste miserable: for compare thinges, that cannot stande vnto them, and they are worse then those. Yet is there not one of these beastes, that with his sight can beholde any good thing, neither haue they geuen praise, nor thankes vnto God.

The. xvi. Chapitre.

Euensong. A. FOR these, and suche other thinges haue they suffered worthie punishemente, and through the multitude of beastes are they rooted out. In stede of the whiche punishementes thou hast graciously ordred thine owne people, and geuen them their desire that they longed for: a newe and strange taste, * preparing them quailes to be their meate to the intente Num. xi. g. that (by the thinges whiche were shewed and sente vnto them) they that were so greedie of meate, might beewithdrawen euen from the desire that was necessarie. But these within shorte time were broughte vnto penurie, and called a newe meate. For it was requisite that (without any excuse) destruction should come vpon those whiche vsed tyrannie, and to shewe onelie vnto the other, how their enemies were destroied. * For when the cruell woodnesse of the beastes came vpon them, they pe- Num. xxi. b. Notwithstanding thy wrath endured not perpetuallie, but they were put in feare for a litle season, that they might be reformed, hauing a token of saluacion, to remembre the commaundemente of thy Lawe. For he that conuerted, was not healed by the thing that he sawe, but by thee, O Sauiour of al. So in this thou shewedst thine enemies, that it is thou, whiche deliuerest from all euil. * For they Exod. x. b. * when they were bitten with grashoppers and flies, they died, for they were worthie to perishe by sorte: But neither the teethe of Dragons, nor of venemous Wormes ouercame thy children, for thy mercie was euer by them, and helped them. Therefore were they punished to remembre thy woordes, but C. hastelie were they healed again, least they shoulde fall into so depe forgetfulnesse, that they might not vse thy helpe. It was neither herbe nor plaster that restored them to health, but thy woorde, (O Lorde) whiche healeth all thinges. through wickednesse taketh his owne soule and when his spirite goeth foorth, it turneth not again, neither maie he ral again the soule that is taken awaie. It is not possible to escrape thy hande. For the vngodlie that would not knowe thee, were punished by the strengthe of thine arme: with straunge waters, haile, and raines were they persecuted, and through fire were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thing that fire might doue more then water whiche quenched all thinges, but the worlde is the auenger of the righteous. Some time was the fire so tame, that the beastes, whiche were sente to punishe the vngodlie, brent not: and that because they should see and knowe, that they were persecuted with the punishemente of GOD. And some time brent the fire in the water on euery side, that it might destroie the vnrighteous nation of the D. earth. * Again, thou hast fed thine owne peo- Exod. xvi. a. ple with Aungelles fode, and sent them bread readie from heauen (without their labour) being very pleasaunte, and of good taste. And to shewe thy riches and sweetenesse vnto thy children, thou gauest euery one their desire, so that euery man might take what liked him beste. But the snowe and ise abode the violence of the fire & melted not: that they might knowe, that the fire burning in the haile and raine, destroied the fruites of the enemies, the fire also forgat his strength again, that the righteous might be nourished. For the creature that serueth thee (whiche art the maker) in fierce in punishing the vnrighteous, but is easie and gentle to doue good, vnto suche as putte their trust in thee. Therefore did all E. thinges alter at the same time, and were all obedient vnto thy grace, whiche is the Nurse of al thinges, according to the desire of them that hath neede thereof: that thy children (O Lorde) whom thou louest, might knowe, that Deu. viii. a. it is not nature, and the growing of fruites that feedeth meane, but that it is thy woorde, whiche preserueth them that putte their trust in thee. For loke what might not be destroied with the fire, as sone as it was warmed with a litle Sunne beame, it melted: that all meane might knowe that thankes ought to be geuen vnto thee before the Sunne rise, and that thou oughtest to be worshipped before the daie spring. For the hope of the vnthankefull shall melte awaie as the Winter Ise, and perishe as water, that is not necessarie.

night, kepte the slepe that fel vpon them from vnder, and from aboue: sometime were thei a-fraied through the feare of the wonders, and sometime thei were so weake, that thei sowned withal: for an hastie and sodein fearfulnesse came vpon them. Afterwarde, if any D. of them had fallen, he was kepte and shutte in prison, but without yrnes. But if any dwelt in a village, if he had not been an hearde, or bonthandema, he suffred intollerable necessitie: for thei were al bound with one chaine of darkenesse. Whether it were a blusing winde, or a swete song of the birdes emōg the thicke braunches of the trees, or the vehemencie of hastie running water, or greate noise of the falling downe of stones, or the playing, and running of beastes whom thei sawe not, or the mightie noise of roaring beastes, or the sounde that auntwereth again in the hyghe Mountaines, it made them sowne for very feare. For all the yearth shined with cleare light, and no manne was hindered in his labours. Onelie vpon them there fell an hea-was to come vpon theim. Yea thei were vnto theim selues the more heauie and horrible darkenesse.

titude of the children, and destroiedst them in the mightie water. Of that night were our fathers certified afore, that thei knowing vnto what othes thei had geuen credence, might bee of good cheare. Thus thy people receiued the health of the righteous, but the vngodlie were destroied. For like as thou hast hurte our enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou calledst afore. For the righteous children of the good menne offered secretlie, and ordred the lawe of righteousnesse vnto vnitie: that the iust should receiue good and euill in like maner, singing praises vnto the fathers of al men. Again, there was heard an inconuenient voice of the enemies, and a pitcous crie for the children that were bewailed. The master and the seruaunte were punished in like maner. For thei altogether had innumerable that died one death.
* Neither were the liuing sufficiente C. to burie the dead, for in the twinkling of an Exod. xij. c. ige the noblest nation of them was destroied.
As ofte as GOD helped theim afore, yet would it not make them beleue: but in the destruction of the first borne thei knowleged, that it was the people of GOD. For while all thinges were still, and when the nighte was in the middest of her course, thy almigh-tie woorde (O Lorde) leapt downe from heauen, out of thy roiall throne, as a roughe manne of warre, in the middest of the lande that was destroied: and the sharpe swearde performed thy straigthe commaundemente, standing, and filling all thinges with death: Yea, it stode vpon the yearthe, and reached vnto the heauen. When the lighte of the euill dreames vexed theim sodenlie, and feare fulnesse came vpon theim vnwares.

Thus laie there one here, another there, halfe dead, halfe quycke, and shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vexed them shewed them these thinges afore: so that they were not ignorant, wherfore they perished.

D. The temptacion of death touched the righteous also, and among the multitude in the wildernesse there was insurrection, but thy wrath endured not longe. For the blamelesse man went in al the hast, and toke the battaile vpon hym, brought furthe the weapon of his ministracion, euen prayer, and the censours of reconcilyng: set hymselfe against the wrath and so brought the miserie to an ende: declaryng thereby that he was thy seruaunt. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodily power, nor with weapons of might: but with the worde he subdued hym that vexed hym, puttyng them in remembraunce of the othe, and couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the deade were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the middest, pacified the wrath, and parted the way vnto the lyuyng. * And why? in his long garment was al the hewty, and in the foure rowes of the stones was the glorie of the fathers grauen, & thy maiestie was written in the crown of his heade. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place and was afrayed of them: for it was onely a temptacion worthy of wrath.

AS for the vngodly, the wrathe came vpon them without mercie vnto the ende. For he knewe before what shoulde happen vnto them, howe that (when they hadde consented to let them go, and had sent out with great diligence) they woulde repent and followe vpon them. * For when they were yet mourning and makyng lamentacion by the graues of the dead, they deuised another folishenesse & so that they persecuted them in their flyeng, whome they had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessitie also brought them vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thynges that happened vnto them afore. But the thyng that was wantyng of their punishement, was requisite to be fulfilled vpo them with torme[n]tes, that thy people might haue a meruelous passage thorowe, and that these might fynde a straunge death. (For was euery creature fashioned againe of newe, according to the wil of their maker, obeyeng thy commaundementes, that thy children might be kepte without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed their tentes, and the drye yerth appered, where afore was water: so that in the red Sea, there was a way without impediment: and the great depe became a grene felde: where thorowe all the people went that were defended with thy hande, seyng thy wonderous and meruelous workes. For as the horses go were they led, and leaped like lambes, praisyng thee (O Lorde) which hadde deliuered them:) for why? they were yet myndefull of the thynges that happened whyle they dwelte in the lande: how the grounde brought furth flyes in stede of cattell: and howe the riuer scrauled with the multitude of frogges, in stede of fishes.

C. Exod. xvi. c. Num. xi. g.

But at the last they sawe a new creacion of byrdes, what tyme as they were deceyued with lust: and desyred delicate meates. For when they were speakyng of their appetite, the quailes came vp vnto them from the Sea, and punishementes came vpon the synners, not without the tokens, which came to passe afore by the vehemencie of the streames, for they suffered worthely according to their wickednesse, they dealte so abominably, and churlishely with straungers. Some receyued no vnknowen gestes, some brought the straungers into bondage, that did them good. Beside all these thynges there were some, that not onely receyued no straungers with their willes, but persecuted those also, and did them muche euil, that receyued them gladly. Therfore were they punished with blyndenesse, lyke as they that were couered with a dayne darkenesse at the doores of the righteous, so that euery one sought the entraunce of his doze. (Thus the elementes turned into them selues, lyke as when one tune is chaunged vpon an instrument of Musyke, and yet all the residue kepe their melodye, which may easely be perceiued, by the sight of the thynges that are come to passe. The drye lande was turned into a water, and the thyng that afore swamme in the water, went now vpon the drye ground. The fyre had power in the water (contrary vnto his owne vertue) and the water forgat his owne kynde to quenche. Againe, the breathes of noysome beastes hurt not the fleshe of them that went with them, neither melted they the yce, whiche els melteth lightely. In al thynges hast thou promoted thy people (O Lorde) and brought them to honour: thou hast not despised them but alway, & in al places hast thou standen by them.

(The ende of the booke of Wysedome.

¶The booke of Jesus, the sonne of Syrach, whiche is called Ecclesiasticus.

¶The Prologue of Jesus, the sonne of Syrach vnto his Booke.

Many and great men haue declared wysedome vnto vs out of the lawe, and out of the Prophetes, and out of other that folowed them. In the whiche thynges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctrine & wysedome: Therefore, they that haue it, and reade it, ought not only themselues be wyse there vpon, but serue other also with teachyng & wrytyng. After that my grandfather Jesus, had geuen diligent labour to reade the lawe, the Prophetes, and other bookes, that were left vs of our fathers, & had well exercised hym selfe therin: he purposed also to write some thyng of wysedome & good maners, to the entent that they which were willyng to learne: and to be wyse might haue the more vnderstandyng, & be the more apt to leade a good conuersacion. Wherfore, I exhorte you to receiue it louyngly, to reade it with diligence, and to take it in good worth, though our workes be not so eloquent as the famous Orators. For the thyng that is written in the Hebrue tongue, soundeth not so well if it be translated into another speche. Not onely this booke of myne, but also the law, the Prophetes, & other bookes sounde not otherwyse then they do, when they are spoken in their owne language. Now in the .xxxviij. yere when I came into Egipte, in the tyme of Ptolomy Euergetes & continued there all my lyfe, I gat libertie to reade & write many good thynges. Wherfore I thought it good & necessary, to bestowe my diligence & trauaile to interpryete this booke. And consydryng that I had tyme, I laboured and put my best to perfourme this booke, and to bryng it vnto light: that the straungers also whiche are disposed to lerne, might apply them selues vnto good maners, & lyue accordyng to the lawe of the Lord.

¶Ecclesiasticus.

¶The first Chapiter.

All wysedome commeth of God the Lorde, and hath ben euer with hym, and is before all tyme. Who hath nombred the sandes of the sea, the droppes of the raine, and the dayes of tyme? Who measured the height of heuē, the breadth of the yerth, and the depenes of the deep? who hath sought out the ground of Goddes wysedome which hath bene afore all thynges? wysedome hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandyng of prudence frō euerlastyng. (Goddes word) in the height is the well of wysedome, and the euerlastyng commaundementes are the entraunce of her. Vnto whom hath the rote of wysedome ben declared? or who hath knowne her sotelte? Vnto whome hath the doctrine of wysedome ben discouered, and shewed? And who hath vnderstand the manifolde entrance of her? There is one knowen the Highest the maker of all thynges, the Almighty, the kyng of powers: of whō men ought to stande greatly in awe, whiche sytteth vpon her throne, beyng a God of dominion: he hath created her through the holy Ghost: he hath sene her, nombred her, and measured her, he hath poured her out vpon all his workes, & vpon all flesh, accordyng to his gifte: he geueth her vnto them that loue hym. The feare of the Lord is worshipp and triumphe, gladnes & a ioyful crowne. The feare of the Lord maketh a mery hart, geueth gladnesse, ioye & longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lord, it shal go wel with hym at the last, and in the day of his death he shalbe blessed. The loue of God is honourable wysedome, loke vnto who it appereth, they loue it for they se what wonderous thynges it doeth. The feare of the Lorde is the beginnyng of wysedome, & was made with the faithfull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen women, & shalbe knowen of the righteous & faithfull. The feare of the Lorde is the right Goddes seruice, that preserueth and iustifieth the hart, & geueth mirth & gladnesse. Who so feareth the Lorde shalbe happy, & when he hath nede of comfort, he shalbe releued. To feare God is wysedom that maketh ripe, & beginneth aright with her. She filleth the whole house with her gifftes, & the garnaries with her treasure. The feare of the Lorde is the crowne of wysedome, and geueth plenteous peace & health. She hath seene her & nombred her (they are the gifftes of God) knowledge and vnderstandyng of wysedome hath he powred out abundantly, and them that holde her fast, hath he exalted. of the Lorde in the tole of wysedome, & per uaunthes are longe lyue. In the treasuries of wysedome is vnderstandyng and deuocion of knowlege, but wysedome is abhorred of synners. The feare of the Lorde pleseth out tyme, for he that is without feare cannot be made righteous, & his wilful boldenes is his owne destruccion. A pacient man will suffre va-lyantly tyme, and then shal he haue the reward of ioye. A good vnderstandyng wil hyde his wordes for a tyme, & many mens lippes shall speake of his wysedome. In the treasuries of wysedome is the declaracion of doctrine, but the synner abhorreth the worshippe of God.
My sonne, yf thou desyre wysedome, kepe the commaundement, and God shal gene her vnto thee. For the feare of the Lord is wysedome, & nourture, he hath pleasure in faith & louyng meknes, and he shal fil the treasuries therof.
Be not obstinate and vnfaithfull to the feare of the Lorde, and come not vnto hym with a double hart. Be not an ypocrite in the sight of men, & take good hede what thou speakest.
Watche wel thyne tyngues, lest thou happen to fal & bring thy soule to dishonour, and to God discouer thy secretes, & cast the downe in the middest of the congregacion: because thou wouldest not receiue the feare of God, & because thy hart is ful of falsehode & deceit.

¶ The .4. Chapiter.

seruice of God, stand fast in righteous-nesse and feare, and arme thy soule to temp-tacion: settle thyne harte & be pacient, bowe downe thyne eare, receiue the wordes of vnderstandyng, & myshke not away, when thou art entysed. Holde the fast vpon God, ioyne thy self vnto hym, and suffre that thy life may encrease at the last. Whatsoeuer happeneth therfore shal thei not be defended of hym. Wo be vnto them that haue lost pacience, forsake

For it is not nedefull for the to see with thyne yes the thynges that are secrete. Make not thou to much searche in superfluous thynges, and be not curious in many of his woorkes: for many thynges are shewed vnto the already, which be aboue the capacitie of menne. The medlyng with suche hath beguyled many a man, and tangled their witte in vanitie. Now he that loueth parel shal perishe therin. An harde harte shal feare euel at the laste. And he that loueth daunger, shal perishe therin. An harte that goeth two wayes, shal not prospere: and he that is froward of harte wil euer be worse and worse. A wicked harte shalbe laden with sorowes, and the vngodly synner will heape one synne vpon an other. The councell of the proude hath no health, for the plante of synne shalbe rooted out in them, & not knowen. The harte of hym that hath vnderstandyng shal perceiue hye thynges, and a good eare will gladly herken vnto wisedome. An harte that is wyse and hath vnderstandyng, will abstaine from synnes, and encrease in the workes of righteousnesse. Water quencheth burnyng fyre, & mercie reconsileth synnes. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble, turne not away thy face from the nedie. Cast not thyne yes aside from the poore, for any euell will that thou geue him none occasion to speake euil of the. For iche complaine of the, in the bitternes of his soule, his prayer shalbe heard: euen he that made him shal heare him. Let it not greue the to bowe downe thyne eare vnto the poore, but pay thy debte, and geue hym a frendely answere, & that with mekenesse. Deliuer hym that suffereth wronge from the hande of the oppressour, and be not faint harted when thou sittest in iudgement. Be merciful vnto the fatherles as a father, and be in steade of an husband vnto their mother: so shalt thou be as an obedient sonne of the hyest: and he shal loue the more then thy mother doeth. Wyse dome breatheth life into her children, receyueth them that seke her, and will go before them in the way of righteousnes. Thei that honoure her, shalbe the seruauntes of the holy one: and thei that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shal iudge the Heathen, and he that hath respect vnto her, shal dwel safely. He that beleueth her, shal haue her in possession, & his generation shall endure: for when he falleth she goeth with hym, and kepeth hym among the best. Feare, drede, and temptacion shal she bryngе vpon hym, & exe hym in her doctrine, til she haue proued hym in his thoughtes, that he commit his soule vnto her. Then shal she stablishe hym, bryngе the right way vnto hym, make hym a glad man, & owe hym her secretes, and heape vpon hym the treasures of knowlege, vnderstandyng & righteousnes. The gyfte of God remayneth for the ryghteous, and his good wille shal geue prosperite for euer. Some man is ryche by lyuyng nyggardly, & that is the porcio of his rewarde, in that he saieth: * nowe I haue gotten rest, and nowe will I eate and dyncke of my goodes my selfe alone. And yet he consydereth not, that the tyme draweth nye, and death approcheth, that he must leaue all thoes thynges vnto other men, and dye hymselfe. Stande thou fast in thy couenaunte, and exercyse thy selfe therein, and remayne in the worcke vnto thy age. Continue not in the workes of synners, but put thy trust in God, and byde in thyne estate, for it is but an easy thyng in the syght of God, to make a poore man ryche, and that sodeinly. The blessing of God hasteth to the rewarde of the ryghteous, and maketh his frutes sone to floryshe and prosper. Saye not what helpeth it me? and what shall I haue the whyle? Agayne, saye not: I haue enough, how can I wante? * When thou arte in welfare, forgetnot aduersitie, and when it goeth not wel with the, haue a good hope, that it shalbe better. For it is but a small thyng vnto God, in the daye of death to rewarde euery man accordyng to his wayes. The aduersitie of an houre maketh one to forget all pleasure, and when a mā dyeth, his workes are discouered. Prayse nobody before his death, for a man shalbe known in his children. WHen thou wilt doo good, know to who thou dooest it, & so shalt thou be greatlie thanked for thy benefeites. * Doo good vnto the righteous, and thou shalt find great rewarde, though not of him, yet (no doubte) the Lorde himselfe shal rewarde the. He standeth not in a good case that is alwaie occupied in euil, & geueth no almes, for the highest hateth the sinners, and hath mercie vpon them that bewe the wourkes of repentaunce. Geue thou vnto soche, as feare God, and receiue not a sinner. As for the vngodlie and sinners, he shal recompence vengeaunce vnto theim, & kepe them to the daie of wrath. Geue thou vnto the good, and receiue not the sinner: doo wel vnto him that is lowlie, but geue not to the vngodlie. Let not thy breade be geuen him, that he be not mightier then thy selfe therin. For so shalt thou receiue twise as moche euil, in all the good that thou dooest vnto him. And why? the highest hateth sinners, & shall rewarde vengeaunce to the vngodlie. In prosperitie, a frende shal not bee knowen, and in aduersitie an enemie shal not be hidde. For when a man is in wealth, it greeueth his enemies, but in heauinesse and trouble a man shal knowe his frende. Trust neuer thine enemie, for like as an yron rusteth, so doeth his wickednesse. And though he make moche crouching and kneling, yet kepe well thy minde, & beware of him. Like as the proude hate not a wilde beaste but loue it, so doeth the riche abhorre the poore. If a riche man fall, his frendes set him vp again: but when the poore falleth, his acquaintaunce forsake him. If a riche manne fall into an error, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude woordes, and yet men iustifie him. But if a poore manne goe wrong, he is punished: yea though he spake wiselie, yet can it haue no place: When the riche man speaketh, euery man holdeth his tongue: and loke what he saieth, thei praise it vnto the cloudes. But if the poore manne speake, thei saie: What felowe is this? and if he dooe amisse, thei shall destroie him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no sinne in his conscience, and pouertie is a wicked thing in the mouth of the vngodlie. Eccle. xxi.

¶ The. xx. Chapitre.

The. xix. d. Mattins. A. Ec. xxxi. Some man* reproueth his neighbour oft times, but not in due season: Again, some man holdeth his tounge, and he is wise and discrete. It is moche better to geue warning and to reproue, then to beare euill will: for he that knowelegeth himself openly, shalbe preserued from hurte and destruction. Like as when a gelded man through desire and lust defileth a maiden: euen so is it with him that vseth violence, & vntrighteousnesse in the law. How good a thing is it, a man that is reproued to shewe openly his repentaunce, for so shalt thou escape wilfull sinne. Some man kepeth silence, and is found wise, but he that is not ashamed what he saieth, is hatefull. Some manne holdeth his tounge, because he hath not the vnderstandyng of the language, and some man kepeth silence, waityng a cōuenient time. A* wiseman will holde his toung

Eccle. xj. a. and. xxxij. a. till he se opportunitie, but a wanton and vndiscrete bodie shall regarde no time. He that vseth many woordes, shall hurt his awne soulle and he that taketh authoritie vpon him vnrighteously, shalbe hated. Some man hath oft times prosperitie in wicked thinges. Again, some man getteth moche, and hath harme and losse. There is some gifte, that is nothyng worthe. Again, there is some gift, whose reward is double. Some man getteth a fal for beyng to proude, and some cometh to worship from lowe estate. Some manne buieth moche for a litle price, and some must paie for it. bij

D. Eccl. bi. c folde. A* wise man with his woordes maketh himself to be loued, but the fauour of fooles, shalbe poured out. The gift of the vnwise shal dooe thee no good, for his eyes are bij. folde.

He shall geue litle, and saie he gaue moche: Eccl. xviij. c he openeth his mouthe & crieth out, as it were one that crieth out wine. To daie he lendeth, to morowe asketh he again, and so che a mā is to be hated. The foole saieth, I haue no frend I haue no thanke for all my good deedes: yea euen they that eate my bread, speake no good of me. O how ofte, and of how many shall he be laughed to scorne? he taketh a more perilous fall by suche woordes, then if he fell vpō the grounde: Euen so shall the falle of wicked menne come hastely. In the mouthe of him that is vntaught, are many inconuenient and vnmete woordes. A wise sentence shall not bee allowed at the mouth of the foole, for he speaketh not in due season. Some man sinneth not C. because he hath not where withall, and in his rest he shalbe stinged. Some mā there is that destroieth his awne soulle with shame, and foran vnwise bodies take it troieth he it, & with accepting of persones shall he vndo himselfe.

Some mā promiseth his frend a gift for very shame, & getteth an enemie of him for naught.
A lie is a wicked shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouthe of the vnwise. A theefe is better then a man that is accustomed to lie, but thei bothe shall haue destruccion to heritage. The condicions of liers are vnhoneste, & shall come, and that hastely. Whoso hateth to be reformed, it is a token of an vngodlie persone, but he that feareth god, will remēbre him selfe. A mightie man is knowen afore by his tongue, but he that hath vnderstandyng, per-W. ceiueth that he shall haue a fall. Whoso buildeth his house with other menes coste, is like ccle. xbi.a. one that gathereth stones in winter. The* cōgregacion of the vngodlie is like stubble gathered together, their ende is a flambe of fire.

The waie of the vngodlie is set with stones but in their ende is hell, darkenesse, & peines.
He that kepeth the lawe, wil hold fast the vnderstandyng therof: and the ende of the feare of God is wisedome and vnderstandyng. He that is not wise, will not bee taught in good, but the vnwise man aboundeth in wickednesse, and where bitternesse is, there is no vnderstādyng. The knowelege of the wise shall flowe like water that renneth ouer, and his counsail C. is like a fountain of life. The harte of a foole is like a broken vessell, he can kepe no wisedō.
When a man of vnderstandyng heareth a wise worde, he shall cōmende it, and make moche of it. But if a voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behinde his backe. The talkyng of a foole is like an heuie burthen by the waie, but to heare a wisemanne speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doubte is in the congregacion, it is asked at the mouthe of the wise, & thei shal ponder his wordes in their hartes. Like as is a house that is destroied, euen so is wisedome vnto a foole. As for the knowelege of the vnwise, it is but darke wor-des. Doctrine is vnto him that hath no vnderstandyng, euen as fetters about his fete, and like manicles vpon his right hande. A* foole Eccle. xix.b. lifteth vp his voice with laughter, but a wise man shall scarce laugh secretly. Learnyng is vnto a wise mā a iewel of gold, & like an arme-let vpon his righte arme. A foolishe mannes fote is sone in his neighbours house, but one that hath experience, shalbee ashamed at the persone of the mightie. A foole will pepe in at the windowe into the house, but he that is well nurtered, will stande without. A foolishe W. man standeth harkenyng at the doore, but he that is wise wilbe ashamed. The lippes of the vnwise wil be telling foolishe thinges, but the wordes of soche as haue vnderstandyng, shal-be waighed in the balaūce. The hart of fooles is in their mouthe, but the mouthe of the wise is in their harte. When the vngodlie curseth the blasphemer he curseth his awne soule. A Leuit. xix.b. priuie accuser of other mē shal defile his awne soulle, and be hated of euery man: but he that kepeth his toungue and is secrete, shal come shaise. A slothfull bodie is made of the dounge of oxen, and euery one that toucheth him must washe his handes again. A misgurtered sonne is the dishonor of the father. A foolishe daugh ter shalbe litle regarded. A wise daughter is an heritage vnto her housbande: but she that cometh to dishonestie, bringeth her father in heuinesse. A daughter that is past shame, dishonoureth bothe her father and her housbande, the vngodlie shall regarde her, but thei bothe shal despise her. The plaiyng of muske is not mete where heuinesse is, euen so is the correccion and doctrine of wisedome euer vnpleasant vnto fooles. Who so teacheth a fole, is euē as B. one that gleweth a potsherde together: as one that telleth a tale to him that heareth him not and as one that raiseth a man out of an heuie slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wisedō, is euē as a mā, which speaketh to one that is a slepe When he hath told his tale, he saieth: what is the matier? When one dieth, lamentacions is made for him, because the light faileth him: euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wāteth vnderstandyng. Make but litle weepyng because of the dead: for he is come to rest, but the life of the foole is worse then the death.

Seuen daies doe men mourne for him that is dead, but the lamentacion ouer the vnwise and vngodlie should endure all the daies of their life. Walke not mothe with a foole, and goe not with him that hath no vnderstanding. Beware of him least it tourne thee to trauail, and thou shalt not be defiled with his sinne. Departt frō him, and thou shalt finde rest, and shalt not be drawen backe into his foolishenesse. What is heuier then lead? And what should a foole be called els but lead? Sande, salt, and a lumpe of iron is easier to beare, then an vnwise, foolishe, and vngodlie man. Like as the bande of woodde bounde together in the foundacion of the house cannot be lowsed, euen so is it with the harte that is stablished in the thought of counsaill. The thought of the wise shall neither feare, nor be offended at any time. Like as a faire plastred wall in a winter house, and an high buildyng, maie not abide the winde and storme: euen so is a fooles harte afraied in his imaginacio, he feareth at euery thing, and cannot endure. (A waueryng hart in the imaginacion of a foole will not stand euer in awe but he that abideth in the commaundementes of God, will alwaie feare. He that nippeth a mannes eye bringeth sorowe to the teares, and he that pricketh the harte, bringeth sorowe to the meanyng and thought. Who so casteth a stone at the birdes, fraieth them awaie: and he that blasphemeth his frende, breaketh the friendshippe, though thou drawest a swearde at thy frende, yet despaire not, for thou maiest come again to thy frende. If he speake sowerly, feare not, for ye maie bee agreed together again, excepte it be that thou blaspheme him, disdain him, open his secretes & wounde him traiterously, for all soche thinges shall driue awaie a frende. Bee faithfull vnto thy neighboure in his powertie, that thou maiest reioise with him also in his prosperitie. Abide stedfast vnto him in the time of his trouble, that thou maiest be heire with him in his heritage. Like as the vapour & smoke goeth out at the ouen before the fire, euen so euill woordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bluttedyng. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I will not hide my face from him, though he would do me harme. Whosoeuer heareth it shal beware of him. Who* shal set a watche before my mouthe, and a sure seale vpon my lippes, that I fal not with them, and that my tounge destroie me not?

The. xxiij. Chapiter.

O Lorde, father and gouernour of my life, leaue me not in their imaginacion and counsaill. Oh let me not fal in soche reproche. Who wil kepe my thought with the scourge, and the doctrine of wisedome in my harte? That he spare not mine ignorance, that I fall not with theim, least mine ignorances encrease, that mine offences bee not many in number, and that my sinnes exceade not, least I fall before mine enemies, and to my aduersaries reioise. O lorde, thou father and God of my life, leaue me not in their imaginacion. O let me not haue a proude looke, but tourne awaie all voluptuousnesse from me. Take from me the lustes of the bodie, let not the desires of vncleannesse take hold vpon me, and geue me not ouer into an vnshamefast and obstinate minde. Heare me (O ye children) I will geue you a doctrine, how you shal order your mouth who so kepeth it, shall not perishe throughe his lippes, nor be hurt throughe wicked woordes, as for the sinner, he shalbe taken in his awne banitie: He that is proude and cursed, shall fall therein. Let not thy mouthe bee accustomed with swearyng, for in it are many falles. Let not the namyng of God be continually in thy mouthe: (and medle not with the names of saintes, for thou shalt not be excused of theim) for like as a seruaunt which is oft punished cannot be without some sore, euen so what so euer he bee that sweareth and nameth God, shall not bee cleane pourged from sinne: a man that vseth moche swearyng, shalbe filled with wickednesse, and the plague shal neuer goe from his house. If he beguile his brother, his fault shalbe vpō him, if he knowelege not his sinne, he maketh a double offence and if he sweare in vain, he shall not be founde righteous: for his house shalbee full of plagues. * The woordes of the swearer bringeth death. God graunt that it be not found in the house of Iacob. But thei that feare God, shewe all soche, and lie not welteryng in sin. Vse not thy mouth to vnhonest and filthy talkyng, for it is the woorde of sinne. Remembre thy father and thy mother, when thou art set emong greate men: least God forget thee in their sighte, and least thou dotyng in thy custome suffre rebuke, & wishe not to haue been borne, and so curse the daie of thy natiuitie. * The man that is accustomed with the woordes of blaspheme, will neuer be reformed al the daies of his life. To sin twise is to moche but the third bringeth wrathe & destruccion. An hote stomache cannot be quenched: (euen like as burnyng fire) til it haue swalowed vp some thing: euē so an vnchast man hath no rest in his flesh, till he haue kindled a fire. A dreed is swete to an whoremonger, he will not leaue of till he haue his purpose. A man that breaketh wedlocke, and regardeth not his soulle, but saith: I saw, who seeth me? I am cōpassed about with darkenesse the walles couer me, no bodie seeth me: whom nede I to feare? The highest will not remembre my sinnes. He vnderstandeth not that his eyes se all thinges, for all soche feare of men driueth awaie the feare of God frō him: for he feareth onely the eyes of me, and considereth not that the eyes of the lorde are cleerer then the sunne, beholdyng all the waies of men and the secrete of

I toke roote in an honourable people, euen in the porcion of the lorde, and in his heritage, & kept me in the fulnesse of the sainctes. I am set vp an high like a Cedre vpon Libanus, & as exalted like a Palme tree in Cades, and as a rose plant in Iericho. As a faire oliue tree in tree by the water side. I haue geue a smell in the stretes, as the Cinamon and Balme, that hath so good a sauour, yea, a swete odour haue made my dwellynges to smell as it were of C.

Roten, Galbanum, of Cloues, and Incense, and as Libanus when it is not hewen doune and mine odur is as the pure Balme. As the Terebinte haue I stretched out my braunches, and my braunches are the braunches of honour and louyng sauoure. As* the vine Ihon. xv.a. haue I brought forthe fruite of a swete sauour and my floures are the fruite of honour and richesse. I am the mother of beautie, of loue, of feare, of knowlege, and of holie hope. * In Ihon. xiiij.a. me is all grace of life and trueth. In me is al hope of life and vertue. O come vnto me al ye that be desirous of me, and fill your selues with my fruites: for my spirite is swete then honie, and so is mine enheritaunce more then the honie combe: the remembraunce of me en-shall thirst the more. Who so harkeneth vnto me shall not come to confusion, and they that worke in me, shall not offend. They that make Mat

All these thinges are the boke of life, the co-cast out floudes. I am as a great waterbroke out of the riuer. I am as the riuer Noxi, and as a water conduite I am come out of the garden of pleasure. I saied, I will water the garden of my young plantes, and fill the fruite of my birthe: so my water brooke became exceding great, and my water approched vnto the sea. For I make doctrine to be vnto all me, as light as the faire morning, and I shal make it to bee euer the clerer. I wil pearce through all the lower partes of the earth/I will looke vpon all soche as bee a slepe, and lighten all them that put their truste in the lorde. I shall yeat poure out doctrine, like as prophetie, and leaue it vnto soche, as seeke after wisedome, and their generations shal I neuer faile, vnto the holie euerlasting world.

¶ The. xxv. Chapitre

Three thinges there are, that my spirite reioyceth, which be also allowed before God, and men. *The vnitie of brethren, *the loue of neighboures *a man and wife that agree well together. Three thinges there be which be my soule hateth, and I vtterlie abhorre the life of them. A poore man that is proude A riche man that is a lier, *and an olde bodie that doteth, and is vnchast. Yf thou hast gathered nothing in thy youth, what wilte thou finde then in thine age. Oh how pleasaunte a thing it is, when grateheaded menne are discrete, & when the eldres can geue good counsail. O how comely a thing is wisedome vnto aged men: yea, vnderstanding, and counsail is a glorious thing. The croune of olde men is to haue moche experience, and the feare of God is their worship. There be .ix. thinges which I haue iudged in my harte to be happie, and the tenth wil I tell foorth vnto men with my tounge. A man that (while he liueth) hath ioie of his children, and seeth the fal of his enemies. Well is him that dwelleth with an housewife of vnderstanding, *and that hath not fallen with his tounge, and that hath not been faine to serue soche as are vnmeete for him. Well is him that findeth a faithful frend and well is him which talketh of Wisedome to an eare that heareth him. Oh how greate is her that findeth wisedome, and knowlege? Yet is he not aboue him that feareth the lord. The feare of God hath sette it self aboue all thinges. Blessed is the man vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of GOD. Vnto whom shall he be likened, that kepeth it fast? The feare of God is the beginning of his loue, and the beginning of faith is to cleaue fast vnto it. The heauinesse of the hart is al the punishment, and the wickednesse of a woman goeth aboue all. All punishments plagues & nothing in comparison of the plage of the harte, euen so, all wickednesse is nothing to the wickednesse of a woman. Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto a man is nothing in comparison of it, that his enil will is to do vnto him and all vengeaunce is nothing to the vengeaunce of a woman. Yf a woman get the maistry, then is she contrarie to her husbande A wicked wife maketh a sorie harte, an heauy countenaunce, and a dead wounde. *(Weake handes and feble knees is a woman that her husbande is not the better for.) Of the woman came the beginning of sinne, and through her we all are dead. Geue thy water no passage, no not a litle, neither geue a wicked woman her wil. Yf she walke not after thy hande, she shall confounde the in the sight of thine enemies. Cut her of then from thy flesh, that she doe not alwaie abuse the.

¶ The. xxvi. Chapitre.

Happie is the manne that hath a vertrous wife, for the numbre of his yeres shalbe double. An honeste woman maketh her housbande a ioyfull man, and he shal fill the yeares of his life in peace. A vertrous woman is a noble gifte which shalbe geuen for a good porcion vnto soche as feare God. Whether a man be riche, or poore, he maie euer haue a mery hart, and a cherful countenaunce. Ther be thre thinges that my hart feareth, and my face is afraied of the fourth. Treason in a citie, a seditious people, and noisome tōges, all these are heauier then deathe. But when one is iealous ouer his wife, it bringeth pein and sorowe vnto the hart. A woman that letteth out all thinges, is a scourge of the tōg. When one hath an ciuill wife, it is as when an vnlike paire of Oxen must drawe together: he that getteth her getteth a Scorpione. A dronken woman is a greate plague, for she cannot couer her owne shame. The whoredom of a woman may be knowen in the pride of her eies, and eielides. Yf thy Daughter be not shamefast, holde her straitely, least she abuse her selfe through ouermoche libertie. Beware of all the dishonesty of her eies: and maruile not if she vse against the. pleasor come vpō me. When an expert man of warr suffereth scarsenes & powerty. When men of vnderstanding, & wisedome are not set by.
And when one repenteth from righteousnesse vnto sinne. Whoso doeth suche, the lord hath prepared him vnto the swearde. There be. v. maner of thinges, which me thinke to be herd and perilous. A merchant cannot lightly kepe him from wrong, neither a taurner himselfe from sinne.

when one sifteth, the filthinesse remaineth in the siue. So remaineth there some vncleane thing in the thought of man. The ouen proueth the potters vessel: so doeth temptacio of trouble, trie righteous men. & The tre of the feld is knowē by his fruite, so is the thought of mans hert knowen by his wordes. Praise no man except thou haue heard him, for a mā with her, and she shal defende the for euer, and in the daie of knowlege shalt thou finde cer-tayntes. The birdes resort vnto their like: so doeth the trueth turne vnto them that be occupied with it. The lion waiteth the praie, so doeth the sinner lurke vpon the workers of wickednesse. The talking of him that feareth God, is nothing but wisedome: as for a fole he chaungeth as the mone. Yf thou be a-couereth secretes, leeseth his credence, and findeth no friend after his wil. Loue thy frēd if thou bewraiest his secretes, thou shalt not get him againe. For like as the man is that destroieth his enemy, so is he also that dealeth falsly in the friendship of his neighbour.

Like as one that letteth a birde go out of his hande, cannot take her againe, euen so thou, if thou geue ouer thy frend, thou canst not get him again. Yea, thou canst not come by him: for he is to far of. He is vnto the as a Roo, escaped out of the snare, for his soul is wounded. As for wordes thei maie be bound by againe, and an euel worde maie be reconciled but whoso bewraieth the secretes of a frend: there is nomore hope to be had vnto him. The that winketh with the yies, imagineth some euell, and no man shal take him from it. When thou art present he shall highly cōmende, and praise thy wordes: but at the last he shal turne his tale, and slaunder thy saiyng. Many thin-ges haue I hated, but nothing so euil, for the lord himself also abhorreth suche a one. Who so casteth a stone on hie, it shal fal vpon his owne head, and bee that smiteth with guile, woundeth himself, whoso diggeth a pit shal fal therin, & he that laith a stone in his neibours way, shal stumble theron, and bee that laieth a snare for another, shalbe taken in it himself.
Whoso geueth a wicked noticome counsail, it shall come vpon himself, & he shall not knowe from whence. The proude blaspheme, and are scorneful, but vengeance lurketh for them as a Lio. Thei that reioice at the fal of the righteous, shalbe taken in the snare: anguish of hert shal consume them before thei die. Angre and rigorousnes are. ij. abominable thinges, and the vngodly hath them bothe vpon him.

uenaunt of the highest, & forgeue thy neighbor ignorannce. * Beware of strife, & thou shalte make thy sinnes fewer. For an angrie manne kindleth variaunce, and the vngodlye disquieteth frendes, & putteth discord emong theim that be at peace. * The more wooode there is, the greater is the fire: and the migh tier the men be, the greater is the wrath, and the loger the strife endureth, the more it burneth. An hasty brawlyng kindleth a fire, & an hasty strife weadeth blood. A tonng also that beareth false witnesse bringeth death. If thou blowe vpon the sparke, it shal burne. If thou spit vpon it, it shall go furth, and both these out of the mouth. * The slaunderer, and doble tongued is curssed, for many one that be frendes, setteth he at variannce. The third tong hath disquieted many one, and driuen thē frō one lande to another. Strong cities of the richest hath it broken doune, and ouerthrowne the houses of great men. The strength of the people hath it brought doune, & den the decay of mighty nations. The third tong hath cast out many an honest woman, & robbed them of their labours. Who so herkeneth vnto tonche shall neuer finde rest, and neuer dwel safely. The stroke of the rod maketh elders, but the stroke of the tong, smiteth the bones in sonder. There bee many that haue perished with the swearde, but many mo through the toung. For the yoke therof is of yron, and the bande of it of stele. The death therof, is a very euil death. Hel were better for one then tonche a toung. But the fire of it may not oppresse them that feare God, & the flambe therof may not burne them. Sonche as forsake the Lorde, shal fal therin, and it shall burne them, and no man shalbe able to quench it. It shal fall vpon them as a Lion, & deuour thē as a leoparde. Who so wil shewe mercie, lette him lende vnto his neighbor: and he that is able let him kepe the commaundemente. Lende vnto thy neighbor in time of his nede, & paie thou thy neighbor again in due season. Kepe thy woorde, and deale faithfully with him, & thou shalt alwaie finde the thing that is necessary for the. There haue been many that when a thing was lent them, reckened it to be founde and made theim straunge, and labour, that had ben beloged them. While they receiue any thyng, they kisse the handes of tonche as geue them, for their neighbours good: but humble their voice. But when they woulde paye againe they kepe it backe, and geue euill wordes, and make many excuses by reason of the time, and though he be liable, yet geueth he fearce the halfe againe, & reckeneth the other to be lost: and if he with holde not his money, yet hath he an enemy of him, & that vnderserued. He paieth him with cursing and rebuke, and geueth him euel wordes for his good dede. There be many one whiche are not glad for to lend, not because of euil, but they fear to lese the thing they lende. Yeat haue thou pacience with the simple, & withold not mercie from him: helpe the poore for the cōmaundementes sake, and let not him go emptie from the, because of his necessitie. Lese thy Money for thy brother, and neighbours sake, and bury it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth, and corrupteth. * Gather thy treasure after the commaundemente of the highest, and so shall it bring the more profite then Golde.

* Laie vp thy almose in the hand of the poore, and it shall kepe the from al euel. * A mannes almose is at it were a purse with him, & shall kepe a mannes fauoure as the apple of an eie: and afterward shal it arise, and paie euery mā his rewarde vpon his head. It shal fight for the against thine enemies, better then the shild of a giaunt, or speare of the mightie. A good honest man is suretie for his neighbour, but a wicked person letteth him come to shame. Forget not the frendship of a suretie, for hee hath geuen his soule for the. The vngodlie despise the good dede of his suretie, and the vnthankeful and ignorannt leaueth his suretie in daunger. Some man promiseth for his neighbor, and when he hath lost his honestie, he shal forsake him. Suretiship hath destroied many a riche man, and remoued thē as the waues in the sea. Mighty people hath it driuen awaie, & caused thē to wander in straūge countries. An vngodly man transgressing the commaundement of the Lorde, shall fall into an euil Suretishippe: and though he force himself to get out, yet shal he fal into the iudgement. Help thy neighbor out after thy power, and beware, that thou thy self fall not in tonche debte. The chiefe thing that kepeth in thy life, is water, and breadde, clothing, and lodging to couer thy shame. thy wife thou straunger, and prepare a table for thy self, and fede me also of that thou hast. Make thou straunger (so that he regarded his honour no more) my brother cometh into my house, & so he telleth him the necessitie of his house. These things are heauy to a man that hath vnderstanding: namely, the forbidding of the house, and that the lender calleth him in the teethe. ¶ The. xxx. Chapitre.

WHoso loueth his childe * holdeth hym still vnder correction that hee may haue ioie of him afterward, & that he grope not at ther his neighbours doores. * He that teacheth his sonne shal haue ioye in him, & nede not to be ashamed of him emong his acquaintaunce. Whoso enfourmeth, & teacheth his sone, greueth the enemy, & before his frendes he maie haue ioie of him. Though the father die, yeat is he, as though he were not dead, for he hath left one behinde him that is like him. In his life he sawe him, and had ioie in hym, and was not sory in his death, neither was he ashamed before the enemies. For he left behinde him an auenger against his enemies, and a good doer vnto the frendes. For the life of child is he shall binde the wounds together, and hys hert is greued at euery cry. An vntamed horse will be harde, and a wanton childe wilbe wilfull. * If thou bring vp thy sonne delicatly, he shal make the afraied: and if thou play with him, he shall bring the to heauinesse. Laughe not with him, least thou weepe with him also and least thy teethe be set on edge at the laste. * Geue him no libertie in his youthe, and excuse not his folie. Bowe downe his necke while he is young, bitte him vpon the sides, while he is yet but a childe, lest he wax stubburne, & geue no more force of the, & so shalt thou haue heauines of soul. Teache thy child and be diligent therin, least it be to thy shame.

Better is the poore being hole, and strong, then a man to be riche, not hauing his helth. Helth & welfare is aboue al golde, & a whole bodie aboue al treasure: there is no riches aboue a sound body, & no ioy aboue the ioie of the hart. Death is better then a wretched life, and eternal rest is better then a continuall sickenes. The good thinges that are putte in a clase mouth, are like as when meate is laied vpon the graue. What good doeth the offring vnto an idoll? For hee can neither eate, taste, nor smell: Euen so is he that is chased of the lord & beareth the rewardes of iniquitie. He seeth with his eies: and groneth like a guelded man that lieth with a virgine, and sigheth. Chaine not ouer thy minde into heauines, and vexe not thy self in thine owne counsail. The ioie, and cheerfulnesse of the harte is the life of man, and a mans gladnes is the prolonging of his daies. Loue thine owne soule, & comfort thine heart, and for sorowe, & heauinesse driue it farre from the. For heauines hath slaine many a man, and bringeth no profeise. Zele, and anger, shorten the daies of life: care entiseth, & sorowe bring age before the time. Vnto a mery heerte euery thing hath a good tast that he eateth. ¶ The. xxx. Chapitre.

RAuenous and careful nesse for riches taketh away the slepe, and maketh the flesh to consume. When one lieth and taketh care, he awaketh euer vp, like as a great sickenesse breaketh the slepe. The riche hath great labor in gathering his riches together, & then with the pleasure of his riches taketh his rest, and is refreshed. But whoso laboreth, & prospereth not, he is poore: and though hee leaue of, yeat is he a begger. He that loueth riches, shal not be iustified: and whoso followeth corruption, shall haue ynough therof. * Many one are come in greate misfortune, by the reason of golde, and haue founde their destruction before them. It is a tre of falling vnto them that offre it vp, and al foche are beholde the eat therin. Blessed is the riche which is found without blemish, & hath not gone after Golde, nor hoped in monie, & threasures. Where is there soch a one, & we shal commend him & cal him blessed, for great things doth he emong his people. Whoso is tried, & founde perfite in soch thinges, shalbe commended, and praised. Who might offend, & hath not offended? Who could do euel, and hath not done it? therefore shal his good be stablished, and the whole congregation shall declare his almoses. * If thou sit at a great manner table, open not thy mouth wide vpon it, and make not many wordes. Remembre that an euel eie is a wicked thing: therfore it wepeth before euerye manner face. Laie not thine hand vpon euery thing that thine eie seeth, and striue not with him in the dishe. * Wonder with thy self at what thy neighbor would faine haue, & be discrete in euery point. Eate the thing that is set before the manerly, as it becommeth a man, and eate not to moche lest thou be abhorred. Leue thou of first of all, because of nourtour, least thou be he whom no man maie satisfie, which maie tourne to thy decaie. When thou sittest among many men, reache not thine hande out first of all. * O how wel content is a wise man with a litle Wine? so that in slepe thou shalte not be sicke therof, nor fele any pein. A swete wholsome sleepe shall soche a one haue, and feele no inwarde greefe. He riseth vp betimes in the morning, and is wel at ease in him self. But an vnsatiable eater sleapeth vnquietly, and hath ache, and peine in his body. If thou felest that thou hast eate to moche, arise go thy way, caste it out of thy stomach, & take thy rest, and it shal ease the, so that thou shalt bring no sickenes vnto thy bodie. My sonne heare me, and despise me not, and at the laste thou shalte finde as I haue tolde thee.

Vnwise people begile them selues with vaine & discreatful hope, & fooles trust in dreames. Whoso regardeth dreames, is like him that wil take hold of a shadow, & folowe after the winde. Euē so is it with the apperinges of dreames. Before the face, is the likenesse of a face. Who can be clensed of the vncleane? Or what truth can be spoken of a liere? Soothsayng, witchcrafte, coniurye and dreamyng is but vanitie: lyke as when a woman trauleth with childe, & hath many fantasies in her hert. Wher as such visions come not of God, set not thine hert vpon them. For dreames haue discerned manye a man, & layed them that put their trust therin. The law shalbe fulfilled without lyes, and wisdome is sufficient to a faithful mouth. What knowleg hath he that is not tried? A wise man, that is well influenced, vnderstandeth much, and he that hath good experience, talke of wisdom. He that hath no experience knoweth lytle, & he that erreth, encreaseth malice & wickednesse. He that is not tried, what thinges knoweth he? Who so foloweth no rule is ful of wickednes. When I was yet in errour, I learned much also: yee, I was so learned that I coulde not expresse it al, & came ofte in perill of deathe therfore, til I was deliuered from it (through the grace of god). Now I se, that they which feare god haue the right spirit: for their hope standeth in him, that can helpe them. And the eyes of the Lord are on them, that loue him. Whoso feareth the Lord, stādeth in awe of no man, & is not afraied, for the Lord is his hope & comfort. Blessed is the soule of him that feareth the Lord: In whome putteth he his trust? Who is his strength? * For the eies of the Lord haue respect vnto thē, that loue him. He is their mightie protection, and stronge groūde. A defence for the heat, a refuge for the hote noone day, a succoure for stūbling, & an helpe for falling. He setteth vp the soule and lightneth the eyes. He geueth life, & blessing. He that geueth an offering of vnrighteous goodes, his offering is refused: and the scornful dealing of the vnrighteous pleaseth not God: the Lord is theirs only, that patiently abide him in the way of the truthe, & of righteousnesse. The Hiest doth not alowe the giftes of the wicked. And, * God hath no delite in the offeringes of the vngodly, neither may sinne be recōciled in the multitude of oblacions. Whoso bringeth an offering out of the goodes of the poore, doth euē as one that killeth the sone before the fathers eyes. The bread of the nedeful is the life of the poore: he that defraudeth him therof, is a manne of bloud. Whoso robbeth his neighboure of his living, doth as great sinne as though he slew him to deth. * He that defraudeth the labourer of his hire, is a bloud shedder. Whē one buildeth & another breketh downe, what profite haue they thē but labour? Whē one praieth & another curseth, whose voice wil the Lorde heare? * He that washeth him self because of a deed body, & then toucheth the deed againe, what doth his washing? * So is it with a mā that fasteth for his sinnes, and doeth the same: who wil here his praier. Take no suche folkes to counsaile: but be deligente to seke counsaile at a vertevous man that feareth God suche one as thou knowest to be a keper of the comaundementes, whiche hath a mynde after thine owne mynde, and is sorie for the whē thou stūblest. And hold thy counsaile fast in thine hert: for there is no man more faith full to kepe it: then thou thy selfe. For a mās minde is some time more disposed to tell oute then seuen watchmen that sit aboue in an high place lokinge aboute them. And aboue al this praie the Lyest that he will leade thy waie in faithfulnes and truth. Before al thy workes ake counsail first: & or euer thou doest anye thing, be wel aduised. There be four thynges that declare a chaunged hert, wherout there springeth euel and good: death & life, & a masterful tonge that dableth much. Some man is apte and wel instructe in manye thinges, & yet very vnprofitable vnto him selfe. Some man there is, that can geue wise & prudente counsayl, & yet is he hated, and continueth a begger: for that grace is not geuen him of God to be accepted. Another is robbed of al wisdome, yet is he wise vnto him self and the fruite of vnderstāding is commendable in his mouth. A wise man maketh his people wise, & the frutes of his wisdome faile not. A wyse man shalbe plentcously blessed of God: & all they that see him shall speake good of him. The life of man, standeth in the nombre of daies, but the daies of Israel are innumerable. A wise man shal optaine faithfulnesse and credence among his people, & his name shalbe perpetual. The. xxxviii. Chapter.

HOnour the Physitio, honour him because of necessite. God hath created him (for of the Most cometh medicine) & he shall receaue gifte of the king. The wisedom of the Physicyon bringeth him to great worship and in the sight of the great men of this worlde he shalbe honourably taken. The Lorde hathe created medecine of the earth, and he that is wise wil not abhorre it. * Was not the bitter water made swete with a tree, that men might learne to know the vertue therof? The Lord hath geue men wisdome, & vnderstāding, that he might be honoured in his wōderous workes. With such doth he heale men, and taketh away their paines: Of suche doth the Apotecary make a confection, yet can no man performe al his workes. For of the Lord cometh prosperous wealth ouer al the earthe. My sonne dispise not this in thy sickenes but * pray vnto the Lorde, and he shall make the whole. Leaue of from sinne, & order thy handes a right, clense thyne herte fro̅ al wickednesse. Gene a swete sauoured offeryng, & the fine floure for a token of remembraunce: make the offering fat, as one that geueth the first frutes, and geue rooms to the Physicion. For the Lord hath created him, let him not go fro̅ the, for thou hast nede of him. The houre may come: that the sicke maie be helped thorowe them, when they pray vnto the Lord, that he may recouer, & get helthe to liue longer. He that sinneth before his maker, shall fall into the hāde of the Physicion. My sonne, bring forth thy teares ouer the deed: & beginne to mourne, as if thou haddest suffered greate harme thy self: & then couer his body after a conuenient maner & dispise not his buriall. Enforce thy self to wepe & pronoke thy selfe to mourne, & make lamentacion expedientlie, & that a daie or two, lest thou be euel spoken of: and then comforte thy selfe because of the heauynesse. * For of heuines cometh death, the heuinesse of the hert breaketh strengthe. Heuines & powertie greueth the hert in temtacion & offence. Take no heuynesse to herte, driue it away, & remember the laste thinges. Forget it not, for ther is no turning againe. time of rest: and he that ceaseth from exercise and labour shalbe wise. ¶ He that holdeth the plough, and hath pleasure in prodding, & driuyng the oxen, and goeth about with suche worke, he can speake of oxen: he setteth his hart to make furowes, and is diligent to geue the kine fodder. So is euery carpenter also and woorkemaster, that laboureth still night and daie: he carueth, graueth, cutteth out, and his desire is in lyndale tunyng thinges, his harte imagineth how he maie cunningly cast an image, his diligence also and watching perfourmeth the woorke. ¶ The ironsmithe in like maner bideth by his stithe, and doeth his diligence to labour the iron. The vapoure of the fire burneth his fleshe, and he must fight with the heate of the fornace. The noise of the hāmer soundeth euer in his eares, and his yes looke still vpon the thing that he maketh. He hath set his minde thereupon, that he wil make out his woorke, and therefore he watcheth, how he maie set it out, and bring it to an ende perfectly. ¶ So doeth the potter sit by his worke, he tourneth the whele about with his fete, he is diligent and carefull in al doynges, and his labour & worke is without number. He fashioneth the claie with his arme, and with his fete he tempereth it. His harte imagineth how he maie make it pleasaunt, and his diligence is to clense the ouen. All these hope in their handes, and euery one thinketh to be cunning in his worke. Without these maie not the cities be maintained, inhabited, nor occupied: yet thei come not high in the congregation, neither sit thei vpon the iudgement seates: thei vnderstande not the couenaunte of the lawe: thei cannot declare equitie and iudgemente: thei cannot finde out the darke sentences, but through them shall the creature of the worlde be maintained, their praier concerneth onely the worke and labour of cunnyng.

¶ The. xxxix. Chapitre.

Quenlong. A He that applieth his minde to vnderstandyng the lawe of God, doeth diligently seke out the wisedome of them of the old time and exerciseth himself in the Prophetes. He kepeth the saiynges of famous men, and preaseth to the vnderstandyng of darke sentences of wisedom. He seketh out the misterie of secrete saiynges, and exerciseth himself therein continually. He weth seruice emong great men & appeareth before the Prince. He goeth into a straunge countrie, & trauaileth through it: loke what good or euill is emong men, he proueth it, and seketh it out. He purposeth in his harte to resort earely vnto the lorde that made him, and to praie before the highest god. He openeth his mouthe in praier, and praieth for his sinnes. When the greate lorde will, he shalbe filled with the spirite of vnderstandyng, that he maie then poure out wise sentences, and geue thankes vnto the lorde in his praier. He shal order his device, and lead his knowelege aright: and geue him vnderstandyng of secrete thinges. He shall shew forthe the science of his learnyng, and reioice in the couenaūt of the lawe of the lorde. The whole congregacion shall commende his wisedome, and it shal neuer be put out. The remēbraunce of him shall neuer be forgotten, and his name shall continue frō one generacion to another. B.

* His wisedome shalbee spoken of emong the people, and the whole congregacion shall openly declare his praise. While he liueth he hath a greater name, then a. M. beside: and after his death, the same name remaineth vnto him. Yet wil I speake of mo men of vnderstādyng, for I am full as the mone. Herken vnto me (ye holie vertеous children) bring forthe fruite, as the rose that is planted by the brookes of the fielde, and geue ye a swete smell as Libanus. Florishe as the rose garlādes, sing a song of praise. O geue thankes vnto God ouer all his workes. Geue glory and honour vnto the lorde, shewe his praise with your lippes. Yea, euen with the song of your lippes, with harpes, and plaiyng, and in geuyng thākes vnto him, saie after this maner. All * the workes of the lorde are exceedyng good, and all his commaundementes are mete and conuenient in due season. A man nede not to saie: what is that? what is that? For at time conuenient thei shall all be sought. At his commaundemente the water was as a wall, and at the worde of his mouthe, the water stode stil. Ecclꝛ.xliij.b C. Genesis.i.d. D.

In * his cōmaundement is euery thing acceptable and reconciled, and his helth cannot be minished. The workes of all fleshe are before him, and there is nothing hid from his yes. He seeth from euerlastyng to euerlastyng, and there is nothing to wonderfull, or high vnto him. A man nede not to saie then, what is this or that? for he hath made all thinges to doue good vnto man. His blessyng shall renne ouer as the streame, and moisture the yearth like a floude of water. Like as he maketh the water for drouth, so shall his wrathe fall vpon the Heathen. His * waies are plain, and right vnto the iust, but the vngodlie stomble at them. For the good are good thinges created from the beginnyng, and euill thinges for the vngodlie. All * thinges necessarie for the life of man are created from the beginning: water, fire, iron, & salt, meale, whete, and honie, milke and wine, oile, and clothing. All * these thinges are created for the best, to the faithfull. But to the vngodlie shal al these thinges be tourned to hurt and harme. There be spirites that are created for vengeaunce, and in their rigorousnesse, haue thei fastened their tormentes. E. Oze.xiij.d. Roma.vij.d. Eccle.xxix.a i.Timo.iij.a. * In the time of the ende thei shall poure out their strength, and pacifie the wrathe of him that made them. * Fire, haile, hunger, & death, al these thinges are created for vengeaunce. Wath.xxv.d. Eccle.xl.b.

The tethe of wilde noisome beastes, the scorpions, serpentes, and the sweard are created also for vengeaunce, to the destruction of the vngodlie. Thei shalbe glad to doose his commaundementes: and when nede is, thei shalbee ready vpon yearthe: and when their houre is come, thei shal not ouerpasse the commaundement of the lorde. Therefore haue I taken a good courage vnto me from the beginnyng, and thought to put these thinges in writyng, and to leaue them behinde me. All the workes of the lorde are good, and he geueth euery one in due season, and when nede is, so that a man nede not to saie: this is worse then that. For in due season thei are all pleasaunt and good: and therfore praise the lord with whole hart and mouthe, and geue thankes vnto his name.

The.xix.daie Nattins.

A Greate trauaill is created for al men, and A. a han henie yoke vpon all men childzen, from the daie that thei goe out of their mothers wombe, till thei bee buried in the yearth, the mother of all thinges: namely their thoughtes and imaginacions, feare of the hart, counsaill, meditacione, longyng, & desire, the daie of death: frō the highest that sitteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and moste simple vpon the yearth: from him that is gorgeously araied, and weareth a croune, vnto him that is but homely, & simply clothed. Ther is nothyng but wrathe, zeale, fearefulnesse, vnquietnesse, and feare of death, rigorous anger and strife. And in the night, when one should rest and slepe vpon his bed, the slepe chaungeth his vnderstandyng and knowelege a litle or nothing is his rest, in the slepe, aswell as in the daie of labour. He feareth and is disquieted in the vision of his harte, as one that runneth out of a battaill, and in the time of health he awaketh and marueileth that the feare was nothing. Soche thinges happen vnto all flesh, bothe man and beast: but seuen fold to the vngodlie. Moreouer, death, bloudshedyng, strife, and sweard, oppression, hunger, B. destruccion, and punishement: these thinges are all created against the vngodlie, and for Ecc.xxxix.e their sakes came the flood also. All that is of Gene.vij.d. the yearthe, shall tourne to yearthe again: and all waters ebbe again into the Sea. All vsides and vnrighteousnesse shalbe put awaie but faithfulnesse and trueth shall endure for euer. The substaunce and goodes of the vngodlie shalbe dried vp, and sinke awaie as a water floud, and thei shall make a sounde like a great thunder in the rain, like as the righteous reioiseth when he openeth his hande, so shall the transgressoures bee fainte, when their goodes vanishe & consume awaie. The C. childzen of the vngodlie shal not obtein many braunches, and the vnclene rootes vpon Eccl.xli.b. the high rockes, shalbe rooted out before the water be the water side, and vpon the riuer bankes. Fredlinesse and liberalitie in the increase and blessyng of God, is like a paradise and garden of pleasure: so the mercie also and kindnesse endureth for euer. To labour and to be content with that a man hath, is a swete pleasaunt life, and that is to finde a treasure aboue al treasures. To beget childzen and to repaire the citie, maketh a perpetuall name, but an honest woman is more worth then thē bothe. Wine and minstrelsie reioice the hart, but the loue of wisedome is aboue thē bothe. Pipyng and harpyng make a swete noise, but a frendly tongue goeth beyonde theim bothe. Thine eye desireth fauoure and beautie, but a grene sedge time, rather then thē bothe/ a frēd and companion come together at oppotunitie but aboue thē bothe is a wife that agreeth with her husbande. One brother helpeth an other in the time of trouble, but almose shall deliuer more then them bothe. gold and siluer fasten the feete, but a good counsaill is more pleasaunt then thē both. To possall substaunce and strength, lift vp the mind: but the feare of the lord more then thē bothe. The feare of the lorde wanteth nothing, & nedeth no helpe. The feare of the lord is a pleasaūt garden of blessyng, & nothing so beautiful as it is. My sone lead not a beggers life, for better it wer to die then to begge. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his awne liuyng how to vphold his life, for he fedeth himself with other mēnes meat. But a wise & wel nurtered man wil be ware therof. Beggyng is swete in the mouthe of the vnshamefast, but in his belie there burneth a fire. ¶ The.xli. Tha.

D Death, how bitter is the remembraunce of thee, to a man that seketh rest & comforte in his substaunce and richesse, vnto the man that hath nothing to vexe him, and that hath prosperitie in all thinges, yea, vnto him that is yet able to receiue meate. O death, how acceptable and good is thy iudgemente vnto the nedefull, and vnto him whose strēgth faileth, & that is now in his last age, & that in all thinges is full of care & fearefulnesse: vnto him also that is in despaire, and hath no hope nor pacience? be not thou afraid of death, remembre them that haue been before thee: and that come after the, this is the iudgemente of the lord ouer al flesche. Kepe not a thing twise, & disclose not the wordes, that thou hast heard in secret. Be shamefast & well mannered in deede, so shalt euery man fauour thee. Of these thinges bee not thou ashamed, and accept no person to offende. Namely, of these thinges be not ashamed: of the lawe of God, of the couenaunte of iudgement, to bring the vngodlie from his vngodlinesse vnto righteousnesse: and to make him a good man: to deale faithfully with thy neighbour and cōpanion, to distribute the heritage vnto thy frendes, to be diligent to kepe true measure and weight: to be content whether thou gettest moche or litle: to deale truely with temporal goodes, in buiyng and sellyng: to bring vp children with diligence, to correct an euil seruaunt, to kepe that thine is from an euill wife, to set a locke where many handes are: what thou deliuerest and geuest out to be kept, to tell it, & to weigh it: to write vp all thy outgeuyng and receiuyng: To enstourne the vnlearned and vnwise: of the aged that are iudged, of the young. If thou be diligent in these thinges, truely thou shalte bee W. learned and wise and accepted of all men. It is better to be with an euill man, then with a frendly wife that putteth one to shame and rebuke. I will remembre the workes of the lorde, and declare the thing that I haue seen. In the wordes of the lorde are his workes. The Sunne ouerlooketh all thinges with his shine, and all his workes are full of clerenesse ther of. Hath not the lorde brought not to passe that his saintes should tel out al his wōderous workes, whiche the almightie lord hath stablished? al thinges endure in his glorye. He seketh out the ground of the depe, and the hart of men, and he knoweth al their imaginacion & wisedome. For the lorde knoweth al science, and he loketh into the token of the time. He declarethe the thinges that are past W. and for to come, & discloseth the thinges that Iob.xlij.b. are secrete. No* thought maie escape him, nei- Esai.xxix.c. ther maie any worde be hid frō him. He hath garnished the high excellent workes of his wisedome, and he is from euerlastyng to euerlastyng. Vnto him maie nothing be added, neither can he be minished, he hath no nede also of any manner counsaill. O how amiable are all his woorkes, & as a sparke to loke vpon. Thei liue al, and endure for euer: and when so euer nede is, thei all are obedient vnto him. Thei all are mutable, one against another: he hath made nothing that hath fault or blemishe. He* hath stablished the goodes of euery one & who maie be satisfied with his glory, when A. Euensong. he seeth it. Psal.civ.a.

¶ The.xliij. Chapitre.

The glory of the heigth, is* the faire and clere firmamente, the beautie of the heauen in his glorious clearenesse. The Sunne when it appeareth, declareth the daie in the goyng out of it, a marueilous woorke of the highest. At none it burneth the yearth, & who maie abide for the heate therof? Who so re- not peth an ouen when it is hot, three times more dooeth the sunne burne vpon the mountaines, when it breatheth out the fiirie beames & shineth with the brightnesse of it, it blindeth the eyes. Great is the lorde that made it, & in his cōmaundement he causeth it to runne hastely-

The Moone also is in all, and at conueniente season it shewed the times, and is a token of the time. The token of the solemne feaste is taken of the moone, a light that minisheth and increaseth again. The monethe is called after the Moone, it groweth wonderously in her chaungyng. The armie of heauen also is in the heigth in the firmament of heauen. It geueth a clere & glorious shine. This is the clerenesse of the starres, the beautifull apparell of heauen, the apparell that the lorde ligh teneth in the heigth. In his holie worke thei continue in their ordre, and not one of theim faileth in his watche. Looke* vpon the rain bowe, and praise him that made it: very beautifull is it in his shine. He cõpasseth the heauen about with his clerenesse and glorie, the hãdes of the highest hath bended it. Through his commaundement he maketh the snowe to fal, and the thunder of his iudgement to smite hastely. Through his cõmaundment the treasures are opened, and the cloudes flie as the foules. In his power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and broken the haile stones. The mountaines melt at the sight of him, the wind bloweth accordyng to his will. The sound of his thundre beateth the yearth, and so dooeth the storme of the north: the whirlewinde also lighteth doune, as a fethered foule casteth out and spreadeth the snowe abroade: and as the grashoppers that deuoure al, so falleth it doune. The eye marueileth at the beautie of the whitenesse therof, and the harte is afraied at the rain of it. He poureth out the frost vpõ yerth like salt, and when it is frosen, it is as sharpe as the pricke of a thistle. Whe the cold north winde bloweth, hard yse shall cometh of the water. He lighteth doune vpon all the gatheringes together of water, and putteth on the waters as a breast plate. He deuoureth the mountaines, and burneth the wildernesse: and loke what is grene, it putteth it out like fire. The medicine of all these is, when a cloude cometh hastely: and when a dewe cometh vpõ the heate, it shalbee refreshed again. In his worde he stilleth the winde: in his counsell he setteth the depe, and (the lorde) Iesus planted it. They that saile ouer the sea, tell of the perilles and harmes therof, and when we heare with our eares, wee meruail therat. For there be straunge wonderous workes, diuerse maner of nice beastes and whalefishes. Through him are all thinges set in good ordre, & perfourmed, and in his worde all thinges indure. I speake moche, but I cannot sufficiently attain vnto it, for he himself onely is the perfection of all workes. We should praise the lord after all our power, for he is great in al his workes. The lorde is to be feared, yea, very greate is he, and* marueilous in his power. Praise the lord, and magnifie him as moche as magnifie him with all your power, and labour earnestly, yet are ye in nowise able sufficiently to praise him. Who hath seen him, that he might tell vs?* Who can magnifie him so greatly as he is. For there are hid yet greater thinges then these be: as for vs, we haue seen but fewe of his workes. For the Lorde hath made all thinges, and geuen wisedome to loche as feare God.

LEt vs commende the noble famous men, and the generation of our fore elders and fathers. Many more glorious actes hath the lorde doen, and shewed his greate powee euer sens the beginnyng. The noble famous men reigned in their kingdomes, and bare excellẽt rule. In their wisedome and vnderstandyng, thei folowed the counsail shewed in the prophetes. Thei* led the folke through the counsail and wisedome of the Scribes of the people. Wise sentẽces are found in their instruction. Thei sought the sweteneſſe and melodie of musike, and brought foorthe the pleasaunt songes in scripture. Thei were riche also, & could counfort and pacifie those that dwelte with them. All these were very noble and honourable men in their generations, and were well reported of in their times. These haue left a name behinde theim, so that their praise shall alwaie bee spoken of. Afterwarde, there were some, whose remẽbraunce is gone. Thei came* to naught and perished, as though thei had neuer been: and became as though thei had neuer been borne: yea, and their children also with thẽ. Neuertheleſſe, these are the louyng men whose righteouſneſſe shall neuer be forgotten but continue by their posteritie. Their children are an holie good heritage: their sede indureth fast in the couenaũt. For their sakes shall their children and sede continue for euer, and their praise shall neuer be put doune. Their bodies are buried in peace, but their name liueth for euermore: the people cã speke of their wisedome, and the congregacion can talke of their praise. Enoch* walked righte and acceptable before the lorde: therfore was he translated for an example of amendemente to the generacions. Noe,* was a perfect and righteous man, and in the time of wrathe he became a reconcilyng. Therefore was he left a remnaunt vnto the yearth, when the floudde came. An euerlastyng couenaunte was made with him, that all fleshe should* perishe nomore with the water. Abraham was a* great father of many people, in glorie was there none like vnto him. He kept the law of the highest, and came into a couenaunt with him. He sette the couenaunt in his flesshe, & when he* was proued, he was found faithfull. Therefore swore God vnto him with an othe, that he would blesse all people in his seede, that he would obtayne their enheritaunce. O howe greate, noble, and excellente was he when he lifte vp hys hande, and drew out hys swearde agaynst the cities? Who stoode so manlye before hym? For the lorde him selfe broughte in the enemyes. Stoode not the Sunne stil at hys commaundement, and one daye was as longe as two? He called vpon the highest mooste myghtie, when the enemies preased vpon hym on euery syde, and the Lorde hearde hym wyth the hayle stones. They smote the Heathenyshe people myghtely, and in the fallinge downe they slewe all the aduersaryes, so that the Heathen knewe his power, and al hys defence, that the Lorde hym selfe fought against them, for he folowed vpon the mightye men of them. * In the time of Moses also, he and Caleb the sonne of Jephune, dyd a good worke, which stode against the enemyes, withheld the people from synne, and stylled the wycked murmuryng. * And of six hundreth thousand people of foote, they two were preferred to bringe them into the heritage, namely, a lande that flowed with milke and honye. * The lorde gaue strengthe also vnto Caleb which remayned with him vnto hys age, so that he went vp into the highe places of the lande and his seede conquered the same for an heritage, that all the children of Israell myght see, howe good a thinge it is, to be obedyente vnto the Lorde. Symon the soonne of Onias the hye preeste, whiche in his lyfe sette vp the house againe, & in his daies made faste the temple. The hight of the temple also was founded of him, the double buildynge and the hie walles of the temple. In his daies the wels of water flowed out, and were excedyng ful as the see. He toke care for his people, and deliuered them from destruccion. He kept his citie, and made it stronge, that it shold not be beseeged. He dwelt in honour, and worshipped among his people, and enlarged the entraunce of the house, & the courte. He gaue light as the morning starre in the middest of the cloudes, & as the Moone whē it is full. He shined as the Sunne in the temple of God. He is as bright as the rayne bowe in the faire cloudes, and floryssheth as the floures and roses in the springe of the yeare, and as lylyes by the ryuers of water. Lyke as the braunches vpon the mount Libanus, in the time of Somer: as a fyre and incense that is kyndled. Lyke as an whole ornament of pure golde, set with all maner of precious stones, and as a Olyue tree, that is frutefull, and as a Cypresse tree, which groweth vp on hye. When he put on the garmente of honour & was clothed with al bewtye: when he went to the holy aulter to garnish the couerynge of the Sanctuary: when he toke the portyons out of the prieftes hande, he him selfe stode by the hearthe of the aulter, and his brethrē rounde about in order. As the braunches of Cedre tree vpon the mount Libanus so stode they rounde about him. And as the braunches of the Olyue tree, so stoode all the sonnes of Aaron in their glorie, and the oblacions of the lord in their handes before al the congregacion of Israell. And that he might sufficyently performe his seruyce vpon the aulter, and garnishe the offerynge of the hieste God, so stretched out his hand, & toke of the drinke offerynge, and poured in of the wine, so he poured vpō the botome of the aulter a good smell vnto the hyest Prynce. Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to synge & to blow with trompettes, and to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce and prayse vnto the Lorde. Then were all the people afrayde and fell downe to the earth vpon their faces to worshippe the Lord their God & to geue thankes to the Almighty God. They songe goodly also with their voices, so that there was a pleasaunt noyse in the greate house of the Lorde. And the people in their prayer, beseought the Lord the highest, that he would be merciful tyll the honoure of the Lord wer performed, thus ended they their ministracion and seruice. Then wente he downe and stretched oute his handes ouer the whoole multytude of the people of Israel, that they wolde gene prayse and thankes out of their lyppes vnto the Lorde, and to reioyce in his name. He beganne yet once also to pray, that he might openly shewe the thankgeuing before the highest, namely thus: O geue prayse and thanckes (ye all) vnto the Lord our God which hath euer done noble & great thynges whiche hath increased our daies from oure mothers wombe, and dealte with vs accordynge to his mercy: that he wil geue vs the ioyefulnesse of herte, and peace for our time in Israel. Whiche faithfully kepeth his mercye for vs euermore, & alway deliuereth vs in due season. There be two maner of people that I abhorre for my hert: as for the third whom I hate, it is no people. They that sit vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Philistynes, and the foolysh people that dwell in Sichymys. I Iesus the sonne of Syrach Eleazarus, of Ierusalem, haue tokened vp these instrumentes and documentes of wisdome in this boke, and powred out the wysdome of my heart. Blessed is he that exerciseth him selfe therein: and who so taketh such to heart shalbe wise for euer. For he doe these thinges he shalbe stronge in all. For the light of the Lorde leadeth hym.

¶ The.li. Chapitre

I Wil thancke the O Lord and king, and prayse the o God my sauiour. I wil yelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou art my defender helper, & hast preserued my body frō destruccion, frō the snare of traiterous tōges, & frō the lippes that are occupied with lies. Thou hast ben my helper, frō such as stod vp against me, & deliuered me after the multitude of thy mercye, and for thy holy names sake. Thou hast deliuered me from the roryynge of them that prepared them selues to deuour me, out of the handes of such as soughte after my lyfe: from the multytude of them that troubled me and went about to set eyne vpon me on euery syde, so that I am not bisente in thee mydes of the eyne. From the depe of hell, from an vncleane tonge, from lyage wordes, from the wicked kynge, and from an

They compassed me sounde about on euery syde, and there was no man to helpe me, I loked about me yf ther were any man that wolde socoure me: but there was none. Then thoughte I vpon thy mercy, O Lord, and vpon thyne actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namelye, that thou delyuerest suche as put their trust in the, and rydest them oute of the handes of the Heathen. Thus lifte I vp my prayer frō the earth and prayed for deliueraunce from deathe. I called vpon the Lorde the father of my Lorde, that he wolde not leaue me without helpe, in the day of my trouble, and in the tyme of the prowde: I wyll prayse thy name continually, yeldinge honoure & thanckes vnto it: and so my prayer was hearde. I came therfore before the temple, and sought her vnto the laste. Then florished she vnto me as a grape that is soone ripe. My heart reioyced in her, thē went my fote the ryght way: yee, from my youth vp, sought I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I found me much wisedome: and prospered greatly in her. Therfore wyll I ascrybe the glorye vnto him that geueth me wisdome: for I am adused to do thereafter. I wyll be gelous to cleue vnto the thyng that is good so that I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, and I haue ben diligent to be occupied in her. I lift myne hādes on hye, then was my soule lyghtened thorowe wysdome, that I knowledged my folyshnesse. The booke of the Prophet Baruch.

The first Chapitre.

A. 1. AND these are the wordes of the boke, which were written by Baruche the sonne of Neryas, the sonne of Maasias, the sonne of Sedechias the son of Sedeias, the sonne of Helchias, at Babylon, in the fyfte yeare, and in the .vii. day of the moneth, what tyme as the Chaldees toke Jerusalem, and brente it vp with fyre. And Baruch dyd reade the wordes of this booke, that Jechoniah the sonne of Joachym kynge of Juda myght heare: and in the presence of all the people that were come to here the boke: yea, & before al the noble kinges sōnes, before the lordes of the cōtrey, & elders: & before the whole people, from the lowest vnto the hyest: before al them that dwelte at Babylon by the water of Sody. Which when they herd it, wept, fasted, and prayed before the Lorde. B
They made a collection also of money, accordyng to euery mans powre, and sent it to Jerusalem vnto Joachim the sonne of Helchia the sonne of Salon preist, with the other preistes and to all the people whiche were with him at Jerusalē, what time as they had gotten the ornamentes of the temple of the lord (that were taken away oute of the temple) that they myght bring them againe into the lande of Juda, the tenthe day of the moneth Syban: namelye, syluer vesselles (which Sedechiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda had made) after that Nabuchodonozor king of Babylon had taken Jechoniah, with all his princes, lordes, and all the people, and led them captiue from Jerusalem vnto Babi-

Praye for vs also vnto the Lorde oure God: for we haue sinned against the Lorde our God, and vnto this day, is not his wrath turned yet away from vs. And se that ye reade this booke (whiche we haue sent vnto you to be rehearsed in the temple of the Lorde) vpon the hye dayes, and at tyme conuenyente.

Thus shall ye saye. * The Lorde our God is righteous, but we are worthye of confusyon and shame: lyke as it is come to passe this daye vnto all Juda, and to euerye one that dwelleth at Jerusalem: to our Kynges, Princes, priestes, prophetes & to oure fathers: * We haue sinned before the Lord our God, we haue not put our truste in him, nor geuen his credence, we haue not obeied him: we haue not herkened vnto the voyce of the Lorde our God, to walke in the commaundementes that he gaue vs. Syns the daye that he brought oure forefathers out of the lande of Egipte vnto this presente daye we haue bene euer a mysbeleuyng and an vnfaithfull people vnto the Lorde our God: destroying our selues vtterly, and withdrawyng backe that we would not heare his voice. * Wherefore, there are come vpon vs greate plages and dyuers curses. Lyke as the Lorde promised by Moses his seruaunte: * whiche brought our forefathers oute of the land of Egipt, to geue vs a land that floweth with mylk and honye, lyke as it is to se this day. Neuertheles, we haue not harkened vnto the voyce of the Lord our God, accordynge to all the wordes of the Prophetes, whome he sente vnto vs & to oure rulers: but euerye man folowed his owne mynde and wycked ymagynacion: to offer vnto straunge gods and to do euell in the sighte of the Lord our God.

Or as it were a dead bodie kept beside the graue. Euen so the priestes kepe the doꝛes with barres, and lockes, least their Goddes be spoiled with robbers. Thei *not set vp candles beforе their im, ye, verely a that many, whereof thei cānot se one, but euen, as blockes, so stand thei in the temple. It is sa-ied that the serpentes, and wooꝛmes, whiche come of the earth, gnaw out their bꝛaines, eating them, and their clothes also, and yeat thei fele it not. Their faces are blacke throughe the smoke that is in the Temple. The Oules, Swallowes and Birdes, lie vppon thē, yea, and the cattes runne ouer their heds. By this yee maie bee sure, that thei are not Goddes, therfoꝛe feare them not. The golde that thei haue is to make them beautiful, foꝛ al that, except some bodie eight of their ruste thei wil geue no mine: and yf thei wer cast into a foꝛme, thei felte it not. Thei are bou-ghte foꝛ money, and haue no breath of lyfe Sap. xiij. e. within them. * Thei muste bee boꝛne vppon mennes shoulders, as thei that haue no feete, whereby thei declare vnto men, that they bee nothing wooꝛth. * Confounded be thei then Psal. cxiij. a. that woꝛship them, foꝛ if thei fal to the gro-unde, thei cannot rise vp again of themselues Yea, though one helpe them vp, and set them right, yeat are they not able to stand alone but must haue proppes sette vndꝛe them like deadde menne. As foꝛ the thing that is offe-red vnto them, their priestes sel it, and abuse it Yea, the priestes wiues take therof, but vnto *not the sicke, and pooꝛe, geue thei nothing of it. the women with childe, and the Wenchruous, laie handes of their offringes: By this yee mai be sure that thei are no Goddes, therfoꝛe be ye not afraied of them. From whence co-meth it then, that thei be called Goddes? The wemen sit beforе the Goddes of siluer, golde and wood, and the priestes sit in their tem-ples, hauing open clothes, whote heades, and beardes are shaue, and haue nothing vppon their heades: roaring, and crying vpon theyre Goddes, as men doe at the feast when one is ded. The priestes also take awai the garmentes of the ymages, and decke their wiues, and childzen withal. Whether it be good, or euel that any man doe vnto them, thei are not able to recōpense it: thei can neither set vp a king nor put him doune. In like maner thei may neither geue riches, nor reward euel. Though a man make a vow vnto them & kepe it not, they wil not require it. Thei can saue no man frō death, neither deliuer the weake from the mightie. Thei cannot restore a blinde manne to his sight, nor help any mā at his nede. Thei can shewe no mercie to the widowe, nor dooe good to the fatherlesse. Their Goddes of woodde, stone, golde, and siluer, are but euen as other stones, that be hewen out of the mountains. Thei that worship them shalbe confounded. How should they then be taken for gods? ye, how dare mē say that thei be gods? And though the Caldees worshipped thē not hearing that thei wer but dōbe and could not speake. Yet thei thēselues offre vnto Bel, and would faine haue him to speake, as who say thei coulde tele that maie not moue. But whē these men come to vnderstāding, thei shal forsake them, for their Goddes haue no keeping. A great sort of women girte with cordes, sit in the stretes, and burne oliue beries. How if one of theim be conueighed awaie, and lie with any corpse as come by: shee casteth her neighbours in the teeth, because she was not co worthely reputed, nor her coarde broken. What soeuer is dooen for theim, it is but in vaine, and lost. How maie it then be thought, or taied that thei are Goddes? Carpenters, and Goldesmithes make them, neither be they any other thyng, but euen what the workemē wil make of them. Yea, the Goldesmithes thē selues that make theim, are of no long continuaunce. How should then the thinges that are made of them be Goddes? Vaine therfore are the thinges, ye very shame is it that they leaue behinde them for their prosperitie. For as sone as there cometh any warre, or plage vpon theim, then the priestes ymagine where thei maie hide themselues with thē. How can men then thinke that thei be Goddes, which neither maie defende themselues from war, nor deliuer them from misfortune? For seing that thei be but of wood, of stone, of siluer, and of Golde: all people, and kinges shall knowe hereafter, that thei be but vaine thinges: yea, it shalbee openly declared, that theie be no Goddes: but euen the very woorkes of mens handes, and that God hath nothing to do with thē. It is manifest then that thei are no Goddes, but the woorkes of mennes handes, and no woorke of God in them. Thei can set no king in the lande, nor geue raine vnto men. Thei can geue no sentence in a matter, neither defende the lande from wrong. For thei are not able to dooe somoche as a crowe that flieth betwixt heauen and yearth. When ther happeneth a fire into the houte of those Goddes of woodde, and siluer, and of Golde the priestes wil escape, and saue themselues but the Goddes burne as the balkes therin. Thei cannot withstande any king, or battail. Howe maieit then be thoughte, or geaunted, that thei be Goddes? Moreouer, these Gods of woodde, of stone, of Golde, and siluer, maye neither defende theimselues from theues nor robbers. Yea, the verye wicked are stronger then thei. These stripe theim out of their apparaile, that thei be clothed withal, these take their Golde, and Siluer from theim, and so get them awaie, yet can thei not help them selues. Therfore it is moche better for a man not to be a king, and so shewe his power, or els a profitable vessel in an house, wherin he that oweth it might haue pleasure: Yea, or to be a dore in an house, to kepe safe such thinges as be therin, then to be soche a vaine God. The Sunne the Mone, and al the Sterres seing thei geue their shine, and light, are obedient and doe men good. When the lightening glistereth, all is clere. The winde bloweth in euery Countrie, and when God commaundeth the Cloudes to goe roundeabout the whole worlde, thei doe as they are bidden. When the fire is sent doune from aboue, and cōmaunded, it burneth vp hilles, and woods. But as for those Goddes, thei are not like one of these thinges, neither in beauty nor strength, when foxe, men should not thinke nor saie that thei be Goddes, seing thei can neither geue sentence in iudgement, nor doe menne good. For somoche now as ye are sure that they bee no Goddes, then feare them not, for thei can neither speake euel, nor good for kinges.

Thei canne shewe no tokens in Heauens, for the Heathen, neither shine as the Sunne, nor geue light as the Mone: yea, the vnreasonable beastes, are better then thei, for theie can get thē vnder the roffe, and do themselues good. So can ye bee certified by no maner of meanes, that thei be Goddes, therfore feare them not. For like as a scarcrowe in a gardeine of herbes kepeth nothing: euen so are their Goddes of woodde, of siluer, and golde and lyke as a white thorne in an Orcharde, that euery birde sitteth vpon: Yea, like as a dead bodie that is caste in the darcke: euen so is it with those Goddes, of Woodde, Syluer, and Golde. By the Pourple, and Scarlette whyche they haue vppon theim, and soone fadeth awaie, ye maie vnderstande that they bee no Goddes. Yea, they themselues not shalbe consumed at the laste, whiche shalbee a greate confusion of the lande. Blessed is the Godly man that hath no images, a worshipper shalbe farre from reproche.

¶ The song of the thre Children whiche were put into the hote burnyng ouen. The common translation readeth this song in the .iii. Chap. of Daniel

AND they walked in the middest of the flambe, praisyng God and magnifiyng the Lorde. Azarias stoode vp, and prayed on this maner. Euen in the middeste of the fyre opened he his mouthe, and said: Blessed be thou O Lorde God of our fathers, right worthy to bee praised, and honoured is that name of thine for euermore, for thou arte righteous, in al the thinges that thou hast doen vnto vs. Yea, faithful are al thy woorkes, thy wayes, are right and all thy iudgementes true. In al the thinges that thou hast brought vpon vs and vpon the holie Citie of our fathers, euen Jerusalem. Thou hast executed true iudgement: Yea, according to righte and equitie hast thou brought all these thinges vpon vs because of our sinnes. For why? we haue offended, and doen wickedly, departing from the Daniel.ix.e. *In all thinges haue we trespassed, and not obeied thy commaundementes, nor kept them neither doen as thou hast bidden vs, that we might prosper.

Baruch.iii.b. Wherfore, al that thou hast brought vpon vs, and euery thing that thou hast doen to vs thou hast doen them in true iudgemente. As in deliuering vs into the handes of our enemies, among vngodly, and wicked abominations, and to an vnrighteous Kinge, yea, the moste frowarde vpon earth. And now we may not open our mouthes, we are become a shame and reproche vnto thy seruauntes, and to them that worship the. Yet for thy names sake we beseche the, geue vs not vp for euer, breake not thy couenaunt, and take not away thy mercie from vs, for thy welbeloued Abrahams sake: For thy seruaunt Isaacs sake, and for thy holy Israels sake. To whom thou hast Ge.xv.d. xxii.e xxvi.b, Deut.x.d. spoken, and promised * That thou wouldeste multiplie their seede as the sterres of Heauen, and as the sande that lieth vpon the sea shore. For we O Lord are become lesse then any people, and be kept vnder this daye in all the worlde, because of our sinnes: So that now, we haue neither Prince, Duke, Prophete, Burnt offeryng, Sacrifice, Oblation Incense, nor Sanctuarie before thee. That euerthelesse in a contrite hearte, and humble spirite let vs be receiued, that wee maie obteine thy mercie. Lyke as in the burnte offeringe of Rammes, and Bullockes, and like as in thousandes of fatte Lambes, so lette our Sacrifice bee in thy sighte this daie, that it may please thee, * For there is no confusion vnto them that put their truste in thee. And now we folowe the with all our hearte, wee feare the and seeke thy face. Putte vs not to shame, but deale with vs after thy louyng kindenesse, and according to the multitude of thy mercies. Deliuer vs by thy Wracles, (O LORDE) and get thy name an honour that all they whiche dooe thy seruauntes euell, maie bee confounded. Lette them bee ashamed through thy almightie power, and let their Strengthe bee broken, that they maye knowe how that thou art onely the LORD GOD, and honoure worthie through out all the worlde. And the Kinges Seruauntes that putte them in, ceassed not to make the Ouen hotte with wylde fyre, drye Strawe, Pitche, and Fagottes, so that the flambe went out of the ouen vpon a nine and fowerty cubites: yea, it tooke awaie, and brente vppe those Chaldees that it gate holde vpon beside the Ouen. But the Angel of the Lord came downe into the Ouen to Azarias, and his felowes, and smote the flamme of fyre oute of the Ouen, and made the middeste of the Ouen as it hadde been a colde winde blowyng: so that the fire neither touched them, greeued them, nor did them hurte. Then these three (as oute of one mouthe) praised, honoured, and blessed GOD, in the Fornace saiyng. * Blessed be thou LORDE God of oure fathers: for thou art praise, and honour worthye: Yea, and to be magnified for euermore * Blessed be the holy name of thy glorie, for it is worthie to be praised and magnified in al worldes. Blessed be thou in the holy temple of thy glorie, for aboue all thinges thou arte to be praised, yea & more then worthye to bee magnified for euer. Blessed bee thou in the throne of thy Kingdome, for aboue all thou art worthie to bee wel spoken of, and to be more then magnified for euer.
